Observation That heauen is in vaine expected, wished for, desired, or sought after without pietie of life: follow peace and holinesse without which no man can be saved. Heb. 12. 14. Tit. 2. 11. The Rhodians and Lydians made a law that vicious sonnes of vertuous parents should not inherit it; thinking it an unfit thing, that those should inherit their fathers lands who did not inherit their fathers vertues: So the Lord hath made a law that no wicked man shall have any part or portion in his kingdome at all, 1 Cor. 9. 10. The heathen thought that when good men died, they were sent to the fortunate Islands, but the wicked, to the Isles of vengeance called Tartarus: And thus indeede God hath determined that Qualis vita finis ita, every mans reward and portion shall be according to his worke, Romans 2. 6. as followes by and by.

Question 2. How doth it appeare that heaven cannot be had without holinesse of life; for many hope to bee saved whose lives are both ungodly and unjust?

Answer. The truth of it appeares thus, namely,

First, from the ordinance of God; God hath ordained heaven for his glory, and the blessednesse of his children and servants; and therefore none shall be made partakers thereof, but onely those who glorifie God in their lives, loving him above al things (as becomes sonnes) and obeying him in all things, as becomes servants.

Secondly, from the justice of God; who will judge every one according to his workes at the last day, 2 Corinthians 5. 10. And therefore where the life was wicked, the doome shall bee wretched.

Thirdly, from the mercy of God, who loves the righteous, but not the wicked: The righteous Lord loveth righteousnesse, and righteous men: and therefore onely such shall bee saved.

Fourthly, because where there is imapiety, there is no Religion, Romans 12. 17. Philippians 4. 8. and for the irreligious there is no happinesse.

Fifthly; from the end, Because this was the end,

- First, of our creation: for wee were made, that wee might be holy, Ephes. 2. 10.
- Secondly, of our redemption: for wee were redeemed unto righteousnesse, Luk. 1. 75. & Tit. 2. 14.
- Thirdly, of our vocation, God hath called us unto the fellowship of his Sonne, that we might be righteous and holy, 1 Thes. 4. 8.
- Fourthly, of our election, wee were before all time elected, that in time we might live as vessels elect and precious, holy and pure, Ephes. 1. 4.
- Fifthly, of our reconciliation; we were by Christ reconciled unto God, that we might be righteous and holy, Colos. 1. 22.

All

All men in the world are sinners, shall none then come to heaven? all have sinned originally, and the best as well as the worst doe daily sinne actually: There is none so good but he daily trespasseth, either against God or Man; shall none therefore enjoy this kingdome of God?

Question 3.

Answer. There are three sorts of sinners, namely,

First, proud, malicious, obstinate, and wilfull sinners; who sinne against God, with an high stiffe and a brazen face, and a hard neck, and an Adamant heart.

Secondly, sleepy, and secure sinners, who although they sinne daily, yet they lull themselves asleepe with the divels lullaby unto Eve, thou shalt not die at all: and thus through a bald and blind presumption and perswasion shake of all feare of punishment.

Thirdly, there are humble and contrite sinners; who sinne and sigh for their sins, yea pray unto God with teares in their eyes, and sob in their soule, for the pardon of their sinnes.

These sinners, and these onely shall be saved; but the other who wilfully, willingly, and wittingly remaine in their sinnes, shall never be made partakers of the kingdome of God or of Christ; This appeares thus,

I. It is the condition of comming unto him to be holy and righteous in life; to him who orders his conversation aright, will I shew the salvation of the Lord, Psal. 50. 23. And therfore those who are wicked and so remaine can never be saved.

II. Wicked men are not acceptable unto God, but rather an abomination unto him, [y] And therefore he being the King, and only giver and disposer of this kingdome will never give it unto those whom he hates.

y Psalme 1. 5. and 5. 5.

III. Christ (the authour of salvation) is not acceptable unto them; they thinke his yoake heavie, and his saying hard, John 6. 60. and they neither can endure, nor will submit unto his behests: For

First, sinne is sweet and pleasant unto them, and they will not leave it, though Christ bid.

Secondly, to professe Christ openly, and to deny themselves, is as bad as death it selfe, and therefore they will not yeeld thereunto.

Thirdly, Christ requires that they should blame, and condemne their former wicked life, this they are ashamed to doe; and therefore refuse it. Wherefore Christ the corner stone being unto them a stone of offence, they must needes perish: For hee will be a Saviour unto none, but onely to those unto whom he was a King.

Section 5. §. 5. And his righteousnesse, or the righteousnesse thereof;]

Question 1. What is the meaning of these words?

Answer. Righteousnesse may bee referred either unto God, or Kingdome.

Question 2. Why is it called the righteousnesse of the Kingdome?

Answer. 1. First, because this righteousnesse belongs only unto the children of the Kingdom: that is, none but the heires of heaven can shew forth this righteousnesse.

Answer. 2. Secondly, because righteousnesse is the way that leades unto this kingdome: for there is a double kingdome of God, namely,

I. Of glory in heaven: this all men desire.

II. Of grace, on earth, this few desire: this kingdome must bee within us [a], before ever we can bee made partakers of the other.

[a] Luke 17. 21.

Question 3. Why is it called the righteousnesse of God?

Answer 1. First, some by righteousnesse understand the righteousnesse of faith to be here meant; and then the reasons of this denomination are these, to wit,

I. Because it is freely given us of God to be our righteousnesse before him; and man by any workes of nature cannot attaine unto it.

II. Because God will accept this obedience of Christs at the day of judgement for his elect, as satisfying his justice, and the rigour of the law, which no righteousnesse of man can doe.

III. Because it is the righteousnesse of that person which is God; for Christ is both God and man; and though hee obeyed the law, and suffered death as he was man, yet that obedience was performed by that person who was also God.

Answer 2. Secondly, some understand this of the righteousnesse of the life and conversation; and (as was said before) I rather take this to bee the truth: and the reasons why it is called the righteousnesse of God are these, namely,

I. Because it is commanded, prescribed, and injoyned by God.

II. Because by this righteousnesse we imitate our God, 1 Pet. 1. 14, 15, 17.

III. Because this righteousnesse leades unto God.

Section 6. §. 6. And all these things.]

Question 1. What is meant here by all things?

Answer 1. First, the word πάντα all things is not to be understood (Completivè sed distributivè) of every particular, and numericall temporall blessings but of all sorts of needfull things: yea it is not to be extended unto the great things of this life, but onely unto foode and raiment, and necessary things; Reade verse 25. 31. of this Chapter, and Proverbes 30. 8. and 1 Tim. 6. 8.

Answer 2. Secondly, the indefinite phrase (all things) doth shew that God is ready and prepared to give us all things whatsoever

wee ſtand in neeede of.

Queſtion 2. What may we learne from this bounty of the Lord?

Anſwer. The conſideration of this bounty may teach us theſe things, namely;

Firſt, to beware of ſinne, whereby wee doe diſpleaſe and offend our God.

Secondly, to depend wholy upon God both for foode, rayment, and protection, in the ſober uſe of lawfull meanes.

Thirdly, to ſeeke for the helpe and ſuccour from God, in all diſtreſſe & want, who is very bountifull, Jam. 1. 5.

Fourthly, to love ſo bountifull a God, and to inforce our hearts to all duties, and expreſſions of love towards him.

Fifthly, to bee thankefull unto God, for all the good things we enjoy; for whatſoever wee have comes from his bountie, Pſal. 116. 12. 13.

Sixthly, labour continually in heart and life to walke worthy of God, and to pleaſe him in all things, being fruitfull in all good workes, Coloſ. 1. 10. [b]

Queſtion 3. What is the ſumme of this promiſe made here by our Saviour?

Anſwer. Obſervat. That the children of this kingdome, righteous and holy men, ſhall lacke nothing that is good for them. Reade for the proofe hereof, Pſal. 23. 1. and 34. 8. &c. and 37. 3. 22. Proverbs. 10. 6. 7. 8.

For the better underſtanding of this anſwer, obſerve theſe three things, namely;

Note 1. Firſt, that there are three ſorts of good things, Temporall, Spirituall, and Eternall; our Saviour here ſpeakes onely of the firſt; and therefore I ſpeake not here any thing of the reſt.

Note 2. Secondly, that the Lord hath alwaies in a readineſſe to give his children whatſoever they want, although he doe not alwaies give aſſoone as ever they ſtand in neede: Oh how great (ſaith David) is thy goodneſſe, which thou haſt laid up for them that feare thee [c]; repoſuiſti; that is, God hath treaſures alwaies laid up for his children, although they doe not alwayes actually poſſeſſe them.

Note 3. Thirdly, good things are given two manner of waies by God, namely;

I. Generally and Permiſſively; and thus hee gives good temporall bleſſings to the wicked.

II. Ex beneplacito, out of love, or as arguments and pledges of his favour; and thus hee gives good things to the righteous; And of theſe the text ſpeakes.

Objection 1. It is here againſt the former anſwer objected, that David was a righteous man, and yet he ſaith of himſelfe, I am poore and needy (Pſal. 40. laſt verſe) which ſhewes that hee wanted many things. Rabbi Semlai was wont to ſay, In omni loco in quo invenis probareticis objectionem, invenies quoque medicamentum illius in latere ejus (Pet. Galatin.) whereſoever thou findeſt a paſſage of Scripturee which may ſeeme to ſerve an heretick, to ground an objection upon; looke diligently and thou ſhalt find an anſwer to the objection in the ſame place: It is a proverbe, whereſoever you ſee a Turtle you may bee ſure to finde her mate within a ſtones caſt; ſo the Rabbi thought, that what place of Scripture ſoever an hereticke ſhould produce for the confirming of an errour, in the ſame verſe (or at leaſt Chapter) aman might find, how the objection were to bee anſwered. I finde the truth of this in this preſent objection, for in the very ſame verſe there is an anſwer thereunto.

Anſwer.

It is objected, David is poore, and needy. To this he anſwers, that the Lord thinketh upon him, and is his helper, and deliverer: whereby hee manifeſtly ſhewes that hee truſteth in God, and is not perplexed with the care of diſtruſt, and diffidencie.

Objection 2. The righteous are ſometimes exules, baniſhed from their countrey, friends, poſſeſſions, and meanes; and ſo want all good things.

Anſwer. The godly ſhall alwaies finde ſome place which ſhall receive them; if Moſes be baniſhed, he ſhall finde a Iethro to entertaine him; if Elias be in danger, the crowes ſhall feede him, and the widdow ſhall entertaine him; if Ieremiah bee in danger, hee ſhall find either the King or Abimelech to favour him: if David be forced to fly, hee ſhall be received of King Achiſh; The providence of God never ſleepes, but hee watcheth ſtill over his, ſo to preſerve and keepe them, that a haire ſhall not fall from their heads, without his divine providence. We ſee when Iacob was in danger of Laban, God warned not to harm him [d]: When Abraham had like to have beene wronged by Abimelech, God threatens to puniſh Abimelech if hee injure the Prophet [e]. Thus God is alwaies ready to take notice of all the wants, diſtreſſes, and dangers of his children, and is able to ſuccour and redreſſe them when he will.

Objection 3. The righteous have not every good thing; how then is it ſaid, that all things ſhall bee added unto them. Great was the want and neceſſity that Paul was in, 1 Corinthians 4. 9. 10 11. 12. and 2 Corinthans 4. 7, &c. and 11. 9. 23. and 1 Corinth. 15. 19. yea a brother may want, James 2. 15. and many have [f].

Answer 1. First, there are many temporall things which are not good for the children of God, principally in respect of their infirmity and weakenesse; There are many things, which would be unto them more like poison then foode, rather bridles to keepe them backe from the service of God then spurres to pricke them forward; yea like thornes to choake the seede of the word [g], and ginnes to ensnare themselves [h]: and therefore no wonder if God withhold such things from his children.

Answer 2. Secondly, there are many temporall blessings which are not necessary for the children of God: For

I. God can give them Analoga, some other things that may bee as good for them as that which they want: Man lives not by bread onely, neither is God ever driven to such a straight that he hath but one way left to helpe his children: If the children of God bee hungry, it is all one to them, for the Lord to give them bread, or to take away their hunger: now hee can doe either of these, and therefore bread is not simply necessary. God can feede Elias by the Crowes, and the Israelites in the wildernesse with quailes and Manna, and can take away hunger of Elias, and Moses, and enable them to subsist without meate fortie dayes.

II. Sometimes God withholdes temporall blessings from his children, but gives them greater and better things: that is, such internall solace and joy in their wants and sufferings, that they scarce feele them, or are sensible of them; Wee are (saith Saint Paul) as sorrowfull, yet alwaies rejoycing; as poore, yet making many rich: as having nothing, and yet possessing all things, (2 Corinth. 6. 13. and Romans 8. 37.) It is all one whether the Lord take off our heavie burthen, or inable us to beare it; and hee can do either, and will do one: And therefore it is no marvell, if the Lord withholds some temporall things from the righteous, seeing they are not necessary for them, hee being able to give them other things which may be as good for them or better.

Answer 3. Thirdly, whatsoever temporall blessings are both good, and necessary for the righteous, God will certainely give unto them in his due time.

Obiection 4. The wicked are more blessed in temporall things then the righteous are (as appeares Psa. 73.) how then is this promise of our Saviours (that all things shall bee added unto them) made good?

Answer 1. First, God gives good things to good men, in mercy, and as blessings, Psal. 146.8.

Answer 2. Secondly, God gives good things to evill men for a threefold cause, namely;

I. That hereby they might bee comforted and encouraged in their labours and honest callings.

II. Because they have no other comfort besides that which they have here in this life, the portion of the wicked in the life to come being torments eternall and insufferable.

III. That hereby they might bee fatted unto slaughter. They spend their dayes in good things, and in a moment they goe downe to the pit, Psalme 73.18. Iob 21.13.

Question. 4. How doth it appeare that righteous and holy men shall lacke nothing that is good and necessary for them?

Answer 1. First, in generall, it is evident thus, God gives good and necessary things to the other creatures; therefore hee will much more give them unto his children; as was proved before, verse 28, 29, 31.

Answer 2. Secondly, in generall, God for the righteous mans sake often blesseth the wicked, therefore hee will much more blesse the righteous himselfe (propter quod unum quodque est tale, id ipsum est magis tale) God blessed Egypt for Israels sake, and Potaphar for Iosephs, and Laban for Iacobs, and Zoar for Lots; and therefore the righteous themselves are much surer of blessings.

Answer 3. Thirdly, and more particularly, God is omnipotent, or in all things potent; hee is not a God of the mountaines onely, but of the vallies also; hee is alwaies ready, and alwaies able to give unto his children whatsoever is good and necessary for them; hee is alwaies at their right hand, and therefore will not suffer them long to lacke, Reade Psalme 16.8. and 145.18.

Answer 4. Fourthly, the truth hereof appeares by the consideration of Gods end in giving good things unto the righteous, which is twofold, namely;

I. God gives them for their consolation, that they might not be too much dejected, or cast downe, but comforted and encouraged to walke on cheerefully in the waies of the Lord.

II. God gives good things unto the righteous, for the instruction of others; that they may bee invited chearefully and willingly to undertake the worke of the Lord, who so graciously rewards the worke of his servants.

Answer 5. Fifthly, the righteous shall have heaven, therefore much more the earth; if God freely bestow the greater and more excellent things upon them, then he hee will not withhold the lesse worthy from them.

Answer 6. Sixthly, the righteous have Christ; therefore in him they shall have all things, according to that Romans 8. 32. Hee that spared not his owne Sonne, but delivered him up for all: how shall hee not with him also freely give us all things.

For earthly things are the pendents, and appertenances of spirituall, and therefore goe along with spirituall; yea they are a part of Gods covenant with his children, for, hee hath promised that if they will but serve him faithfully and sincerely, hee will take care both of their bodies and soules, Reade 1 Corinthians 3. 21. Leviticus 26. 3. &c. Deuteronomie 28. 1. &c. Psalme 81. 13. &c. Malachi 3. 10. and 1 Timoth. 4. 8.

Answer 7. Seventhly, it appeares that righteous and holy men shall lacke nothing that is good, because

I. They are the children of God.

II. The members of Christ.

III. And God loves them as a Father doth his children.

First, righteous and holy men are the children of God; the Lawyers observe that there are foure sorts of sonnes, namely;

I. Some are naturall and legitimate, to wit; borne in holy wedlocke. Thus Christ is Gods naturall Sonne.

II. Some are legitimate but not naturall; these are adopted Children, and were called by the Jewes (Asiphim) Collecti, from Asaph, Collegit, Congregavit. When my Father and my Mother forsooke mee, then the Lord gathered me. Thus the righteous are the children of God by the grace of Adoption.

Psalme 27. 10

III. Some are naturall, and not legitimate, as those who are borne of harlots, but not of common strumpets; and these are called Nothi, Bastards. Thus wicked men are the children of God by the grace of creation; And are called Bastards and no sonnes, Heb. 12. 8.

IV. Some are neither naturall nor legitimate, as those who are borne of common harlots; such a one the Hebrewes called (Mamzer) and the latines call him Spurium; and the Lawyers call such Incertos, quia incerto patre, sed certa matre: because although the mother was knowne, yet the true Father was not: And such as these might not (among the Iewes) enter into the congregation. And thus we see that righteous men are the children of God by Adoption, and therefore their Father will not see them want.

Secondly, they are the members of Christ, and therefore they shall lacke nothing, all things being given unto him by his Father, for the good of his brethren.

Thirdly, God loves the righteous as a Father his children, and therefore will not suffer them to lacke. For we know that a loving and naturall Father, Esay 49. 15.

I. Loves his child more then his riches, and therefore will not spare them from him: So our God prizeth and valueth all those who are righteous, above all earthly things.

II. A Father doth protect and provide for his child to his power; and so will God for the righteous, as he hath promised in this verse.

Question 5. What is the reason that some of Gods children lacke, not withstanding this love and power of God.

Answer 1. First, sometimes the reason is because they love and desire temporall things too much; yea oftentimes the love of the world is not thorowly crucified in their hearts: And therefore God in love and mercy towards them withholds them, least in stead of bread he should give them a stone.

Answer 2. Secondly, sometimes the reason is because they seeke temporall things more then spirituall; the righteous oftentimes are more sensible of temporall wants then Spirituall, and grieve more for the lacke of externall things then internall, and use more meanes, and with more fervor for earthly then heavenly things: and therefore it is just with God to deny and withhold them, untill they have learnt to discerne betwixt things that differ, and prize every thing according to his worth.

Answer 3. Thirdly, sometimes the reason is, because they are not profitable unto them, but rather hurtfull.

Answer 4. Fourthly, sometimes because they are not necessary, God otherwise providing for them.

Question 6. Who doe not aright adhere and trust unto the divine providence of God?

Answer 1. First, those who dare trust God with their soules and the things thereto belonging, but distrust him for their bodies, and temporall things.

Answer 2. Secondly, those who dare trust God for temporall things of small moment, but distrust him for great; The lesser things of their body they will trust in God for, but for greater they will trust to themselves.

Answer 3. Thirdly, those who in great danger and distresses have recourse unto wicked meanes.

Answer 4. Fourthly, those who murmur, grudge, and repine in their wants, and disasters.

Answer 5. Fifthly, those who doe not in all things certainely trust unto God: for it is a degree of infidelity, and an injurie unto God, not to trust him for whatsoever we lacke: For

I. The nature of faith is to be sure and certaine, and to apprehend an interest even in temporall things, they being a part of Gods covenant, as was shewed before.

II. Faith is founded upon the truth, fidelity, promise, and particular providence of God, who governes all things, and therefore it should bee firme trusting God in all things.

III. Faith is not led by sense (for those are opposed, wee walke by faith, not by sight, 2 Corinthians 5. 7.) and therefore faith should beleeve without meanes, according to that, Romans, 8. 24. For wee are saved by hope, but hope that is seene is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth hee hope for. And 2 Corinthians. 4. 18. While wee looke not at things which are seene, but at the things which are not seene; for the things which are seene, are temporall, but the things which are not seene, are eternall.

Wherefore let us learne to be righteous, and confidently to rely upon the promise and providence of God, and wee shall then want nothing which the Lord sees and knowes to bee requisite for us.

Question 7. What may the righteous confidently beleeve?

Answer 1. First, that the Lords eye is alwaies upon them, and he sees all their wants and miseries.

Answer 2. Secondly, that the bowels of his mercy and of his compassion yerne upon them, and hee loves them.

Answer 3. Thirdly, that God is infinite in wisedome, and sees what is profitable for them, both for the present and future time.

Answer 4. Fourthly, that God will protect them from evill, or from the evill of evill.

Answer 5. Fifthly, that God will provide for them what he sees good in his good time.

Answer 6. Sixthly, the righteous may boldly beleeve, that a sure hope, and confidence in God shall never goe unrewarded.

Wincelaus (or according to some Wincelaijs) King of Hungary, being driven out of his Kingdome and forsaken of his owne, oftentimes used to say, the hope I had in men hindred mee from putting my trust in God: but now that all my confidence is in him, I assure my selfe that hee will helpe mee by his divine goodnesse; as it fell out indeede unto him, being reestablished in his estate and dignities within a short time after.

And let all the children of God doe as Dion did, who being adverticed, that Calippus whom hee tooke for his friend watched opportunity to slay him; went unto him when hee was invited by him, saying hee had rather loose his life then distrust his friend. Thus did holy Iob; Though the Lord kill me, yet will I put my trust in him.[i] And exitus probat, the event shewed that his confidence went not unrewarded of God. [i] Iohn 13.15.

§. 7. Shall be added unto you.] Section 7.

Question. Is it not lawfull to seeke riches or temporall things at all?

Having spoken something of this before, verse 24. and 25. I here briefely thus resolve this quære.

Answer 1. First, that it is lawfull for us to follow our callings diligently, and to desire a blessing from God upon our labours and endeavours, that so whatsoever wee doe may prosper.

Answer 2. Secondly, it is lawfull to possesse riches, both for our necessity, and comfort, if wee can but use them as though wee used them not (1 Corinthians 7. 30.) which indeede is very hard to doe, because our affections are too prone to bee seduced and captivated by the world, and worldly things. And therefore that wee may not too much desire or seeke the things of this life, not at all trust in them, let us remember these sixe things, namely;

I. Wee enjoy here nothing in outward things, but what is common to brute beasts.

II. Nothing here can give the heart content, or peace, and therefore this should not be our rest[k]. [k] Mich. 2. 10.

III. The things of this life cannot give grace, or spirituall comfort, or remission of sinnes unto us.

IV. Riches cannot bring us unto heaven and eternall life, according to that in the eleventh of the Proverbs and the fourth verse: Riches profit not in the day of wrath: but righteousnesse deliverith from death.

V. Riches detaine a man from heaven, and violently draw his affections downewards.

Anselme walking saw a bird which a boy had caught, and that she might not flie away, had tied a stone to her legge: Now observing how the bird would flie up, and presently bee pulled downe againe by that weight which was hung at her, made the good old man fall into this meditation; That as the bird was detained from flying upward by the stone tyed to her, so by the weight of riches, the affections and minde were hindred from spirituall and divine meditations, contemplations, desires, and the like. And therefore though they should increase, yet let us not set our hearts upon them, Psalme 62. 10.

VI. And lastly, remember that God will provide: for wee have here a true promise uttered by truth it selfe, that if wee make it our chiefest care to seeke after grace, and glory, our Father which is in heaven will take care for temporall things.

Verse 34. VERSE. 34. Therefore take no thought for the morrow; for the morrow shall take thought for the things of it selfe, sufficient unto the day is the evill thereof.

Section 1. §. 1. Take no thought.]

Question. What carefulnesse doth our Saviour here prohibit?

Answer 1. First, hee forbids us to bee carefull as the heathen were: who either thought that God did not regard earthly things, or else durst not beleeve his promises, and therefore they tooke great care and thought for the things of this life: But we must not thus take thought.

Answer 2. Secondly, hee forbids us to expect more then necessary things; for men often doe not onely desire and seeke needefull and convenient things, but conceive ample and large hopes in their minds by some way and meanes or other; and hence take much care and thought lest the successe and event should not answer their expectation: wee must not thus take thought.

Answer 3. Thirdly, wee are forbidden to take care for more then God gives us. Many are not contented with that part and portion of temporall things which God gives them, but make themselves leane and thin with care, because they have no greater nor larger portions; these are like those who not contented with their little stature take much care and thought how to bee taller, but by all their care, are not able to adde one cubite unto their stature. And therefore this carefulnesse is utterly forbidden.

Answer 4. Fourthly, Christ prohibits us to vexe our selves with taking thought for the time to come: as is frequent with many, who thus torture themselves, what if such a thing should come to passe? what if heaven should fall? what should wee doe then? The Phrase here used by our Saviour is worth observing, hee doth not say, doe not labour, and take paines to day, that you may have something for your selves and yours to morrow (for this is commanded, Ephesians the fourth and twenty eighth, and 1 Timothie five eight); but but take no thought for the morrow, as if hee would say, use all diligence and care still in your callings, but trouble not your selves with curious thoughts, what will become of you, or how you shall bee provided for heereafter.

Section 2. §. 2. The morrow shall take thought for the things of it selfe: sufficient unto the day is the evill thereof.]

Question 1. What is the meaning of these words? Some expound them of new things. Some of new provision. Some of new cares.

Answer 1. First, some interpret these words thus, the morrow will bring new and unknowne things: as if our Saviour would say, yee cannot prevent nor procure those things which you know not of; and little doe ye know what a night may bring forth; and therefore take no thought.

Answer 2. Secondly, the words may bee expounded thus, the morrow will provide and procure the things which are needefull for it selfe: as if our Saviour would say, take no thought for the time to come, for God will take care to provide for you, and deliver you, and comfort you in all your feares.

Question 2. How doth it appeare that God will helpe, and ease his children in all their cares and wants?

Answer 1. First, God foreseeth all things, and therefore in regard of him nothing can be casuall.

Answer 2. Secondly, God doth all things; is there any evill in the city, which I the Lord have not done? And therefore he can helpe and deliver out of any danger or evill whatsoever.

Answer 3. Thirdly, God is Philanthropos, a lover of his children; and therefore never layes any burthen upon them to breake their backes, or to kill them, but to doe them good: and therefore no evill shall lie longer or heavier upon his children, then he sees may bee for their good. Reade these places, hereof, 1 Corinthians the tenth and the thirteenth, and 2 Corinthians the first chapter and the fourth verse: and 2 Peter the second and the ninth. And see the experience of it in Iacob, Genesis 31. 24. and Ioseph; and the Israelites, Exodus the third, and the seventh and eight verses, and the foureteenth chapter and the tenth verse, and Iob and Peter, Acts the twelfe and the seventh verse. And therefore trust boldly in God.

Question 3. What is required then of us in the time of danger and distresse?

Answer 1. First, in all feare and danger invocate, and implore the aid and assistance of God. Reade Psalme the 107, and the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth verses, they cry unto the Lord in their distresse, and hee delivereth them, so Acts the fourth chapter and the twentie ninth verse, and the twelfe chapter and the fifth verse.

Answer 2. Secondly, doe not ponere obicem, lay not a blocke in Gods way; by using any wicked meanes for thy reliefe; or by murmuring and impaciency in thy distresses; or by harbouring any wicked thing in thy heart, for these will hinder the Lord from hearing and helping thee.

Answer 3. Thirdly, walke by faith, 2 Corinth. the fift chapter and the seventh verse: that is, feare no evill either present or to come, but place thy whole trust in the Lord for protection, and deliverance. Revelations the second and tenth verse, and the 2 Corinthians the first chap. and the tenth verse.

Thirdly, those words (the morrow wil care for it selfe) may bee expounded thus, the morrow will not bee without his owne cares: our Saviour hereby teaching us, namely,

Observat. 1. First, that it is a fooliſh thing to care for one affliction twice: to grieve to day for that which we shall grieve for to morrow.

Observat. 2. Secondly, that wee must every day expect new afflictions: by many afflictions we must enter into the kingdome of God, Acts the fourteenth chapter and the twentieth verse, and the 2 Timothie the third chapter and the twelfth verse, and Philippians the first chapter and the twentieth ninth verse.

Question 4. Why must we daily expect new afflictions?

Answer 1. First, to teach us that there is no true tranquillitie in this life.

Secondly, to teach us the necessity of affliction, and that in a threefold regard, to wit; Answer 2.

I. Because we daily provoke God unto anger by new sinnes; and therefore wee may daily expect new roddes, and scourges.

II. Because wee must daily bee weaned from the world; the world will still afford us somewhat to allure us, and make us thinke it sweete; and therefore wee must have daily some bitter pils, that may hinder it from relishing with us.

III. Because wee are daily to bee fitted and prepared for heavenly glory.

Thirdly, to teach us the utility, and benefit of affliction: And that both for the Church (Acts the eighth chapter and the fourth verse, and the eleventh and the nineteenth and twentieth verse) And for our selves, Psalme, 119. 67. 71. Answer 3.

What is meant here by Evill? Question 1.

First, κακία the word here used signifies malum culpæ, viciousnesse or sinfulnesse; Answer 1.

Secondly, sometimes it signifies affliction or vexation (as doth also κάκωσις) Now κακία hath this double signification from the Hebrew, because (Ragnah) signifies both malum peccati & malum pœnæ; both the evill of sinne and of punishment. Answer 2.

Thirdly, in this place it signifies principally the evill of punishment; and not onely persecutions, and afflictions (for so it would not be generally and universally true of every day, wee being not daily subjected to new crosses and disasters, but onely sometimes) but the molestations of the world, the painefulnesse of our affaires, labours, and callings, and daily cares. Answer 3.

Two things our Saviour then hereby points out unto us, to wit;

First, That the labour, paines, and toile wee endure in our vocations are to bee reputed evils; for although the labour it selfe bee not (that being injoyned before the fall, Genesis the second chapter and the fifteenth verse.) yet the thornes and sweat are, they being the effect of sinne, Genesis the third chapter and the eighteenth and nineteenth verses. And without sinne man had not eaten his bread with the sweat of his brower. Wherefore in the molestations, and toyle of our labours we must remember sinne to have occasioned this. Observat. 1.

Secondly,

Observat. 2. Secondly, that by the providence and decree of God daily labour is ordained unto us; or God hath appointed that wee should daily labour. Reade Ephesians the fourth chapter and the twenty eighth verse, and 1 Thessal. the fourth chapter and the eleventh verse, and 2 Thessalonians the third chapter and the tenth and twelfth verses.

Question 2. Why must wee daily labour in our callings or in some employment?

Answer 1. First, because this is the ordinance of God for the preservation and maintaining of life: God hath ordained that wee must eate of our owne labour; (Psalme 128 and the second verse. Genesis the third chapter and the nineteenth verse; Proverbs the twenty eight and the ninteenth verse.) and that sixe dayes wee must worke, Exodus the twentieth chapter and the ninteenth verse.

Answer 2. Secondly, because wee are not borne onely for our selves, but for our countrey; and therefore wee must labour, that others may bee the better by us: As members of the same body wee should bee carefull even of and for others (the first of the Corinthians the twelfth chapter and the twenty fifth verse.) as well as for our selves.

Answer 3. Thirdly, idlenesse is blamed, but diligence commended, Reade Proverbs the tenth and the fifth, and the thirteenth chapter and the fourth verse, and the twelfth chapter and the eleventh verse, and the fourteenth and the twenty three, and the thirthy one chapter, and the thirty one verse, &c. Hence Paul wrought, 2 Thessalonians the third chapter, and the eighth verse, and Acts eighteenth and the third verse, and twenty, thirtie foure ver. And the rest of the Apostles, 1 Corinthians the fourth chapter and the twelfth verse: and 1 Thessalonians the second chapter and the ninth verse, where hee speakes in the plurall number, Laboramus, we labour.

Question 3. Who are faulty here?

Answer 1. First, those who will not worke at all though they want: these should be compelled to worke,

Answer 2. Secondly, those who will not worke untill they sweate againe; that will do something, idly, but nothing industriously; some are contented to worke as Adam should have done if he had stood, that is, so worke that their labour shall be but like a recreation unto them; but they will not worke as Adam was commanded to doe when hee had fallen, that is, get his living with the sweat of his body.

Thirdly, those are to blame also, who will never labour for conscience sake, but onely when they want mony; and then for a time they are content to worke hard. These shew that

I. They have no care or desire by their labours to helpe others.

II. That they have no care to provide for their children for the time to come.

III. That they have no care of themselves but in health; not providently laying up some thing for themselves, against age and sicknesse comes, which both the heathens will doe, and Christians should doe.

Fourthly, they are faulty, who wholly spend their lives in pleasure, gaming, playing, hunting, hawking, and the like: These should seriously consider these things, namely;

I. Cui bono? For what end were they borne? what benefit or profit hath either the World or the Church, or the Common wealth, by them?

II. What right or reason they have to partake the labours of others, when none are made partakers of theirs?

III. What a shame it is that King, Nobles, Judges, Counsellors, and Magistrates, should labour (yea often wake for the good of the state, when inferior persons sleepe) and yet they spend their dares wholy in voluptuousnesse and delight?

IV. Certainely such a one is not a member either of Church or Common-wealth, but onely an excrement, as the haire or nailes are. One member cannot say of another: I have no neede of thee; the body cannot say of any member I need thee not [k]: But both Church and common-wealth may say of such an Epicure, wee have no neede, no use of thee, neither shall find any want, or misse of thee.

Answer 3. Fifthly, those who neglect their callings under a pretence of religion; Here I may distinguish betweene two sorts of people, namely;

I. There are some that remit their callings sometimes on the weeke dayes, that they may heare the word of God: and against these the Atheists of the world storme: but these indeede are like Mary, who chose the better part, Luke the tenth chapter and the fortie two: and like those in the Gospel, who will sell all they have to purchase the preaching of the word, Matthew the thirteenth chapter and the 44, 46. verses. But Omne nimium vertitur in vitium tion, This may bee done too much; I meane that on the weeke dayes a man may neglect his calling too much, by going to Church, but there are (vel duo vel nemo) but very few who doe it, and those few are to bee rancked with the second sort, which follow.

II. There are some who remitt and neglect all industrie in their callings, under a shew of confidence and dependance upon God. But religion makes none sluggish or idle, neither teacheth any such thing: And therefore all such are worthily to be reproved.

CHAP. VII.

Section 1. Verse 1. Question 1. Answer

§ 1. Iudge not.

Verse 1. Judge not, that you be not judged.

What was the occasion of these words?

Christ in the last verse of the foregoing Chapter, had forbidden care for the morrow: now a man may reserve, provide, and lay up something for the morrow, either with a simple or double mind, either well and warrantably, or wickedly and unwarrantably, that is, either out of a provident or distrustfull care: and therefore our Saviour saith, judge not though thou shouldest see a man lay up something for the morrow, because it may be done religiously. (m) m Augustin. sup.

Question 2.

What is the meaning of this prohibition, Iudge not?

Answer 1. Hilar.

First, some understand them of Judging the Lord, we must not judge, not censure the Lord for any thing he doth, but confesse that he is just in all his judgements, and righteous in all his wayes.

Answer 2. { Aug. / Chry. } sup.

Secondly some understand this of doubting actions, where it is uncertaine quo animo, with what mind and intent the thing was done, there wee must judge the best; for

Some workes are
- Manifest, as S. Paul saith some mens sins are open before hand, going before to iudgement, (u) here we may judge the tree by his fruits. Ver. 2.
- Doubtfull, here we must judge nothing before the time, that is untill it be made manifest. 1 Cor. 4. 5.

u 1 Tim. 5. 24

Answer 3.

Thirdly, some understand this of remitting of injuries: that is, not of sinnes committed against God, but against our selves, because S. Luke seemes so to expound them: Iudge not, and yee shall not be judged; condemne not, and yee shall not bee condemned, forgive, and yee shall be forgiven (o) o Luke 6. 37 Chrys. imper.

Answer 4.

Fourthly, some understand them of too strict judgement towards others (Calvin s.) because our Saviour seemes to speake them unto the Jewes, whom he blames for this thing, Math. 23. 4. 23. 24. and 12. 2. and 15. 2. and Luke 19. 7. Chrysost. s.

Answer 5.

Fifthly some expound these words of judgeing our betters, that is, those who excell us in life:

- In life, Pleni peccatis alios de leviſſimis judicant (p) Some will judge others for small matters, when themselves abound in great, this wee must not doe neither judge those whose lives are more unblameable then our owne.
- In calling, cum Diſcipuli judicant de Doctoribus (q) It is not for Schollers to judge their Masters, nor Inferiours to judge superiours: he that Judgeth them is God. 1 Cor. 4. 4.

p Chrysost. s.

Answer 6.

Sixthly I conclude this question thus.

Judgement is either
- Publike: this is not here taxed.
- Private wherein are two things.
  - First the right use which is not blamed.
  - 2. the abuse which is forbidden in this place, and is entituled rash judgement.

Hence then we see that there is a lawfull judgement, which is not forbidden, (g) and there is a judgement forbidden as unlawfull.

Question 3. G

How diverse or manifold is the lawfull judgement?

Answer

It is either Publike, (h) or private (i) H

First there is a lawfull publike judgement, which is threefold, to wit,

I. Politicall, which belongs unto the Magistrates and that two manner of wayes, namely

First in civill affaires, Reade Psalme 72. 1. and Esa. 32. 1. and Rom. 13. 1. and 1 Peter 2. 13. and there wee shall see this Judgement allowed of.

Secondly, in Ecclesiasticall affaires: thus Moses, Iosias, and Hezekias, judged even of things belonging unto religion, wherefore S. Paul would have prayers to be made for all that are in authority, that we (under them) might lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godlinesse and and honesty. 1. Tim. 2. 2.

II. Ecclesiasticall, which belongs unto those to whom the Keyes are given, which Keyes are two, to wit.

First of preaching, here it is lawfull for the Ministers of the word to judge sinnes and sinners, as is evidently seene in these places. Esa. 58 1. John 16. 8. and 1 Tim. 5. 20. and 2 Tim. 4. 2. Yea we have presidents for it as well as precepts, and that in the Apostles, Acts 2. 23. and 3. 13. 14. and 1 Cor. 6. 10. and 5. 2.

Secondly of Excommunication, whereof wee read, 1 Cor. 5. 5. Mat. 18. 17. and 1 Tim. 1. 20.

III. Economicall: thus servants, children, schollers, and the like, may be blamed and judged

Secondly, there is a lawfull judgement which is private, and this is threefold, namely

I. Of knowledge, whereby we judge between truth and errour, this is mentioned John 10. 4 and 1 Cor. 14. 29. and 1 John 4. 1. And true it is, that there is such a lawfull private judgement, but it is not spoken of in this place.

II. Of reprehension, whereby wee may judge whether men be faulty, and blame-worthy or not. This is sometimes commanded even to private persons. Levit. 19. 17. Exod. 23. 4. Deuter. 22. 1. and that first sometimes to equals, as 1 Corinth. 5. 12. and 1 Thessal. 5. 14.

Secondly sometimes to their superiours: Saint Paul bids the Colossians say unto Archippus, take heed to the Ministery, which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfill it. Colos 4. 17.

III. Of correction, whereby we judge whether a man deserve punishment or not, for some offence committed against our selves.

There is besides this lawfull judgement, one which is rash, evill, unlawfull, and prohibited unto Christians.

What is this evill and forbidden judgement?

Quest. 4.

Corrupt judgement is either concerning
- Men when we judge of their estates either
  - Present, thinking 'em to be sinners and that either
    - Out of some sinister opinion of our owne, we being suspitious, think them impious, and also malitious, for some affliction that lyeth upon thē; thus the inhabitants of Melita judged Paul a murtherer because a Viper fastned upon him (p) And Iobs friends thought him an hypocrite, because Gods hand was so heavy upon him. Iob.
  - Or Future, thinking them to be reprobates; as some perhaps thought of Manasses, Mary Magdalen, and Paul.
- Things, and that either
  - Simply, when we judge doubtfull things in the worst sence.
  - Comparatively, when in regard of
    - The law, we thinke more hainously of things then the Law.
    - Our selves, we think things hainous in our brethren, but small in our selves.

Quest. 5. Why may we not judge men?

Answ. 1. First because it springs from an evill root, and comes of evill, to wit,

First from Envy: thus Satan out of hatred, malice, and Envy, judgeth Iob an Hypocrite: we say proverbially, evill will never judge well: so wee seldome judge or thinke aright of those whom we emulate.

II. From Hypocrisie, because a man knowes his owne heart to be evill, therefore he judgeth his brother to be false, fained, and a meere outside.

III. From pride and selfe-love, because wee would have none to bee better then our selves, therefore we judge sinisterly of those who seeme to excell us, Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is altogether vaine and unprofitable, the heart of man is so deceitfull, that none but God can find it out. Ierem. 17. 9. and 1 Samuel 16. 8. And therefore wee must leave men unto God, who will make manifest the counsels of the heart (q) it being altogether impossible for us to know what the hearts of any are, whose lives are outwardly unblameable.

(q) 1 Cor 4.5.

Answ. Thirdly, because it produceth nothing but evill effects: here then observe,

That rash judgement is injurious
- First to our Brother, who is caluminated and depraved thereby.
- Secondly to that Christian bond of charity, wherin we should be tyed, because that is not suspicious. 1. Cor. 13.
- Thirdly to God, because we take upon us to judge and censure his servant, one who is reserved only to be judged by him. Rom. 14. 4.
- Fourthly to Christ, because the Father now judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgement unto the Sonne. John 5. 22.
- Fifthly to our selves, we by this meanes hasting judgement to our selves, for if we judge, we shall be judged.

Quest. 6. Who are faulty or blameworthy here?

Answer 1. First, those who will censure and judge men for indifferent things; thus the Pharises judged and censured Christ. Mat. 9. 14. and 12. 2. & 15. 2. Ioh. 5. 10. and 9. 16. But we must not judge one another for these things: Hee which eateth must not judge him which eateth not; nor hee who eateth not judge him who eateth. Romans 14. 3. &c. For these who judge men for adiaphorall things, for the most part, are either weake or hypocrites, ignorant or counterfeits.

Answer 2. Secondly, those who will judge and censure mens persons; this is the part of prophane men who will censure the man, when they cannot find fault with his actions; as for example.

I. Some say, Oh hee lookes faire and beautifull without, but within, I feare, he is bad enough; he is good abroad, but at home no doubt he is like his neighbours.

II Some say, hee is no better then an hypocrite, I warrant you he dissembles in what he doth.

III Some say, he seemes as firme and stable in religious performances, as though nothing could shake him; but if he were once tryed, either with fire or gold, promotion or affliction, you would not see him like gold tryed in the fire, Job 2. 4.

IV. Others say, they are idle, they have nothing to doe, and therefore they are so religious: for else, what need is there of all this curiosity?

These are worst of all by much, who deprave men the more, by how much better they are.

Answer 3. Thirdly, those are faulty, who are suspicious; who judge and censure men, out of some presumptions, and jealousies; certainly the best men cannot be free from the censures of these.

But here a threefold distinction is necessarily to be observed, to wit,

I. Presumptions are either
- Weighty, and strong; and here a man may judge light and frivolous; and here we must not.

II. Judgement is either
- Publike, here it is necessary to judge according to presumptions, when convincing proofes can be produced.
- Private, and here wee must bee carefull, upon what surmises we censure.

III. It is one thing to
- Examine a matter, for some are good accusers, but ill Iudgers.
- Condemne; the former is allowed, but the latter forbidden.
- A man may examine upon suspition, but he must not hang upon suspition.

Fourthly, those are blameworthy who judge and censure weake Christians, for, 1. It

1. It is a great insolency to censure or blame any who belong unto God, and are precious in his sight, Rom. 14. 3, 4.

2. Those who thus doe, doe it, that by the censuring of their weakenesse, themselves may be the more commended; building their owne fame upon the ruines of others. As the Pharisee added the more glory unto himselfe, by the slighting of the Publican.

Sect. 2. §. 2. That you be not judged.

Quest. What is the meaning of these words?

Answer 1. First some understand them thus, abstaine from judging others, and yee shall deserve, or merit freedome from the judgement of God. But this is justly refuted by Chrysost. unperf. sup.

Answer. 2. Secondly our Saviour speakes nothing of the merit of good judgement, but of the retribution of evill, but here there are two opinions, for

1. Some understand it of temporall judgement by men in this life; as if our Saviour would say, judge not others, and yee shall not bee judged by others. Thus Calvin who thinkes it is a forcing of the text to apply it to the eternal judgment of God.

2. Some (namely, Augustine, Chrysostome, and the fathers generally) understand this place of the eternall judgement of God, as if our Saviour would say, judge not your brethren, for if you do, your father will judge you.

Answer 3. Thirdly, I conceive it is to bee understood of both, to wit, both temporall, and eternall.

Objection. Our Saviour thus threatning those who judge others, makes the Anabaptists object this place against the office of Iudges, and all Iudicatories amongst Christians.

Answer 1. First there is a double judgement, Iudicium libertatis, & potestatis, of freedome and power: our Saviour speakes of the former, when he saith, Iudge not, and of the latter, when he saith, lest you be judged.

Answer 2. Secondly our Saviour here forbids onely private, rash, proud, and unjust judgement, not just, as appeares by Iohn 7. 24. Iudge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous Iudgement.

Verse 2. Verse 2. For with what judgement yee judge, yee shall be judged, and with what measure yee meet it, it shall be measured to you againe.

Quest. Will God judge those unjustly, who judge others unjustly, will God judge with the same judgement according to that of our Saviour, he which killeth with the sword, shall perish by the sword?

Answer 1. 1. Calvin answers, that God will justly suffer men, unjustly to judge him, who unjustly judge others.

Answer 2. 2. We must distinguish betweene the { Matter of judgmet wch is either { Rigour and Severity, called summum jus, Mercy, and pardon. / Adjuncts of Iudgement, namely hatred, cruelty, iniquity, selfe-love, and pride.

Now God doth not here threaten the same adjuncts of judgement, that he which judgeth another maliciously, &c. shall be so judged by other: but the same matter of judgement, with what judgement yee judge, yee shalbe judged, that is, if you judge mercifully, yee shall be so judged, but if you judge rigorously and severely, others shall so judge you.

Verse 3. Ver. 3. And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brothers eye, but considerest not the beame that is in thine owne eye?

What is the meaning of this Verse? Question. 1.

First by the mote is meant our Brothers small sinnes, and by the beame our own great ones. Answer. 1.

2. The eye is the most tender part of the body, and is quickly hindred from seeing by a beam; the meaning hereof therefore is, yee cannot see, and yet yee will Iudge. Answer. 2.

Is it not lawfull to looke upon our brothers sinne? why beholdest thou the mote? Quest. 2.

It is not forbidden; but here a difference is to be observed betweene βλέπειν and ὁρᾶν to know and to acknowledge; to glance upon a thing, and to contemplate upon it: it is not prohibited us to see them, but to marke and observe them intently, Or to excogitate them with our selves. Answer.

Are our brethrens sinnes alwayes motes (that is small) and our owne beames, or great? Question. 3

First, our Saviour speakes not here of all men, but onely (or at least principally) of hypocrites, who under a shew of religion palliate and cover great sinnes; harbouring more grosse enormities in their hearts, then they usually can see in anothers life. Answer 1.

Secondly, our Saviour is pleased to use this phrase for our instruction; to teach us two things, Answer. 2.

namely, how we { Are wont to judge others? to wit to trample upon them for small sinnes. L. / Ought to judge others? to wit, we must thinke their mountaines mole-hils, and their beames-motes. M.

L. First, our Saviour by this phrase would teach us, That wee are prone to censure our brethren for the smallest errors, and to aggravate their least sinnes. This was usuall with the Scribes and Pharisees who made a great matter of it, for the Apostles to plucke the eares of corne (l) for the man to carry his bed upon the Sabbath day, and for Christ & his Apostles to eate with unwashen hands. Matth. 15. 2. Observat. 1 (l) Matth. 12. 2.

Whence comes this that wee are so readie to amplifie our brethrens infirmities? Quest. 4.

First, sinne in it selfe, and in his owne nature is horrible and grievous. Now in our selves selfe love, and the love of sinne doth hinder us from seeing sin in his owne colours; but in others the visard thereof being taken away, wee see it as it is in its owne nature, And hence we so greatly aggravate it. Answer. 1.

Secondly, this proceeds from our owne pride; we are wont to build our own praises upon our brethrens dispraise, and our fame upon their discredit: thinking that the greater wee make their sins to appeare, the lesse will our owne seeme. Answer. 2.

Secondly, Christ by this Phrase of a Mote seene in our brothers eye, &c. would teach us, That wee must be ready to excuse our brethrens sinnes, and to condemne our owne. (m) Obser. 2.

Why must wee bee ready to excuse other mens sinnes? Quest. 5.

First, because we doe not see his heart, nor know his inward man; wee may see our brethrens faults, but wee cannot see their strivings, struglings, and prayers against sinne, or teares for it. And therefore we must not be rash to accuse them but readie to excuse them. Answer. 1.

Secondly, our worke is to judge our selves. 1. Corinth. 11. 32. and not others, for they stand or fall Answer 2.

to their owne Master. Rom. 14. 4. And therfore we should sit as Judges upon our selves, but not upon them, except to acquit them.

Answer 3. Thirdly, there is a double judgement, namely { First, of faith for our selves. Secondly, of charity for our brethren.

Wee must not palliate our owne sinnes, but lay them open before God, and make them as ougly and deformed unto our selves as possibly wee can: but if we extenuate, and excuse our brethrens failings, it is an argument of Christian love in us, because love covers a multitude of sinnes. 1 Cor. 13.

Sect. 2. §. 2. But seest not the beame in thy owne eye.

Our Saviour seemes here to make a twofold comparison betweene these censurers and their brethren.

1. Brother. First, thou art a man (not an Angell) and he is thy brother, a member of the same body.

2. Mote. Secondly, he hath a mote in his eye, and is tainted with some lighter sinne; thou hast a beame in thy eye and art guilty of greater sinnes. } And yet thou judgest and censurest him.

Quest. 1. Whence comes it, that although there bee great faults in us, yet wee cannot see them, but are still blinde at home?

Answer. 1. First, Philautia, selfe love hinders us from spying faults in our selves: love (they say) is blinde, and our love unto our selves, makes us that wee can dislike and see nothing amisse in our selves.

Answer 2. Secondly, our affections corrupt our judgement, and therefore wee cannot condemne what wee love.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, the eye cannot see it selfe.

Quest. 2. What meanes must wee use for the cure of this malady? for the casting out of this beame? and for the bringing of us unto the sight of our owne sinnes?

Answer 1. First, attend carefully unto the word of God, looke into the perfect law of libertie, behold thy selfe in that glasse, and it will show thee thy face. Iames 1.

Answer 2. Secondly, give thy selfe to a daily examination of thy selfe; examine thy words, works, and heart by the word, and so thou maist easily see what is amisse.

Answer 3. Thirdly, pray daily unto God to give thee that eye salve that thou maist see clearly what is amisse and wanting in thee. Revel. 3. 18.

Verse 4. Verse. 4. Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, let me pull out the mote out of thine eye, and behold a beame is in thine owne eye?

Sect. 1. §. 1. How wilt thou say to thy brother:

Observation. A brotherly and friendly admonition or reproofe is laudable, and yet wee may bee abused, whence wee may observe. That wee may sinne in the performance of the best duties.

Quest. How doe wee sinne in the performance of good duties?

Answer. 1. First, when wee doe them weakely, superficially or key-coldly.

Answer. 2. Secondly, when wee performe them proudly or boastingly as the Pharisees did.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, when they are done for some base or by end, for some fecond or sinister respect.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, when they are done corruptly, that is, with a heart not purged (as here): for if we regard iniquitie in our hearts, nothing that wee doe can bee acceptable unto God.

Observation. Wee may learne hence, That it is a foolish thing to condemne sinne in others, so long as iniquitie remaines in our selves.

Question. 1. Why may not a man reprove another, although himselfe be guilty?

Answer 1. First because then the party reproved will answer, Physitian, heale thy selfe.

Answer 2. Secondly, because such a man by reprooving an other, did condemne himselfe. Rom. 2. And God will judge him out of his owne mouth.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, because such an one reprooves through hatred, not out of any true zeale: for

1. If such an one did but see the danger, and fearefull consequents of sinne, he would labour to avoid it himselfe, as well as admonish others of the danger.

2. If such an one did but see the filthinesse of sin how loathsome a thing it is in it selfe, and how deformed it makes us in the sight of God, hee would eschew it himselfe, as well as advise another to beware of it.

3. If such an one did seeke the glory of God, he would then glorifie him himselfe, by his owne life. And therefore it is cleere, that he who reprooves sinne in another, and retaines it in himselfe, doth it neither because sinne is perillous, nor because sin is a horrid thing, nor because he desires the glory of God, but onely out of hatred to the person whom he reprooves, or some supercilious humour, and therefore those who are guilty, themselves, ought not to reprehend others.

Question 2. Who are faulty here?

Answer. 1. First those who condemne the sinnes of others, but examine not their owne, as for example.

1. The prodigall condemnes the covetous, and he the prodigall, but neither of them looke to examine themselves, or their owne wayes.

2. The drunkard reproves the adulterer, and is reproved by him againe, but neither of them blame or amend themselves.

Answer. 11. Secondly, prophane persons are here to be blamed, who condemne the godly for small sinnes, and yet are guilty themselves of great ones.

Verse 5. Verse 5. Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beame out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see cleerly to cast out the mote out of thy brothers eye.

Ἔκβαλε, Eijce, cast out the beame.

The beame as was shewed before, signifies sin, and the phrase here of casting out, doth intimate violence; as if our Saviour would say sinne cannot be expelled, except valiantly, and by force it be cast out: for he who strives to overcome sinne must fight against it, resisting it even unto blood. Hebr. 12. 4.

Question 1. How doth it appeare, that sinne cannot be overcome except it be thus manfully resisted? for many thinke that they can leave sinne when they will.

Answer. 1. First, sinne is fixed in our hearts naturally with deep rootes, and is hereditary unto us. Psal. 51. 7. And therefore cannot easily be weeded out.

Answer. 2. Secondly, hence from this originall corruption which is so deepely rooted in us, all our affections are set upon sin, therfore it cannot easily be expelled

Answer. 3. Thirdly, sinne is like a faire, fawning, flattering harlot, which often by subtile perswasions, and allurements, and sweet alluring blandishments, doth regaine admission and entrance after it is cast

out: and therefore it is not easily forsaken.

Answer 4. Fourthly, sinne is a strong enemy, yea like a strong man armed. Luke. 11. 20. And therefore cannot be conquered without strong resistance.

Answer 5. Fifthly Sinne is backed, aided, corroborated, and environed with an hoste of accomplices, to wit, Satan, the world, and the flesh, who suggest wicked things unto us, tempt us unto them, and hinder us from that which is good, by employments, forgetfulnesse, weakenesse, distraction of the mind and the like: and therefore it cannot with ease be expelled.

Question. Who are faulty in this duty?

Answer 1. First those who think it not necessary that sinne should be expelled: these are either

1. Carnall men, who say, let us sinne that grace may abound. Or

2. Familists, and Libertines, who say, God will dispose of their sinnes to his glory.

Answer 2. Secondly, those who thinke it an easie thing, and therefore never seriously arm and gird themselves, preparing courageously to fight the good fight of Faith.

Answer 3. Thirdly those who procrastinate and delay the worke, these never consider,

1. How fast time flies,

2. How their hearts grow daily harder and harder.

3. How sinne gets daily more strength in them, and over them.

4. How daily they approach nearer and nearer unto death. And therefore they are much to blame.

Answer 4. Fourthly, those who doe the word of the Lord negligently, who would be perswaded, converted and changed by the words, but are not industrious in the use of the meanes, but sluggish and lazie.

Answer 5. Fifthly those who give themselves leave to sinne, thus polluting and poysoning themselves, and surrendring the fort of their hearts up to the possession of Satan.

Answer 6. Sixtly, those who give way to the occasions of sinne, and those coards of vanity, which draw on iniquity as with cart-ropes. Esa 5. 18.

Answer 7. Seventhly those who leave sinne, but doe not loath it, retaining, and reserving the love thereof still in their hearts.

Answer 8 Eightly those who trust to themselves, and their owne strength, not arming themselves with the Holy spirit, not being carefull in hearing, nor fervent in praying, nor zealous in desiring and endeavouring to be converted, sanctified and cloathed with Christ, Rom. 13. 12. 14.

Question 3. What armour must we use against this strong enemy?

Answer 1. First take unto thy selfe the sword of the spirit, for that will drive him away.

Answer 2 Secondly, take unto thee the shield of Faith, for that will repell, keepe off, and beat back all the darts and assaults of Sathan.

Answer 3. Thirdly, provide the breast plate of righteousnesse, for that will blocke up the way against sin.

Question 4. What meanes must wee use, or how must this beame be cast out?

Answer. Hereunto is required a double labour, 1. Internall of the heart. N. 2. Externall in worke. O.

N. First if we desire that the beame of sinne may be cast out, we must first take our hearts and inward man to taske, and labour earnestly therein after these two things, to wit.

First to hate sinne with a perfect hatred, because without this we can doe nothing to any purpose in this worke, read Psal. 97. 10. Rom. 12. 9. Psal. 45. 7. Amos 5. 15. Proverb. 28. 16. Psalm. 36. 4. the truth hereof evidently appeares thus.

1. A man cannot come unto Christ, except hee hate his father and mother (r) and every thing else which would keepe him from Christ; and therefore, without the hatred of sinne, we cannot come unto God, neither do any thing pleasing unto him. (r) Luk. 14. 26.

2. The feare of the Lord is to hate evill (f) therefore without the hatred of evill, we cannot obey God, who is to be served with feare. Psal. 2. 11. (f) Prov. 8. 13.

3. If wee doe not hate evill, we hate good, for Contraria non possunt esse in eodem subiecto) A man cannot serve two masters, Mat. 5. 24. And therefore until we have learnt truely to hate sin, we have learnt truely nothing in Religion.

Secondly we must resolve never to be reconciled unto our sinnes any more, never to be overcome by the allurements thereof, but still to take off the visard of sin, that we may see it in its owne colours.

By what meanes may we attain to this hatred of sinne, and resolution against it? Quest. 5.

First consider the original from whence it comes, namely from Satan. Gen. 3. 1. And therfore when we give way to sin, we give way unto Satan, and yeeld our selves to his subjection, dominion and power, becomming his children, and servants, the consideration hereof will be a meanes to make us loathe sin, and resolve to leave it. Answer 1.

Secondly consider thy place, and selfe, what thou art? One that hath beene washed by the blood of Christ. 1 Cor. 6. 11. And therefore it is a shame to wallow any more in sin: remember thou art like a City set upon a hill. Mat. 5. 14 And therfore should be pure, glorifying God by thy unblameable life. Eph. 5. 27. Phil. 2. 15. Mat. 5. 16. For what fellowship hath light with darkenesse, or God with Satan. 2. Cor. 6. 14. Thus all Christians should remember what they are, for this will bee a meanes to make them the more to hate sin, and endeavour against it. Answer 2.

Thirdly, consider the danger of sin, both in regard of others, of other things, and of thy selfe Answer. 3.

1 Consider the dangerous effects of sin in others; how it wounded Adam, slew Cain, Cham, the old world, the ten Tribes, Ephraim, Judah, yea sin was the occasion of Christs death. Gen. 6. 5. Hosea 13. 1.

11. Consider the wofull effect of sin in all things.

1. It corrupted our nature, and obliterated Gods Image in us, yea, so contaminated us, that from the Crown of the head, to the sole of the foot, there is nothing but boyles, sores, & putrifi'd corruptions (t) (t) Esa 1. 6.

2 Sin brought shame into the world: when Adam had eaten the apple, the he was ashamed, not before. Gen. 3. 8. 10.

3. By sin, Adam, (& all men naturally in him) lost that familiarity with God, which formerly he had. Gen. 3. 8. 24.

4. Sin cast man out of pleasant Paradise, into the wide, and weedy world. (u) (u) Gen. 3. 23.

5. Sin was the cause of death, bringing that into the world also. Gen. 2. 17. Rom. 5. 12.

III. Consider the dangerous condition that thou art brought into by reason of sin, and that in many regards, namely,

First, it hath corrupted the fountaine, thy whole man, so that nothing but uncleane streames can issue from thee; mala mens malum animus, thy heart is corrupted, and therefore all thy actions favour of sinne. Reade Matth. 15. 19. Gen. 6. 5. Iam. 1. 14. 15.

Secondly, thy sinnes hath set a separation between thee and thy God, and made thee his enemy. Isa. 59. 2. James 4. 5.

Thirdly, sinne cries for vengeance. Genes. 4. 10. and 18. 20. and Iames 5. 4. the many transgressions thou hast committed, sends forth loud clamours daily unto God for justice, judgment, and revenge.

Fourthly, sinne daily rebels against thee. Romans 7. 17. 23. Galath. 5. 17. And hath gotten such strength and sure footing in thee, that thou canst not of thy selfe expell him.

Fiftly, sinne hinders and withholds good things from thee. Ierem. 5. 25.

Sixtly, sinne hath disinherited thee of thy heavenly inheritance, and deprived thee of eternall glory. Romans 3. 23.

Seventhly, sinne obdurates and hardens the heart, and takes away the sense of it. Consuetudo peccandi tollit sensum peccati.

And thus if wee desire to cast this beame of sinne out of the eye of the soule, wee must begin with the heart and inward man.

Q. Secondly, our next labour is external, wherein are two queres { Quæ faciendæ? / Quomodo?

Quest. 6. What must we doe for the expelling of sinne?

Answer. 1. First, Reluctandum, strive, struggle, wrastle, and resist sinne. Galath. 5. 17. that is, endeavour against it, subdue thy affections, and doe not with thy will consent thereunto.

Answer. 2. Secondly, Vincendum, labour to overcome it: to this is required strokes, wounds, blood (Hebr. 12. 4.) for otherwise wee can never conquer it; sinne is to bee assaulted and laboured with many blowes, and wounded with many deepe and deadly wounds or it cannot bee overcome. And therefore wee must bee diligent in hearing, reading, and meditating of our duety towards God, and Gods mercy towards us, that the consideration thereof may make us to resist sinne more manfully.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, Vinciendum, bind and tie it fast, when thou hast overcome it, by the coardes of resolution, circumspection, daily watchfulnesse, and particular promises and vowes unto God.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, ejiciendum, having bound it, then cast it out; and labour to become a new creature, entering into a new covenant with God henceforth to serve him only and alwayes with a full purpose of heart, and praying unto God to enable thee to performe what thou hast promised.

Quest. 7. How must we expell sinne?

Answer. 1. First, beginne betimes to assault him: give the water course no way at all, but while it is said to day, strive against sinne and all thy corruptions.

Answer. 2. Secondly, fight the battles of the Lord manfully untill thou hast overcome.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, persevere unto the end; Toties quoties; as long thou hast any enemies outwardly to assault thee, or corruptions which inwardly strive against thee, so long thou must labour carefully and courageously to resist them: And this will bee as long as thou livest.

Verse 6. Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast yee your pearles before swine: lest they trample them under their feet, and turne againe and rent you. Verse 6.

Bias being asked by a wicked man, what piety was? held his peace: whereupon the other demanded the reason of his silence? I hold my peace (saith he) Quia de re tibi non conveniente quæris, (a) Because thou enquirest after a thing which concerneth thee not: as if hee would have expressed that which was by Christ here uttered. (a) Laert. lib. 1.

Turpe rosas suibus, sanctum dare turpe catellis (b) (b) Sphinx Theolog. pag. 30.

Cast not pearles before swine, neither give holy things unto dogs.

Quest. 1. If holy things must not be given to dogs, then why doe Ministers preach publikely to mixt assemblies, which consists of bad as well as good men?

Answer. 1. First, we preach unto the wicked, to see perhaps God will grant unto them the grace of repentance.

Answer. 2. Secondly, wee preach unto mixt assemblies, because there are in every place some to bee healed.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, because wee should not lightly despaire of the salvation of any.

Question. 2. What is meant by holy things, and pearles?

Answer. 1. First, some understand these of the deep mysteries of religion, which the weake are not yet capable of, as John 16. 12. and 1 Cor. 3. 1. 2. August. S.

Answer. 2. Secondly, some understand these of the sacred mysteries (namely, the word and Sacraments) which are to be concealed from profane persons. Chrysost. S. & Musculus.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, some understand them of not imparting or communicating the word to those who contemne it. P.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, some understand here Reproofe (Gualt. S.) as if our Saviour would say, reprove not those who either laugh at, scorne, or contemne it. T.

And these two are here principally meant.

P First, these words are to bee understood of the Word of God, wherein three things are by our Saviour expressed, viz. I. That the word is holy Q. II. That the word is a pearle R. III. That the word is ours. S. P

Q. First, the word of God is pure and holy. Psal. 12. 6. and 18. 30. and 19. 7. 8. 9. Proverb. 30. 5. Q

Quest. 3. How doth it appeare, that the word is holy and pure?

Answer. 1. First, it conteines no impure thing in it, but is the fountaine of Sanctity, the law of Piety, and the very character of Purity.

Answer. 2. Secondly, it is the Image of God, who is most pure; And therefore must needs be pure.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, it gives unto us that holy One, and Lambe without spot, Jesus Christ; and therefore must needs bee holy.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, it sanctifies us; Christ prayes, Father sanctify them by thy word, John 17. 17. and pronounceth them pure, Now yee are cleare through the word which I have spoken. Iohn 15. 3. (b) (b) 1. Thess. 4. 3. 4.

Answer. 5. Fiftly, by the word the creatures are sanctified unto us, 1 Timoth. 4. 5. And therefore it is plaine that the word is pure.

Quest. 4. Who sinne against this pure word?

Answer. 1. First those who draw polluted things from thence, as the ſpider doth poyſon from the moſt wholeſome flower, or the ventricle, who corrupts the beſt meat, when it ſelfe is corrupted: theſe are they who turne the grace of God into wantonneſſe. Iude 4. Men of corrupt minds, 2 Tim. 3. 8. and polluted conſciences. Titus 1. 15. And are either,

1. Libertines, who pervert the Goſpell, Gal. 1. 1. Or,

2. Prophane perſons, who from the Scriptures draw arguments for laſciviouſneſſe, uncleanneſſe, prophaneneſſe, uſury and lying. Or,

3. Hereticks, Schiſmatiks, &c. who produce ſcripture for the bolſtering up of errours, falſehoods, and untruths, either againſt religion or humane ſociety.

Anſwer 2. Secondly thoſe ſinne againſt this pure word, who jeſt and play with it, uſeing it either prophanely, ridiculouſly, jeaſtingly or ſcornefully.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, they offend here alſo, who uſe not the word unto ſanctification, whether they be

1. Miniſters, who doe not teach unto ſanctification, but preach themſelves, or for their by-ends.

11. People, who doe not heare unto ſanctification, that is, labour not ſo to heare, that they may be purged, (Iohn. 15. 3.) and transformed into the ſame Image of Chriſt. (2 Cor. 3. 18.) And therefore Miniſters muſt principally labour to preſent their people as chaſte virgins unto Chriſt (2 Cor. 11. 2. and Epheſ. 5. 27. And people muſt labour to be holy, both in word, worke and thought; becauſe otherwiſe they doe not heare this pure word aright.

Queſtion 5. Secondly, as the word is pure, ſo it is a pearle, and very precious, read Pſal. 19. 10, and 119 Pſal. verſe 72. 103. 127. Ezech. 3. 3. Ierem. 15. 16.

Wherein is the word of God like unto pearles, or precious ſtones?

Anſwer 1. Firſt they ſhine in the darke, ſo doth the word, Pſal. 119. 105. Thy word is a light unto my feet, &c. ſo Heb. 4. 12 13. and 2 Pet 1. 19.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, they ſeeme vile and baſe when they are unpoliſhed, to thoſe who know them not, but are indeed precious: they ſay that Auricalcum, Copper metall, when it is firſt digged, ſeemes more like gold, than gold it ſelfe: ſo the ſplendour of worldly things, ſeemes more rare to the carnall eye then ſpirituall things doe. The preaching of the word is fooliſhneſſe, and offenſive unto ſome (d) but it is a precious jewell of more worth, then all the things in the world. (e)

e Mat. 13. 45. 46.

Anſwer 3 Thirdly, Pearles are cordiall, and generally ſoveraigne, not good for one griefe or ſickneſſe only, but for all, as Elexis ſaith of Diambra, Diamargariton, and Manus Chriſti, So the Word of God is.

I. Profitable unto the ſight, or underſtanding. David admired at the proſperity of the wicked, and could not underſtand it, til he came to the houſe of God. Pſal. 73. 17. 18.

II. It cooles the heat, and allayes the burning of the affections, whence it is called dewe. Deut. 32. 2. and water, Iohn 7. 37.

III. It heales the wounds of our affliction. Romanes 8. 37, it affords us many comforts and comfortable promiſes, by which we are ſupported in the day of tribulation.

Who offend againſt this precious word? 397

Queſtion 6. Firſt thoſe who are provoked by the reproofes of the word.

Anſwer 1. Secondly thoſe who (ſuſque deque habent) are indifferent, whether they doe enjoy the Word or not.

Anſwer 2. Thirdly thoſe who (plus ſatis habent) wiſh that there were leſſe preaching.

Anſwer 3. Fourthly thoſe who preferre thicke clay, and temporall wiſhes before this precious pearle, and will rather not enjoy it, then purchaſe it with their money.

Anſwer 4. Thirdly, this word which is ſo pure and precious, is Ours, caſt not Your pearles before Swine, as if our Saviour would ſay, the Goſpell is the proper inheritance and riches of the godly.

Queſtion 7. How doth the Lord call the Goſpell Ours? doth it belong only unto the faithfull?

Anſwer 1. Firſt, ſometimes it is appropriated unto Chriſt, and called his Goſpell, becauſe he ſent it, becauſe he is the author of it, becauſe the meſſage of ſalvation came by him, and from him 2 Cor 5. 19 20 (f) f 2 Cor. 4. 4.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, ſometimes it is appropriated unto the Miniſters: thus S. Paul ſaith, according to my Goſpell, Rom. 1. 16. and 16. 25. and 1 Theſal. 1. 5. and 2 Theſal. 2. 14. and 2 Tim. 2. 8. And our Saviour, I pray not for theſe alone, but for them alſo which ſhall believe on me, per verbum eorum, through their word. Iohn 17. 20.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, ſometimes it is appropriated to the faithfull of the Church; and thus it is taken here, our Saviour not ſpeaking onely to his Apoſtles, but alſo to all the godly, becauſe unto them belongs the rich treaſures of the word, and the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell.

Queſtion 8. What is required of the godly in regard of this Word?

Anſwer 1. Firſt ſome deſpiſe the hearing thereof, but they muſt heare it willingly.

Anſwer 2 Secondly, ſome runne after their ſinnes, and thinke the Word of God a hard ſaying, but they muſt follow the direction of the Word with cheerfulneſſe.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly others runne after ſeducing ſpirits, and lyes, but they muſt ſticke cloſe to the Oracles of God, as to the rule of truth. Eſa. 8. 20.

T.

Thus we have ſhewed how by holy things, and Pearles, is meant the word of God: it remaines now to ſhew how it is taken for reproofe. Caſt not your pearles before ſwine, neither give holy things unto Dogs: that is, reprove not thoſe any longer who deride, ſcoffe at, or ſpurne at reproofe, wherein our Saviour doth imply two things, namely Firſt that brotherly reproofe is in it ſelfe a holy thing, and a Religious action. This Salomon plentifully proves, Proverbes 25. 11, 12. and 27. 5. and 28. 23.

Secondly, that reprehenſion ought to be holy, precious, and ours: Holy, that is onely for Gods ſake, but of this more by and by. Precious and rich, that is adorned with the pearles of the word, and divine ſentences, becauſe, Scriptum eſt, it is written, is a ſtrong argument. Ours, that is, ſuch as we labour to follow our ſelves; when a man reprooves ſwearing, swearing, Sabbath breaking, drunkennesse, uncleanesse, and the like, and avoids them himselfe, giving no other counsell to his friend then hee desires and labours to take himselfe, this is called his reproofe.

Quest. 10. What are the benefits of Reprehension? or what doe we gaine thereby?

Answer. 1. First, it is a meanes to preserve the partie reproved from sinne, and Sathan.

Answer. 2. Secondly, it is a meanes to induce the partie reproved unto repentance.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, it is a meanes to confirme and establish a man in the wayes of God.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, reprehension is an excellent caveat for him that reproves, to beware of that which hee blames in another.

Quest. 11. How may we discerne holy reproofe from ordinary fault finding? or how may we know (when wee reprehend our brother) whether our reproofe bee holy or not?

Answer. 1. First, holy reproofe ariseth out of a zeale to Gods glory: because God is dishonoured by sinne, therefore the child of God reproves sinne: this is a godly reproofe.

Answer. 2. Secondly, holy reproofe ariseth out of an hatred of sinne; because the child of God hates sinne in it selfe, therefore he reproves it, where he hath any power or warrant so to doe.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, holy reproofe ariseth out of love unto our brethren; because a Christian loves his brother with a Christian love, therefore hee doth reproove that in him, which hee knowes is obnoxious, pernicious, and hurtfull for him.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, holy reproofe ariseth out of a feare of God, and a conscience of our duety unto our brother; the child of God knowing what God requires of him towards his brother, dares not neglect it, for feare of offending God.

Answer. 5. Fiftly, holy reproofe is accompanied with an humble remembrance of our owne weakenesse; Christians must not reproove one another proudly and arrogantly, but humbly, remembring that they themselves should fall as foully if they were not supported and prevented by the Spirit of God.

Answer. 6. Sixtly, holy reproofe is given or performed prudently, and circumspectly; a man must bee carefull when hee reprehends his brother, to watch his opportunities, to take the best, and fittest times, when he will heare him with the right eare, taking reproofe as a precious balme; yea we must so reproove our brethren that their faults be not divulged or published the more by our reproofe.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Give not holy things unto dogs, nor cast your pearles before swine.

Wee see here clearly, that wicked men, and those who contemne preaching and reproofe are so odious unto God, that he compares them to dogs and swine; because following brutish affections at length they become brutish.

Quest. 1. How or wherein are wicked men like these creatures?

Answer. 1. First, dogs and swine are ravenous beasts, as appeares thus.

1. They are never satisfied, they never have enough: (Isa. 56. 11.) and herein are like unto oppressors, who grinde the faces of the poore, through covetousnesse.

2. Swine will eat their young ones (g), so many will undoe utterly their own Nephewes, and Neeces, and neerest kindred, defeating them, and cheating them of their estates if possibly they can: Againe they may bee resembled to swine in this particular, who beggar and undoe their children by idlenesse, or play, or riotous living, or the like. (g) Plin. 8. 51.

Answer. 2. Secondly, they are most filthy and impure creatures; as appeares thus.

1. Swine wil wallow with great delight in filthy and stinking puddles; so doe voluptuaries.

2. They will eat filthy things, namely, Huskes, carrion and the like.

3. Dogs will returne to their old vomite; Proverb. 26. 11. So men unto sinne for a time forsaken. 2. Pet. 2. 20.

3. Swine trample under foote, and defile whatsoever is cast unto them; so to the wicked nothing is pure, but even their mind and conscience is defiled. Titus. 1. 15. Iude. 10.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, dogs fiercely and angerly barke at all who doe not belong unto them, or are not of that family wherein they are, whether rich or poore, high or low. Superior or inferior, good or bad: This may be applyed

1. To those who speake evill of those who are in authority, reproaching with opprobrious speeches, the Lords annointed, and substitutes, as Shimei did. (i)

2. To those who hate all who are not of their opinion and judgement; this is frequent with all sort of Separatists, who like, love, allow, speake well of none who are not of their straine and strange opinions. (i) 2 Sam. 16. 9.

3. To those whose barke at, and hate the righteous quatenus righteous, because he is not of their societie, and as wicked as they are. Psal. 22. 16.

Question. 2. Whom doth our Saviour principally meane by Dogs, and Swine in this place?

Answer. 1. First, some by Dogs understand heretick, and by Swine Gentiles, because Swine are cloven hoofed, but doe not shew the cudde. Hilar. S.

Answer. 2. Secondly, some by Dogs understand froward and perverse men who will not bee converted; and by Swine those who wallow in the pleasures of the world, Chrysost. S.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, certainely the scope of our Saviour by these names is to shew two things unto us.

1. That there are some to whom wee must not rashly communicate holy things, of this elsewhere.

2. That it is altogether unprofitable to doe it, therefore wee must forbeare it. Give not holy things to dogs, &c. as if Christ would say, give not such things to such men, for your labour will be in vaine. Teaching us hereby.

Observation. That our corrupt nature, and froward and perverse disposition, doth both hinder us from shewing forth the fruits of our hearing, and also from repentance, and conversion. 2 Peter. 2. 10. Matth. 23. 37. Jerem. 5. 3. and 2. 30. and 6. 28.

Quest. 3. Whence is it that naturall men are so detained from repentance and conversion?

Answer. First, they seeke not how they may bee amended; they enquire not with David wherwithall (and how) they may cleanse their wayes?

hence because

wayes? Pſal. 119. 9. but ſleepe ſecurely, onely caſting about and excogitating with themſelves how they may fulfill and ſatisfy their owne wils, and pleaſures.

Secondly, the violence, and vehemency of the mind will not endure to be hindred or bridled. From hardneſſe of heart proceeds ignorance, ſenſeleſſeneſſe, wantonnes, and that with greedineſſe. Epheſ. 4. 18. 19. and Ierem. 19. 15. and 2. Tim. 3. 13.

Queſtion 5. Why is the word of God ſo unprofitable and fruitleſſe?

Anſwer. Not becauſe the word is falſe which is delivered, or becauſe it is delivered weakely, or negligently: but becauſe the hearers are froward, yea ſnarling and biting dogs. For,

First, their ulcers and ſoares are very malignant, ſore, and tender. And

Secondly, the word bites, being like ſalt, or a corroſive, or an inciſion knife: And Hence

Thirdly, they grow angry, and become enraged againſt the preachers of the Word, like mad men falling upon the Phyſitian who would cure them.

Verſe 7. Verſe 7. Aske, and it ſhall be given you; ſeeke and yee ſhall finde: knocke and it ſhall bee opened unto you.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Aske and yee ſhall have.

Objection. We ſay, that the vow of ſingle life is an unlawfull vow, becauſe the gift of continence is not given unto every one; neither is it in any mans power to keep himſelfe chaſt alwayes. In anſwer hereunto the Papiſts produce this place, in this manner. Our Saviour ſaith, aske and yee ſhall receive; therefore wee may receive any good gift of God, if wee pray for it; and if any, then alſo the gift of Chaſtity and continency.

Anſwer The Antecedent (Aske and yee ſhall receive) is true, and is Chriſts; but the conſequence (therefore wee may receive any gift that is good of God, if we pray for it) is falſe. The untruth of the conſequence appeares thus.

Gods gifts are of two ſorts, namely:

First, Common to all who believe, and neceſſary to ſalvation, as faith, repentance, obedience, and the feare of God.

Secondly, ſpeciall gifts not given to all, nor neceſſary to ſalvation, but peculiar onely to ſome, as health, wealth, continencie, ſingle life, &c. Now this promiſe of our Saviour, aske and yee ſhall have, is meant of things neceſſary to ſalvation, and not of particular and ſpeciall gifts.

Queſtion 1. What is our Saviours principall ſcope in theſe words, Aske and yee ſhall have?

Anſwer To teach two things unto us, namely:

First, that of and from our ſelves we have no good thing at all, but whatſoever wee have which is good comes from God the Author and fountaine of every good gift and every perfect being. (k)

(k) James 1. 17. Secondly, that if wee deſire to obtaine any thing at Gods hands, we muſt pray unto him for it, I omit altogether this ſecond obſervation here, having elſewhere to treat of it; and I will ſpeake but a word or two of the first.

There are three phraſes in this verſe, all which ſhew, that of our ſelves we have no good thing in us at al: The phraſes are Asking, ſeeking & knocking; Now

First, we begge, and pray for thoſe things which belong unto others, and are not our owne.

Secondly, we ſeeke that which is loſt, as followes by and by.

Thirdly, wee knocke there where the dores are ſhut againſt us.

How doth it appeare that we have in us no good thing at all? Queſtion. 2.

First, when we come into the world we are miſerable, being deſtitute of haire to cloath us, as ſome creatures have, and of nailes and teeth to defend us as others have, and unable to defend our ſelves or to feed our ſelves, or helpe our ſelves as the moſt creatures in ſome ſort are. I might enlarge this particular more particularly thus, Anſwer. 1.

1. All creatures almoſt can helpe themſelves, either by ſwimming, or running, or creeping, as ſoone as they have life; onely man is ſhiftleſſe, and altogether unable to helpe himſelfe.

2. The other creatures are armed, either with hornes, or ſhels, or teeth, or nailes, or ſtings, or wings; only man is borne without defence or armour.

3. All the other creatures are cloathed, onely man is borne naked. And therefore theſe things conſidered we may ſafely ſay, that wee are deſtitute of whatſoever is good.

Secondly, thoſe things which wee have are tranſitory, and uncertaine, both our eſtates, and friends, and fame, and body, and ſenſes, and underſtanding, & comforts, and life, & al things whatſoever we enjoy. Anſwer. 2.

Thirdly, no good thing that wee have can bee bleſſed unto us, except the Lord give a bleſſing thereunto, and make it bleſſed. Anſwer. 3.

Fourthly, in ſpirituall things we are moſt miſerable, being like barren ground, Iſa. 41. 4. being altogether ſenſuall and carnall. Iohn 3. 7. being corrupted in our minds. Rom. 12. 2. and ſpirits. Epheſ. 4. 23. being ſtrangers from God, and grace, and ſpirituall knowledge (l). And therefore it is (theſe things conſidered) as cleare as the day, that wee have in us no good thing at all by nature. Anſwer. 4.

(l) Epheſ. 2. 12. & 4. 18.

What is the meaning of theſe words? Queſt. 1.

Seeking, is ſpoken of thoſe things which are loſt, or (at leaſt) not poſſeſſed, and hath reference, unto the action of finding. A man is ſaid to ſeeke for that which he hath loſt, or to ſeeke after that which hee doth not enjoy, and that for this end that hee may find and enjoy it. Anſwer.

Doth this Relation alwayes hold betweene Seeking and Finding? are they Relata mutua? Queſt. 2. Anſwer 1.

First, there is a fourefold Seeking, to wit,

1. Unprofitable, when a thing is ſought in vaine, or ſought but not found. Ierem. 5. 1.

2. Profitable, when a man ſeekes and findes; this is promiſed here.

3. Sluggiſh and lazy, when a man ſeeks carelеſſly, ſleightly, for the faſhion ſake, and without all care or paines; this is falſely called Seeking, which is an induſtrious act.

6. There is a true Seeking, which is accompanied with ſweating, and endeavour, as the man ſought his ſheepe, and the woman her groate. Luke 15. 4. 8. And of this Seeking our Saviour ſpeakes in this place.

Secondly, there is a double finding, namely, Anſwer. 2.

1. Idle and caſuall, when a man findes that which which hee sought not, and this is fourefold.

First, when a man findes that which hee would not finde; as Ahab found Elias, have I found thee oh mine enemie?

Secondly, when a man findes that which he would not seeke: I am found of them (saith God,) that would not seeke mee. Isa. 65. 1.

Thirdly, when a man hath long sought a thing, in vaine and afterwards casually findes it when hee looked not for it, as Jnachus did Io, Tu non inventa reperta es. Oftentimes men cannot finde that which they seeke, when they seeke it, but finde it when they seeke it not.

Fourthly, when a man findes that which hee is glad of, but never sought for, neither thought of. As when one findes a treasure, or a jewell, or the like accidentally.

2. Laborious, and industrious; when a man seekes diligently; & in his search finds that which he sought for. And this finding is here onely to bee expected: Whence we may learne, Observation. That grace is not to be expected from God without our earnest labour and endeavour; the trueth of this evidently appeares by these places of Scripture. 1 Chronic. 22. 19. and 28, 9. Luke 13. 24. and 2. Timoth. 4. 7. and 1. Corinth. 14. 12. and Hebr. 4. 11. Rom. 12. 8. 11. and 2. Timoth. 2. 15. and Heb. 6. 11. and 2. Pet. 1. 5. 10. and 3. 14. Matth. 6. 33. Colos. 3. 1. and 1. 29. Deut. 4. 29.

Question 3. Why can we not obtaine grace from God without labour and paines?

Answer. 1. First, because wee have by our many sinnes fallen from the favour of God; and therefore no grace or mercy is to bee expected from him, except we come unto him humbly, and become earnest suters to his Majestie, as Rebels, Traitors, and condemned persons pleads, pray, and petition for their lives.

Answer 2. Secondly, because wee undervalue grace if wee seeke it not earnestly, preferring it before all other things. Matth. 6. 33. And therefore God will give it to none, who give not all diligence to acquire it.

Question 4. Who are faultie in this particular?

Answer. 1. First, those who seeke worldly things too much; for certainly a man cannot pursue both grace, and the world. And therefore although it bee not forbidden to possesse riches, or to preserve them for our families, or to rejoice in the use of them, if so be it be in the Lord; yet two things are prohibited, namely,

1. To rejoyce too much, in any temporall things or to set our hearts upon any thing we possesse (Psal. 62. 10.) or to trust in what wee have. Iob. 31.

2. To be too carefull for the things of this life, or to labour too much to be rich. (m) It is a wonderfull thing that men should so earnestly, and greedily, and greatly, seeke those things which,

(m) Prov. 23. 4.

First, our Saviour himselfe saith are thornes. Matth. 13. And which Secondly, S. Paul saith (from God) are snares. 1 Tim. 6. 10. And which Thirdly, both Iohn and Iames say are enmitie with God, and makes us the enemies of God. 1. Iohn 2. 16. Iames 4. 4. And which Fourthly, experience showes doth hinder us from seeking heavenly things; as Demas who embracing the present world forsooke the profession of religion (n).

(n) 2 Tim. 4. 10.

Secondly, those stand guilty here as transgressors of this Precept, who seeke not grace at all; Many thinke themselves good Christians, who yet never labour and seeke for grace. Answer. 2.

How may we know whether we seeke after grace or not? Question 5.

First, is this alwayes in thy heart? doe thy hearty desires still runne after God, and grace, and religion? then it is a good signe that thou seekest, and that aright. Answer. 1.

Secondly, dost thou postpone all other things in regard of this? certes, it is a great good signe that a man seekes heartily for God and grace, when in respect thereof hee neglects all sublunary things. But these are two generall markes, I proceede therefore to more particular ones. Answer. 2.

Thirdly, dost thou seeke deliverance, and freedome from evills, and that onely from God? that is, Answer. 3.

1. Temporall, and that not from witches, or by revenge, or the like, but onely and humbly from God.

2. Spirituall, whether they be,

First, by past, as the pardon of our sinnes already committed. Psal. 51. 6. Or

Secondly, present, as the inherent reliques of corruption yet remaining within us; as Paul cryed out. Rom. 7. 24. oh wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me? Or Thirdly, to come, when we desire to bee freed from Sathan, hell, and the wrath of God.

Fourthly, dost thou seeke the fruition and possession of good things from God, both, Answer. 4.

1. Temporall, Give us this day our dayly bread; And,

2. Spirituall, now these graces are many, to wit,

First, the Kingdome of glory: thus Paul desires, to be dissolved and to be with Christ (o). (o) Philip. 1. 23.

Secondly, the Kingdome of grace, admission into the Church, and effectuall vocation, and the renovation of the minde, and the grace of adoption and faith. Ephes. 1. 13.

Thirdly, the riches of Gods grace, and sanctification (1. Cor. 14. 12.) to wit,

1. True spirituall, and saving wisdome whereby wee may know the will of God. Prov. 2. 4. and 15. 14. And,

2. Strength, whereby we may be able to worke the worke of God. Psalm. 51. 11. And

3. The holy Ghost, by which wee may be both directed and assisted. Eph. 3. 16. 17.

4. God himselfe, that we may be filled with his fulnesse. Read. Psalm. 24. 6. and 27. 4. and 63. 1. & Cantic. 3. 1. &c. and 2. Cor. 3. 18. Ephes. 3. 19.

Thus wee may know whether wee bee seekers or not, if we examine our selves by these things, namely, by a hearty desire after grace; by the valewing of it above all earthly things; by praying unto God for the removall of temporall evills, and preservation against them, as also for spirituall, to wit, both for pardon of our former sinnes, and for strength against present corruptions, and for freedome from the divell, hell, and the wrath of God; yea wee must examine our selves by our paines in seeking unto God for temporall blessings, and spirituall graces; wee must trie whether daily wee implore the throne of mercy, mercy, for mercy at the great day, that then we may be made partakers of glory, that now we may bee made partakers of grace, both the grace of effectuall vocation, and ſpirituall ſanctification, and reall renovation, and celeſtiall wiſdome, and internall ſtrength, and comfortable fruition of the preſence of God.

Queſtion. 6. How are ſpirituall things to be ſought for?

Anſwer. 1. First, Tempus arripiendo, by ſeeking them betime, while they are to be found (Iſa. 55. 6.)

Anſwer 2. Secondly, diligenter conando, by ſeeking them earneſtly untill wee have found them. Luke 15. 8.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, abſtinendo, by abſtaining from all ſinne; every man that ſtriveth for the maſtery, is temperate in all things, 1 Cor. 9. 25. So if wee deſire to obtaine grace wee muſt labour and ſtrive hard for it, and avoid all things that are evill.

Anſwer. 4. Fourthly, Spernendo remoras, by trampling under our feete all the lets and pulbacks we meet withall, fighting manfully the Lords battels. Rom. 8. 18. and 1 Tim. 6. 12.

Anſwer 5. Fifthly Imprecando, by imploring the aide and aſſiſtance of the bleſſed Spirit. Coloſ. 1. 29.

Queſt. 7. What meanes muſt wee uſe for the obtaining of ſpirituall graces?

Anſwer. 1. First, learne to hate ſinne and evill; and for the better effecting of this remember, and meditate dayly upon theſe things, namely,

Rom. 6. 21. 1. How unſeemely, yea how ougly a thing ſinne is, in it ſelfe; if wee could but ſee ſinne in its owne colours, unmasked: What pleaſure had you then (ſaith Saint Paul) in thoſe things whereof yee are now aſhamed? as if hee would ſay; ſinne is ſo ſhamefull a thing, that any man would bluſh to commit it, who did but ſee it at full view.

2. Remember how ungratefull a thing it is, for us by ſin to provoke ſo gracious & loving Father, who takes care both to provide for us, and to protect us.

3. Remember how perillous a thing it is: as it is an unthankefull part to love ſinne, which our God hates as his deadlyeſt enemie; ſo it as a dangerous thing to love that which God hates; for the wages of ſinne is death. Rom. 6. 21.

4. Remember how fooliſh and ſottiſh a thing it is for us to love ſinne, and thereby to ſerve Sathan, who ſeeks nothing ſo much as our eternal deſtruction. Thus ſeriouſly meditate upon theſe things, that thereby wee may bee excited unto the hatred of ſin.

Anſwer. 2. Secondly, learne to love that which is good, and to delight therein.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, uſe the meanes, which God hath appointed, whether publicke or private; namely, the hearing and reading, and meditating of the word, and the ſociety of the Saints, and daily and frequent prayer, Rom. 8. 26. Coloſſ. 4. 12. Ionah. 3. 8. And let our prayers bee,

1. Vehement; David cries unto God, Pſal. 22. 2. and 32. 3. and 77. 3.

2. Perſeverant: thus David and the Apoſtles continue in prayer, Pſal. 88. 1. 9. Acts 1. 14. and 2. 42. and 12. 5. 12.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Knocke, and it ſhall be opened unto you.

Queſtion. 1. What is meant by this phraſe or precept, knocke?

Anſwer. That wee muſt attend upon God with patience and perſeverance untill hee open unto us; or wee muſt continue praying untill God heare us. Luke 18. 1. Pſal. 105. 4. Rom. 12. 12. and 1. Theſ. 5. 17.

Why muſt wee continue thus long knocking? why may we not give over if the gate be not ſpeedily opened unto us? Queſt. 2.

First, Because the Lord ſtands long knocking at the doore of our hearts before hee can get entrance, and calls long before wee will heare him; And therefore there is great reaſon that wee ſhould continue long calling & crying unto him, and knocking at the dore of mercy. Reade Cantic. 5. 2. &c. and Apoc. 3. 20. Anſwer 1.

Secondly, God opens not at firſt unto us, that he may trie our patience; he ſeemes not to heare us, that he may trie our confidence; And therefore by patience and perſeverance wee muſt approve our ſelves unto God. Anſwer. 2.

Thirdly, we knocke for our owne ends, and call for mercy for our ſelves; wherefore there is great reaſon that wee ſhould continue both knocking and calling. Our petitions are either for pardon of our ſinnes, or preſervation againſt them, or for ſome temporall bleſſing, or ſpirituall grace, or aſſurance of eternall glory, or the like; And therefore if wee love our ſelves, or wiſh well unto our ſelves, wee ſhould bee conſtant in our calling and knocking, untill the Lord have opened unto us, and granted our requeſts. Anſwer. 3.

Can wee knocke, or call, or pray, without God? Queſtion 3.

Not at all, or at leaſt, not aright; wee are like men wounded unto death (yea killed outright) and therefore by the Lords helping hand we are firſt revived, reduced, or brought unto our ſenſes; and then wee deſire health, and reliefe. God firſt gives us a ſight of our ſinnes, and wants, and then we implore him for mercy. Anſwer.

Verſe 8. For every one who asketh receiveth; and he that ſeeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it ſhall be opened. Verſe 8.

Againſt this verſe it is objected, that both Scripture and experience doth prove this promiſe to bee falſe; for the Mother of Zebedees children prayed unto Chriſt, and yet ſuffered a repulſe; Saint Paul deſired to bee freed from the buffet of Sathan, but obtained not his requeſt. Experience alſo witneſſeth that wee daily deſire many things at Gods hands which we obtaine not. Objection.

This promiſe is to bee underſtood with a double reſtriction, or limitation; namely, Anſwer

First, that prayer and ſupplication be made as it ought, in regard of the manner of it; to wit, in faith, and in the name of Chriſt, in whom all the promiſes of God are yea and Amen, and ſhall in Gods due time bee certainly performed: yea our prayers muſt principally be powred forth for this end, that God may bee glorified by us on earth, and we glorified with him in heaven.

Secondly, wee muſt deſire thoſe things which God hath promiſed to grant; wee muſt not pray for evill, hurtfull, unprofitable, curious, or unwarrantable things; but for ſaving and neceſſary, which God onely hath promiſed. Now if either of theſe conditions be awanting, no wonder if our prayers bee not heard: that is, if either for the matter wee begge thoſe things which God hath not promiſed to grant; or for the manner, wee deſire them not as God hath preſcribed; then the Lords promiſe made here in this verſe is not falſified at all. For when Chriſt ſaith aske and yee shall receive, hee meanes, if wee aske such things as God hath promised to give, and in that manner which himselfe hath injoyned.

Verse 9. 10. 11. Verse 9. 10. 11. Or what man is there of you, whom if his Son aske bread will he give him a stone? or if he aske a fish will hee give him a serpent? If yee then being evill, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven, give good things unto them that aske him?

Sect. 1. §. 1. What man is there among you, &c.

Question 1. What is our Saviours chiefest scope in these words?

First, to teach us the naturall affection of parents to their children. V. Secondly, what our duetie is to pray for. W.

V.

Answer 1. First, our Saviour hereby would teach us, that the affection of parents unto their children is ingrafted in them by nature; or naturally parents will wish well, and (to their abilities) doe good, unto their seed.

Quest. 2. How doth this appeare?

Answer 1. First, it is cleare from nature; children are parts of their parents, flesh of their flesh, and bone of their bone; and therfore in doing good to them they doe good to themselves; And this is the best kinde of Selfe-love for a man to love his children who issued out of his loynes.

Answer. 2. Secondly, this is manifest from experience; those who are most cruell unto others, are yet indulgent and meeke unto their children: And therefore Herodes monstrum (Macrobius) Herod was no better then a monster in nature, who slew his owne children (as was shewed before Chapter 2.) For the most cruell and ravenous birds and beasts are carefull both to feede and defend their young ones.

Quest. 3. Is this naturall affection laudable?

Answer. 1. First, this love of parents unto their children is commendable in it selfe, because it proceeds A naturâ primâ, from uncorrupted nature.

Answer 2. Secondly, this affection may be considered either,
- First, Simpliciter, as it is inherent in us: and thus it is laudable. Or
- Secondly, Respectivè, as it guides the will, and governes our externall actions; and so often it leades us into by pathes, and wrong wayes. For affections must not governe, but be governed by right reason.

Who are here blame worthy as transgressors against this naturall vertue?

Quest. 4. All those who are unnaturall unto their children.

Answer. Rom. 1. 30. and 2 Tim. 3. 3. as for example,

First, some are unnaturall onely unto some of their children not unto all, and that either in affection or countenance; some are different in their love, affecting one childe much more then another; some are more sharpe in their words and corrections, and more sowre in their lookes towards one then another. And why? because they give one sucke not to another. Indeed I never read in Scripture that these were separated: wee reade that a certaine woman hearing Christ, cried out, Blessed is the wombe that bare thee, and the paps that gave thee sucke (a): And our Saviour himselfe saith, that the time will come, when men shall say, blessed is the barren wombe which never bare, and the paps which never gave sucke (b) where wee see bearing and suckling, bringing forth of children, and nursing and bringing up of children goe both together; as if the Holy Ghost would say, those whose wombes God opens, & enables to bring forth, should open their breasts, and enforce themselves to give their seede sucke which they have brought forth. Sarah and Hannah give their sons sucke (c) And they who are able and may conveniently, and will not, are worse then Dragons.

(a) Luke 11. 27.

(b) Luke 23. 29.

(c) Genes. 21. 7.

1 Sam. 1. 23. Lament. 4. 3.

Secondly, some parents are unnaturall unto all their children in suffering them to perish, or by undoing them through their idlenesse, or pleasure, or lust, or gaming, or prodigality, and the like.

Thirdly, those are unnaturall who make their children bastards, who beget offspring in a polluted bed, and so (as much as in them lies) labours to bring downe from heaven a curse not a blessing, upon their issue.

Fourthly, they are unnaturall, who through covetousnesse will either not give fitting education and and breeding to their children, or who will not labour to preferre them (according to their abilities) either in callings and trades or marriages. Some there are who will bee at no charge with their children to bring them up according to their ranke and quality, neither will affoord them meanes to set them up in the world, or to advance them by matrimonie: These are very unnaturall: For whom doe men labour, if not for their children?

W.

Fiftly they are most of all unnaturall who destroy and murther their young infants. And thus much for our Saviours first scope.

Answer 2. Secondly, our Saviour here in saying, What man amongst you if his children aske him bread, &c. doth teach us, that wee ought in temporall things to aske at Gods hands only moderate things; because great things are not necessary for us; neither doe we know whether they bee profitable for us or not; and that they are perillous wee may bee certainly assured of.

Sect. 2. §. 2. If yee then being evill, know how to give good gifts unto your children, &c.

Our Saviour in these words showes that evill men can give good things.

Quest. 1. How doth this appeare? for S. Iames saith, that from a bitter fountaine cannot come sweet water; and Christ himselfe elsewhere saith, that an evill tree cannot bring forth good fruit.

Answer. Those things which evill men give are not their owne, or proceed not from themselves: but are given unto them by God; and therefore are good, all things being so which proceede from him.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Unto your children?

Our Saviour showes here expressely, that evill men may give good gifts unto theirs; implying therby.

Observation. That men may bee good parents temporally, and yet evill men.

Quest. 1. How doth this appeare?

Answer 1. First, because this is but a naturall goodnesse, not a spirituall.

Answer 2. Secondly, because herein men respect not so much God, or his law, or their duety towards him, but onely their children, and in them themselves, they they being a part of them, as was affirmed even now.

What

Queſt. 2. What good gifts can evill men give?

Anſwer. Good things are twofold, viz. Temporall, of theſe wee ſpeake, and this a wicked man may give. Spirituall, and theſe a wicked man cannot give.

Sect. 5. §. 5. How much more ſhall your Father which is in heaven, &c.

Chriſt our bleſſed Saviour here argues from man unto God; teaching us, Obſervat. That good in man, is the exemplar of God: this appeares thus,

Firſt, whatſoever man hath which is good proceeds eſſentially from God; Quicquid eſt in Deo, eſt ipſe Deus; & quicquid à Deo, eſt Deo ſimile, Whatſoever is eſſentiall in God is God himſelfe; and whatſoever proceeds from God is like unto him.

Secondly, hence man was created after Gods own Image. Epheſ. 4. 24.

Queſtion. After what Image of God was man made?

Anſwer. There is a threefolde Image,

First, Spiritus, of ſpirit; thus man was created in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe of truth (d).

Secondly, Anima, of ſoule; thus man was endued with knowledge; and of this the Lord ſpeaks when he ſaith, Man is become like one of us, to know good and evill (e) and of this Image we ſpeake in this place.

Thirdly, ſome adde Corporis, of body; Os homini ſublime dedit, but this is curious.

Verſe 12. Verſe 12. Therefore all things whatſoever yee would that men ſhould doe to you, doe yee even ſo to them: for this is the law and Prophets.

§. 1. Ergo, therefore.

This Illative, arguing ſome dependance upon ſomething going before; it may be demanded,

What coherence, and connexion this verſe hath with the former, and whereupon it depends?

Queſt. Anſwer. 1. Firſt, ſome ſay it hath reference unto the ninth verſe, where wee have a promiſe of being heard: as if our Saviour would ſay, doe you deſire that God may heare and grant your requeſts? then bee you prone to heare, and eaſie to be entreated of your brethren (f). But Chriſt teacheth us from our owne will in regard of man, not in regard of God: What you would that men ſhould doe unto you, doe yee the ſame unto them.

Anſwer. 2. Secondly, ſome referre theſe words to the ſame promiſe made Verſe 9. but otherwiſe, namely thus, you ſhall receive from God what you aske, upon this condition, that you doe unto others what you would they ſhould doe unto you (g).

(g) Chryſoſt. S.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, Muſculus upon theſe words telleth us, that ſome referre them to the firſt verſe, Judge not.

Anſwer 4. Fourthly, ſome thinke this verſe to be a generall Epilogue or concluſion, of all the precedent precepts concerning love; principally thoſe laid downe Chapter. 5. thus Muſcul. Aretius. S.

Anſwer 5. Fifthly, ſome thinke this verſe to bee an anſwer to an objection; For ſome perhaps might ſay: The law in many things is darke and obſcure, what therefore ſhall wee doe? To this Chriſt anſwers in the text, whatſoever you would that men ſhould doe unto you, &c. Thus Gualter S. expounds; the words; And the rather, becauſe Chriſt had ſhowed before that there were many lawes evilly underſtood.

Anſwer 6. Sixtly, Calvin thinkes that this Ergo, Therefore, is redundant, and that the ſentence is compleate of it ſelfe, and to bee reade by it ſelfe, being independent: And therefore in this great diverſitie of opinions, wee will follow our firſt propounded and formerly practized method, namely.

In this 7. Chapter our Saviour both ſhewes

- What wee muſt not doe; namely,
  - First, we muſt not judge our brethren. Verſe 1.
  - Secondly, we muſt not give holy things to dogs. verſe. 6.
- What wee muſt doe: wherein are two things
  - First, a preparation which is partly
    - Exhortative, Pray. } verſe 7.
    - Promiſſive. And ye ſhall receive. } verſe 7.
  - Secondly, an exhortation unto two things, namely.
    - First love towards our brethren. verſe 12.
    - Secondly, holineſſe towards God, where Chriſt
      - First, teacheth that wee muſt enter &c. verſe 13.
      - Secondly, admoniſheth that we ſhould take heed. First, of falſe teachers. verſe. 15. Secondly, of all hypocriticall ſhewes. verſe. 21. &c.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Whatſoever yee would that men ſhould doe, &c.

Divines and Schoole-men obſerve that there are two ſorts of Principles, namely,

First, Principia primo-prima; firſt principles, and theſe are made up in the hearts of man.

Secondly, Principia ſecundo-prima ſecond principles; and theſe are deduced out of thoſe.

There are ſome Primo-prima principia in the ſpeculative facultie, and ſome in the practicke: as for example, this is a principle in the ſpeculative facultie. Omne totum eſt majus ſuâ parte. And this is a principle in the practicke facultie, the will, Whatſoever yee would that men ſhould doe to you, doe yee even ſo to them.

Queſt. Anſwer. Whether is this precept naturall or not?

It is both naturall and alſo plainely divine, being injoyned by this heavenly Law-giver, both in this verſe, and alſo Luke 6. 31. But yet notwithſtanding concerning this precept three things are to bee obſerved, namely,

First, that it ſpeakes not of that whole jus naturale, but onely of that part thereof wherein is contained our duetie towards men.

Secondly, that every kinde of vvill of ours, is not a true rule of performing our duetie towards others. [For so hee who desires that another should make him drunke, may make another drunke; and hee who would have another to invite him unto Fornication or Adulterie, might invite and allure another unto uncleanenesse:] but this precept speakes of the naturall Will well ordered (and by no perturbation infected) whereby wee wish that which is truly good unto our selves.

Thirdly, our Saviour in this principall, commands us not, to doe all things in particular to others which wee desire should bee done unto us from others [for so Masters should serve their servants, and cease to bee Masters, if they should doe as much, and the same workes for their servants, as they expect from them.] but this precept injoynes the same things proportionably; as wee would have them behave themselves as servants, so must wee carry our selves as Masters: Or this precept injoynes the same workes conditionally, namely, if wee were as they are; And thus this verse is most usually understood. Children must obey parents so as they desire to bee obeyed if they were parents; Servants must bee so faithfull and trusty and diligent, and respectfull of their Masters, as they would have servants unto them, if they were Masters: and so of all other degrees and conditions.

Wee see here that CHRIST doth not neglect the Law as disanulled or made voide, but as a thing for all times, ratified appeales thereunto: Teaching us that CHRIST did not abrogate or dissolve the Law of God. Observa. 1. Matth. 5. 17.

Did CHRIST make voide no law ordained and appointed by God? Quest. 1.

First, wee distinguish between the
- Ceremoniall and Judiciall Lawes, and all those ordinances which were Typically given; and these must necessarily cease when the thing typified came. Answer. 1.
- Morall, wherein wee distinguish between the lawes
  - Strength and power, and that both
    - Salvando, in saving us, which it was altogether unable to doe. Rom. 8. 3. Galath. 3. 24.
    - Damnando, in condemning of us: now the children of God are free (by Christ) from the curse of the Law. Galath. 3. 13.
  - Direction; and here I distinguish between the exaction of,
    - Perfection, which was first by the law required. Galath. 3. 10.
    - Sincerity, which only now is injoined. (b) (b) Acts 11. 23.

So hence wee may collect, that the Types and Figures have ceased; and also the condemning power of the Morall Law unto those who are in CHRIST; because God now of them requires not that the Law bee perfectly and exactly fulfilled according to the strict rigor thereof, but that they moderate and regulate their lives thereby, labouring in sincerity of soule, and with a full purpose of heart to obey him in all things whatsoever therein is required. And this sincere obedience God (for Christs sake) doth accept as much as if it were perfect.

Secondly, others here distinguish betweene
- The coaction and constraint of the Law, this we are freed from by Christ.
- The voluntarie Obedience: this wee are taught (1 Iohn. 2. 27.) And the love of God constraines us now to obey the Law, and not the terrours thereof (i) and love is stronger then feare. Cantic. 1. 3. and 8. 6. &c. Answer 2.

Question. 2. Who are to bee blamed here?

Answer 1. First, the practicall libertines, who hope for salvation without repentance; who expect a reward of glory without turning from sinne; who thinke they may sinne against God, and yet grace and mercy from God shall bee extended unto them (k) These must know that without grace there is no glory, and without repentance, and conversion, no favour or mercy. Reade Matthew. 3. 10. Zach. 1. 3. Isa. 1. 16. Acts. 2. 38. and 3. 19. and 17. 30.

Secondly, the dogmaticall libertines, who care not for workes, or sanctification, or obedience, but hope and labour to maintaine that they may bee saved without them. But the tree is knowne by his fruite, and it is the Lords owne ordination, that where there is no sanctification on earth, there shall bee no salvation in heaven (Hebr. 12. 14.) and where there is no works, there shall be no reward. Answer 2.

But say thy faith justifies, and therefore what needs works? Objection 1.

Faith works by love (Gal. 5. 6.) yea if faith worke not, it is a deade faith. Iames 2. 17. Answer.

The Law was not given to the righteous man. 1. Tim. 1. 9. Objection 2.

It was not given Contra justum; for the Apostle there speakes of the threatnings, curses, and comminations of the Law; which were not denounced against the righteous. Answer.

But charity and love sufficeth without works; And therefore they are needlesse. Object. 3.

Certainely it is most true that love sufficeth, for it is the fulfilling of the Law. Rom. 13. 10. But, Answer.

First, not fained love which consists in words only; but that which is in deed and in truth 1. Iohn 3. 18.

Secondly, not a pretended love unto Christ in his owne person, but a love extended also unto his members. Matth. 25. 45.

Thirdly, we cannot love Christ except we obey him him; If you love me (ſaith Chriſt) keepe my Commandements (Iohn 14. 15.) where we ſee that according to our Saviour himſelfe, there can be no true love of him, without obedience to the Commandements of God.

Queſtion 3. Is this the whole ſcope of the Law, to doe to others as we would they ſhould doe unto us? that our Saviour here ſaith, This is the Law and the Prophets.

Anſwer. CHRIST reprehends the Phariſes, that hee may reduce them the better from their ſuperſtition.

For firſt, they placed the marrow of the Law in ceremonies; as in their Phylacteries, and the obſervation of the Traditions of the Elders, and the like (h)

(h) Mat. 23. 5. 23. & 15. 2. 9. Luke 16. 14.

Secondly, in the meane time they neglected judgement, and the workes of the Law, Math. 23. 1. 23.

Thirdly, hence the Prophets call them from Ceremonies, Eſay 1. 11. and 58. 1. 2. Amos 5. 22. Deut. 10. 16. and 30. 6. And this is the ſcope of Chriſt, to withdraw them from outward things, to the inward marrow of the Law, (as Mathew 9. 13. Joel 2. 13. Mich. 6. 6. &c.)

Obſerv. 2. Our Saviour teaching us hereby, That the works of charity are the moſt true ſcope of the Law and Prophets. Romans 13. 8. &c. God is love (1 John 4. 10.) and the Law is the Image of God; Therefore the ſcope and end thereof muſt needs be love.

Queſt. 4. Doth the Law enjoyne nothing elſe but love? doth it not require in us faith? (The juſt ſaith Habakkuk, ſhall be ſaved by his faith) yea doth it not exact holineſſe, righteouſneſſe, and ſobrietie? Titus 2. 11.

Anſwer. 1. Firſt, the doctrine of faith doth not properly teach what we muſt doe, but what we muſt expect: Now the proper ſubject of the Law is obedience.

Anſwer. 2. Secondly, obedience indeed doth include theſe three, Faith, Hope, and Love; but the Scripture uſually doth inſiſt principally upon Love unto our neighbours, becauſe therein wee moſt commonly faile, and in the other are hypocritically falſe. Men faine to have much faith in Chriſt, and ſtrong and ſure hope of ſalvation, and yet in the meane time be unjuſt unto men. And therefore both the Maſter and the Diſciple, reciting the Law, recite onely the ſecond Table, Matth. 19. 19. Rom. 13. 9.

Queſt. 5. If the whole Law and Prophets conſiſt in this ſhort precept, Thou ſhalt doe unto others as thou wouldſt have them to doe unto thee: then what need ſo many bookes and Prophets, and Epiſtles, and Sermons as there are?

Anſwer. Certainely, the Prophets, and Sermons of the Preachers ſpeake nothing againſt this rule: yea this might ſuffice for the directing of us in our duty towards men, if wee were not too perverſe: But becauſe wee neither will underſtand, neither be ſubject, it is therefore neceſſary that we ſhould be exhorted unto three things, namely,

Firſt, Ad judicandum; wee will not confeſſe what is juſt; And therefore it is fit that we ſhould be exhorted to judge betweene man and man, thing and thing, and that with equity and reaſon; yea, according to ſome preſcript rules.

Secondly, Ad obligandum; generall words will not bind rebels, and therefore many particular Lawes are added, whereof there were no need, if we would be but ſubject to this precept. Wee ſee the Lord gives a particular charge concerning lending, Deut. 15. 2. and giving, verſe 7. and almes, verſe 9. &c. and the like, becauſe our underſtanding is ſo blind, our wills ſo perverſe, and our nature ſo corrupt, that we will not be inſtructed with generall rules.

Thirdly, Ad commone faciendum; wee are very forgetfull; and therefore we ſtand in need of many Lawes, and rules, and inſtructions, and exhortations, and all little enough.

Whether is honeſty and upright dealing betwixt man and man, praiſed and commended by God? Queſt. 6.

Anſwer. Honeſty is greatly eſteemed by God. Here obſerve that ſome attribute too much to honeſty, ſome derogate too much from it; but the proper place thereof I conceive to be this;

Firſt, Honeſty is in it ſelfe a good thing, and commanded to all men, Whatſoever things are good, whatſoever things are honeſt, &c. labour after, Philip. 4. 8.

Secondly, Honeſty is neceſſary, not onely in reſpect of men (Rom. 12. 17. Provide things honeſt in the ſight of all men) but alſo in reſpect of God, becauſe he hates all ſinnes.

Thirdly, Honeſty is acceptable and gratefull unto God; yea,

Fourthly, ſhall be crowned with a reward, if it be true, and rightly performed; that is, if accompanied with Religion in the life, and proceeding from a ſanctified heart.

Who are blame-worthy here? Queſt. 7.

Anſwer. Thoſe who defining the workes of Religion, neglect honeſty and integrity amongſt men: thus erre in their definition, and thwart the truth here taught by our Saviour, That the workes of love towards our brethren, are the true ſcope and end of the Law and Prophets.

Firſt, the Phariſees were here faulty, who placed the obſervation of the Law in ceremonies: as was ſhewed before, queſt. 3.

Thirdly, Hypocrites are here guilty alſo, who place Religion in the obſervation of the firſt Table, who will faſt, and pray publikely, and performe ſome workes of outward holineſſe. Indeed theſe are to be done, but thoſe are not to be left undone, Mat. 23. 23.

Wherein doth the Law of God excell humane Lawes? Queſt. 8.

Anſwer The Law of God doth eſtabliſh the affirmative part of the precept, as well as the negative; and herein excelleth the beſt Lawes of men: For humane Lawes onely forbid evill things, but many good things are not therein commanded; as for example,

There are Lawes eſtabliſhed againſt murther and theft, a man muſt not kill his brothers perſon, nor ſteale his brothers ſubſtance; for if ſo, he ſhall be 406 be punished: But men are not commanded by the Lawes of men.

First, to visite the sicke, who by reason of his affliction stands in need of solace. Or,

Secondly, to lend to the poore, and those who want, that so their necessities may be relieved. Or,

Thirdly, to feed the poore when he is hungry, or give him drinke when hee is a thirst. Or,

Fourthly, to reduce the wandring traveller into the right way. Or,

Fiftly, to pardon and forgive those who injure, and wrong us. Or,

Sixtly, to give counsell to the ignorant, or comfort to the comfortlesse; These things the Law of man doth not oblige all men unto; But the Law of God commands them all, and that unto all. Whatsoever thou wouldest that another should doe unto thee, doe thou the same unto them. And therefore let us acknowledge these two things, to wit,

First, that it is alike necessarie, and generally commanded, to doe good unto our brother as well as not to hurt him. A man sinnes by the Law of God that harmes his brother, yea hee sinnes no lesse who will not helpe his brother when hee may doe it.

Secondly, hee is no Christian (whatsoever hee thinkes of himselfe, or seemes unto others) who towards men is either false, or hard, or hardhearted, or the like.

Verse 13. 14. Enter yee in at the straite gate, for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there bee which goe in thereat: But strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that finde it. Verse 13. 14.

I have occasionally often said, that the salvation of our soules is a matter of greatest importance, both in regard of the losse, & in regard of the gaine: No greater misery can come unto us then to bee deprived of Heaven; no greater felicitie can we be made partakers of, then to bee made partakers thereof: And therefore I have propounded and resolved with my selfe to treate something more particularly and more amply of these two verses, then of any either preceding or following.

What was the occasion of these words? Quest. 1.

Christ had taught love, and equitie towards man in the former verse; and therefore now hee teacheth holinesse towards God: And because two things principally hinder there from; namely. Answer. 1.

First, the multitude of sinners: And secondly false teachers who seduce men into wandering waies and by pathes; Our Saviour therefore meets with them both; First, the multitude of sinners in the present Text: Secondly, False-teachers. Verse 15. &c.

How are these verses divided? Question. 2. Answer.

Naturally into these two parts, namely a

- Precepts, wherein are three things, to wit,
  - First there is a way that leads unto heaven.
  - Secondly this way is streight.
  - Thirdly it is to be entred into, enter in at the streight gate.
- Reason, which is twofold, taken either from the - Broad way wherein are three things,
    - First there is a broad way, and a broad gate.
    - Secondly it leads to destruction.
    - Thirdly, many (notwithstanding) enter therein.
  - Narrow way wherein are three things.
    - First there is a striait way, and a strait gate.
    - Secondly it leads to life.
    - Thirdly, few there are who finde it.

Section 1. § 1. Enter in at the streight gate, &c.

These words are a Metaphor, whereby Christ shewes, that our life is a way, and that naturally we love to walke in the broad, common, and most easie way. We have a journey to goe, two wayes leading to the end, one broad and smooth, the other strait and craggy, the one is vice, the other vertue, the one full of hazard, the other void of perill; and we leave the way of godlinesse, that leades to heaven, and take the way of wickednesse that conducteth to hell. Were we called to a feast, two dishes set before us, one of sweet Sucket, but full of poyson, the other of sowre olives, but very wholesome: would a wise man refuse the Olives, to eate the Sucket? we are called to a feast where are two kindes of meate, Christ and Sathan, God and Belial, salvation and damnation, sinne and righteousnes set before us; whereby the one seemes pleasant but is fraught with death, the other soure but is the savour of life. Yet wee choose the wayes of sinne which is death eternall, before the reward of righteousnesse, which is life everlasting; as our Saviour lively expresseth in these two verses.

Some Heretikes have objected this place against the divine providence of God thus; If God by his divine Providence doth rule and governe all things here below, then without doubt hee would exile evill men out of the world (for he can doe it, and by so doing, the world would bee better and better ordered): But hee hath not onely not exiled evill men out of the world, but will have them exceed the good; as in these verses, many bad, few good; yea experience showes the truth thereof. Besides, those things by which wee are provoked to sinne and wickednesse, are more in number then those things which may turne us from vice: For, inticements to evill are offered in all sides; but allurements to good not so: as our Saviour most truely hath said in these verses, Narrow is the way which leadeth to heaven, and few finde it; but broad is the way to destruction, and many enter therein. Where it seemes that God made for the nonce one narrow way, that few might walke in it to life: and the other Objection 1.

broader, that more might give themſelves that way, ſo haſtening unto death. What kind of Providence therefore is this?

Anſwer 1. Firſt, in generall, this ſeems indeed not to be well done, but to tend to diſorder; and that it were not fit for a wiſe Prince to ſuffer or doe thus. But why doth God that which doth ſeeme thus unto us? Becauſe the naturall man perceiveth not the things which are of God; neither underſtandeth the cauſes of Gods counſell. Now Gods judgement is one, and ours another, as the Lord himſelfe ſaith by his Prophet: My wayes are not as your wayes, nor my thoughts as your thoughts. Wherefore mans judgement is deceived, while hee expounds, that thoſe things which belong to the moſt beautifull order of the whole, and to the laſt end (which is the glory of God) doth belong to diſorder. This anſwer ſhould ſuffice any godly man, yea every one ought to ſay with the Prophet: How wonderfull are thy workes oh Lord! thou haſt made all things in wiſedome.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, more particularly, it is not againſt the moſt wiſe providence of God, that there is a greater number of wicked then godly; For God maketh no man evill, but whatſoever he made was very good: which Orpheus the heathen Poet ſaw and confeſſed, when he ſaid, Θεος ἐκ πάντα τέτυκται ἄριστα Of God, all are made good, and ſuffereth onely the evill to be. Hil. Fift Booke of the Providence of God page 497. 501.

Queſtion. 1. Whereunto is this word enter referred?

Anſwer. It is either referred unto the { Way, and ſo is ſpoken to the carnall man. Gate, and ſo is given unto the ſpirituall man: of this elſe-where.

A This may be referred to the ſtraight-way; and ſo our Saviour ſpeakes to naturall and carnall men: as if he would ſay, you are out of the way by nature which leades unto heaven, you are ſtrangers both from grace and glory; And therefore labour to get into the right and ſtraight-way.

Queſtion. 2. How is the naturall man a ſtranger from the way of grace.

Anſwer. Two manner of wayes, to wit,

Firſt, he is a ſtranger from this way in knowledge: as appeares thus.

m 1 Cor. 2. 14 I. His affection luſts after evill, and he deſires not the knowledge of divine things: they being fooliſhneſſe unto him, 1 Corinth. 1. 18.

II. His reaſon cannot reach, nor take up ſpirituall things, they being ſpiritually diſcerned (m) otherwiſe the Philoſophers had learnt Chriſt.

III. The hearing of the Word (the ordinary meanes of knowledge) is neglect, by naturall men, untill God open the heart, as hee did Lydia's Acts 16.

Secondly, they are ſtrangers from this ſtraight way in Practiſe; for who can walke in this narrow-path in the darke. There are twelve houres in the day, wherein men walke and worke, but when night comes, then men cannot ſee to walke. And therefore naturall men being in blindneſſe and darkeneſſe cannot walke in the ſtraight way of God.

Queſt. 3. How doth it appeare, that naturall and carnall men are ſtrangers from this way?

Firſt, from theſe Scriptures, Pſalme 95. 10. Romans 3. 10. 23. Epheſ. 2. 12. and 4. 18. and Geneſ. 6. 5.

Anſwer 1.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, every naturall man is lead by Satan, he ruling over them, and they as his ſlaves obeying him. Eſa. 61. 1. 2. Ephe. 2. 2. & 1 Ioh. 3. 8. 18.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, the carnall man hath no union nor communion with God, neither partakes any thing with him, Iohn 3. 36. and 1 John 5. 12. And therefore he muſt needs be a ſtranger from this pure but painefull path.

Anſwer 4. Fourthly, by nature wee are all deprived of the love of God, hee hating ſuch as wee naturally are, And therefore all naturall men are ſtrangers from God and good; grace and glory, Rom. 5. 8. 12. 11. 5. Pſal. 5. 5. &

Queſt. 4. How may we know whether we are naturall or not?

Anſwer. 1. Firſt, trie, and examine it by thy words: our ſpeach will betray us, our Idiome will ſhewe what we are: as we ſee in the Ephraimites, who to ſave their lives could not ſay, Shibboleth, Iudg. 12. 6. Vox index animi, the tongue is the beſt interpreter of the heart; and therfore if our words be worldly, or blaſphemous, or prophane, or filthy, or ſcandalous and ſlanderous, or lying, or boaſting; it argues a heart poſſeſſed by Satan, and not by God. On the contrary if our words be ſeaſoned with ſalt, fit for edifying, adding grace unto the hearers, and that our lips daily utter good things: it is a good argument of a ſanctified ſoule (u)

u. Eph. 4. 29. Coloſ. 4. 6. Prov. 10.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, doſt thou know thy duty both towards God and man? doſt thou know how to walke as a child of light (Epheſ. 5. 8.) art thou not ignorant of the doctrine of Faith, repentance, obedience, and purity? Certainely there is hope then that thou art more then naturall, and that fleſh and blood revealed not theſe things unto thee.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, examine what thy ſenſe of ſmelling is? what doſt thou ſavour? doſt thou delight in ſinne? doth the vaine pleaſures, or uncertaine treaſures of the world, onely ſeeme ſweet and odoriferous unto thee? doſt thou come unto the Houſe of God, but without delight? doſt thou performe ſome outward duties but without any reliſh or taſte of comfort? theſe are evill omens, that the heart is ſtill naturall, carnall, ſenſuall, and diveliſh. On the contrary, doſt thou hunger after, earneſtly deſire, unfainedly long for, and faithfully endeavour after ſpirituall graces; more then all worldly things? Yea delight in the exerciſes of Religion more then any temporall comforts. Certes then there is hope that thou art more then naturall.

Anſwer. 4. Fourthly, examine thy actions, for they muſt judge thee: the tree is knowne by the fruit: And therefore ſee if thy workes bee not the workes of Sathan? Iohn 8. 31. 32. And. 1. Iohn 3. 8. 10.) or the deeds of darkeneſſe? John 8. 44. for if ſo, then thou art yet his ſlave: But if thy life bee repleniſhed with righteous and religious workes, it is a good argument of a regenerate heart.

Sect. 2. 5. 2. For wide is the gate, and broade is the way.

Queſt. 1. What is meant by the broad way, and wide gate?

Anſwer 1. Firſt, the way and the gate may bee thus diſtinguiſhed; the way ſignifies life, the gate death.

Non per portam in viam, ſed per viam in portam.

(Chryſoſt.

(Chryſoſt. imperf. Men doe not goe through the gate unto the way, but by the way unto the gate.

Answer. 2. Secondly, the Philoſophers have conceited much of two wayes; there was Hercules his double path: Ut Hercules in bivio aut ſequere aut fuge: theſe two wayes (to wit, of vertue and vice) are like the two Maſters which Chriſt ſpeaketh of, Matth. 6.24. for both thoſe wayes cannot be walked in at once, neither both theſe Maſters ſerved at once: Againe, they expreſſed this double way by Pythagoras his Y. Thus Heſiod, Xenophon, Virgil, Cicero. But theſe Philoſophers did not hit the ſcope and true meaning of theſe two wayes, For,

1. They erred in the way it ſelfe; interpreting the right way alwayes, either of arts, or learning, or knowledge, or vertue. But wee of the feare and knowledge of God, and of a ſpirituall life.

2. They erred in the purpoſe: For, for the moſt part they underſtood the election and choice of the way onely, or the ingreſſe thereinto: But we underſtand it of walking in the way of religion ſeriouſly, and perpetually, through the whole courſe of our lives.

3. The Philoſophers erred in the end: for they made choice of the way of vertue only for this end, that they might attaine unto fame and honour, and acquire thereby reputation and credit in the world: But wee labour to walke in the narrow path, that at length we may ſee God, and bee made glorious with him in heaven.

4. They erred in the power of walking: For they walked in the way of morall vertues through the ſtrength of their owne judgement, following Reaſon as their guide, placing her as a Queene in her throne, and perſwading themſelves that ſo long as their actions were ruled by reaſon they could not erre. But wee walke not by our owne ſtrength but onely by vertue of the grace of God in us: for wee know that in us, that is, in our natures dwelleth no manner of thing which is good (Rom. 7.18.) And although to will bee preſent with us, yet to performe we are not able: Onely by the grace of God wee are what we are. 1. Cor. 15.10.

Answer 3. Thirdly, wee diſtinguiſh of theſe two wayes not philoſophically, but Theologically; There is via Mundana & Chriſtiana: the way of the world, and of Religion; the former is broade, the latter narrow.

Queſt. 2 Why is the way of the world called broade?

Answer. 1. Firſt, becauſe the liberty of unbridled pride is enlarged, not ſuffering her ſelfe to bee directed by the word of God; but licentiouſly and diſſolutely living and walking whither ſoever the luſt of the fleſh and corruption of nature leades. This is the way of the world, and this is the moſt pleaſing and acceptable way, to fleſh and blood, to doe what ſhee will, and goe whither ſhee will; And therefore it is rightly called a broade way.

Answer 2. Secondly, this way is called broade, becauſe it is the readieſt way unto honour, riches, and pleaſure.

Answer 3. Thirdly, it is called broade, becauſe the moſt part of the world walke therein; as followes afterwards. This way of ſinne, and the world is called broade for two other cauſes (whereof ſomething more Largely) namely, Firſt, becauſe it hath many by pathes. B. Secondly, becauſe it is a plaine and eaſie way both to be found and walked in. C.

Fourthly, this way of worldlings is called broade, becauſe there are many erroneous and wandering pathes; or many falſe wayes, and but one true. And therefore wee had neede walke warily, and wiſely, not ſecurely and careleſſely; There being many by pathes, and wee ignorant, wee ſhould take heede that we leane not too much to our owne opinions. Answer 4.

Why may we not adhere unto our own opinions. Queſt. 3.

Firſt, becauſe many erre when they thinke they walke right, many ſinne when they thinke they doe no harme: the Princes of Pharoah thought it was no hurt to commend Sarai unto their Lord, and yet God plagued them for it. (o) Abimelech thought that hee did not ill in taking Sarai, but yet God threatens him for it. (p) Other examples wee may ſee hereof, in theſe places, to wit, 1 Samuel. 13.9. and 15.13. and 2 Samuel. 6.6 7. Yea certainly many obſerve divers ſuperſtitious cuſtomes, and yet thinke they doe well in it. Many thinke ſcurrilous words to be honeſt jeaſts. Many thinke that lawfull recreations may be followed as men follow their callings: & that there is no hurt in them although they ſpend too much time, yea are thereby often moved unto anger and oathes. And therefore ſeeing it is ſo uſuall for men to ſinne when they thinke they doe no ſuch thing, we had neede not to relie too much upon our owne opinions. Answer 1. o Geneſ. 12. 15.17. p Geneſ. 20. 2, 3.

Secondly, Sathan will not ſuffer us to ſee our errours, untill wee are gone ſo farre that wee cannot returne: as the bullet out of the peece kils, before the cracke admoniſhes; ſo Sathan poſſeſſing the mind, doth not open the eyes to behold danger, untill the ſoule bee ſlaine. As a man in ſhipwracke aſleepe is not awaked from his ſleepe untill hee bee caſt from the ſhip into the ſea; ſo man poſſeſſed by Sathan, and ſleeping in ſinne, is not awakened (if the Divell can helpe it) untill hee bee brought to utter deſtruction. And therefore wee muſt not bee too obſtinate in our owne wayes and opinions, leſt wee bee but deluded by Sathan, and blindfolded in a wrong way. Answer 2.

Thirdly, we ſhould be very cautelous and circumſpect in our wayes, and workes, and not rely too much upon ſelfe conceits, becauſe as in a wilderneſſe there is but one true way, and many falſe, or as in a mans body, there is but one health, and many ſickneſſes: ſo in the ſoule, there are many wayes of errour, and but one of truth. For Answer 3.

There are ſinnes
- First of the
  - Right hand, as hereſie, ſuperſtition, blinde zeale, and the like.
  - Left hand, as Atheiſme, prophaneneſſe, impurity, injuſtice, intemperance, and the like.
- 2. Both
  - Internall of the heart.
  - Externall of the tongue and life.
- 3. Both
  - Omiſſion, and neglect of our duties.
  - Commiſſion, doing that which we ſhould not.
- 4. Both
  - Circumſtantial, as the occaſions, and appearances of evill.
  - Subſtantial as the breach of any precept of the morall law.

C. Fifthly

Q. C. Fifthly the way of worldlings and wicked
Anſwer 5. men, is called broad, becauſe it is a plaine and eaſie way, both to finde, and to walke in, when once it is found: Circe ſaid to Vliſſes, that he need not aske the way to hell, becauſe it was as eaſie to find as to run downe a hill. There is a ſtone in Ægypt which will quickly receive a forme, but never loſe it without cracking. The Adamant and the Iron are ſoone joyned, but hardly diſſevered: the coyne hath his ſtampe in a moment, but cannot be taken out without melting, ſo the way of ſinne is eaſie to find, but hard to loſe, quickly learnt, not quickly left.

Queſt. 4. How doth it appeare that the way of ſinne is ſuch an eaſie and broad way?

Anſwer. 1. First it is outwardly beautifull, and therefore allures. The ſimple fiſhes though they ſee their fellowes devoured of the water ſheepe, yet they will not leave following of him, till they be devoured alſo, being (as it were amazed with his golden colour: ſo although our judgments often tell us, that the wages of ſin is death, yet it is ſo pleaſing to our affections, that we cannot flye, but willingly follow it. Ulliſſes paſſing by the Syrenian Woman, tied himſelfe to the maſt of the ſhip, that he might not be inticed by them into the Sea, and ſo bee deſtroyed: thus the way of ſinne is ſo delectable to our natures, that all wee can doe is little enough to keepe us from thence: ſo eaſie a path it is.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, as ſinne ſeemes faire, ſo we are eaſily allured thereby; our affections naturally longing and luſting after ſin. Iames 1. 14. Gal. 6. 1. Peccatum eſt inimicus blandiens, ante actionem, dulce venenum in actione, ſcorpio pungens poſt actionem. Before ſinne is committed, it ſeemes beautifull to the eye when ſinne is committing, it ſeemes ſweet to the taſte; but when it is committed it is bitter in the belly. At firſt before it is acted, it is like a fawning and flattering friend, afterwards in the acting it is like ſweet poyſon laſtly, being acted it is like to a deadly draught, or a poyſonous potion, or a death wounding Dragon, and therefore as it is eaſie in regard of its falſe and counterfeit ſhow, and outward appearance; ſo it is alſo in regard of our naturall love and affection thereunto.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, it appeares that the way of ſinne is eaſie, becauſe wee eaſily underſtand it, quickly find it out, and ſpeedily learne a perfection in ſinning: our whole nature is prone unto evill, and therefore wee ſoone grow great proficients therein.

Anſwer. 4. Fourthly, every man by nature is more prone unto evill then unto good, and therefore the way of ſinne is the eaſier way.

Queſtion 5. How may wee know whether we walke in this broad way or not?

Anſwer. 1. First thoſe who are eaſily tempted unto evill, and delight in the broad way of ſinne, it is a ſigne they walke therein: thoſe who are eaſily overcome by Sathan walke in his wayes.

Anſwer. 2. Secondly thoſe who harden their owne hearts, and exalt themſelves againſt God. Iob 15. 25. are travellers in this broad way.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly thoſe who truſt in their riches and abundance, are alſo of this number. Iob 15. 27.

Anſwer. 4. Fourthly, thoſe who never doubt of their ſalvation, neither will believe that they erre, or doe amiſſe, are walkers in this way. Iob 15. 31.

Fiftly, they who conceive miſchiefe, and bring forth vanitie, are tracers of this path. Job. 15. 35. Anſwer. 5.

Sixthly, they who love ſinne, but hate it not, and rejoyce in ſinne, but mourne not for it, are here alſo to be rancked. Anſwer 6.

Seventhly, thoſe in whom ſinne is as ſtrong and prevalent as ever it was, have not yet left this broad way. Anſwer 7.

Queſtion. 6. How may we know whether ſinne be as ſtrong in us as it was?

Anſwer. By theſe plaine markes, namely.

1. Are thy affections as ſtrongly ſet upon ſinne as ever they were? doſt thou love ſin as well as ever thou didſt? then certainely thou art yet ſinnes ſlave.

2. Are thy temptations as frequent as ever they were? doth the devill tempt thee as often as ever he did? then it is an argument, that hee hath too much in thee.

3. Art thou as ſtupid, dull and blinde, in ſeeing the craft and ſubtlety of Sathan, as ever thou wert, art thou ſtill as ignorant of his devices as ever? it is a ſigne then that ſinne hath a commanding power, in and over thee.

4. Art thou as unable to reſiſt ſinne as ever thou wert? as weake as ever? as naked as ever? as feeble and faint-hearted as ever? this ſhowes that corruption is too ſtrong in thee, On the contrary, if wee finde that our love is not ſo much unto ſinne as it was, but that the edge of our affections is taken off: if temptations be more rare in us, and we more quick ſighted unto Sathans ſubtlety, and more ſtrong to reſiſt him, both by Faith, Prayer, and the Word, then it is a comfortable ſigne that ſinne is growne weaker in us, and our feet reduced from this broad way.

Our Saviour in theſe words ſhowes that the broad way of ſinne brings at laſt unto perpetuall paine.

Queſtion. 1. How doth it appeare that ſinners ſhall periſh, for there are many who thinke otherwiſe perſwadeing themſelves that they may walke in this way, and yet at laſt come unto ſalvation?

Anſwer 1. First, it appeares evidently from Chriſts owne words in this place; where hee ſhowes that the end of { Broad way is perdition / Narrow way is ſalvation } { And therfore it matters not what others thinke.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, it appeares from other plaine and poſitive places of Scripture; reade Pſalm. 9. 17. and 11. 6. and 83. 10. 13. and Iſa. 5. 24. and 1 Corinth. 6. 9.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, ſinne is the foundation of condemnation; or all and onely ſinners ſhall bee damned; And therefore it is cleare that the broad path leades to perdition, reade Iſa. 50. 1. and 59. 2. and Ierem. 5. 25. Hoſe. 13. 1. Rom. 6. 23. Pſalm. 1. 5. and 5. 4. and 34. 16. Prov. 16. 4. Iſa. 3. 10 11.

Anſwer 4. Fourthly, the arrowes of the Lord are levelled againſt ſuch as walke in the broad way: And therefore they muſt needs come to deſtruction at the laſt, Pſal. 34. 16.

Anſwer 5. Fiftly, the reward of ſinne is death: The locuſts having brought forth their young die (τικουσαι δικο ἀνδρουσιν Ariſt.) ſo luſt having conceived brings forth forth sinne; and sinne when it is finished brings forth death. Iames 1. 15. and Rom. 6. 28.

Sixtly, otherwise God should not bee just: For,

Answer 6. 1. He hath made a law, that if we sinne we shall dye. Genes. 2. 17. In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt dye the death. Pope Iulius the third, caused this sentence to bee written about his coyne. That nation and people shall perish which will not obey me; so the Lord hath made a law, and threatned to inflict condigne punishment upon all those who disobey it.

Rom. 3. 23. 2. Mankinde hath broken this Law in Adam, and wicked men daily breake it themselves in their owne persons: And therefore the justice of God requires that they should be punished whose sinnes are not done away in Christ.

Quest. 2. Shall no wicked men at all escape this destruction?

None who continue to walke in this way untill they come to the end thereof: For,

Answer. First, Kings and great men shall suffer if they run with the common sort. Isay. 41. 2. Daniel. 5. 27.

Secondly, Wisemen shall bee punished, if they thus play the fooles. Exod. 1. 10. and 15. 7. and Rom. 1. 22.

Thirdly, Proud men shall be ruined notwithstanding all their high conceits of themselves. Malach. 4. 1.

Fourthly, Hypocrites shall perish, who walke in this broad way secretly, and unseene. Matth. 23.

Question 3. Why must wee thus labour by all meanes to renounce sinne?

Answer. 1. First, because there can bee no true repentance without the reformation of the life from sinne.

Answer 2. Secondly, because there can bee no true faith, without this. Faith purgeth and purifieth the heart (Acts 15. 9.) and the heart being purged the life must needs bee pure; Wherefore there is no truth of faith where sinne is not forsaken.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, wee cannot bee made partakers of the blessed Spirit of God, untill wee have left sinne, for the Holy Ghost will not come to a polluted soule: And therefore it is to bee renounced.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, there is no way to escape the wrath of God, or eternall destruction, without the forsaking of sinne; And therefore wee should bee carefull to leave it.

Quest. 4. How may wee avoid and leave sinne?

Answer. 1. First, shunne, and beware of all the occasions of sinne.

Answer 2. Secondly, use all holy meanes to bee good, and pure, and sincere.

Answer 3. Thirdly, deplore thy infirmities speedily, and heartily: wash thy soule with teares for thy former transgressions, sorrowing with a godly sorrow. 2 Cor. 7. 10.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, promise unto God to fight manfully against thy former sinnes, and all sinnes for the time to come; and labour to performe thy promise.

Answer. 5. Fiftly, Pray fervently unto God to free thee from the commanding power of sin, and to preserve thee from sinne, and to make thee the free-man of Jesus Christ.

Quest. 5. What things hinder us from turning aside out of this broad way of sinne? And what are the remedies against these impediments? Answer.

The Impediments are these.

First, insensibility; when a man is not sensible of his sin, he is not carefull to forsake it.

Secondly, presumption; when men either presume that they are not sinners, or that their sinnes are small, or that (though great) yet they shall be pardoned; it makes them more careless, and fearelesse of sin, and more slack to leave it.

Thirdly, Procrastination, and delay, when wee promise repentance, but put off the performance thereof from day to day.

Fourthly, key-coldnesse in performing & perfecting of the worke, not striving against sin unto blood. Hebr. 12. 4.

The Remedies are these.

First, a tender, & circumcised heart, which is sensible of the least touch of sinne.

Secondly, a godly feare; remembring that wee are sinners, yea great sinners, and neither able to satisfy for our sins our selves, nor sure that they shall bee pardoned in Christ, except wee strive to forsake, and leave them.

Thirdly, not to deferre, but while it is said to day to turne from our sins, and turne unto the Lord our God.

Fourthly, zeale, alacritie, and industrie in the resisting of sinne; striving against it with manfull wrastlings till wee have prevailed.

5. 4. And many there bee which goe in thereat. Sect. 4.

What is the meaning of this word Many? Question 1.

Answer. Our Saviour shewes hereby, that there are not onely Many simply which walke in the broad way, but that there are so many, that in comparison of them, they who walke in the narrow way are but a very few; so that the meaning of Multi, Many, is Plurimi the most by much.

Whereunto is this word Many to be referred? Question 2.

Answer.

It is to be referred both unto the { Way. as if our Saviour would say, Many walke in the broad way. D. / Gate. Many enter in at the wide gate. E.

D. First, by Many our Saviour would have us to take notice of the Multitude of sinners; as if hee should say, the most part of men walke the wayes of sinne, reade Psalm. 14. 3. and 53. 2. and 1 John 5. 19. and 1 Cor. 1. 25. Numb. 16. 4.

How doth this appeare, that the most men walke in the broad way? Question 3.

Answer 1. First, it may be illustrated by a double Embleme, to wit.

1. The locust is an Embleme of wicked men; shee is called in Hebrew (Arbeh) of the number and multitude of them; for (Rabah) signifieth to multiply: And hence the Scripture it selfe expresseth the number of wicked men by the locusts. They came as locusts (or Grashoppers) for multitude. Iudg. 6. 5. And againe, They are more then the grashoppers and are innumerable. Ieremi. 46. 23.

2. The Mouse is an Embleme of wicked men; because becauſe ſhee encreaſeth exceedingly. τῷ πλήθει καὶ τῷ ταχει, &c. (Ariſt.) both in number and ſpeede.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, this will appeare by the partition of the world; In the foure corners of the world there are foure kindes of men, namely.

1. Prophane perſons, who are given to groſſe, and enormous ſins. 1 Tim. 5. 24.

2. Hypocri es, who have a forme of (goodneſſe, and) godlineſſe, but in their hearts have denied the power thereof. 2 Tim. 3. 5.

3. Carnall men, who are not egregious ſinners, but only minde the world, and outward things, not regarding the hidden man of the heart at all.

4. Righteous, and holy men, who being truely regenerated, become burning and ſhining lamps. Rom. 12. 11. And theſe are but few in compariſon of any of the reſt.

Queſt. 4. Why doe the moſt part walke the wayes of ſin?

Anſwer. 1. First, becauſe ſinne is moſt naturall unto all. 1. Cor. 15. Firſt comes that which is naturall; and afterwards that which is ſpirituall; wee were all conceived and borne in ſinne; and nature and ſin works in all, grace but onely in a few.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, becauſe ſinne is pleaſant to fleſh and blood: By reaſon of that innate, and naturall concupiſcence which is in us, temptation workes upon every part of the ſoule, and ſenſe, and body, and all follow willingly, but perſwaſion unto good workes onely upon ſome few. And therefore more follow the broad way of ſinne, then the ſtrait way of grace.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, becauſe Sathan is ſo craftie, ſubtle, ſtrong, and vigilant, that hee is called the prince of this world, and the god of this world. 2 Cor. 4. 4. And therefore hee drawes the moſt part of the world after him.

Anſwer. 4. Fourthly, becauſe it is eaſier to fall, and to lie ſtill, then to riſe and flie unto heaven; And therefore the moſt men walke not in this ſtrait and painefull way.

Anſwer. 5. Fiftly, becauſe temptation unto evill is like poyſon, which infects with a light touch thereof; or whereof one drop will doe hurt: But perſwaſion unto good is like a potion or purgation which except it be drunke up, and well digeſted doth not produce his wiſhed effect. And hence it is that ſo many are taken captive by ſinne, and few wonne by grace.

Queſtion 5. How can this be that the moſt part of men walke in the broad way? Is not Multitude a true note of the true Church?

Anſwer. No: For the true Church is but ſmall in compariſon of the world of wicked men. The moſt part of the world is without the Church, overwhelmed with the deluge of ignorance and Atheiſme; and in the Church there are but a few good; And thus wee ſee how Many here is referred to the broad way.

E E Secondly, this word Many may be referred to the wide gate: Now by the Gate (we ſhowed before) was meant Death; ſo that the meaning of theſe words (Many there bee which goe in thereat) is, that the moſt men dye unto condemnation, or enter in by death at the gates of hell. Wee ſee there were but onely eight out of the whole world preſerved and ſaved in the Arke, amongſt which ſmall number was wicked Cham. Wee ſee that ten righteous man could not bee found in five populous Cities of Sodome. Geniſ. 18. Yea wee ſee that of ſix hundred thouſand of Iſraelites there were but two onely that came into the holy Land; And one Nicodemus only we reade of amongſt the Senators.

It appeares moſt evidently thus.

How doth it appeare that the moſt part of men are damned? Queſt. 6.

Anſwer. First, there are many who know not God and Chriſt. John 17. 3. and 2 Theſſ. 1. 8.

Secondly, there are many who contemne and deſpiſe the word, which is the meanes to bring them unto ſaving knowledge.

Thirdly, there are many, who although they doe not contemne it, yet ſuſque deque habent, they neglect it, and doe not much regard it.

Fourth, there are many who care for no thing but the world, and honours, and pleaſures, and riches.

Fiftly, many are enſnared and entangled in ſinne, and wholy ſerve either ſome publike or private luſt.

Sixtly, many boaſt and brag of their owne righteouſneſſe, and feele no want, neither ſtand in any neede of Chriſt.

Seventhly, there are but very few who feele their ſinnes to be a burden unto them, and deſire to bee eaſed of that loade by Chriſt. And therefore theſe things conſidered, we may ſafely ſay, that it is as cleare as the Sunne, that the moſt of men enter in at the wide gate of deſtruction.

Whence comes it, that the moſt periſh? Queſtion 7.

Anſwer. 1. First, from the weakeneſſe of our nature: Nature cannot ſave us (by grace only we are ſaved) and hence it is that ſo few are ſaved and ſo many damned.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, this comes from the nature of ſinne, and here is to bee obſerved that even one ſinne without repentance ſufficeth unto condemnation, one ſuch tranſgreſſion is enough to bring a man to eternall deſtruction; as wee ſee in Achan, in Korah, and his company, in the man who gathered ſtickes upon the Sabbath day (g) and in him who blaſphemed. Numb. 24. We ſee how at once for one rebellion there dyed foure and twenty thouſand. 1 Cor. 10.

(g) Num. 15. 36.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, this comes from the nature of our enemies, who are many, and ſtrong; as for example, 1. The World. 2. Sathan. 3. The fleſh. 4. The cuſtome of evill. 5. Men, or friends who often tempt unto evill. 6. The ſcoffes and taunts that are thrown upon the profeſſion of the Goſpell. 7. Carefulnes for the things of this life; All theſe are enemies unto us, and one or other of them daily prevaile againſt us.

Anſwer. 4. Fourthly, this comes from the nature of the multitude, or of the men in the world; Here obſerve that in the world there are foure ſorts of people, to wit,

1. Some who preferre their friends before heaven; Thus many Papiſts refuſe to embrace our religion (although they bee convinced that they are in an errour) becauſe their Fathers and Grand-fathers were Papiſts. Thus many will rather diſpleaſe God then their friends, and doe that which God forbids, if their aſſociates and acquaintance perſwade them.

2. Some know not that they are miſerable; but thinke (Omnia bene) like the Church of Laodicea, who 412 who thought ſhe was rich and ſtood in need of nothing (h). Theſe are either;

Firſt, thoſe who are blind and ignorant of their duties unto God: Or,

Secondly, civill honeſt men, who becauſe they are good in the worlds eye, think themſelves good enough in the Lords: Or,

Thirdly, preſumptuous men, who preſume either of the ſmalneſſe of their ſinnes, ſaying with Lot, my Zoar is but a little one, and therefore (notwithſtanding that) my ſoule ſhall live. Or who preſume of Gods mercy, though their ſinnes be great.

3. Some are not ſenſible of their ſinnes, and therefore are careleſſe of them. Now this is either,

Firſt, becauſe they doe not examine themſelves, wayes, and workes: Or,

Secondly, becauſe cuſtome of ſin hath ſo hardned them in it, that they are become men of ſeared conſciences. Or,

Thirdly, becauſe they are deceived with a generall preſumption of Gods mercy.

4. Some are ſenſible of their ſinnes, but yet are not truly reconciled unto God; Now this is either, becauſe the ſight of their ſinnes brings them,

Firſt, to deſperation, as we ſee in Cain, Judas, and Julian the Apoſtate. Or,

Secondly, to a lukewarm converſion onely (not to a true cordiall compunction, contrition, and repentance) as we ſee in Saul, Herod, and Agrippa: Or,

Thirdly, unto a fained converſion: the ſtony ground ſeemed at firſt to be good ground, and Ahab ſeemed from the heart to be humbled, and many ſeeme to leave and forſake their ſinnes with a great deale of ſorrow and hatred of them, who yet afterwards turne with the Dog to his vomit, and with the ſwine which was waſhed to the wallowing in the mire. 2 Pet. 2. 20. And thus we ſee whence it comes that the moſt part of men periſh, and enter in at the broad gate of perdition.

Sect. 5. Queſt. 1. Anſwer.

§. 5. For ſtrait is the way.

Doth every ſtrait, and difficult way leade unto heaven?

No, for there are many hard wayes which leade unto hell, as for example,

Firſt, there is a Mountainous way, or the way of the Mountaines; this way is very difficult, as is proved by experience; for men commonly ſweat, and are weary with aſcending and walking in ſuch wayes, and therefore decline them as much as they can. This Mountainous way is morally the way of proud men, who ſeeke to beare rule over others, to be eſteemed great by others, to be exalted and raiſed above others, to depreſſe others, and extoll themſelves. This is certainely a hard and difficult way, but not the way to heaven, for humility leads thither, and pride unto deſtruction.

Secondly, there is a thorny way, or way of thornes, which a man cannot walke in, but he is apprehended, laid hold upon, and catched with the thornes, and ſo both ſtayed in his journey, and defaced in his garments, and hurt in his fleſh; This thorny way is the way of covetouſneſſe, and of the world, which pierceth the heart thorow with many ſorrowes, and diſtracts the head with many cares, and takes off the mind from good things, and good thoughts, as was ſhewed before, Chapter 6. 24. Certainely this is a hard way, for nemo repentè fit dives, none can be rich (at leaſt ordinarily) without much paines, and care; but yet this is not the way to heaven, but to hell. James 4. 4. and 1 John 2. 15.

Thirdly, there is a miry way, or a way full of clay, and mire, which is a hard way, becauſe a man is ſometimes ready to ſlip in ſuch a way, and in danger of falling, ſometimes his feet ſtickes faſt in the mire, and ſometimes he is moleſted and diſturbed through difficulty of paſſing thorow; yea ſuch wayes make men ſometimes like beaſts: this way is the way of luxurious perſons, who cannot pull the feet of their affections from this clay of uncleanneſſe and pleaſure, but like bruit beaſts defile themſelves.

Fourthly, there is a blind or darke way, when a man walkes in the darke; this is a hard way; for a man is enforced to grope as he goes, leſt hee ſhould fall into ſome pit, or the like dangerous place which he ſeeth not: yea in ſuch a way a man is afraid to be aſſaulted, and ſeazed on by theeves at unawares. This is the way of envious men, who are blind and darke, as appeares by the Etymology of the name: Invidus, quaſi non videns, Envious is as much as one that ſees not; becauſe ſuch cannot ſee or behold the goods, good things, bleſſings, and proſperity of others, without envie, repining, afflicting of themſelves. Envious men are alwayes in feare, leſt God ſhould bleſſe, or good things be conferred upon others. This is not the way to heaven, although it be a difficult way.

Fiftly, there is a tumultuous way, a path wherein many walke, which is truly called hard, and difficult, becauſe the travellers by reaſon of the multitude doe one hinder, trouble, and moleſt another, and one throng upon another. This is the way of angry men, who by reaſon of their anger are afflicted, trampled upon, and troden downe, by divers and ſundry contumelies, clamours, brawles, contentions, threatnings, hatreds, and the like. This is a hard way, but yet leads not to life.

Sixtly, there is a coſtly way, when all the Innes and proviſion, and things a man ſhall uſe in ſuch a way are very deare, and chargeable; this all men thinke to be a hard way. This is the way of drunkards, gluttons, and prodigals, who cannot ſatisfie their appetites without expending much; this way certainely is not the way to ſalvation (i) And thus we ſee that every ſtrait and hard way leads not unto life.

Queſt. 2. What is this ſtrait way, that leades unto heaven, and life everlaſting?

Anſwer 1. Firſt, ſome underſtand the Croſſe to be the way; becauſe we muſt take up our Croſſe, Math. 16. 24. but affliction, tribulation, and perſecution are but onely the thornes that grow in the way, not the way it ſelfe.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, ſome by this way underſtand the works of ſanctification, becauſe our Saviour ſaith to the young man, if thou wilt enter into life, keepe the Commandements, Math. 19. 17.

Anſwer. 3: Thirdly, ſome by this ſtraight way, underſtand faith; faith; becauſe both in the Old and New Teſtament it is ſaid, The juſt ſhall live by faith.

Anſwer. 4. Fourthly, Revera, Chriſt is the way, John 14. 6. I am the way, the truth, and the life: yea he is the new and living way, Heb. 10, 20. and the dore alſo, John 10. 9.

Anſwer. 5. Fiftly, the third and fourth opinions are one and the ſame: For,

1. To walke in Chriſt, is to walke in faith; St. John ſaith, To as many as received Chriſt, God gave power to be called his children; that is, to as many as beleeved in his Name, John 1. 12. and againe, God ſent Chriſt into the world, that as many as beleeved in him might be ſaved, John 3. 16.

2. To walke in faith, is to fructifie in love; for faith workes by love, Galath. 5. 6.

3. To walke therefore in this ſtrait way, is to beleeve in Chriſt, and to adhere unto him, as that we oblige our ſelves in all things to obſerve and obey his will in holineſſe and uprightneſſe (k).

Queſt. 3. Why is this way of piety ſtrait, and narrow?

Anſwer. 1. Firſt, becauſe it doth not permit men to walke after their owne hearts luſts, but confines them to the word of God, as a rule for them to walke by; and by which they may be taught how to refraine from every evill way, and to mortifie, and crucifie every corrupt carnall luſt. Now this is durus ſermo, a hard ſaying to fleſh and blood; and therefore this way is truly (in this regard) called ſtrait.

Anſwer. 2. Secondly, becauſe when a man might by following the evill example, and wicked cuſtomes of the world attaine unto honour, and riches and pleaſure: he is gainſayd, and prohibited by the word, and not permitted to uſe thoſe things which he poſſeſſeth as he liſt himſelfe, but according to the direction, and preſcription of the word of God. Men naturally and commonly thinke that what they poſſeſſe is their owne, and that they may doe what they will with it; And therefore this is a hard ſaying, that men muſt be carefull how they uſe what they have according to the preſcription of God; and in this regard alſo this way is ſtrait.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, this way is called ſtrait, becauſe there are but few who walke therein, and thoſe few ſeeme to be very miſerable, 1 Corinth. 15. 19.

Anſwer. 4. Fourthly, the world contemnes, derides, hates, and perſecutes thoſe who walke in the way; and therefore it is called ſtrait.

Queſt. 4. How is this way of piety ſtrait, and narrow?

Anſwer 1. Firſt, ſome ſay, becauſe Chriſt onely is this way; Many men have many wayes unto heaven, to wit, ſome by philoſophicall goodneſſe, ſome by voluntary religion, and will worſhip; ſome by the workes of the Law; but we have but one way onely, and that is Chriſt. Indeed Chriſt is the onely way, but yet he is not via ſtricta, ſed via lata, nor a ſtrait way, but a broad.

For the true underſtanding of this, marke theſe particulars.

1. Chriſt is a broad way in reſpect of his omnipotency and power; For all power was given unto him both in heaven and in earth, Math. 28. 18. And therefore being of unlimitted power hee can doe what he will, and ſave whom he will.

2. Chriſt opened the Kingdome of heaven to all beleevers, (l) and therefore in this regard alſo hee is a broad way.

3. Chriſt fulfilled the whole Law for us; and tooke all the ſtumbling blockes out of the way; yea, hee was made ſinne for us, that ſo in him our ſinnes might be done away; And therefore in this reſpect alſo Chriſt may be called a broad way.

4. In reſpect of the condition, Chriſt may indeed truely be called a ſtrait way: for hell receives all ſinners and uncleane perſons whatſoever, both thoſe who ſwell with pride, and thoſe who are infected with the leproſie of impurity; but Chriſt onely receives thoſe who are naked and ſtripped from all truſt and confidence in their own workes; and truly depreſſed with humility, and godly ſorrow of heart, and who are alſo pure in life. Act. 10. 14. And in this reſpect Chriſt is a ſtrait way becauſe he exacts ſtrict obedience at our hands.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, this way of piety which leades unto felicity, is called ſtrait in a double regard, to wit,

1. In regard of the obſcurity thereof, becauſe it is hard to find. F.

2. In regard of the difficulty thereof, becauſe it is hard to walke in when once it is found. G.

F.

Obſerv. 1. Firſt, the way unto heaven is ſtrait, Reſpectu obſcuritatis, in regard of the obſcurity thereof, becauſe it is ſo hard to find out, that few can find it: As if our Saviour would ſay, the way to life eternall is unknowne to the naturall man, and ſo obſcure, that by nature he can never find it out, 1 Corinth. 2. 14.

Queſtion 5. How doth it appeare, that this way unto heaven is not obvious and conſpicuous unto fleſh and blood?

Anſwer. 1. Firſt, it is evident by the guides and conducts that leade thither: For the better taking up of this anſwer, obſerve that God gave to the Iſraelites when they were to travell through the wilderneſſe to Canaan, three guides, namely Moſes, Aaron, and Miriam.

1. Miriam was the meaneſt of the three; for ſhe was a woman, of the infirmer ſexe, and ſhee murmuring againſt Moſes, was ſtricken with leproſie.

2. Aaron was the ſecond guide, but in ſome things he proved a blind guide to them, for he ſet up a golden Calfe before them.

3. Moſes was the third and beſt guide, but hee could not bring them to Canaan, for it was Joſhua who brought them to their reſt.

Thus there are three guides which direct men in this world, namely;

Firſt, corrupt nature, or Natura non ſuſcitata, that is, nature not wakened or ſtirred up by learning: this guide is but like unto Miriam, and oftentimes it murmureth againſt Moſes, the Law of God.

Secondly, Ratio ſuſcitata, reaſon wakened and ſtirred up, and ſomewhat refined by learning and humane ſciences; yet this is but a blind guide, and oftentimes it murmureth and repineth againſt Moſes, as well as leprous Miriam.

Thirdly, the Law of God, which ſheweth us the way to Canaan and our eternall reſt: but it is impoſſible that the Law ſhould ſave us, for that is the worke of our spirituall and heavenly Iesus, Romans. 8. 3.

the

Secondly, it is evident and apparent by the wayes which leade unto life; Here observe,

That the wayes which leade unto life are these, namely

Answer 2. First, the Knowledge of the word, and law, and testaments of God: for they are conjoyned Isa. 8. 16. 20. and 51. 47. But naturall men are ignorant of the Law of God, and the way of the Lord they have not knowne.

Secondly, to receive and embrace the word of God (John 5. 24. 39. and 2 Timoth. 1. 10. and 3. 16.) but wicked and naturall men contemne and despise it.

Answer 3. Thirdly, the knowledge of God: This is life eternall, to know thee (John 17. 3.) that is, the true knowledge of the true God, is the way unto life; but naturally men are ignorant of the true God.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, the love of God, and godlinesse; none can bee saved who doe not love God and religion; and therefore meere naturall men cannot come thither, because they are enemies to God, religion, goodnesse, and reprobate unto every good worke. Rom. 8. 6. 7. 8. Experience showes most plainly how averse nature is unto religiō & God even in the smallest things.

Fifthly, Faith fructifying in love, and sanctity. Rom. 13. 11. Philip. 1. 27. But wicked men believe not, neither obey; and therefore they are strangers from life.

Sixtly, Christ is the way unto life. John 14. 6. Acts 4. 12. But wicked men are without Christ, and therfore it is evident that this straite way of piety is unknowne unto them.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, it is cleare also that naturall men are ignorant of this narrow path, by the estate and condition of mankinde after his fall; he then becoming brutish. Thus the Prophets say that men may now bee compared to the beasts that perish. Psal. 49. 12. Ierem. 10. 14. and 51. 17. And therfore undoubtedly is ignorant of the way of life.

Answer 4. Fourthly, it will bee as cleare as the day, if wee consider but the ignorance of naturall men: For,

1. The best clerke, and wisest naturall man is but a foole, so long as hee is not taught spiritually and instructed from above. Rom. 1. 22. Prov. 16. 22. and 1. Cor. 1. 20. and 3. 19.

2. The naturall man is but childish in religion. 1 Cor. 13. 12. Ephes. 4. 14.

3. He knowes not what heaven and life eternall is. Hac est vita eterna, ubi possumus Deum videre facie ad faciem; ubi est sanitas sine infirmitate, requies eterna sine labore, pax sine timore, lætitia sine mœrore, veritas sine errore. Life eternall is that place where wee shall see God as we are seene, face to face, where wee shall have health without sicknesse, rest without disturbance, peace without feare, joy without sorrow, and trueth without errour. This nature is altogether ignorant of.

4. He knowes not how heaven, & life eternal may be acquired; nature can neither teach how heaven may bee had, nor procure it. And therefore wee may hence collect how necessarie it is for every member of old Adam to labour, and endeavour to bee free from this naturall condition wherein hee is, and to be regenerated and engrafted into Christ.

Why must wee thus earnestly desire to bee changed, renewed, and incorporated into Christ? Question 6.

First, Because naturally wee are blind, and cannot walke without a guide: and therefore so long as wee are naturall wee must needs erre, and goe astray from the wayes of God. Answer. 1.

Secondly, because naturally wee are foolish, and spirituall things are too high above our reach; And therefore if wee desire to understand those things which concerne the glory of God, and our owne good, we must labour that we may bee regenerated and united unto Christ. Answer 2.

Thirdly, because by nature wee are but evill trees; And therefore if wee desire to bring forth good fruite, we must labour and desire that wee may bee cut off from this wilde olive, and engrafted into the new and living stocke Jesus Christ. Answer. 3.

Fourthly, by nature we are void and destitute of grace, yea deade unto grace (Ephes. 2. 1.) and therefore if wee desire that wee may be recovered, and the grace of God againe quickned in us, we must labour to be changed and transformed after the Image of Christ. Answer 4.

Fifthly, because by nature wee are the members of Sathan; Ephes. 2. 3. And therefore if wee desire to be made the members of Christ, and the children of God, wee must labour to come out of our naturall estate and condition. Answer 5.

By what meanes may wee bee freed from this miserable condition wherein by nature we are? Question 7.

I answer here from the second answer of the former question save one: use these meanes. Answer.

First, studie the word of God, labour for the knowledge thereof; for that will teach thee thy misery. Meanes of regeneration.

Secondly, obey the word of God: when thou knowest the will of God then labour to doe it; abstaine from all evill prohibited, observe every good duety enjoyned.

3 Thirdly, love the Lord above all things; he onely regenerates by his holy Spirit, and therefore love him with all thy heart, and with all thy soule.

4. Fourthly, labour for Christ, for hee sends the Holy Spirit unto us; hee is the alone Mediatour betweene God and man, and all grace which is conferred upon us by God, is in and through Christ; And therfore no mercy is to be expected but by him, and for his sake.

Fifthly, pray unto God, that hee would bee graciously pleased to wash us from our sinnes, to plant and engraft us into Christ, and to sanctifie us by his holy Spirit. Thus we have heard the first cause, how the way of piety which leades unto life is straite in respect of the Obscurity thereof it being hard to find.

G Secondly, the way of piety which leades unto life is straite, Respectu difficultatis, in regard of the difficulty thereof; as if our Saviour would say, The way to heaven is a hard way. Reade Acts, 14. 22. and 2 Timoth. 3. 12. and 2 Corinth. 4. G Observat. 2.

How is the way to heaven hard, when as 1. God calls all? Esay 55. 1. And 2 Rejects none that comes? James, 1. 5. And 3. gives his word unto all? Acts 20. Which word is a bright and cleare light, Psal. 119. 105. And 4. reveales himselfe unto all those who seeke him? Quest. 8.

We

We say the way is hard, for these causes, to wit,

Reason 1. First, because the naturall man cannot understand this word, nor be subject thereunto, Rom. 8. 6, &c.

Reason 2. Secondly, because many seeke not to walke in this way, neither regard what the word saith unto them.

Reason 3. Thirdly, because many seeke to walke in this way, but seeke amisse; that is otherwise then by Christ, as by pilgrimages, and meat, and monasticall vowes, and the like, Rom. 9. 31.

Reason 4. Fourthly, because this way of religion teacheth things contrary to sense, and above reason, as,

1. That there is imputative righteousnesse, Psalm. 32. 1.

2. That wee must deny our selves, and submit our selves wholy to the will and pleasure of God. And therefore this way may truly be called hard.

Reason 5. Fiftly, this way is hard in respect of our conversion: he that would walke in this way, hee must turne from two things, namely,

1. From the world, lest otherwise he perish with the world: this is very hard for a man to be in the world, and not of the world, for so he shall be scorned by the world.

2. From himselfe, and his fore-passed life; this is extreame hard and difficult, for a man to forsake his owne sense, judgement, will, affection, and whatsoever is contrarie to the good pleasure of God.

Reason 6. Sixtly, this way is hard in regard of Mortification, and abstinence from sinne, yea even those which are most deare unto us: as for example.

1. Sometimes wee are tempted to have a care of our fame and credite; and therefore to forsake the profession of the Gospell, because it is derided, and scoffed by wicked men.

2. Sometimes wee are tempted unto pleasure, as unto drunkennesse, gluttony, wantonnesse, adultery, pride, contention, revenge, and the like.

3. Sometimes wee are tempted unto profit, as to couetousnesse, lying, deceiving, and the like. Now if we would walke in this way of piety, which leades unto life, we must abstaine from all sinne whatsoever, though never so pleasant or profitable unto us. And this is no easie thing.

Reason 7. Seventhly, this way is hard in regard of some circumstances, namely,

1. Of humility towards God; we must in this way patiently permit and suffer our selves to be directed, lead, taught; yea if we stray, to be reduced, reproved, corrected by God, and suffer all patiently, and humbly at his hands. And this we shall find a hard taske.

2. Of humility towards men; wee must not be proud, or ambitious, or haughty, but make our selves equall with those of the lower sort, although it be something hard to submit unto.

3. Of watchfulnesse; in this way we must never sleepe, lest while we sleepe, the enemy sowe tares, Math. 13. 25. Nay, we must not so much as looke backe, lest the plow slip out of our hands. And this circumspection will be something difficult.

4. Of suffering: we must suffer in this way all crosses, afflictions, tribulations, & vexations whatsoever, yea deathit selfe (if we be called thereunto) patiently; Philip. 1. 28. Math. 16. 24. Hebr. 12. 3. And this is very hard for flesh and blood to do.

Eightly, this way of piety is hard, in respect of the end, namely, the glorious estate and condition of the faithfull in heaven: Δύσκολα τὰ καλὰ (m) rare and excellent things are hardly attained: and therefore if we do but seriously consider the glory, excellency, and felicity of heaven, we will easily assent unto this truth, that the way of pietie which leades thither must needs be hard and difficult to walke in. Reade Math. 5. 48. § last, for this purpose. Reason 8. (m) Solon.

Is every hard way the way of piety? Quest. 9.

There are hard waies which neither are pure, neither leade unto life: there is will-worship, as well as true worship (Colos. 2. 18. 23.) The divell is Gods Ape, and therefore will imitate him: every herbe in the garden (almost) hath his counterfeit in the field; as there are good and profitable Time, and Sage in the Orchard, so in the fields there are wild Time and Sage; As God hath a hard way which leads unto life, so hath the devill a hard way which leades unto death. As for example. Answer.

First, Baals Prophets walked a hard way, when they cut themselves with knives, and Lances (n) (n) 1. King 18.

Secondly, the heathen Gymnosophists walked a hard way, when they sacrificed humane flesh, and virginity unto their Idols, or false Gods. Indeed these are very hard wayes, but none of them leads unto life.

How may the true hard way be knowne? Quest. 10.

By these two things, to wit, Answer.

First, by the purpose of the heart; he who purposeth with himselfe, & propoundeth unto himselfe the most strict rule of the will of God, resolving not to please himselfe, but the Lord, and to obey him according to that Law which himselfe hath prescribed; that man certainely walketh in the true hard way.

Secondly, by the practise of the life, if this resolution leade thee unto all kinds of mercy, justice, and holinesse (o). Then certainly thou art one of that small number who walke in this true hard way. (o) Mich. 6. 8.

It is a hard thing to walke in this hard way, whereby therefore may we be encouraged thereunto. Quest. 11.

First, remember although this way be hard to walke in, yet it is but short, the labour is but momentary; that life which this way leades unto is eternall, and will never have end; this way which leades unto that life is but short, and will speedily have an end: And therefore wee should hereby be moved to walke cheerefully herein, because it is but like a short winter dayes journey. Answer 1.

Secondly, remember thy labour shall be rewarded. The Husband-man takes much paines in dunging, or manuring of his ground, in plowing, and sowing of it, and all in hope that he shall have a crop which will recompence his paines. The Mariner endures many stormes and cold blasts, in hope that his voyage will be prosperous and profitable. The Hunter goes many a step cheerefully, hoping that at last he shall meet with some game. Answer 2.

416 The Souldier exposeth his life to danger in hope of victory, & a reward. And therefore why should not we endure the difficulties and inconveniences of this hard way, seeing we are sure that our labour shall not be in vain, but liberally rewarded? 2 Cor. 4. 18.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, remember that thou shalt have help in all the difficulties and dangers of this way. The Angel wrastled with Jacob with the one hand, but upheld him with the other; and therefore Jacob was able to hold out, even untill the morning: so God will direct us by his Spirit in this narrow path, which leads unto life, and we shall alwayes heare a voyce behind us, saying, this is the way, walke in it: God will strengthen our ancle-bones, and enable us to runne with patience, constancy and cheerefulnesse, the race that is set before us: God will arme us with might and strength in the inward man, and enable us both to overcome our enemies which labour to oppose us, and to performe those workes in some measure, which he requireth of us. And therefore seeing we are assured, that the grace of God shall sustaine us, (p) and his blessed Spirit assist us in all the dangers and difficulties of this hard way, we should be encouraged the more cheerefully to walke therein.

Quest. 12. How must we walke in this hard way?

Answer. 1. First, put off all thy sinnes, with blind Bartimeus cast away thy cloake, and those sinnes which hang so fast on and cleave so fast to, and doe so easily beset thee: Hebr. 12. 1. Mat. 5. 29. Ephes. 4. 22. A man can never walke in this way, except he lay aside this old man of sinne and corruption.

Answer 2. Secondly, deny thy owne will, and profit & pleasure, & submit thy selfe wholy to be guided by God.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, abstaine from all fleshly lust, which war against the soule (1 Pet. 2. 11.) resist all thy corrupt affections and labour to bring every rebellious thought in obedience unto the Spirit.

Answer 4. Fourthly, follow and put on Christ, Ro. 13. 14. both by faith and imitation, Phil. 2. 5.

Quest. 13. Who are here to be blamed and reproved?

Answer. 1. First, those who walke in the easie way, declining this which is hard. Certainly this is a palpable deceit of Satans, to make men beleeve, that the way of ease and pleasure, will bring them to heaven.

Answer 2. Secondly, those who expect rest in this life; here we are commanded to take upon us Christs yoake, and then he hath promised us rest unto our soules, (Mat. 11. 29.) but labour, and paines, & watchings, & prayers, and fastings, & examinations, and reedifying of old ruines and decayes, in our bodyes, so long as we live. In this life, we must strive to enter into the true rest (Hebr. 4. 11.) and this striving and labour must last for terme of life; for there is no rest from labour till after death; Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, for they rest from their labours (q) where we see that there is no resting from the works of Religion, or the labour of the Lord till death. Neque hic requies spiranda neque ibi tristitia timenda (r). As we must not expect rest in this life, so we need not feare labour and paines in the life to come.

Sect. 6. 5. Which leades unto life.

Quest. 1. Why is it said, which leades unto life? and not, which leads unto heaven?

Answer. To teach two things unto us, namely,

First, that life is the end of the strait and narrow way. H.

Secondly, that this mortall life is not worthy to be called life; heaven onely being the true life. I.

Observat. 1. H. First, our Saviour here teacheth us that true life is the end of this strait way: Or, that the end of a godly life is to be crowned. Read Rom 8 17. and 2 Tim. 1. 11. and 4. 8. & 1 Joh. 3. 1. Duke Cosmo de Medicis, warring upon the enemies of his Master the Emperour, bare in his shield the Eagle, which signified Jupiter and the Emperour, holding out in her beak a triumphant Crown, with this Motto, Jupiter Merentibus offert, by which he signified, that his Highnesse deserved each glorious reward for his worthy vertues; but wee may apply it thus, that God will give a Crown of glory to every one who labours in his Vineyard faithfully, and fights manfully his battels against sinne and Satan. When Ursicinus a Physician endured martyrdome for religion, a Souldier perceiving his courage begin to fayle, spake boldly unto him; Doe not now Ursicinus cast away thy selfe, that hath cured so many, nor after so much blood of thine spilled, lose the reward prepared for thee. Thus should every Christian encourage himselfe, in this narrow path, that the end thereof is life, and his obedience shall be rewarded.

Question 2. Is salvation then of merit, or of workes?

Answer. 1. First, certainely, it were of works, and merit, if we could keep the whole Law perfectly: that is, if we had so fulfilled it, that wee had never transgressed against it, Rom. 7. 10. Galath. 3. Rom 2. 13. But Adam brake the covenant, and violated the Law; And therefore now we cannot be saved thereby, Rom. 3. 23. and 8. 3.

Answer 2. Secondly, now having broken the Law in Adam, we can merit nothing at Gods hands, but all is of grace, Ephes. 2. 5. 8. Rom 5. 21.

Answer 3. Thirdly, although we cannot merit salvation by our workes, yet the way thereunto is sanctification and obedience; as appeares thus,

1. Salvation is the reward of faith, John 1. 12. and 3. 16. and 1. Pet. 1. 9.

2. Faith is to be prooved and tryed by workes, Gal. 5. 6. James 2. 17. 26.

3. Therefore the Spirit of faith works sanctification in us, and then crownes that his owne work, Rom. 6. 22.

Objection 1. Life eternall is called an inheritance, and a reward; and therefore it is the merit of our workes.

Answer 1. First, it is called a reward Propter similitudinem, for the analogy or resemblance that is betweene them, both

1. In respect of the time; wages or the reward is given when the worke is done; so heaven is not given untill after death.

2. In respect of the measure; to him who workes more, or takes more paines, a greater reward is given: so he who is more carefull to exercise and stirre up the gift and grace of God within him, and more diligent in the worke of the Lord, shall have a greater measure of glory in the Kingdome of heaven; for there are degrees of glory in heaven according to the measure of grace on earth.

And

And although heaven be not given for our workes, yet it shall be given according to our workes.

Answer. 2. 2. Secondly, heaven is a reward, and that justly: for as the merit of Christ is ours; so we (although not by our workes personally) merit in Christ. This distinction should carefully be marked by the wary Reader, because the Papists say thus as well as we, although we and they be not both of one mind; as appeares thus: they understand it thus, that our workes are meritorious in Christ; but we thus, that our persons are accepted of God, as worthy by the operation and obedience of Christ. Thus wee should provoke and incite our selves unto piety, and the workes of Religion, by the remembrance of the reward promised unto us. Giacopo Sanzaro, being long in love, bare for his devise a pot full of little blacke stones, without white amongst the rest; with this Motto, Æquabit nigras candida una dies.

Meaning, that the day of marriage would countervaile all his black and cloudy dayes. So should we doe, call to mind that day of refreshing, and remember that when that comes, we shall be marryed unto our Lord Christ, with such absolute and compleate joy, that all our labour, paines, toyle, care, and watchings, shall be quite forgotten, and aboundantly rewarded.

Quest. 3. How may we know whether our lives here be such, that the end thereof will bring us to life eternall?

Or how may we know whether we be godly or not? and whether this true life belong unto us or not?

Answer 1. First, those who love God, but hate sinne, are heires of this true life. Eye hath not seene, nor eare heard, nor ever entered it into the heart of man, once to conceive the things which God hath prepared for those who love him. 1 Corinth. 2. 9. And therefore wee must seriously examine, whether we love the Lord or not above all? yea so love him, that we hate every thing which is opposite unto him, and hated by him.

Answer 2. Secondly, those have a promise of this life, who labour and endeavour to purge themselves from sin, (1 Joh. 3. 3.) He that desires this hope, let him purge himsefe, even as Christ is pure. And therefore we must trie whether we desire to know what is sinne, and what is sinfull in us, that wee may labour to leave all sinne, and forsake our owne.

Answer 3. Thirdly, they who are vessels of honour, belong unto Gods great Mansion house of glory (2 Timoth. 2. 20.) And therefore we ought to examine by our actions, what vessels wee are; whether we bring forth the fruits of Religion, thereby approving our selves to be vessels of honour; or the fruits of rebellion, thereby showing our selves to be vessels of dishonour.

Answer 4. Fourthly, the Prophet Isaiah showes most plainely to whom this true life belongs. Esa. 64. 4. 5. For since the beginning of the world, men have not heard, nor perceived by the eare, neither hath the eye seene, oh God, besides thee, what he hath prepared for him, that wayteth for him. Thou meetest him that rejoyceth, and worketh righteousnesse, and remembreth thee in thy wayes. In these two verses the Prophet layes down foure particular markes of an heire of heaven and eternall life; namely,

1. Those who wayte for him; that is, those who watch for him and sleepe not; those who hunger after him, but doe not unwillingly or impatiently brooke his delay.

2. Those who rejoyce in him, and not those who delight themselves in the world.

3. They that worke righteousnes; that is, doe not good now and then, but make it their worke.

4. They who remember the Lord in their wayes, or in his wayes: that is, not those who remember the Lord in the wayes of sinne, and when they commit evill, thinke upon him as a Judge who will punish it: but those who remember the Lord in their wayes, possessing their hearts always with an apprehension of his presence, and having the God of Jacob alwayes before their eyes: Or those who remember the Lord in his wayes, that is, walke continually in the wayes of the Lord, calling him to minde as a liberall rewarder of the workes of his children. And therefore we should from the bottome trie our selves by the signes laid downe in these two verses; whether we patiently, and constantly wayte for the Lord or not? whether we rejoyce in the Lord above all other created delights? whether wee worke righteousnesse incessantly? and whether wee alwayes remember the Lord our God, not onely as a just Judge who will punish sinne; but as a pure God who cannot endure sinne; and a gracious God who will abundantly reward the sincere obedience of his servants? Thus we have heard the first cause, why our Saviour here saith, Strait is the way which leades unto Life, and not, which leades unto Heaven; because true life is the end of this strait way.

Observat. 2. I Secondly, it is said here which leades unto life, to teach us, that this mortall life which wee live on earth, is not worthy to be called life, heaven onely being the true life: Or, that this naturall life is not true life, the eternall onely being absolutely called life.

Quest. 4. How doth this appeare, that this life is not true life?

Answer. 1. First, from Scripture, where,

1. Affirmatively we may see, that spirituall and eternall life is the true life, as John 11. 4. and John 5. 24. 26. and 6. 33. 35. and 10. 10. and 20. 31. Rom. 5. 17. 18. and 2 Cor. 5. 4.

2. Negatively, we may see that this naturall life is not true life; as Joh. 3. 36. and 6. 53. Heb. 13. 14.

Answer 2. Secondly, from the names, or things whereunto it is resembled; as for example,

1. It is resembled sometimes to dust, as Genes. 3. 19. and Psal. 103. 14.

2. Sometimes it is likened to smoke, as Psalme 102. 3.

3. It is compared sometimes in regard of the brevity of it to a hand-breath, as Psalme 39. 5.

4. Sometimes it is resembled to the grasse and flowers of the field, as Esa. 40. 7. Job 14. 2. and Psal. 102. 3. 11. and James 1. 10.

5. It is said sometimes to be like a shadow, as Psalme 102.11. and 109.23. Job 8.9. and 14.2.

6. Sometimes it is compared to a sleepe, (Psalme 90. 5.) sometimes to a vapour, (Jam. 4. 14.) sometimes to a thought, Psal. 90.9.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, it appeares that this naturall life is not the true life, by the nature of this life: For,

1. This life is full of evils, having in it more gall then honey, more sorrow then joy, more evill then good. There is to be gathered in India, e*Arabia*, and the Holy-Land, a certaine hearbe of an extraordinarie sweet smell, with leaves broad, fat, and juicie, which being pressed, yieldeth both Aloes and honey, but more Aloes then honey: from whence this Metaphoricall Proverbe was used, Quod plus molestia quam voluptatis gignit, it is more troublesome then profitable; thus Juvenal saith, an evill wife hath more of Aloes, then of honey; and Plautus saith most truely, that the life of man tasteth more of Aloes then of honey.

2. This life is full of labours, and paines; man being created unto labour, Job 5. 7. Eccles. 1. 8. If the King should bestow upon one of his Favorites one of his stately Palaces, charging him to keep it in repaire: the Favorite could not but take it as a great favour and esteeme, the gift highly in regard of the giver; but in regard of the care, cost, trouble, and paines, which he must be at in the dressing, repairing, and maintaining thereof, hee had better be without it. So this life is to be esteemed in regard of the authour, and giver thereof; but in regard of the labours, and evill, which it is fraught withall, it rather deserves to be layd aside, then retained; to be lost then found.

3. This life is but a pilgrimage unto death, and every day wee come neerer our journeyes end then other; and therefore it may better bee called death then life, as followes by and by.

4. In the best sort of men, this life is but a pilgrimage unto true life, where there is perfection of felicity (Genes. 47. 9. and Hebr. 11. 13. and 1 Pet. 2. 11.) and therefore it cannot truly be called true life it selfe.

Answer 4. Fourthly, it is cleare that this naturall life, is not true life, even from the division thereof. Here observe that there is a threefold life, namely,

1. Naturall, this is falsely so called, because it is common unto brute beasts.

2. Spirituall, this is Typically so called, because it gives unto us hope of true life, Ephes. 2.5. And therefore is onely life in hope.

3. Eternall, and this onely is truly called life; because true life consists in the perfection of the soule, to wit, in eternity.

Quest. 5. Whether hath the naturall man life in him or not?

Answer. No, but is dead: Here are two things briefly to be shewed, namely,

First, that naturall men have no true life in them, their life being either,

1. The life of brute beasts, which consists in the delights of the belly, and in satisfying carnall appetites: Or,

2. Worse, consisting in gluttony, revenge, drunkennesse, murder, and the like: Or,

3. Foolish, unconstant, vaine, consisting in the delights of honours, riches, and pleasure.

Secondly, that naturall men are dead, untill they be changed and regenerated, and that in this regard.

1. They are dead in understanding; for now they cannot take up spirituall things. 1 Cor. 2.14.

2. They are dead in quiet; for now there is no peace at all to them. so long as they are naturall. There is no peace to the wicked, saith my God, Esay, 48. 22.

3. They are dead in comfort and spirituall joy, the holy Ghost being given unto none but unto those who are spirituall.

4. They are dead in purity, being altogether corrupted with sin & uncleannes, which hath covered them as a garment, both in body and soule.

5. They are dead in regard of spirituall societie, being strangers from God, and from the Common-wealth of Israel. Ephes. 4. 18.

Quest. 6. 6. If this life be not the true life, then who erre concerning it?

Answer. 1. First, those who so highly prize this life, that is, either.

2. Neglect life eternall for it; preferreth that before this, the body before the soule; the pleasures of this transitory life, before the joyes of the eternall: Or,

3. Set up their rests here; oh who would take up his habitation and abiding place in an Inne? Who would set up his staffe in a strange place, that is upon his journey to his native Countrey, and his naturall kindred, Mich. 2. 10. Or,

4. Heape up treasures, and build, and plant, as though we should live here for ever. Oh let us consider how sottish we show our selves so long as we thus adorne, beautifie, value, and overprize this life. Heraclitus the Philosopher spake very wittily of the bow and the arrow, applying it to the thing in hand. A bow in Greeke is called βιὸς, βιὸν, comming from βίος, which signifies life; because men were wont to get their living with their bow; Now the bow doth not give life unto, but rather killeth those creatures which it shooteth at. Wherefore Heraclitus said of it, It hath in word a name of life, but indeed a worke of death. So this life is called life, but more properly might be tearmed death, and therefore is not thus out of measure to be esteemed.

Answer 2. Secondly, they erre here who are so carefull to preserve their lifes, that to doe it, they will wound their tender consciences, and pretend a necessity for it; as some doe in the time of sickenesse (I meane the plague) forsake house, and wife, and children, and family, not caring what danger they be exposed unto; and all this for feare of being infected; thus women sometimes will rather prostitute themselves, then suffer themselves to be killed; and men perjure themselves, swearing that which they never intend to performe, to save their lives; And salve all with a plaister of necessitie. But all such must remember these two things.

1. Nescit mori, there is no necessity of this life; and therefore better loose it, then save it by unlawfull meanes.

2. He

Answer. 3. He, that saves his life by these wicked meanes, shall lose it, (Matth. 16. 25.) that is, he that by sinne saves his naturall life, by that sinne exposeth body and soule to eternall death.

Thirdly, they are fooles here, who are so unwilling to depart out of this life; For this life is but onely a journey, and death puts an end thereunto, bringing us to our wished Port. Now we doe not this in other things; For,

1. Every man who hath a long, tedious, and dangerous journey to goe, is glad, not sad, when his journey is finished. Why should wee then be sorry, when God puts an end to our miserable life, which is so full of labour, and evill, as was shewed before.

2. A man is content to leave his fathers cottage to be entertained into the Kings service.

3. A Scholler is well pleased to goe from the University to a great Benefice. And therefore why should any of the children of God be unwilling to goe from earth to heaven? from labour to ease? from a vale of misery to a place of felicity?

Quest. 7. Some desperate and discontented spirit may be will here enquire, if he may not ridde himselfe out of the world? For if this life be not true life, but onely falsely called life; and neither worth esteeming, nor by any unlawfull meanes to be kept, nor unwillingly to be parted withall; then what great matter is it for him to cut the throat of his owne life?

Answer. For the full satisfaction of this question we will lay downe three things, namely,

First, the causes why some have done it. (K.)

Secondly, the causes, why none must or ought to doe it. L.

Thirdly, the punishment of those who have or will doe. M.

K Reasons of selfe murder. K. First, we have to consider the causes why some have miserably shortned their owne dayes, to wit.

Reason 1. 1. Some have done it by a law, when they were old; it was a law amongst some of the barbarous Gentiles that when men were come to such an age, that they were not able to worke any longer, they should be sent into a wild, and uninhabited desart, where they should either kill themselves or suffer themselves to be devoured of wild beasts. This is barbarous indeed, and monstrous inhumane.

Reason 2. 2. Some have cut the thread of their owne lives, by reason of some tedious sickneſse, or disease wherewith they have beene held. Thus M. Portius Latro, being wearyed out with a quartaine ague, which he could not get ridde of, killed himselfe. This we must not doe, because the crosse which God layes upon us must be borne, whether it be long or short, heavy or light.

Reason 3. 3. Some have done it by obtaining of leave; thus Euphrates the Philosopher obtaining leave of Adrian, murdred himselfe, because he was very old, and very sickly. But this is not to be done, because the Lord onely is the Lord of life, and therefore no King or Monarch hath power to dispense with this, or tollerate any to lay hands upon themselves.

Reason 4. 4. Some have wilfully cast themselves away by an opinion of a false immortality of the soule. Thus Cleombes, Chrysippus, Empedocles, Zeno, and Cato minor. But this we must take heed of; because as the soule is immortall, so there is immortall death, and eternall destruction, whereunto this opinion leades: and it is onely the godly who are made happy by death.

Reason 5. 5. Some have beene selfe murderers by reason of a detestation of some sinne committed: thus Lucretia being ravished by Tarquin, murdered herselfe. This we must not doe, because the fault is enlarged, not lessened by this meanes, this life being the space and time of true repentance. Rev. 14. 13.

Reason 6. 6. Some have laid violent hands upon themselves, for the avoyding of some sinne, which they feare they shall fall into, being strongly tempted, and assaulted thereunto, and the sinne being of that nature, that they had rather die then commit it. But we must not doe evill that good may come of it, we must not doe a present evill, for the avoyding of a future.

Reason 7. 7. Some make themselves away, that so they may be ridde of some temporall evils, or spirituall terrors which lie upon them: we must remember that it is mere folly for a man to run and rush himselfe into those dangers which hee feares; and therefore not doe as they doe, who being afraid of hell, runne thereunto by thus killing themselves.

L Reasons against selfe-murder. L. Secondly, let us now consider why we must not upon any occasion cut the thread of our owne lives.

Reason 1. 1. It is contrary unto the Lawes of the Land; because it is the cutting away of a member from the Common-wealth: the depriving of the King of a subject: and therefore by the Lawes, such are exposed to all disgrace, and not suffred to be buryed in the Church-yard, but in some high way.

Reason 2. 2. It is contrarie to the Law of nature; Omne appetit, præser rationem sui: every creature by the instinct of nature desires the preservation both of the Species and Individuum.

Reason 3. 3. It is contrary to the Law of God; as appeares thus.

First, the Law is, Love thy neighbour as thy selfe, but he who kills himselfe loves not himselfe: yea, if it were lawfull for a man to kill himselfe, he might argue thus, I must love my neighbour as I love my selfe; but I care not to kill my selfe, And therefore I may murder him.

Secondly, the Law is, Thou shalt not kill. It is worth observing, that the Lord in the ninth Commandement saith, Thou shalt not beare false witnesse against thy neighbour; but here the Lord speaketh indefinitely, Thou shalt not kill, that is, neither thy selfe, nor thy neighbour. Indeed it is lawfull for men to kill beasts, and therefore the Law is, Non hominem occides; Thou shalt kill no man; but he who kills himselfe, kills no other then a man: therefore it is a direct breach of this Commandement.

Reason 4. 4. When thou killest thy selfe, either,

First, thou murdrest an innocent man, and so becomest guilty of innocent blood: Or,

Secondly, thou murdrest a guilty man; now this is unlawfull. Suppose a man have privatly robbed or murdred his brother, it is not lawfull, therefore for him to goe hang himselfe, hee himselfe must neither bee his owne judge, nor executioner, nor deprive himselfe of the space of repentance.

Reason 5. 5. It is a practise which cannot bee patronized by any president in Scripture; that is, none of the Saints or holy men who are recorded in Scripture for such, have done it, although they have beene subject to extraordinary great evills and miseries both in body and good name. Looke upon Ioseph, David, Iob, and wee shall see them to have beene sometimes a very Map of miserie; but yet they never went about (that wee read of) to lay violent hands upon themselves, but patiently underwent, and endured the crosse: Saint Paul being extreamely grieved and perplexed by reason of those strong remainders of corruption which were in him, cryeth out, Miserum quis liberabit? Oh wretch that I am who shall deliver me? he doth not answer himselfe, Iugulum, a halter shall deliver me. Indeed this practise hath presidents in Scripture, and may bee patronized by the example of wicked men; for wicked Saul falls upon his owne sword (q) treacherous Achitophel hangs himselfe (r) and traiterous Iudas, together with unjust Pilate murther themselves; but no righteous men have done so in all the word.

Objection 2. If any object here the example of Sampson who pulled the house upon his owne head; I answer.

Answer 1. First, hee was a Type of Christ, who was to dye for his people.

Answer 2. Secondly, hee intended directly to kill the Philistines, not himselfe, although hee did foresee that his owne death must necessarily follow.

M. Punishment of selfe-murther. Thirdly, wee have to consider the punishments allotted unto this unnaturall sinne, namely,

1. The Athenians punished him who did but attempt to murther himselfe, but was by some meanes prevented, with the losse of the right hand, cutting it off. Rhoding.

2. The Ancients held that death of all others most infamous, and did forbid buriall unto such, by this law. Qui sibi manum admoverit, insepultus jacet (Rhoding.) Let not him bee buried (but cast into the high way like a dead dog) who layeth hands upon himselfe.

3. God is angry with such, as a Master with his slaves who kill themselves: If a man buy slaves that they may worke his worke, and enrich him thereby, he cannot but be exceedingly incensed if they should kill themselves, and by that meanes frustrate his expectation: So the Lord, hath both created and redeemed us for his service: and therefore hee is sore offended with him, who by the shortning wilfully of his dayes, defraudes him of his expectation, and declines his worke.

4. This sinne is greater then disobedience, and therefore shall bee more severely punished, He who kills himselfe in the battell is more exceedingly to be blamed, then hee who denieth to fight; for hee may disobey and repent, as the younger sonne in the Parable, who said I will not, and yet afterwards went: But hee that cuts the thread of his owne life, can never doe service any more.

5. God will reject such a soule so sent unto him; Iosephus being hid in a cave with fifty more who would have killed themselves, dissuaded them from it by this argument; If we send our soules unto God before hee call for them, hee will not receive them when they come: Showing most truely that we must expect Gods time for the dissolution of our lives; as good old Simeon did: Lord now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace (Luke 2. 29.) the word here used is ἀπολύεις; which the Syriack renders Iamam concrit operi; Lord now thou openest the prison doores; So S. Paul saith, I desire to be dissolved, to wit, of the Lord. And therefore wee should patiently endure all afflictions, and temptations, and trials, whatsoever, and eschew this monstrous self-cruelty, as we would the torments of hell. Phil. 1. 23.

6. And few there be that finde it. Sect. 7.

Question 1. How are there few that walke in the strait way, when there are many in heaven? Answer 1.

First, absolutely there are many in heaven, Isa. 60. 4. 16. Matth. 8. 11. Revel. 7. 9.

Secondly, but comparatively there are but few: and thus our Saviour meanes in this place, teaching us, that there are but few truly pious, or religious in comparison of the wicked; Or,

Observation. That there are but few who walke in the narrow and strait path of pietie, in comparison of those who walke in the broad and wide way of sinne and iniquitie. Read. Matth. 20. 16. and 22. 14. and Psalm. 14. 3. and Isa. 53. 1. Rom. 9. 27.

Quest. 2. How doth it appeare that there are but few who walke in this strait way?

Answer 1. First, from divine examples; wee reade of eight onely preserved from the deluge. 1 Pet. 3. 20. of two onely who came into the Land of Canaan, of all those who came out of Egypt. Numb. 14. 30. of Lot his family onely in wicked Sodome. Genes. 19. of Elias onely in the sight of the world. 1. King. 19. 10.

Answer 2. Secondly, this may be proved from experience, who teacheth, that there are many rebellious, many ignorant, many hypocriticall, many halfe converted; but very few truely religious, vel duo vel nemo. Good Christians are to bee esteemed among us, as good Publicanes were in Rome; where a faithfull Publicane was so rare, that Sabinus for his honest managing of that office, in an honourable remembrance thereof, had certaine Images erected with this superscription: Vero, memori, to the faithfull Publican, I dare not say as an Athenian said, who being commanded by the Roman Embassadors who came to Athens, to goe call the honest men of Athens to come to the Embassadors, went to the Tombes, and bid the dead men come; and being demanded the reason thereof? answered that the honest men of Athens were dead, and that there was not one now to be found alive. This I must not say, but I may truely and safely say, that in comparison of the bad, the good are very rare; almost like the Phœnix in Arabia, who is but one; or the Philadelphi in Asia never above two.

Answer 3. Thirdly, the truth of this appeares by the multitude of wayes; for there are many covetous, many prophane, many drunkards, many uncleane persons, many stubborne, many perverse, many worldly, many heretical, many hypocriticall, many key-cold, many professors for a time, who afterwards relapse with the dog to his vomite, and with the swine who was washed to the wallowing in the mire. 2 Pet. 2. 20. Suppose that there were more godly, then there are drunkards, or adulterers, yet not more then these are hypocrites, and formall professors, much lesse then all these.

Answer 4. Fourthly, it is cleare that there are but few which walke in this strait way, even from the nature of the way it selfe. For,

1. It is a very obscure and blind path, and therfore is hard to find, but easie to misse.

2. It is a laborious and painfull way, many things are therein to be done, as followes by and by.

3. It is a dangerous way, in regard of the enemies which lurke and lye in waite therein.

Which are

First, very strong, like a roaring Lyon, 1 Pet. 5. 8. or a stout warrier armed, Luke 11. 22.

Secondly, very crafty, and subtle; as appeares by his deceiving of Eve in innocency, and paradise.

Thirdly, very industrious, and never weary, but seeking night and day, and going too and fro, to seduce and betray.

4. It is a hard way to flesh and blood, both in regard of renouncing all our former sinnes, and in denying of our selves, and our owne wils.

Answer 5. Fifthly, it is evident that there are but few truely pious, from the promisses of the Word, which telleth us that onely a remnant shall be saved, Esa. 10. 21. Rom. 9. 27.

Answer 6. Sixtly, the greatnesse of the worke is not the least argument to prove this truth, that there are but few who walke in this strait way which leades to life: For,

1. Wee must devote our selves unto the service of the Lord, and submit our selves wholly unto his will.

2. Wee must take up our crosse, and patiently endure all the afflictions and tribulations which wee meet withall in the way, whether they be long or heavie.

3. Wee must runne with patience, cheerefulnesse, and constancie the race that is set before us.

4. Wee must denie all ungodlinesse and unrighteousnesse whatsoever. Tit. 2. 11.

5. Wee must cloathe our selves with righteousnesse and obedience, as with a garment.

6. Wee must resist all our corrupt affections and lusts. 1. Pet. 2. 11. Now whosoever doth desire, resolve, and endeavour to doe all these, will finde it a very great and Herculean labour.

Quest. 3. Who are here deceived, thinking themselves travellers in this way to life, and are not?

Answer. 1. First, some erre here through a blind zeale, or ignorant, and superstitious religion: Reade for the proofe hereof. Acts 21. 20. and 22. 3. and Rom. 10. 2. and 2 Peter 2. 2.

Answer. 2. Secondly, some erre through hypocrisie, Psalm. 78. 36. Isa. 29. 13. Ezech. 33. 31.

Answer 3. (q) John 6. 44. 65. Matth. 11. 27. Thirdly, some erre through carnall security, or a sleepie perswasion, trusting either,

1. To a morall life, and some outward reformation, and abstinence from some grosse sinnes. Or,

2. To some false dreames of faith.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, some erre through lukewarmenesse in religion, not labouring to bee burning and shining lights.

How may wee know whether wee bee of this number or not which walke in this strait way? Let us examine our selves by these markes or signes, namely. Quest. 4.

First, by the trueth of our covenant: have wee entered seriously into a new covenant with the Lord to serve him with all our hearts, and with all our soules, all the dayes we have to live? Answer.

Secondly, by the trueth of our zeale; whether is our pretended zeale for Gods glory true or not? that is,

1. Whether is it perpetuall or not? It is good (saith the Apostle) to bee zealously affected alwayes in a good matter (r) wee must not bee zealous per intervalla, sometimes, but alwayes; (r) Galath. 4. 18.

2. Whether is thy zeale resolute or not? doest thou resolve, that although none else should serve the Lord, yet thou will? with Elias 1 King. 18. and with Iosuah, Chapter 24. dost thou purpose in thy heart, with Peter not to forsake Christ, though all the world should forsake him?

Thirdly, wee must trie our selves by the truth of our lives and conversations; and here examine,

1. Whether dost thou labour to abound in every good worke through the whole course of thy life?

2. Whether dost thou labour daily to encrease in obedience, and in every good worke?

Fourthly, let us examine our selves,

1. Whether dost thou endeavour to subdue all grosse sinnes or not? whether anger, lust, pride, drunkennesse, and the like?

2. Not onely these, but also to subjugate, and bring under thy inordinate affections, corruptions, and lusts? If wee finde these things in us in trueth, they will bee comfortable arguments unto us, that wee are of this small number who walke in this strait way of Pietie, and which shall enter in at the narrow gate of felicitie, when the Lord by death takes us out of this world.

Verse 15. Beware of false Prophets which come to you in sheepes cloathing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Verse 15.

S. P. Beware. Cavete. Sect. 1.

Sometimes wee are bidden to take heed of our selves, now wee are bidden to take heed of other.

Whereby our Saviour would teach us: That it is Observat. not enough for us to bee circumspect in our selves, but we must also beware of others; as we see Christ would not commit himself to all; neither would suffer his Apostles to meddle with the leaven of the Pharisees, but bids them beware of it: And S. Paul would not have us to become companions of those who might seduce us. Ephes. 5. 7.

Why must we beware of others? Question.

First, because wee are easily carried away with Answer 1. examples; and therefore it is called leaven. Men are like the sheepe who are more readie to follow one another, then to follow the voice of the shepheard. Plus valent leges in exemplis, wee should live by lawes not by examples, but wee are more readie to follow examples then precepts: And therefore wee must beware of those who goe about to seduce us.

Secondly, naturally wee are Athenians, and de- Answer 2. sire to heare new things, and to embrace them; Acts 17. 21. and Ephes. 4. 14. And therefore we had need beg bee so much the more warie of all those who by novelties and strange doctrines go about to mislead us.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, false Prophets (like the divell) can transforme themselves into an Angell of light (2 Cor. 11. 13.) and therefore there is great need that wee should be very wary of them.

Section 2. §. 2. Of false Prophets.

Our Blessed Saviour here foretelleth that there will be still false teachers in the Church. Acts 20. 29. and 1. Tim. 4. 1. and 2. Pet. 2. 1. and 3. 3. Iude 4. 18. versis.

Quest. 1. From whence comes it, that the Church is never free from false Prophets?

Answer. 1. First, from the malice of Sathan, who is Gods Ape; and therefore will have his Chappell where God hath his Church (Revel. 2. 9.) And will sow tares, where God sowes corne.

Answer 2. Secondly, this comes from the justice of God; who gives them over to believe lyes, who will not believe the trueth, 2 Thessal. 2. 11. and 1 King. 22. They would not believe the Lords Prophet, and therefore a lying spirit in the mouth of their false prophets deceives them.

Answer 3. Thirdly, from the wisdome of God: who permits errours and false teachers, that the good may be discerned, 1 Cor. 11. 19.

Quest. 2. How many sorts of false prophets are there?

Answer 1. First, Hereticks, who labour to seduce men from the faith, teaching opinions which overthrow some fundamentall trueth. 1. Timoth. 4. 1. and 2. Peter 2. 1.

Answer 2. Secondly, ignorant persons, who desire to be teachers, and yet neither understand what they say, nor whereof they affirme, 1 Timoth. 1. 7. And so both deceive others, and are also deceived themselves, 2 Timoth. 3. 13.

Answer 3. Thirdly, proud, as Diotrephes, who loved the preheminence, 2 John.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, contentious; Some (saith Saint Paul) preach Christ out of envy and contention, Philip. 1. 15. 16.

Answer 5. Fiftly, coverous; who goe about to deceive for their owne base ends, Rom. 16. 17. 18.

Answer. 6. Sixtly, hypocritically, as follows afterwards.

Section 3. §. 3. In sheepes clothing:

Question. What is meant by these words?

Answer. 1. First, Christ in these words alludeth to the practise of false Prophets in former times, who counterfeited the true Prophets in their attire; for the ancient Prophets were usually clothed in rough and course attire; hence Elias in regard of his attire is called an hairy man, 2 King 1. 8. and John Baptist Math. 3. 4. And the false Prophets did counterfeit the true in their attire for this end, that they might more easily deceive the people: as Zachar. 13. 4. the Lord saith of them they shall weare a rough garment to deceive; for when they wore such course attire, made either of sheepes skinnes, or sheepes wooll, wherewith the true Prophets were usually clothed, they sought hereby to perswade the people, that they had the hearts of the true Prophets, when as indeed they were full fraught with damnable errours. Now Christs meaning in this allusion is to shew that false Prophets have plausible pretences for their damnable doctrine, and therefore are the more dangerous. Perkins, &c.

Answer 2. Second, the true meaning of these words is this, they shall have a shew of that sanctity, authority, and divinity, which the true Pastors of the Church have: particularly.

1. They shall faine Revelations, as Mahomet, David Georgius, the Anabaptists, and Basileans did.

2. They shall cite Scripture for their opinions, but corrupt it, as the devill did, Math. 4.

3. They shall boast of miracles, as the Egyptians did in time past, and the Jesuites at this day (r).

4. They shall have an outward shew of holinesse and sanctity; as Socinus had in Polonia, and the Jesuites where they come. This kind of garment Paul calls hypocrisie, 1 Timoth. 4. 2. (s).

5. They shall bragge of succession, as the Papists doe; And thus come clothed in sheepes skins.

Sect. 4. §. 4. But inwardly, are ravening wolves.

Christ in these words showes, that there are many Ministers devoure, teare, and destroy, but feede not, (t).

Why are they called Wolves?

Question. 1. First, for their covetousnesse, because they are alwayes greedie, and never satisfied. Rom. 16. 17.

Answer 1. Secondly, for their cruelty; because they labour to seduce, and pervert, and draw people from Christ unto Sathan, from life unto death. Act. 20. 29.

Answer 2. How may they be knowen?

Question. 3. First, by their pride; they exalt themselves: but the Apostles did not so.

Answer. 1. Secondly, by their covetousnesse, they seeke themselves, but the Apostles did not so.

Answer 2. Thirdly, by their carnalitie, they are so much given to the world, and their pleasure, that they hinder men (rather then further them) from the profession of the Gospell: for an evill life in a leader hindereth the march.

Answer. 3. Fourthly, by their entrance. Ierem. 23. coming when they were not sent. Rom. 10. and 2. Timoth. 3. 6.

Answer 4. Fiftly, by their doctrine, if it bee either erroneous, or factious.

Answer 5. Sixtly, by their endeavour, or end; if they labour to draw disciples after them. Acts 20. 30. versi 16. yee shall know them by their fruits: Doe men gather grapes of thornes, or figs of thistles?

Answer 6. Verse 16. §. 3. Yes shall know them by their fruits.

Sect. 1. What is the meaning of these words?

Question 1. Christ meaneth not so much the fruit of their lives (for that in outward appearance, and in the judgements of men, may bee as good as the true Prophets, they coming as the other doe in sheepes clothing) as of their doctrine; for that wee must specially marke, trying it by the word, and not be carried away with the pompous ostentation of their works.

Answer. What are the fruits of true doctrine?

Quest. 2. The fruits are many, but having to speake of this elsewhere (by Gods assistance) hereafter, I now instance but upon one maine fruit, which is acknowledged by all sides, and on all hands, without controversie, and that is, pietie of life: And therefore upon what tree of doctrine wee finde this fruit of holinesse and sanctity grow, we must judge it a good tree.

Answer. The Papists here object, Many trees of the reformed Objection.

(s) 2 Tim. 3. 5.

med Churches, bring forth evill fruites: Many Protestants live wicked lives.

Answer 1. First, we know it, we acknowledge it, and from our hearts deplore, and bewaile it.

Answer. 2. Secondly, if it be thus with the Protestants, what is it with the Papists? They will not wash their hands I am sure from this; none of their writers ever affirming that all Papists are Saints.

Answer 3. Thirdly, the question is not concerning the life, but concerning the doctrine; whether that impiety of life which is in some of our Church flowes from the doctrine of our Church, as from a fountaine? or from the corruption of their owne nature? Let us now examine this both in us and them.

First, we affirme, that the impuritie of life which is in some Protestants, proceeds not from the doctrine of our Church; and wee confirme it thus.

1. Because wee daily inculcate into the eares of our people those Apostolicall precepts, and assertions; Those who are in Christ Iesus have crucified the flesh, with the affections, and Lusts; Galath. 5. And, those who hope to bee saved by Christ must purge themselves. 1 Iohn 3. And that they must put off the old man, and put on the new. Roman. 13. 12. 13. Yea follow after holinesse, because without this none can bee saved. This our Church teaches; and this many (although not all) in our Church practise.

2. Because by the doctrine, and discipline of our Church, and Land, those who will not obey but will bee wicked, are punished.

Secondly, concerning the Papists wee say; that great is the securitie, impietie, and prophanesse, in the Papacie and Church of Rome; and that it proceeds from and is occasioned by the doctrine and tenents of the Church: we prove it thus.

First, they occasion impuritie, while they command all their Priests to remaine unmarried, when scarce either one or other of them hath the gift of continencie; And so necessarily followes fornications, adulterie, Sodomy, and all manner of uncleannesse, among their Friars, Monkes, Nunnes, Priests and Jesuits.

Secondly, they teach perfidiousnesse, and trucebreaking: that neither word, promise, or oath is to bee kept with those who are not Papists as they are, Guicciardinus, De jure belli, lib. 3. ca. 19. pag. 662.

3. They teach tyranny; when they arme Kings against the faithfull; provoking the to kill those who never were convicted either of heresy or blasphemy. Mr. Fox in his Monuments, and those histories which write of the Spanish Inquisition give abundant examples hereof.

4. They teach Idolatrie, while directly they command prayers to bee made to the Virgin Mary, and to the rest of the Saints; and with tooth and naile maintaine such Idolatry to be lawfull. Greg. de Valent. de Idol. lib. 2. cap. 7.

5. They teach rebellion and treason; while they suggest unto their hearers the odiousnesse of a lawfull Magistracie; and as it were arme them with fire and sword, to burne up, murther, or depose lawfull Christian Kings; as they have done more then once in France; and attempted often in England. And therefore by these fruits of their Doctrine they are easily to be discerned.

How many sorts and kinds of fruit are there? Question 3.

First, fruits are either good (whereof by and by) or evill. Answer. 1.

Secondly, evill fruits seeme here expressly to bee threefold; namely, Answer 2.

1. Thornes; these are of evill juyce; and signifie Hereticks.

2. Thistles; these are vaine, light, and chaffie, signifying those who swell, and are puffed up with vaine glory.

3. Corrupt trees, whom { Teaching and Living } a putrified heart hath corrupted, both in ——— { But the words are not to bee wrested. }

Thirdly, there is indeed a fruit, namely, Answer 3.

1. Dogmatum, of Opinions, which is either,

1. Against God; and that either,

First, against the persons, and Trinity; as the Arrians, and Vorstius held divers things.

Secondly, or against salvation by grace in Christ. Or,

Thirdly, against the glory of God; and that either by the invocation or adoration of the creatures. Or,

2. Against his word, and the dignitie thereof; as the Papists who hold it imperfect, and insufficient unto salvation, without humane or Ecclesiasticall traditions.

3. Or against the zealous profession of religion: as many doe, who holds all those nice, and fooliish people, who are carefull to fulfill all righteousnesse, and make conscience of committing the least sinne.

2. Vitæ of life; as those Preachers whose lives and conversations are scandalous.

Whether are these words to bee understood of false Prophets onely, or of all wicked men? Question 1. Answer. 1.

First, it seemes generall, because Saint Luke addes them to the prohibition of hypocriticall judgement. Luke 6. 42. 43.

Secondly, Calvin thinks them to belong to false Prophets onely; and that Saint Luke doth there conjoine things which are disjoyned and separated in time. Answer 2.

Thirdly, I conceive the words speake of both: And therefore I thinke, Answer. 3.

1. Christs scope is to admonish us of false prophets. And,

2. His admonition is urged from a generall rule. And,

3. That he concludes generally, verse 20.

Although I believe (as I said even now) that these words may be taken both generally and particularly, yet in this verse I will onely handle them as spoken to false teachers.

What Prophets doth our Saviour here speake of? Question. 2.

First, a Prophet properly signifies one who foretelleth things to come, according to the revelation made by him, from God, unto the people. But Prophet doth not thus signifie in this place. Answer. 1.

Secondly, a Prophet sometimes signifies one who did expound the predictions and prophesies of the Prophets: Thus Hulda was called a prophetesse. Answer 2.

Thirdly, a prophet sometimes signifies him, who from the bookes of the Prophets, doth exhort the people unto repentance, conversion, and laying hold upon Christ; Luke 24. 27. Answer. 3.

Fourthly,

Fourthly, and lastly, a prophet signifies one who teacheth Christ (the end of the Prophets) in the Ministerie of the Gospell: And thus Saint Paul saith, Hee that professeth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort. 1 Corinth. 14.3. And thus the word is taken in this place.

Answer 4.

Quest. 3. How many kindes of prophets are there?

Answer. There are two, namely Good and Evill:

First, there are good prophets; whereof two things are predicated, namely,

1. That he fructifies in good fruit. And,

2. That hee cannot fructifie in evill fruit. Wherby is taught by our Saviour, to wit, That he is not to bee esteemed a good Minister, who doth not show and shine forth in good works: for it is required of a Minister that hee should be faithfull, &c. (t) reade 1 Corinth. 9. 15. and 2 Tim. 4. 2. And therefore they must bee extraordinary carefull of two things, to wit,

1. Of their doctrine; that they teach, truely, prudently, fitly, holily, and diligently. And,

2. Of their lives: wherein two things are to be regarded, namely,

First, negatively they must not so live that they disgrace either the profession of religion, or that high calling whereunto they are called. Rom. 2. 24.

Secondly, affirmatively, they must so shine in good works, that God may bee glorified in them, and by them. Matth. 5. 16.

Secondly, there are evill prophets; In whom two things are pointed out, to wit,

1. That they are thornes, and thistles, and corrupt trees:

Question 4. Why are False-prophets compared to these things?

Answer. 1. First, because as thornes and thistles pricke, hurt, and wound the body; so doe they the soule.

Answer 2. Secondly, because as these things are contemned and despised, so false prophets ought to bee, being no better then unsavourie salt which is good for nothing.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, because as thornes and rotten trees are appointed for the fire: so these are neere unto a curse, and their end is to bee burnt. Hebr. 6. 8. as followes by and by, verse 19.

2. That false prophets cannot bring forth good fruits.

Quest. 5. Cannot evill teachers teach hypocritically? and so outwardly well?

Answer. 1. First, sometimes they speake from the heart, and freely; and then they speake as they are, that is, evilly, as they are evill. If,

1. They bee hereticall or schismaticall. Or,

2. If they bee impure, and given unto the world. Or,

3. If they bee ignorant of Christ. Or,

4. If they bee barren fields voide of all grace; And speake as they thinke; then without doubt they must needs speake coldly, and amisse.

Answer 2. Secondly, sometimes they speake fainedly, and hypocritically; and then speaking the trueth of God, they may benefit others thereby, but so it is not their fruit, but the blessing of God upon his own ordinance; and thus Caiphas prophesied when hee was High-priest; and Saul, when hee was amongst the Prophets.

Quest. 6. Whether can false teachers truely convert any from their sinnes unto God?

Answer. 1. First, it is not safe to answer negatively, and say they cannot; For,

1. There is a dogmaticall knowledge of Christ which they may have, although they have not the practicall, which is mentioned. John 17. 3. This is life eternall to know thee, and him whom thou hast sent Jesus Christ.

2. The power of the Word doth depend upon the ordinance of God who sends it, and not upon the worthinesse of the man who brings it. Hence Paul seemes to intimate that a man may preach profitably unto others, and yet not to himselfe: 1 Corinth. 9. 27. Yea God sometimes works with evill tooles, and by bad meanes or instruments; as wee see hee sent his word by Balaam, and directed Caiphas to speake true; yea Sathan himselfe confesseth Christ. An evill King may governe well, and a false teacher save others and yet damne himselfe; as they did who built Noahs Arke.

3. The power of regenerating, is not in man but in the Word (Iames 1. 18.) the spirit aplying it to the soule, 1 Cor. 3. 6.

4. If an evill teacher may not convert, and benefit others, then why are wee commanded by Christ to heare such. All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and doe (u).

(u) Matth. 23. 3.

Answer 2. Secondly, such certainly, cannot preach zealously, with a true affection, and good heart; but either coldly, or hypocritically.

Section 3. §. 3. Neither figs of thistles.

Our Saviour showes two things in these words, namely.

First, if the tree be bad, the fruit cannot be good; if the tree be a Thistle, the fruit cannot bee Figges; of this something hath beene spoken, and more remaines to be spoken verse 18.

Secondly, if the fruit bee good, we must not judge the tree to bee bad: if the fruit bee figges wee must not judge the tree to be a Thistle: For men doe not gather figgs of Thistles.

Question. 1. Why are not they to be suspected or judged, who bring forth good fruit?

Answer 1. First, because wee should imitate our God; now hee never punisheth but for a certaine, and apparent fault, and therefore wee should not suspect without some apparent signes, or palpable persecutions.

Answer 2. Secondly, because none are rashly to bee judged without good ground. Iohn 7, 51. Iames 4. 11.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, because judgement belongs unto God, 1 Corinth. 4. 5. And therefore this is to take the sword out of Gods hands, which is dangerous unto any, and a thing full of perill. Rom. 14. 4. 10. 13.

Answer 4. Fourthly, because charitie is not suspicious, 1 Cor. 13. And therefore those who suspect the tree when the fruit is faire and good, are too emptie of this grace of Christian love.

Answer. 5. Fiftly, because the heart is unsearcheable, Ierem. 17. 9. wee see the actions, not the heart and affections; and therefore where wee see good things done, there we must thinke that they are done with a true affection and right heart.

Answer. 6. Sixtly, they who bring forth good fruit are not to bee suspected, because wee are implicitely forbidden it in these words, and expressely in the first words of this this verse, and verse 20. yee shall know them by their fruits; where our Saviour would have us to leave the heart unto God, and where wee see good fruits, there to judge the heart, and tree, to bee good also.

Quest. 2. What are the causes that men so often judge and suspect the tree when the fruit is good?

Answer. 1. First, because of some heavy affliction; the world looking upon a man whose life hath beene outwardly unspotted, doth presently conclude that his religion was but hypocriticall, if it see him under some sharpe and grievous disaster and misery. Thus do Iobs friends: And thus do both Jewes and Gentiles, Luke 13.2. Acts 28. 4.

Answer 2. Secondly, the cause of this uncharitable judgement is sometimes the envie of another mans glory; wee envying the estimation our brother hath in the world, by reason of his unblameable life, do therefore censure and judge his profession to bee but in hypocrisie. Matth. 10. 25. and 12. 24. Luke 7. 34.

Answer 3. Thirdly sometime malice is the cause hereof; thus the Jewes judge Christ to have a divell, John 9. 16.

Answer 4. Fourthly, this unchristian judgement doth sometimes proceed from hypocrisie; many a man cosening the world with false pretences, doth judge other men to doe so likewise, Rom. 1. last verse, and 2. 1.

Verse 17. Verse 17. Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evill fruit.

Our Saviour speaking here of the regenerate and unregenerate man, may move this question, Question. 1. Answer. Who are not Regenerated?

They who doe not fructifie in good works, Gal. 5. 15. 25. Philip. 1. 27.

What trees are there in the Church which thus fructifie not?

First, hypocrites, who have onely a forme of godlinesse (2 Timoth. 3. 5.) drawing neere unto God with their lips while their hearts are far from him, Matth. 15. 9. Quest. 2. Answer 1.

Secondly, Back-sliders, who start aside like broken bowes, forsaking and leaving their first love. Reade, Gal. 3. 3. Revel. 2. 5. Answer. 2.

Doe the regenerate then not sin at all? Question 3.

First, certainly they sinne, 1 John 1. 8. And therefore are taught daily to pray, forgive us our debts. Answer. 1.

Secondly, but they walke not in the wayes of sinne, neither make it their worke; but watch, and strive against it; as shall elsewhere more amply bee shewed. Answer. 2.

Verse 18. A good tree cannot bring forth evill fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Verse 18.

Saint Hierome (in Galath. 5.) thinkes this place is not spoken of men, but of the fruites of the flesh, and Spirit.

Two things are here directly pointed at, namely,

First, that a good tree cannot bring forth evill fruit. N. N

Secondly, that an evill tree cannot bring forth good fruit. §. 2.

N. First make the tree good, and then the fruit cannot bee evill; For a good tree cannot bring forth evill fruit.

Who is a good man, or a good tree? doth not Christ say, there is none good save God? Matth. 19. 17. Question. 1.

Goodnesse is either
- Abusive; and that either by
  - The phrase or proprietie of speech; when goodnes is taken for beautie, or properneese of person; The sonnes of God saw the daughters of men that they were good (so the Latine hath it) that is, beautifull: So Saul was a choice young man, and a goodly; that is, a very personable and proper man. Or, Answer. Genes. 6. 2. 1. Samuel. 9. 2.
  - Or Comparison; Thus S. Paul saith; That it had beene good for those who relapsed, if they had never knowne the wayes of God. Now it is not so simply good for a man to bee ignorant of the wayes of God, but comparatively; hee had better not have knowne them at all, then after they have knowne them to forsake them. We have the like speech used Prov. 17. 1. and 21. 9. 19. 2 Pet. 2. 21.
- True; and this is either
  - Natural; which is either
    - Absolute; thus man in his first creation was very good. Or, Genes. 1. 31.
    - Respective; thus a thing is called naturally good, when it is profitable, as Gen. 49. 15. Exod. 18. 17. Marke 9. 50.
  - Spirituall which consists either in
    - Things: thus all vertues, and graces of the holy Spirit are called good. Or,
    - Persons: which
      - Infinite, and is in God alone. Marke 10. 18.
      - Finite, in the Church Triumphant.
      - goodnes is either
        - Respective, which is either in
          - Some one singularly; For a good man some would even dare to dye; not for every good man; but for some one singularly good both in himselfe, and unto others.
          - All the faithfull generally: A good man (that is every good man) bringeth forth good things. And so the word signifies in this place.

Observat. Teaching us, That after wee are regenerated, wee ought to fructifie in every good worke: when the Lord hath made us good trees, wee should labour to bring forth good fruit. Matth. 3. 8. and 13. 23. Cant. 2. 11. and Col. 1. 9. 10. and 2. 6. and Rom. 6. 4. and 7. 4.

Quest. 2. How manifold are good works?

Twofold, exuere, induere; to put off the old man, to put on the new. Rom. 13. 12. Ephes. 4. 17. 24. more particularly the good fruits of a good tree are either, Answer.

First, Negative, to abstaine from sinne, and whatsoever is evill. Rom. 6. 12. 14. Ephes. 5. 11.

Why must the regenerate abstaine from all sinne? Quest. 3.

First,

426

First, because sinne is a leaven; and will pollute the whole man, 1. Cor. 5. 7.

Answer 1. Secondly, because sinne grieves the good, and Answer 2. blessed Spirit of God, Ephes. 4. 30.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, because sinne is a scandalous thing; and doth scandalize religion, when seene in a religious person: And therefore all the children of God must walke warily, and circumspectly, carefully avoiding every evill thing. Colos. 4. 5. and 1 Thessal. 4. 12.

Secondly, Affirmative, to abound in every good worke, and to bee conversant and frequent in every good duetie; And of these the present text speaks.

Question 4. Why must wee bee thus carefull to bring forth good fruits?

Answer. 1. First, because God hath given us grace for this end and purpose: The talent was not given to hide in a Napkin, but to improve Matth. 25. 18. The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withall: (a) vessels are made that they may hold liquor, fruit-trees are planted not for show, but to bring forth fruit; and wee are regenerated that wee might bee holy. God plantes, and prunes, and digs, that wee might fructifie, Matth. 21. 34. &c. And therefore wee must not bee slothfull, and negative Christians (Iames 1. 23.) But industrious, remembring that God made man for labour, not for lazines and created him not for speculation onely, but for practise; The Lord

(a) 1 Cor. 12. 7.

1. Enlightens the minde and the understanding. And,

2. Moves, and perswades the affections. And,

3. Imprints faith in our hearts by his holy Spirit. Rom. 8. 16. and 1 Iohn 3. 10. And,

4. Gives graces and good habits [illegible], and al for this end, that we might reduce all into act, and bring forth good fruites. And therefore wee must not frustrate his expectation.

Answer 2. Secondly, it is neeessary, that wee should abound in good works, because thus onely wee approve our selves to bee good trees, and our pietie to bee true and cordiall; For true godlines doth alwayes encrease, and daily is enlarged; the seed of grace in the heart is like the mustard-seed in the garden, which takes root, and afterwards sends forth a tender blade, then a stalke, and lastly comes to bee a tall shrub, bringing forth fruit. Thus the truest signe of life is growth, and Dwarfes are but monsters in nature: Wherefore we must not be alwayes children, neither alwayes learning, but never coming unto perfection; but so learne the practise of vertue that wee may grow up therein daily more and more (b).

Answer 3. Thirdly, the Holy Ghost is fruitfull (Gal. 5. 21. and Ephes. 5. 9.) and therefore if wee desire to approve our selves to be guided and directed thereby, we must be fruitfull also.

Answer 4. Fourthly, wee must labour to abound in good workes, because God is glorified thereby. Matth. 5. 16. Iohn 15. 8. Phil. 1. 11.

Answer. 5. Fiftly, because our brethren are edified thereby. Titus 2. 7. and 3. 8. and 1 Pet. 2. 12. and 3. 1.

Answer 6. Sixtly, because it is profitable for our selves. Prov. 11. 30. Rom. 6. 22.

Answer 7. Seventhly, because it is comfortable unto the Ministers of God, whom God hath set over us, Iohn 4. 36. Rom. 1. 13. Hebr. 13. 17.

Quest. 5. In what works must wee labour to abound?

Answer. Wee must labour to abound in these two things, namely,

First, in Internall desire, love and fervour of the heart, towards every thing that is good; wee must labour to encrease dayly in the love of every good thing, and in zeale, and in uprightnesse, and in sincerity of heart.

Secondly, in Externall actions; that is, both,

1. In an Abstinence from all evill works. And,

2. In obedience unto that which is good: And herein three things are to bee observed, namely,

First, wee must obey every kinde of good worke: whether belonging to the first or second table.

Secondly, wee must obey every good worke in a frequent custome, and assiduous, and daily life.

Thirdly, wee must obey the Lord perseverantly, continuing in his service unto the end: Wee must not serve the Lord with our hearts onely, (as some say they doe) and not with our bodies; neither with our bodies onely, (as many doe) and not with our hearts; but wee must labour to bee trees bearing good fruit both in bodies and soules. Wee must not abstaine from sinne onely (as many doe) and doe no good: but wee must cease to doe evill, and learne to doe well. Wee must not doe some sorts of good works onely, or sometimes by aguish fits, or begin in the Spirit, and end in the flesh; but wee must ensue after whatsoever is good, and that through the whole course of our life.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

Observat. Our Saviour expressely here teacheth, That so long as wee are unregenerate, we cannot cease from evill works, Matth. 12. 34. and 2 Pet. 2. 14. A Gentleman perceiving that hee could not thrive in his own countrey Piacenza, went to Florence to live there, hoping to finde that place more prosperous unto him; and being there hee figured for his devise a Peach-tree loden with fruit, which in the proper soile, wherin it first springeth, yeeldeth forth poysoned and unpleasant encrease, but being transplanted in some farther Coast becometh wholesome and fruitfull: his Posie was Transplata proficit arbos. Wee are just like this Peach-tree, for so long as wee are in our naturall condition wee can bring forth no good fruit; but if wee once were transplanted and engrafted into Christ then wee should abound.

Question. 1. How doth it appeare, that the evill tree can bring forth no good fruit? or that the naturall and unregenerate man can doe no good thing?

Answer. 1. First, their fountaine is corrupted; sinne wholy possesseth them; as the earth freely and frequently brings forth weeds; so their whole inclination of of nature is after evill. Genes. 6. 5. As the Æthiope cannot change his colour, no more can man of himselfe his nature. And therefore so long as hee is naturall hee is not able to bring forth good fruit.

Answer 2. Secondly, it appeares further thus; If the remainders of corruption and evill concupiscence doe prevaile and often captivate those who are regenerate (Rom. 7. 23.) then much more the wicked must bee wholy subdued, seeing that concupiscence and sinne in them is in his full strength and vigour, not wounded, or weakened at all.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, naturall men are not sensible of sinne, but but are past feeling, Ephes. 4. 19. and 1 Tim. 4. 2. And therefore they doe not cease to sin.

Quest. 2. How manifold is corruption? because our Saviour saith here, a corrupt tree cannot beare good fruit?

Answer. Corruption is twofold, namely,

First, Originall, which was derived unto us from Adam: and this is naturall, and cannot be laid aside; but stickes to our natures, and that continually so long as we live.

Secondly, actuall, when we pollute our selves by some sinnes, 2 Corinth. 11. 3. and 2 Peter 2. 12. And so long as we are naturall we cannot cease thus daily to pollute our selves.

Question 3. Can naturall men performe no good things at all?

Answer. 1. First, a man while hee is naturall and carnall may doe these things, namely,

1. Condemne, and dislike the sins of other men.
2. Blame, and confesse his owne sinnes. Yea,
3. Leave divers sinnes for ever; and sin publickly more seldome.

Answer 2. Secondly, naturall and carnall men while they are such, cannot possibly doe both, or either of these things, to wit.

1. They cannot devote themselves wholy unto the Lord, both in soule and body, 1 Cor. 6. 20.
2. They cannot please God in any thing they doe; because without faith (which they are without) they cannot please God, Hebr. 11. 6.

Question. 4. How many things are required for the making or perfecting of a worke?

Answer 1. First, ability of body, and organs directed by these senses; This we have by nature given unto us in our first creation.

Answer 2. Secondly, Prudence, whereby wee may know to doe it aright; that is, so doe it, that wee may please God by it. This is not given unto us by nature, for naturally our understandings are obscured; 1 Cor. 2. 14.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, the consent of the will; now this by nature is absolutely depraved. For,

1. Wee cannot possibly restraine or bridle our selves from sinne; Neither,
2. Pricke and spurre our hearts forward unto that which is good, Ierem. 42. 1. and 43. 2. and 44. 16.

Question. 5. Why must we labour to leave this corrupt estate of nature, and be renewed? and regenerated?

Answer 1. First, because untill then we live in most darke and obscure ignorance; So long as wee are not regenerate.

We neither know
- First, where we are, or what we are. Nor,
- Secondly, our danger wherein we are. Nor,
- Thirdly, see how we walke; whether right or wrong. Nor,
- Fourthly, can discerne between good and evill; or know what things are truely sweet, good precious, or profitable for us. And therefore with Pharaoh wee should take no rest untill this palpable Ægyptian darknes be removed.

Answer 2. Secondly, by nature we are the captives and bond-slaves of Sathan; and therefore we should never give the Lord over untill he have regenerated us and renewed us.

Answer 3. Thirdly, so long as we are naturall and carnall, our Mindes are carried continually after sinne; and our lives nothing else but a continuall act of sinning: yea if we doe any which is good in regard of the matter, and substance thereof, it is done either cassually or coldly, or hypocritically: And therefore we should be extraordinary carefull to be freed from this wretched estate and condition of nature wherein we are.

Fourthly, because so long as we are naturall, wee are but cages of uncleane birdes: Answer 4. In Carnali est ignis avaritiæ, fœtor Luxuriæ, tenebræ ignorantiæ, vermis conscientiæ, sitis concupiscentiæ. In the naturall and carnall man there is the fire of avarice, the filth of luxurie, the darknes of ignorance, the worme of conscience, and the hunger and thirst of concupiscence. August.

Verse 19. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewen downe, and cast into the fire. Verse 19.

This commination or judgement may either be referred to false Prophets in particular. O. Or, to all wicked men in generall. P.

O. First, these words may bee referred to the false prophets; as if our Saviour would say; The prophets or teachers who seduce and leade aside people, shall at last bee destroyed. Reade, Ierem. 14. 14. 15. and 23. 1. 2. and Ezech. 13. 8. 9. and 34. 10. and 2 Peter 2. 2. 3. O. Observat.

Question 1. Why must all false prophets be destroyed?

Answer 1. First, because they are unsavourie salt, Matth. 5. 13. and good for nothing.

Answer 2. Secondly, because they goe about to bring destruction upon the people of God; by seducing and misleading thē. If they that admonish not the people of the danger and enemies that approach shall bee punished (Ezech. 3. 17. and 33. 7.) Then much more those who sow cushions under their elbows: If those who sing peace unto their people, lulling them asleepe in a carnall security, bee condemned already, then much more those who goe about to seduce their flockes.

Thirdly, God is jealous over his sheepe; and therefore hee shall not goe unpunished that goes about to cause thē to erre from the shepheard of their soules.

We distinguishing betweene the law and the Gospell, among other things say that they differ herein. That the law engendreth terror and feare; the Gospell peace; Bellarmine denies this difference, and thus bendeth his force to overthrow it. That the Gospell worketh feare as well as the Law, hee would prove by these menacings and threatnings, which are denounced in the Gospell: as in this verse, Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewen downe, &c. And so the Apostle saith, the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodlinesse, Rom. 1. Objection.

The Gospell then revealeth the wrath of God; and consequently worketh feare. Bellarm. de justific. Lib. 4. cap. 2.

First, as whatsoever is contained in the Old Testament, doth not appertaine to the law [as the promises of mercy in Christ foreshewed by the Prophets, which though they were uttered in the time of the Law, yet belonged to the Gospell] So in the new Testament all that wee finde written therein, is not straitway of the substance of the Gospell. And therefore the threatning of Gods judgements therein contained, doe as well appertaine to the law, as the comfortable promises in the old Testament to the Gospell. Answer 1.

Secondly, the places alleadged doe prove onely, that the law and the Gospell are joyned in use; but it followeth not hence they have the same operation and effect. Saint Peter Acts. 2. and 3. And the Answer 2.

rest of the Apostles in their sermons tempered the threatnings of the Law, and the comforts of the Gospell together; by the one drawing the people to repentance, by the other ministring hope of remission of sinnes; the same course ought the Ministers of the Gospell to take in teaching the people now; first in humbling them by the Law, and then comforting them by the Gospell; but all this sheweth onely a joyning of the Law and the Gospell in use, not in nature or propertie.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, the Gospell worketh feare and terror, per accidens, not of it selfe, but accidentally and improperly; as Saint Paul saith, the Gospell is the savour both of life unto life, and of death unto death. 2 Corinth. 2. 16. That is, properly and of it selfe it worketh unto life, but not so unto death, for that is not the proper effect of the Gospell, but is onely caused by the wilfull contemners, and disobedient hearers of the Gospell; by whose perverse nature, the sweetnesse thereof is turned to bitternesse. So then to the faithfull and believers, the Gospell bringeth comfort and peace; and if it doe not so unto others, the fault is in themselves; But the law brought terrour to all, even to the righteous; for Moses trembled and quaked at the delivering of the Law. Hebr. 12. 21. (e)

(e) Willet Synopsis fol. 1013.

P. Secondly, this threatning may bee referred unto all; that every tree which beareth not good fruit (that is, every man who doth not bring forth the fruits of righteousnes and religion in his life and conversation) shall be cast into hell.

Wee have here two things to be considered of: 1. The Persons Judged. 2. The Judgement.

Section 1. §. 1. Every tree.

Observat. In these words Omnis arbor, our Saviour teacheth, That none of those shall escape judgement whatsoever they are, whom God findes guiltie; Every man shall bee judged by God at the last, who will give to every one according to his workes, 2 Cor. 5. 10. and cast all that are guilty into hell.

(f) Psalm. 9. 17. (f) Many are the examples which wee have to prove this trueth, that none shall escape who are but corrupt and fruitlesse trees; namely,

First, he spared not Kings, as we see in Ahab, Saul, Balthazar, and Herod. Neither,

Secondly, Prophets, as wee see in Balaam, and 850. of Baals priests. Neither,

Thirdly, his most deare and beloved people; as wee see in Ephraim and Iudah. Hos. 14. 1. Isa. 5. Neither,

Fourthly, Apostles as wee see in Iudas. For the Lord is no respecter of persons, but when all shall stand before him, will deale justly with all in judgement, neither respecting the person of the poore, nor of the rich.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit.

Quest. 1. How many sort of evill trees are there?

Answer 1. Three, according to the fruits; to wit,

First, there are some trees that beare obnoxious, hurtfull, and poysonous fruit.

Secondly, some that beares onely leaves, and no fruit at all.

Thirdly, some trees beare idle, vaine, and unprofitable fruit: Now these seeme to be the best because they endeavour to bring forth fruit; but because their fruit is not good and profitable, they are therefore destroyed also. Our Saviour hereby teaching us, Observat. That none can be secure from the wrath and vengeance of God, but onely those whose fruits are approved by him. Reade Matth. 3. 10. &c. Act. 2. 38. and 3. 19. and Luke 13. 6. and Isa. 5. 5, and Iohn 15. 1. 2. and Luke 3. 8.

Quest. 2. Why shall none escape the anger of the Lord, but those who bring forth good fruits?

Answer. 1. First, because a tree is good for nothing else, but bearing of fruit: Ezech. 15. This is spoken of the vine.

Answer 2. Secondly, because Gods expectation is for fruit, that is all that hee lookes for of the tree. And therefore when hee lookes for that and findes it not, hee curseth the tree; as we see in the figge-tree. Matth. 21. 19.

Answer 3. Thirdly, God expects fruit, and that good fruit, and that onely; And therefore hee who answereth not the Lords expectation therein shall bee hewen downe, and cast into the fire. There are three sort of Trees, to wit,

1. Some beare evill fruit; as the wilde Olive, and the wild vine. These shall presently bee cut downe, and cast into the fire. Isa. 5. 5. &c. Heb. 6. 8.

2. Some beare no fruit; these are spared a time to see if they will beare, but if not, at length they are cut downe also and throwne to the fire. Luke 13. 6.

3. Some beare good fruit, but it is but little, and that little in part rotten; And these are pruned, and digged about, and manured, that they may bring forth better fruit, and more plentifull. Iohn 15. 2. And therefore wee should examine whether wee be of this number or not.

Question 3. How may wee know whether God will approve of our works or not?

Answer. By these foure signes, namely,

First, examine thy estate and condition wherein thou art: say thus unto thy selfe: If God should now call mee to give account of my steward-ship, what should I say? what should I doe? should I show my God my gold that I have heaped up together? or my pleasure that I have so greedily followed? or my land which I possesse? what doe I daily? doe I make it my chiefest care to glorify my God? doe I thinke that day lost (and grieve for the losse thereof) wherein I doe not either bring some glory unto my God? or some good unto my owne soule? or some benefit unto my brethren? Thus let us examine what wee doe daily, and what our actions are, if the Lord should call us to account.

Secondly, examine thy by-past zeale; if it have not vanished in leaves, and vaine shewes; hath not thy zeale been more for things circumstantiall and rituall, then for substantiall and reall? or more against an indifferent ceremonie, then a direct sinne?

Thirdly, examine whether thy obedience, and fruits have encreased, as thy knowledge did encrease? or whether thou wert as carefull to performe thy duetie, as to know it?

Fourthly, examine thy present religion; whether it leade thee unto constancie and encrease in holinesse and good workes, that so thou maist bee ripe unto harvest? or whether it make thee remisse or careleſſe? Certainely, if wee bee carefull over our wayes and conſider well how wee ſpend our time; If wee bee truely zealous for the glory of God, according to knowledge; If wee labour daily to encreaſe in knowledge, for this end that we might bee bettered in practiſe: And laſtly, if wee ſtrive daily to adde one meaſure and degree of grace unto another, caſting that behinde us which we have attained, and ſtriving hard unto the marke; Then we may be comfortably aſſured, that the Lord will looke upon us as good trees, and accept our obedience as ſanctified fruit.

Sect. 3. §. 3. It ſhall be hewne downe:

These words may be conſidered either generally. Q. or particularly. R.

Q

Obſervat. 1. Q. Firſt, in generall our Saviour here ſhowes, that all wicked men at length ſhall be puniſhed; Or although God ſpare wicked men a long time, yet at length hee will certainly puniſh. Reade, Iude 5. Pſalme 50. 21. and 62. 12. and 96. 13. and Matth. 16. 27. Acts 17. 31. Rom. 2. 2. 6. 16. and 1 Pet. 1. 17. Revelat. 22. 12. Deuter. 10. 17. Beſides theſe places wee may recolle& theſe examples; namely,

1. Of the Angels who kept not their firſt ſtations. 2 Pet. 2. 4. &c.

2. Of the old world, after 120. yeares threatning: 1 Pet. 3. 20.

3. Of Sodome (after Lot was departed) and the other foure Cities there, Gen. 19.

4. Of the Iſraelites, whom the Lord preſerved in, and delivered from Ægypt, and yet afterwards deſtroyed when they ſinned againſt him, Iude 5.

5. Of Balthazar, who was puniſhed at length, although long ſpared, Daniel 5.

6. Of Babylon, and Antichriſt; who although God hath ſuffered already long, and wee know not how long he may yet ſuffer; yet this wee know, that at length they ſhall bee deſtroyed. Revel. 18. 7. &c.

Queſtion. 1. Why will the Lord puniſh the wicked at the laſt, and not ſpare?

Anſwer 1. Firſt, becauſe otherwiſe hee ſhould not bee juſt, Rom. 3. 5. 6. hence it is ſaid, that Mercy and Truth are met together, righteouſneſſe and peace have kiſſed each other: Becauſe the time will come when hee will judge the ſonnes of men with juſtice and truth; as here he ſpares and forbeares, in mercy: for otherwiſe how could his juſtice appeare?

Anſwer 2. Secondly, becauſe God hath decreed, and ordained that hee will bee glorified by all the ſonnes of Adam, either by their converſion, or by their confuſion; And therefore it is juſt that thoſe who will not glorify him on earth by a holy life, and conſequently in heaven by a happy, ſhould glorifie him in hell by a wretched and miſerable. Reade, 2 Theſſ. 1. 6. 8. and 2. 12.

Queſt. 2. Who are hete to be blamed?

Anſwer. 1. Firſt, thus who preſume of mercy, without any good ground; who crie peace, peace, while ſudden deſtruction hangs over their head. 1 Theſſ. 5. 3. who make a covenant with hell, & are at an agreement with death Eſa. 28. 15. But let us not deceive our ſelves, for what we ſow ſuch ſhall wee reape. Gal. 6. 7. and 1 Cor. 6. 9.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, thoſe who neglect their converſion, putting it off from day to day: Theſe ſhould remember that this life is not a paſtime, neither will end in ſport: well may it bee Canonicall at firſt, but the Cataſtrophe will bee Tragicall. For, Extrema gaudii luctus occupat. The end of that mirth is heavineſſe, Prov. 14. 13.

Chryſoſtome upon this verſe elegantly reſembles us to Children; and that in many regards; viz.

1. They build houſes of ſticks, and ſlates, and cardes, and the like; making alſo feaſts in them: but neither will their houſes keepe them warme, nor all their dainties and proviſion, which they thinke curious, fill their bellies. Thus wee lay out our money upon that which is not bread, and ſpend our labour and paines for that which profiteth not. Iſa. 55. 2.

2. They waile and mourne as though they were quite undone if their houſes bee throwne downe, or their unſavoury proviſion broken and defaced; and wee laugh at their folly, and yet indeed are the worſe children, and moſt fooliſh of the twaine; For wee mourne as much for the loſſe and want of ſome temporall things, which wee may live well enough without, and which comes as farre ſhort of ſpirituall graces, as childrens houſes doe of the moſt ſumptuous and ſtately Palaces.

3. They will doe any thing rather then learne; they had much rather doe ſome painefull worke, then goe to their bookes: So wee thinke the word of God a hard ſaying, yea although it bee that one thing which is neceſſary. Luke 10. 41. yet wee can take more delight in hearing vaine, and unprofitable tales, or bookes read or told unto us; then we can doe in hearing or reading, or meditating upon the word of God.

4. They pleaſe themſelves a long time in theſe vanities, but at length they profit them nothing; ſo wee delight our ſelves in the things of this world, and trifle away our time for the traſh thereof, which profits us nothing (Proverb. 10. 2.) neither can deliver or preſerve us in the day of wrath. Proverb. 11. 4.

5. They repent them afterwards of their loſt time; crying out daily, Oh mihi preteritos referat ſi Jupiter annos; If their dayes were to beginne againe, they would ſpend them better then they had done. So will wee (when it is too late) wiſh that our lives were to beginne againe, that we might work out the worke of our ſalvation with feare and trembling.

6. The onely difference betweene us and children is, that their vanities end in jeaſt, ours in earneſt, theirs tend unto play, but ours unto perdition: For, we ſhall be cut downe.

R. Secondly, theſe words, ſhall be cut downe, may be handled more particularly. Queſtion 3. R

What is meant by this phraſe of cutting downe? Anſwer.

It may ſignifie two things, to wit,

Firſt, a cutting off from this life. S. S

Secondly, a cutting off from Chriſt, heaven and hope. T. Obſervat. 2.

S. Firſt, by hewing downe is meant a cutting off from this life; as if our Saviour would ſay, every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit, ſhall bee cut downe before his time. Or, The life of the wicked ſhall be ſhortned. Read for the proofe hereof. Iob 21. 21. & 15. 32. 33. Pſal. 55. 24. Pro. 14. 11. & 15. 27. &

Pſalme 37. 20. &c. and 73. 18. &c. Iob. 5. 3. &c.

Queſtion 4. Why ſhall the dayes of wicked men be ſhortned by the Lord?

Anſwer. 1. Firſt, becauſe the promiſe of long life is made only to the godly; Exod. 20. 12. Deut. 25. 15. and 1 King. 3. 14. Prov. 3. 16. and 9. 11. and 10. 27. and 28. 16. Pſalm. 91. 16. and 128. 6. 7.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, becauſe ſuch as men ſow ſuch they reape (Iob 4. 8.) but iniquitie is a kinde of graine; and therefore he who ſowes iniquitie reapes the fruits of the ſame, Job 31. 12. Galath. 6. 7.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, becauſe it maks much for Gods glory; For,

1. If God onely ſhould puniſh wicked men in the world to come, then this preſent world would not ſee his judgements or juſtice; which is neceſſary ſometimes to be. And hence therefore,

2. Hee lets them flouriſh for a time, and then ſuddenly cuts them downe (Pſalme 37. 20. and 73. 18. and 92. 7.) That the godly may ſee it, and ſeeing it, ſay, verely there is a God that judgeth in the earth. Pſalme 58. 11.

Queſt. 5. How doth God execute his judgements in the world upon wicked men? Or how doth hee take them away?

Anſwer. Many wayes, namely

Firſt, ſometimes hee cuts them off in juſt vengeance, and anger. Thus he hewed downe the Spies, Numb 14. 37. & Pharaoh. Exod. 10. & Ieroboam. 1. King. 14. 12. & Baaſha. 1 King 16. 3. and Ahab. 21. 21. and Achan. Ioſh. 7. and Hananiah. Ierem. 28. 16

Secondly, ſometimes he cuts them off by ſome ſudden caſualtie; as the Prince who was troden under foot, 2 King. 7. 17. Thus many have been taken away by ſome accident in their drunkenneſſe, and duels, and when they have been blaſpheming, and the like.

Thirdly, ſometimes God ſhortneth their dayes by letting them fall into ſome ſickneſſe or diſeaſe; and thus often drunkards take ſurfeits, & uncleane perſons impure and loathſome diſeaſes which bring them to their end, Prov. 23. 29.

Fourthly, ſometimes the Lord ſuffers them to be their owne executioners, and to cut the thread of their owne lives. And thus hee did with Iudas and Achitophel.

Queſt. 6. What ſinnes doth God or hath God puniſhed with ſudden or untimely death.

Anſwer Theſe which follow, to wit,

Firſt, Idolatrie: thus hee cut off Nadab and Abihu. Levitic. 10. 2. and Oza, or Uzza. 2 Sam. 6. 7.

Secondly, Blaſphemy: thus two and forty children were ſuddenly deſtroyed for blaſpheming of the Lords Prophet. 2 King. 2. 24. And a girle of twelve yeares old here in England, mentioned by M. Fox. For hee is a ſwift witneſſe againſt ſuch. Malach. 3. 5

Thirdly, Treaſon; thus Achitophel came to an untimely end. 2 Samuel. 17. 23. and Iudas. Matth. 27. 5.

Fourthly, Perſecution of the godly; thus Pharaoh and Haman were taken quickly away for their malice and rage againſt the people of God.

Fiftly, Perfidiouſneſſe, unfaithfulneſſe, or falſe dealing; thus Senacherib came to an untimely end; And often God lets men fall into the net that themſelves have laid.

Sixthly, Luſt; this brought Sampſon into the Philiſtines hands; and brings many daily into filthy loathſome, and incurable diſeaſes, and ſudden death.

Seventhly, Drunkenneſſe; many have come to their end, by ſome ſudden miſchance in their drunkenneſſe.

Eighthly, Deſperation; the conſcience oppreſſed with the burthen of ſinne, doth often finde out this lamentable remedie, of murther as a meanes to put an end to that torture; which indeed doth put but a beginning to it; as wee ſee in Iudas. Matth. 27. 3. 5. And thus wee have ſeene how this phraſe of hewing downe, may ſignify a ſhortning of this temporall life which wee live on earth.

Secondly, this phraſe may ſignifie a cutting off from Chriſt, heaven, and all hope of mercy or felicity: Certainly, it may meane

1. A cutting off from all hope of heaven and ſalvation. And,

2. A cutting off from Chriſt as hee is offered in the word. But.

3. Not a cutting off from Chriſt himſelfe; becauſe they were never grafted into him. 1 Iohn 2. 19. But this coming to bee conſidered of in the next ſection, I here omit it.

Section 4. §. 4. And caſt into the fire.

Queſt. 1. What is the meaning of theſe words?

Anſwer. By this phraſe is ſignified eternall puniſhment; Obſervat. and the phraſe it ſelfe doth ſhow the terrour of that puniſhment: as if our Saviour would ſay, The wicked man which beares nothing but corrupt fruit ſhall bee caſt at length into the fire of hell, which of all other torments is the greateſt.

Queſt. 2. How doth it appeare that the Puniſhment prepared for the wicked in hell doth exceede all other tortures?

Anſwer. 1. Firſt, it appeares by the language of the holy Scriptures, who ſometimes calleth it, The fire of hell, Matth. 5. 22. ſometimes, a fire that cannot bee quenched or extinguiſhed. Matth. 3. 12. ſometimes an eternall fire. Matth. 18. 8. and 25. 41. ſometimes a worme that never dyes, and a fire that never goes out. Marke 9. 43. 44. Sometimes the Scripture telleth us what is there, that wee might the better conceive of the inſufferableneſſe of the torment: In hell there is weeping, and wayling, and gnaſhing of teeth, Matth. 13. 42. 50. In hell there is fire and brimſtone. Apoc. 19. 20. In hell there is (negatively) no reſt. Revelat. 14. 10. but (affirmatively) torments day and night. Revel. 20. 10.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, it appeares by the place. Hell is a place ordained unto torment, in ſo much as there is no priſon, no dungeon like it. Priſons deprive men of liberty, and Dungeons of light, but men may bee free from torments in them, yea, may enjoy ſome comforts in them: but hell is a place which deprives us of liberty and light; which debarres us from all joy and comfort, and which afflicts with torments never patiently to be endured.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, it is cleare from the perſons that are there tormented; who are men forſaken and rejected of GOD for ever. Depart hence I know you not. Oh how miſerable is the condition of thoſe poore poore ſoules whom God will not owne, whom God doth not pitty, but rather rejoyce and laugh at their deſtruction. Prov. 1. 24.

Anſwer 4. Fourthly, it will appeare by the executioner or hang-man; the Divell, who is,

1. Our eternall enemy, and a foe never to be reconciled.

2. An enemy that excels, and exceeds in envie, and malice.

3. A foe powerfull, and able to inflict unſpeakable torments.

4. An enemie who hath no other comfort then this, that he hath copartners in his miſery. And therfore he will make them as miſerable as may be.

Anſwer. 5. Fiftly, this appeares by the abſence of good: In hell there is no good thing, neither any thing that can affoord the leaſt comfort: For there will be neither,

1. Light, to comfort the eye. Nor,

2. A droppe of water to coole the tip of the tongue; Nor,

3. Any confidence or courage to ſupport the heart.

Anſwer 6. Sixtly, it appeares that the torments of hell are of all other torments the greateſt, by the extenſion thereof unto every kinde of evill: For,

1. There ſhall bee moſt ſharpe and unſupportable tortures exerciſed upon the body.

2. The heart ſhall bee wholy dejected through ſorrow, wholy devoted unto ſorrow, and wholy devoured, and conſumed by, and with ſorrow.

3. The conſcience ſhall for ever preſage terrible things. And therfore the torments of hell muſt needs be exquiſite, that thus are extended, both to body, ſoule and conſcience.

Anſwer 7. Seventhly, it evidently appeares by the continuitie, perpetuitie, and eternitie of hels torments which ſhall never have, either end or eaſe; they ſhall bee continuall and perpetuall ſine intervallo without any intermiſſion or interruption: The Papiſts faine ſome Lady dayes to bee obſerved in hell, when the ſoules play, or make holy day: but this is but an idle dreame, for (as was ſhowed before from the Scripture) there is there no reſt, nor eaſe, nor ceſſation of torments. Yea theſe torments ſhall bee eternall (Semper) and endured for ever and ever; for neither the torments, nor the tormentor, nor the tormented, ſhall ever bee conſumed, or ended, but ſhall endure & laſt for ever. Semper moribundus, nunquam mortuus, robore vacuus, ſenſu plenus, ut quod ferre non poſſis, ſemper feras in æternum. In hell men ſhall be ever a dying, but never bee dead; ever weake and voide of ſtrength, but full of ſenſe of ſmart; and that which they can never ſuffer with any patience they muſt ever ſuffer with inſufferable paine.

Anſwer. 8. Eightly, the exquiſite torments of hell appeare thus: Mercy and anger are called the two armes of God (Ergo, ſimiles, ex ſe dignoſcuntur mutuò. Stapleton.) And therefore the knowledge of the one will helpe us to the underſtanding of the other. Now, eye hath not ſeene, nor eare heard, nor ever entred it into the heart of man once to imagine, the joyes that God in mercy hath prepared in heaven for the righteous man, 1 Corinth. 2. 9. And on the contrary; eye hath not ſeene, nor eare heard, nor ever entred it into the heart of man once to conceive the torments that God hath in his juſt anger and indignation prepared in hell for the wicked and ungodly man.

Ninthly, this appeares from the names given unto both ſorts: the Righteous are called veſſels of mercy; and therefore they ſhall bee filled full of all joy and felicity; the wicked are called veſſels of anger; and therefore they ſhall bee filled to the brimme with anguiſh and ſorrow. To the righteous, in heaven ſhall bee given good meaſure, preſſed downe, ſhaken together, and running over (f) of joy and happineſſe. And,

To the wicked ſhall bee given in hell, great meaſure, preſſed downe, ſhaken together, and running over, of paine and torments. And therefore of all griefes this is the greateſt.

Anſwer 9. Rom. 9. 22 23.

(f) Luke 6. 38.

Anſwer 10. Tenthly, the torment of hell is the conſummation, & very complement of all puniſhments; in regard whereof all other paines and ſorrowes are light and eaſie.

Anſwer 11. Laſtly, a mortall body is not capable of ſuch torments; neither could poſſibly endure them; the inſufferableneſſe of ſuch paines would cauſe the heart of a mortall man to die within him, and his very ſpirits to faint and faile him: And therefore of all other torments, this muſt needes bee acknowledged to bee the moſt extreame and exceſſive; Wherefore let us daily ſo meditate thereof that wee may learne to eſcape and avoid them.

Queſtion. 3. Where is hell?

Anſwer. Certainly, the Fathers did conceive that it was in the bowels of the earth; yea Chriſt, and the holy Scriptures ſpeake of a Deſcent unto hell, in oppoſition unto heaven: And therefore wee may as well doubt whether heaven be above us, as doubt of hels being beneath us.

Queſt. 4. Whether is this fire of hell a materiall fire or not?

Anſwer. Certainely, as the joyes of heaven, ſo the paines of hell are above our apprehenſion, and imagination; but yet without doubt, there is materiall fire in hell, becauſe the body which here on earth ſinned, is there in hell to bee tormented and puniſhed.

Queſtion. 5. What are theſe inſufferable torments which wretched and wicked ſoules ſhall endure in hell for ever?

Anſwer. 1. Firſt, the Monks diſpute, and affirme much of theſe torments which I here omit.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, the holy Scriptures ſhew forth unto us two ſorts of puniſhments:

Namely { First, of ſenſe, to wit ſorrowes, either in { Body, which are ſignified, or expreſſed by fire. V. Soule, which are ſignified or expreſſed by gnaſhing of teeth. W. } } Secondly, of loſſe, to wit, an excluding, and extruding out of heaven, never to have any place, or portion, or inheritance therein. X.

V. Firſt, there is Pœna ſenſus, the puniſhment of ſenſe which is firſt; Dolor corporis, the paine and anguiſh of the body; I cannot better expreſſe, nor more fully illuſtrate this torment then thus:

1. Let us meditate & remember the moſt grievous paines, and tortures, & ſickneſſes, the mortal body of man is ſubject unto, whether head-ach or tooth-ach, or collicke or ſtone, or gout, or whatſoever. Then,

2. Let us ſuppoſe all theſe to bee in one man, at once, and that in extreame manner. Then,

3. Remember that the least paine and torment which thou shalt suffer in thy body in hell will be greater, then the greatest, yea then all these. And,

4. Meditate upon the eternitie of these torments, and remember that thy body must not bee subject unto them onely for ten, or twenty, or thirtie, or forty, or fiftie yeares, but for ever and ever, world without end.

W Secondly, the next thing which here begges our most serious consideration is, Dolor animæ, the internall paine and anguish of the soule, which farre exceeds the former torments which are inflicted upon the body. Here three things are to bee ruminated upon, namely.

1. In the beginning there is a horrible expectation of some unsupportable misery; At the day of judgement the heart will presage such terrible things, that it will crie to the mountaines and to the hills, to cover it from the dreadfull face of the irefull Judge. Reade Psalme 50. 2. Isa. 13. 9. Ioel. 2. 2. Abac. 3. 9. 10. 16. For to the wicked.

First, the face of God is terrible; the poore soule sees, that it is a fearefull thing to fall into his hands (g) because hee is a consuming fire (h).

(g) Hebr. 10. 31.

(h) Hebr. 12, 29.

Secondly, hence the frighted soule will crie, Oh where shall I hide mee from the face of this angry God. If Balthazars knees smote one against another when hee saw but a hand writing against him. Daniel. 5. 6. &c. How will that poore wretch tremble that sees the angry face of God frowning upon him? Yea,

Thirdly, hence hee will wring his hands, and with bitter teares crie out, oh how wretched and miserable am I now become, that cannot appease the Lords anger, nor pacifie his wrath. Thus wee see the beginning is miserable, let us now therefore proceed, and consider whether the feare bee greater then the danger, or the evill every way answerable to the feare and fearefull expectation.

2. After this dreadfull presage of mourning, followes nothing else but perpetuall lamentation: For then continually these things will come to their remembrance; to wit,

First, all the sinnes that ever they committed in all their lives.

Secondly, the time of grace which they neglected, and lost, and trifled away; and the offers of mercy, which they contemned and despised.

Thirdly, the eternitie of the misery which they have acquired: for every moment the miserable soule will call this to minde: Thus am I tormented, and thus shall I bee tormented for ever and ever: And hence comes those double clamours ve, ve, woe is me, woe is me, that ever I was borne; If ever thou hast (I speake here to the wicked) been drowned or drenched in desperate teares, wishing for nothing so much as the medicine of death to ridde thee out of thy horrid feares; yea in thy desperation hast gone about to shorten thy dayes either by poyson, or knife, or halter or the like; thinke but how great the horrour of thy conscience then was, and yet how little it is in comparison of that horrour of soule and conscience which thou shalt feele in hell. For,

First, the eye of the understanding is more quicke sighted there then it is here; and can more fully conceive of, and apprehend the misery which is measured out and allotted unto it to suffer, then now it is able. And

Secondly, the sight thereof causeth all hope of mercy to fade and fall to the ground. And therefore the greatest horrour of conscience that can bee in a man on earth, comes farre short of that which the damned feele in hell.

3. To this beginning, and progresse adde eternitie; that it is not for a thousand yeares, as Origen thought, but for ever. In other molestations or afflictions there are sometimes some mutations, or mitigations, or cessations, or at least death puts a period to them: yea in the greatest temporall evils a man may appease the wrath of God: But in hell a man though ever dying yet never dyes; and though with teares of blood he aske pardon, mercy, and reconciliation, yet he shall never obtaine it. Hebr. 12 17.

X Thirdly, there is Pœna damni; the punishment of losse, and this is by much the greatest. If a man should suffer the torments of a thousand hels, yet it were nothing to this. Chrysost. S. There is no voyce in hell so irkesome to the eare, or so dolefull to the heart, as this I know yee not depart from me. Matth. 25. 12. 41. For, X

1. If God were present, hee would love, and comfort in the most grievous torments: hell would bee no hell, if God were there: the fire could not scorch us if God were in the fire. Daniel. 3.

2. But God being angry with wicked men doth absent himselfe from them, and thereby deprives them of all hope of helpe, comfort, succour, reliefe, or mercy.

Verse 21. Not every one that saith unto mee Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdome of heaven: but hee that doth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Verse 21.

What is the meaning of these words? Question. 1.

First, this may be understood of profession: Not every one that saith Lord; that is, that professeth God to bee his God. Now there are two sorts of Professors in the Church of God which shall never be saved, namely, Answer 1.

1. Grosse hypocrites, which professe Christ with their mouth, and yet in heart and life renounce him; of this sort is,

First, the common Atheist, who onely for feare of the Magistrates lawes professeth Religion. And,

Secondly, the Epicure, that is, such an one as beares Christs Name for the fashion sake, and yet his belly, and his pleasure is his God. And,

Thirdly, the worldling, who spends the strength of body and minde, and all hee hath on the world, for earthly things. Now none of these three sorts thus living and dying can be saved.

2. There are another sort who are more close hypocrites, who professe the name of Christ in truth, and and have in them some good gifts of God, by reason whereof both before men and in their owne conceit, they are reputed members of the Church, and yet are but hypocrites which shall not enter into the Kingdome of heaven.

Secondly, this may bee properly understood of Answer 2. prayer: where we see that Christ neither denies all, nor condemnes the worke; but onely saith, Not every one, &c. As if hee would say, It is a good duetie to pray unto God, but there are some who doe it not well: it is a good beginning, but many doe not proceede: And therefore the action is to bee established, but the evill performers thereof are to bee blamed.

Two things here are then to be considered of, to wit,

1. That prayer unto God is in it selfe a good worke. A.

2. That the prayers of many are not accepted of God. B.

A First, The invocating of God and Christ is an acceptable action of religion, where it is truely and religiously performed. Reade to this purpose these places, Psalme 50. 15. Rom. 10. 13. Psalme 116. 13. Ioel. 2. 32. Acts 2. 21.

Quest. 2. How doth it appeare that prayer is a Religious action? or an acceptable duetie?

Answer. 1. First, because it is a signe of Religion, of the Church, and of the faithfull; some (saith David) trust in chariots, but wee will remember the name of the Lord our God (Psalme 20. 8.) that is, we will trust in him, and by prayer implore his helpe. Thus Saint Paul exhorts Timothie to follow righteousnesse,
(b) 2 Tim. 2. 22. faith, and love, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart. (b)

Answer 2. Secondly, prayer is a remedy against evils, and a principall help in the time of trouble: 2 Sam. 22. 7. Psalm. 107. 6. 15. Prov. 18. 10. Psalme 34. 6.

Quest. 3. Who are here worthy of blame?

Answer 1. First, those who neglect this Religious, and acceptable worke of prayer; Paul would have all men to pray, and all men to bee prayed for, 1 Tim. 2. 1. 8. And indeed they are unworthy of mercy who will not begge it.

Answer 2. Secondly, those who in praying doe not call upon God religiously, but use much babbling, and many vaine and idle repetitions.

Thirdly, those who rashly approach unto God; intruding themselves into his presence without due and fitting preparation.

Question 4. How may we be assured that our prayers as a religious good worke shall be accepted of God?

Answer. 1. First, let us labour to be assured of Gods love towards us; for if he love us, hee will heare us; Read Psal. 3. 3. 5. and 5. 2. and 18. 2. 3. and 63. 1.

Answer 2. Secondly, let us labour to be acquainted with our God; no stranger dare approach into the Kings presence, but his houshold servants ordinarily without checke or controlement; let us be frequent in holy meditation, which is a Soliloquie with God; and then we may be assured that he will heare us, when by prayer we speake unto him.

Answer 3. Thirdly, let us learne the true manner of prayer. Here observe that it doth not consist in voyce but in heart, wherein foure things are required, namely,

1. Understanding, we must pray with our understanding (1 Corinth 14.) that is, we must not onely know what wee say, but we must knowingly offer up our prayers unto God; or as Saint Paul saith, make our requests and desires knowne unto him, Philip. 4. 5. 6.

2. The Spirit; we must pray with the Spirit, that is, fervently, and powerfully, Rom. 12. 11. and 1 Peter 3. 21.

3. Faith; wee must pray in faith (James 1. 6.) and then wee shall obtaine any thing at Gods hands.

4. Purity; wee must labour to hate sinne, and to serve the Lord, and then the Lord will heare our prayers 1 Tim. 2. 8.

B. Secondly, many pray unto God, whose prayers are not acceptable; or there are prayers which are unprofitable; many shall crie Lord, Lord, which never shall be saved, saith our Saviour here; and the Holy-Ghost in divers others places. as Jerem. 7. 4. &c. Proverb. 1. 24. Psal. 18. 42. Jer. 11. 11. Ezech. 8. 18. Mich. 3. 4.

Quest. 5. Why are the prayers of many unprofitable?

Answer. 1. First, because many will not heare God when he cals to them in his word, therefore hee will not heare them when they call unto him by prayer, Proverbs 1. 24. &c.

Answer. 2. Secondly, many pray and are not heard, because they seeke not unto the Lord in time, Esay 55. 6 If we desire to be heard, we must take the Lords time and call upon him in an acceptable season, and then we shall be heard.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, the true cause why some pray and obtaine not their sutes at Gods hands, is because they pray not truly; or because their prayer is no true prayer; but either powred forth hypocritically; drawing neare unto God with the lips, but not with the heart, Math. 15. 9. Or else coldly and careleslesly, not intending the holy worke in hand.

Quest. 6. Who erre here?

Answer 1. First, those who remaine in their sinnes, and yet perswade themselves they shall be heard, John 9. 31.

Answer 2. Secondly, those who have but onely an hypocriticall shew of Religion in them, and yet fully perswade themselves that their prayers shall be both pleasing unto God, and profitable unto themselves. Now both these are vulgar and common errours, some out of a carnall confidence, some out of an hypocriticall confidence hoping to be heard.

Quest. 7. How may we know that our assurance and confidence is true, and neither carnall, nor hypocriticall?

Answer. Prove and examine thy selfe by these signes, namely,

First, hast thou made the Lord thy God? both by receiving from him the seale and earnest of his love, the evidence of his Spirit, and by giving thy selfe wholy up unto him, and his service, John 8. 34. and 1 Cor. 6. 20.

Secondly, doth the Lord dwell and inhabite within in thy heart, that is,

1. Is his love there? dost thou love him unfainedly, and desire and long for him above all other things? Psalm. 27. 4. and 42. 1. and 63. 1.

2. Is

2. Is his feare there? doſt thou tremble before him? art thou fearefull to offend him? art thou aſhamed, and affected with bluſhing for thy former ſinnes? art thou ſmit with an awfull reverence of Gods preſence?

3. Is his comfort there? doe the comforts of the Lord refreſh thy heart? If theſe things be in us, then certainely God is within us, and when wee pray, will ſurely liſten unto us.

Thirdly, whether are theſe things perpetually in thee or not? art thou not one of theſe, who remembers the Lord, and the Lords worke onely upon the Lords day? or doſt thou alwayes remember thy God, and ſerve him in a conſtant practiſe of life? Certainely if the Spirit of God witneſſe unto our ſpirits, that we have addicted our ſelves wholy unto God; and that the Lord hath his reſidence in our hearts; and that wee labour to ſerve him in a conſtant courſe of Religion all our lives; we may be then confidently aſſured, that the hope we have to be heard when wee pray, is neither carnall nor hypocriticall, but true and ſpirituall.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Shall not enter into the Kingdom of heaven.

Queſtion. What is the meaning of theſe words?

Anſwer 1. First, by theſe words, he ſhall not enter, many underſtand the ſpirituall Church; as if our Saviour would ſay, they are not my members, although they call upon me, and propheſie in my name: but this followes, verſe 22.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, by theſe words, The Kingdome of heaven, is commonly meant eternall joy; as if our Saviour would ſay, It is not ſo eaſie a thing to enter into eternall bliſſe, as many ſuppoſe it to be, 1 Peter 4. 18.

But this is handled ſufficiently, Math. 6. 33. and 7. 13, 14.

Verſe 22. Verſe 22. Many will ſay to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not propheſied in thy name? and in thy name have caſt out Devils? and in thy name done many wonderfull workes?

Sect. 1. §. 1. In that day.

Illo, is a relative, but it hath here no Antecedent; And therefore it is to bee underſtood, Κατ' ἐξοχὴν of the end of the world, or the laſt day: wherein two things are implied, to wit,

First, that there is a day of judgement, C.

Secondly there is a time when all ſhall be judged. D.

Obſervat. 1. C. First, our Saviour by theſe words, In that day, doth teach us, That there ſhall certainely be a day of judgement, wee have elſe-where amply handled this, and therefore here I inſiſt not upon it; I onely entreat the Reader for the proofe of the propoſition to reade theſe places, Act. 1. 11. and 17. 31. Rom. 2. 16. and 2 Theſſal. 2. 2.

Queſt. 1. What is the nature of this day?

Anſwer 1. First, therein all things in this world ſhall be diſſolved, 1 Pet. 4. 7. and 2 Pet. 3. 10. 12.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, on that day all ſhall be judged, Mat. 25. But of this in the next propoſition.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, after this day there ſhall be time no longer. Revelat. 6. 10.

D Obſervat. 2. D. Secondly, our Saviour by theſe words, In that day; teacheth us, That there is a time when all perſons, all actions ſhall be judged. Revelat. 20. 12. and 2. Corinth. 5. 10. Rom. 14. 10. 12.

Why will God judge all at the laſt day? Queſtion 2.

First, becauſe otherwiſe (if with reverence I may ſpeake it) injury ſhould be offred unto the godly; for they ſuffer many things, while worldlings ſwell with pleaſure and aboundance, Pſalme 73. 17. Anſwer 1.

Secondly, becauſe otherwayes the Lord ſhould be injurious unto his Law, which is violated, tranſgreſſed, and contemned by the wicked. Anſwer 2.

What is required of us in regard of this day? Queſt. 3.

First, meditate daily and hourely thereof; remember thy laſt end, conſider all men muſt die, and all muſt be judged. Hebr. 9. 27. For this will make thee more carefull of thy actions, when thou remembreſt that one day all will be told thee whatſoever thou haſt done, and thou ſhalt be judged according to that which thou haſt done. Anſwer 1.

Some may object here, oh but this remembrance of the day of judgment, doth grieve, and deject the minde, and affect the heart with nothing but ſighing, and ſadneſſe, and ſorrow. Object.

Though it be thus, yet we muſt not therefore forbeare them editation and remembrance thereof, for it is better to goe into the houſe of mourning then of mirth, Eccleſ. 7. 4. But further, whoſoever is dejected and caſt downe with the remember of rhis day, it is for one of theſe cauſes, namely, either, Anſwer.

1. Becauſe the world is deere unto him; that is, becauſe he is married either unto his pleaſure, or treaſure, or honour, or his owne will and wayes; and theſe he delights in here, and whether he ſhall have ſuch delights in the other world or not, he knowes not; and therefore the remembrance of leaving this to goe unto that, makes him afflict himſelfe: Or,

2. Becauſe his ſinnes amaze him; and for his ſinnes his heart preſageth terrible things: Or,

3. Becauſe he is not prepared for that day; not having yet entred into a covenant with God, not being yet reconciled unto God; not being ſealed by the Spirit of God unto ſalvation.

Certainely there is nothing ſo
- Sure, as death, or that we muſt die.
- Unſure, as when, or how quickly we muſt die.
- Neceſſary, as the meditation of death, and what will become of us when we die.

Secondly, we muſt prepare our ſelves ſo for this day, that it may be a day of refreſhing unto us. Anſwer 2.

How may wee know whether it will be well with us or no at that day? Queſtion 4.

Surely it ſhall goe well with the righteous; and therefore let us examine our ſelves by theſe ſignes, whether we be righteous men or not, to wit, Anſwer.

First, are all thy ſinnes pardoned, and blotted out in Chriſt? art thou waſhed cleane in the blood of the Lambe? Pſalme 32. 1. Rev. 7. 14.

Secondly, hath the Spirit of God taught thee to call God Father? art thou by the Spirit aſſured that thou art a child of God by adoption? Rom. 8. 15. Galath. 4. 6.

Thirdly, art thou cloathed with the garments of Chriſts righteouſneſſe? and doſt thou ſhow forth the fruits of holineſſe in thy life and converſation, 1 Cor. 6. 10. Rev. 19. 8.

Certainely,

Certainely, to him who is assured by the evidence of the Spirit of his remission, adoption, and justification in Christ, and of his sanctification by the Holy-Ghost; the last day will be a day of refreshing, and unspeakeable consolation.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Have we not prophecied in thy name.

Two things are here observable, to wit,

First, that wicked men may prophecy in the name of Christ? E.

Secondly, that those who prophecy in the name of Christ, and are false Apostles, are the worst of all. F.

E. First, in these words, we have prophecied in thy name, our Saviour showes, That wicked men may prophecie in the name of Christ; or, that the onely profession of the name of Christ is not sufficient unto salvation. 1 Cor. 9. 27. And hence it is that wicked men who will not be reformed are forbidden to take the word of God in their mouthes, Psalme 50. 16.

Quest. 1. How doth it appeare that a man may both professe, and preach Christ, and yet not be saved?

Answer 1. First, this appeares Ab origine, from the originall, ground, or cause thereof; For it may proceed,

1. From covetousnesse, that they may be provided for, and maintained: Or,

2. From vaine glory, that they may be praised, and applauded: Or,

3. From hypocriticall pride, that they may reprehend and blame others.

Answer. 2. Secondly, this is evident, Ab effectu; from the effects, because such an one by his preaching and profession, doth often amend, reclame, and reforme others, but not himselfe, Psalme 50. 16. and 1 Cor. 9. 27.

F. Secondly, Christ by these words, Wee have prophecied in thy name, doth teach us, That those who prophecie in the name of Christ, and are but false Apostles, are the worst of all; because they deceive unstable soules under Christs name: Or, they deceive the most dangerously, who doe it Quest. 2. under a pretence of Religion; as Colos 2. 18. 23.

Answer. Why are they the worst who under a colour of Religion deceive others?

Because such deceive the good; or those who are well minded, and judge according to the outward appearance, Math. 24. 24. and 2 Cor. 11. 13. If Satan should show himselfe in his colours when he tempts, the very conscience of man would abhorre his temptations, and for feare, flie unto God. And therefore those who goe about to deceive under a colour of Religion, doe most nearely resemble the devill, who transformeth himselfe into an Angell of light when he would deceive.

Section 3. §. 3. In thy name we have cast out devils.

Our Saviour in these words sheweth, That a man may have power over Satan, and yet not be saved, Luke 10. 20. The Apostles say, the devils were subdued unto us, now amongst them was Judas, who I am perswaded cast out devils as well as the rest: yea it is cleare that Simon Magus, and Elymas the sorcerer had power over Satan, as shall be shewed more by and by.

Quest. 1. Why doth God give this power unto such as are indeed the captives of Satan, for such are all who are not the free-men of Jesus Christ?

Answer. 1. First, this power is given for the confirming of others; Signes are for those who beleeve not, 1 Corinth. 14.

Answer 2. Secondly, this power is given for the magnifying of the Gospell which they preach.

Quest. 2. How manifold is this power which false Prophets, or any other wicked men have over Satan?

Answer. There are principally three sorts of men who have power over Satan; or there is a threefold power which men have over him; viz. either, 1. by the permission and concession of God: Or 2. by the contract of the devill: Or 3. by the vertue of meanes or second causes.

First, some have power over Satan, concessione Dei, by the concession and permission of God; And this is twofold, to wit, either annexed, and tyed

1. To the Apostolicall Ordination; and thus Christ promiseth them this power, and performeth his promise unto them; for in the name of Christ they cast out devils. Acts 16.

2. This permission or concession is annexed unto faith; by the meanes of prayer, the word, and striving, struggling, and wrastling against Satan, Ephes. 6. and James 4. and 1 Pet. 5. Now this power is altogether good; and every man ought to labour so diligently, and industriously in the use of these meanes, that the Lord might give this power unto him.

Secondly, some have power over Satan, Contractu Satanæ, by some compact or agreement which is betweene them and the devill; thus Witches have power over the devill, by some contract either openly, or secretly made betwixt them. Now there are two sorts of these witches, namely good and bad, hurting and helping witches, as they usually are tearmed by the vulgar sort; but indeed they are both bad; because they use the helpe of the devill, to the disgrace and dishonour of God, as though he were not able to helpe them. Now indeed neither the hurting nor helping witch hath power over Satan, but onely seemeth to have: for while they seeme to cast him out of others, he doth possesse them themselves.

Thirdly, some seeme to have power over Satan, Ex vi & usu Mediorum, by vertue of some second causes, and the use of some meanes; thus Inchanters, and Conjurers, have power over Satan. Augustine telleth us (k) that Porphyrius would boast, that the Magicians could affright the devil, and make him tremble and quake like an Aspen leafe. But these are but trifles, for he according to his wonted subtlety, doth faine himselfe timerous and cowardly, that hee may the easier overcome and prevaile against those who seeme audacious and bold.

(k) August. Civit. Dei 10. 11.

Sect. 4. §. 4. In thy name we have done many wonderfull workes.

Christ our blessed Saviour would by these words have us to know, that the faith of Miracles doth not make (nor assure) a man to be the child of God, neither doth it alwayes prove, or argue true Religion or sound doctrine; This appeares by the example of Jannes and Jambres; and also by these

these places, Math. 24. 24. and 2 Thes. 2. 9, &c. And therefore God admoniſheth his people not to be ſeduced, although ſome ſhould worke miracles for the confirming of their falſe, ſuperſtitious, and Idolatrous doctrine, Deuter. 13. 1. 2, &c.

Queſt. 1. Why doth the Lord permit and ſuffer wicked men to worke miracles?

Anſwer. 1. First, God ſuffereth it, to prove his children, whether they be ſo ſettled in the truth, that nothing can remove them.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, God ſometimes permits it, in judgement unto others; becauſe they will not beleeve nor obey the truth.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, God ſuffers it, that he may knit us the more cloſe unto his word; for when we ſee that Prophecies, and Miracles, and all other things may deceive us, it will make us more carefull to adhere and ſticke cloſe to the Scriptures, as the onely ſure, true, and perfect rule of truth.

Queſtion 2. Who erre here?

Anſwer 1. First, the Papiſts who bragge and boaſt of Miracles; but of this ſomething hath formerly beene ſaid.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, thoſe who hope they are the children of God, for leſſe cauſes then the working of Miracles: There are many who upon very ſlender grounds, perſwade themſelves, that they belong unto God, as for example,

1. Some ſay, I have lived thus long, and yet I was never brought into any poverty or want: And therefore without doubt, I am precious in the Lords eye ſight.

2. Some ſay, my riches encreaſe daily, I proſper in whatſoever I take in hand; and therefore I perſwade my ſelfe, that I am one of Gods beloved ones.

3. Some ſay, I languiſhed in ſuch or ſuch a ſickneſſe or diſeaſe, from which there was ſo ſmall hope of recovery, that the learned Phyſicians had given me over; and yet contrary to all hope, and beyond all ſtrength of nature, the Lord raiſed me up againe to my perfect health and ſtrength; And therfore this his gracious dealing with me, doth aſſure me that I am one of thoſe whom he hath promiſed never to forſake, faile, or leave.

4. Some ſay, I eſcaped ſuch or ſuch a danger which was extraordinary, and almoſt miraculous; may I not therefore aſſure my ſelfe that I am one of Gods children, ſeeing he was ſo ready to helpe and protect me in the time of need?

Thus many leane upon the ſtaffe of Egypt, & truſt to ſuch deceivable hopes as will utterly faile them, and fruſtrate their expectation: For many notorious wicked men have bin preſerved from want & poverty; have bin bleſſed with riches and abundance; have beene reſtored unto health, and recovered from ſome extreame ſickneſſe; yea, have beene preſerved and protected from ſome eminent danger; And the Wiſe-man in generall telleth us, that neither love nor hatred is knowne by any externall thing, Eccleſ. 9. 1.

Queſt. 3. By what kind of faith doth wicked men worke Miracles?

Anſwer. There is a threefold kind of faith, namely,

First, a faith which conſiſts of humane opinion, and perſwaſion, whereby thoſe things are beleeved to be no leſſe true which are laid downe in the Hiſtory of the Bible, then are the Hiſtories of Livie, Suetonius, and thoſe who writ of new and unknowne Ilands. This kind of faith in many things is common to the Turkes and Jewes: And therefore by this faith falſe Prophets doe not worke Miracles.

Secondly, there is a faith, whereby verily, vively & efficaciouſly, we aſſent to the promiſe of the mercy of God, being incited, and ſtirred up by the divine blaſts, and motions of the Spirit of God: This is juſtifying faith, and therefore by this wicked men doe not worke Miracles.

Thirdly, there is a faith which is called miraculous, or the faith of Miracles, by which no change is wrought at all in the party in whom it is, neither is he made one haire better thereby: This faith is a vehement motion and perſwaſion of the divine Spirit whereby a man is incited to worke Miracles, and to begge this power of God, wholy beleeving, that it is Gods will that they ſhould be wrought, and that that which they deſire ſhall be granted. Now thoſe which adhere unto this beleefe, ſometimes obtaine what they deſire (l). And by this kind of faith it is that wicked men, and falſe Prophets worke Miracles.

Verſe 23. And then will I profeſſe unto them, I never knew you: Depart from me yee that worke iniquity, I never knew you. Verſe 23.

Where we muſt obſerve that Chriſt ſaith not, Non noſco vos nunc, I know you not now, to wit, when your hypocriſie is detected and diſcovered; but nunquam novi vos, I never knew you, to wit, not then when you profeſſed the faith, or prophecied, or wrought Miracles in my name. Now Noſſe here doth not ſignifie a bare knowledge, but approbation; I never knew you, that is, I knew you, and tooke notice of you, but I did never approve of you.

Queſtion. 1. How can they worke Miracles, who are unknowne unto God? For uſually and truely we diſtinguiſh of Miracles, that they are either,

First, falſe, as 2 Theſſal. 2. 9. 11. And theſe are but Impoſtures, and deluſions; Or,

Secondly, true; and theſe are wrought by faith. Now doth not Chriſt know theſe, that by faith in him worke Miracles?

Anſwer. We muſt diſtinguiſh of faith in this manner,

In faith there are two acts, to wit,
- First, a certaine aſſent or apprehenſion: this is hiſtorical, a faith which the devill may have, Ja. 2.
- Secondly, an application of the thing beleeved; and this is two-fold, either
  - First, weake, and unſtable as is in the —— Preſumptuous faith; And Temporary faith.
  - Secondly, ſolid, apprehending either
    - Whole Chriſt, or Chriſt in part, which is called Saving faith. Miraculous faith.

Now (as was affirmed and confirmed before) a man may have a Miraculous faith, and yet be unknowne unto Chriſt, but thoſe in whom is wrought this ſaving faith are knowne unto him. Whence We Observat. We may learne, That a man may have some particular good spirituall gifts, and things in him, and yet not be a true faithfull child of God? The Pharisee did many good things, and yet was but an hypocrite: Luke 18. 11, &c. Many workes shew themselves good outwardly, which proceede not from a true roote: as appears, Hebr. 6. 4. 5. and 10. 26. and 2 Pet. 2. 20, &c.

Quest. 4. What good things may be in him who is not truely good in heart, and truely faithfull?

Answer. 1. First, he may lament his sinnes committed, as Cain, and Judas, and Ahab did.

Answer 2. Secondly, he may be true in his words, and promises, though he lose by it.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, he may be charitable to the poore, and plentifull in charitable workes, 1 Cor. 13. 2.

Answer 4. Fourthly, he may professe the truth and joyne himselfe to the society of Gods children; as did Simon Magus, Acts 8. and Saul when he prophecied 1. Samuel.

Answer. 5. Fiftly, he may reverence the word of God, as Herod did, Mark 6. 20. All these things a man may doe, and yet not be a whit benefitted thereby unto salvation, because they may be in an unregenerate man.

Quest. 5. How may we know that we are the children of God?

Answer. Labour for these things which follow; for if they be in us we may be certainly assured of our filiation;

First, let us labour to be truely begotten and borne anew of the holy Spirit, John 3. 5.

Secondly, let us labour to be baptized with fire.

Thirdly, let us labour for internall light, and peace, and that we may be filled with the fulnesse of God, Jerem. 31. 34. Phil. 4. 7. Ephe. 2. 14.

Fourthly, let us consecrate and dedicate our selves wholy up unto the Lord, 1 Corinth. 6. 20. This is done two manner of wayes, namely,

1. Voto, by vow; This many promise to doe, vowing and promising to serve the Lord.

2. Praxi, in performance; And thus wee must principally study, how to serve, and glorifie our God in all things, all our dayes.

Verse 24. 25. Verse 24. 25. Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rocke: And the raine descended, and the flouds came, and the winde blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell not, for it was founded upon a rocke.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Whosoever heareth these sayings, & doth them; Our Saviour not saying barely whosoever heareth, but adding, who so heareth and doth these things; may move these questions, namely,

Quest. 1. How many sort of hearers are there?

Answer 1. First, some separate themselves from phanaticall and erroneous opinions, hearing onely the word of God, and acknowledging it onely to be the good word of truth; thus approving, praising, and admiring of it, and here stopping, contenting themselves with this, that they heare the word, that they can discerne thereof, and that they professe themselves to embrace the doctrine therein contained. These are they whom our Saviour here saith, heare the word, but doe it not.

Answer. 2. Secondly, some heare the word, and yet remaine wicked both in word and deed.

Answer 3. Thirdly, some heare the word, and are thereby perswaded to eschew evill, but not to doe good.

Answer 4. Fourthly, some heare the word, and seeme to obey it, both in word and deed, but doe it in hypocrisie; making faire shewes and pretences before men, but their hearts runnes after their sinnes.

Answer 5. Fiftly, some heare the word, and labour in sincerity of heart to obey it.

Quest. 2. Who is the best, and most blessed hearer?

Answer. He that heareth the word of God, and doth it, for such an one our Saviour pronounceth truly wise.

Quest. 3. How may we know whether we be such blessed hearers or not?

Answer. Wee may easily know that we are hearers and doers by these signes; namely,

First, if we heare the word with joy; as Jeremiah did; Thy words were found, and I did eate them, and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoycing of mine heart, Jerem. 15. 16.

Secondly, if wee doe with the word, as with Physicke sent unto us in our necessity and sicknesse; that is, neither reject it, nor apply it unto others, but unto our selves onely.

Thirdly, if we concoct, and digest all things well which wee heare; labouring to sucke some good juice out of all we heare: It is an excellent signe of a good hearer, to come away from the word, either better, or more learned; either more humbled or more comforted; either taught some lesson which formerly he had not learnt, or more confirmed in some truth which formely hee had heard. Certainely it is a signe of a sound body, to turne all good meat into good blood, moysture, and nourishment.

Fourthly, if wee be reproved and checked by the word, and endure it patiently, not being a whit provoked or incensed thereby, but loving reproofe better then flattery; it is a sure signe of a good hearer; For flesh and blood cannot teach this (it being opposite unto nature) but it is the worke of the blessed Spirit.

Fiftly, if we doe not onely patiently heare reproofe, but also desire corrosives and reprehensions, yea, come unto the word, with a desire that God would lay open and manifest unto us whatsoever in us is displeasing unto him: it is an excellent signe of a good hearer. And therefore if wee desire to be such as build their houses upon the true rocke, let us heare the word of God with joy, not with wearisomenesse; let us apply it unto our selves, not unto others; let us lay up in our hearts and practise in our lives what wee heare in the word; let us love, not hate those who reprove us; yea, let us desire God (when wee come to his house) so to direct the mouth of his servant who from him is to speake unto us, that the word preached, may be as a glasse, wherin we may clearely see all our blemishes, and whatsoever is amisse.

Question 4. How may men gaine by their hearing? or, what is required of those who desire so to heare, that they may reape true benefit thereby?

Answer. 1. First, they must meditate and ruminate seriously of what they reade and heare.

Secondly,

Secondly, they must pray fervently unto God; to give them grace to beleeve, and practise what they reade or heare.

Answer 2.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, they must talke, and conferre about that which they read or heare: because frequent meditation, fervent supplication, and pious communication and conference, causeth the word to take deeper roote, and to bring forth much sweeter fruit in us.

Our Saviour here conjoyning hearing and doing together, would have us know that neither of them are sufficient alone; wee must not heare and refuse to obey, for that is but dead hearing; wee must not obey, and refuse to heare, for that is but blind obedience.

Quest. 5. Why must we both heare, and doe, the word of God?

Answer 1. First, because all spirituall knowledge is to be found in the word, Esa. 8. 20. Colos. 3. 16.

Answer 2. Secondly, because the sweetest comfort, and soundest doctrine, is drawne from the fountaine of the Scriptures; whence it is compared to hony, Ezech. 3. 3. to wine and milke, Esa. 55. 1. 2. yea, it is much sweeter then hony (Psal. 119. 103.) and more precious then gold, Psal. 119. 72. 127.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, the Scripture was written for us, and for our instruction and consolation (Rom. 4. 23. and 15. 4. and 1 Corinth. 10. 11.) and therefore there is great reason that we should be both diligent in hearing, and carefull in the practise thereof.

Answer. 4. Fourthly, it is necessary that we should both heare and obey the word, because it is the best weapon against Satan. God is stronger then Satan, and his word is more powerfull then the devils assaults; as we see. Matth. 4. 7. and Ephes. 6. 17 and 2 Timoth. 3. 16. and Hebr. 1. 3.

Answer. 5. Fiftly, it is requisite that we should heare and doe those things which the word teacheth, because it is the foundation or ground worke of our salvation (Acts 13. 16. and 28. 28.). As appeares thus.

1. The word is the meanes to beget us, James 1. 18. and 1 Pet. 1. 23.

2. The word is the meanes to worke faith in us, Rom. 10. 17.

3. The word doth feed and nourish us as well as beget us; for ex iisdem nutrimur ex quibus generamur, 1 Pet. 2. 2.

4. The word is the sword whereby our spirituall enemies are over-come, Ephes. 6. 13.

5. The word is a light, and a Lanthorne to direct our steps by, Psal. 119. 105.

6. The word is the mighty power of God unto salvation, Rom. 1. 16. and 1 Cor. 1. 18. 21.

Answer 6. Sixtly, we should be carefull to heare and obey the word of God, because so wee shall approve our selves unto our God to be wise men and not fooles; as followes in the next words.

Sect. 2. §. 2. I will liken him to a wise man.

Quest. 1. What is true wisedome?

Answer. True wisedome is to keepe and observe the word and Commandement of God; He that heares my words and doth them, I will liken him (saith Christ) to a wise man; So the Lord saith (by his servant Moses) unto his people, if you will be obedient unto my Lawes, ye shall be the wisest Nation under heaven, Deuter. 4. 6. and Proverb 2. 1. unto the 9. verse, and 4. 1. yea, that obedient hearing is true wisedome is verified by Psalme 32. which is intituled Maschil, or Davids learning, and is indeed a notable Psalme of learning, containing the summe of all Religion; which is by David reduced to these two heads, his Repentance, and his new obedience; And hence it is said, that the feare of the Lord is the beginning of wisedome Psalme 111. 10. and Proverb. 1. 7.

Quest. 2. Why is obedient hearing true wisedome.

Answer 1. First, because it makes us wise, Psalme 119. Part 13. yea, wise unto salvation, Colossians, 3. 16.

Answer 2. Secondly, because it is the All-wise God that gives this wisedome; If any lacke wisedome, let him aske it of God, who giveth to all, Jam. 1. 5. Colos. 3. 16. Prov. 2. 6.

Answer 3. Thirdly, because the whole nature of wisedome is included herein: For the proofe hereof observe, that in wisedome there are these two things required, namely,

1. For a man to be carefull of himselfe. And.

2. For a man to preferre the best, most excellent, and most profitable things: Now hee that heares and obeyes the word of God, hath true care of himselfe, and his estate and condition; and doth give the preheminence to the best things: For what will it profit a man to win the whole world and lose his owne soule?

Quest. 3. How may this wisedome be obtained?

Answer 1. First, Be a foole, that thou maist be made wise, 1 Corinth. 3. 18. 19. Acknowledge that hitherto thou hast beene foolish, preferring vaine and idle things before divine. There are two signes of foolishnesse, to wit,

1. To preferre childish things, as babies, bables, ratles, and the like, before that which farre excels them, as gold, jewels, or possessions of land.

2. To deride and scoffe at those things which are both good in themselves and good in regard of us. Now there are also two sorts of mockers, namely.

First, open and impudent, which with a blacke and diabolicall mouth scoffe at holy things.

Answer 2. Secondly, secret, who say nothing, but inwardly, and in their sleeve laugh at and deride the folly of the Saints, who take so much care to mortifie themselves, and are so strict in the service of God; because they thinke a man may come to heaven without all this stirre, and they are more nice then wise that make such a hard and difficult matter of it.

Secondly, remember that true wisedome comes from above, Jam. 3. 17. and is opposite to the wisedome of the flesh, Rom. 8. 6, &c. and Jam. 3. 15. 17. And therfore is to be learnt in the word by prayer: The word is a Casket wherein this rich treasure of wisedome is locked, and the Lord hath the key thereof, for hee onely maketh men truely and aright to understand the word:

Wherefore

Wherefore wee ſhould bee frequent in the hearing and reading thereof, praying fervently unto God for that eye ſalve whereby wee may bee able to underſtand it.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, having obtained ſpirituall wiſedome place it in thy heart, and affections; that is, delight in it, and prize it above all earthly things, Pſal. 122. 1.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And the raine deſcended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beate upon that houſe.

Queſt. 1. What is meant by this ſtorme here deſcribed?

Anſwer. In generall it ſignifies a future triall; as if our Saviour would ſay, there ſhall be a time when all mens workes ſhall bee tried, and proved, whether they bee good or not. Reade Luke 16. 25. Acts 17. 31. and 1. Corinth. 3. 13. and 2 Cor. 5. 10. Rom. 2. 6. 16. Apoc. 20. 12.

Queſt. 2. Why muſt mens workes bee prooved and tried?

Anſwer. Becauſe as there are ſome wicked, whoſe evill workes are manifeſt; Pſalm. 73. 18. So there are ſome hypocrites, whoſe workes ſeeme outwardly good; And therefore it is neceſſary that they ſhould bee brought to the touchſtone, and fiery tryall, to ſee whether they bee true gold or guilded copper.

Queſt. 3. How may wee proove our ſelves, and our owne eſtates, and workes, that thereby wee may know what wee ſhall bee found to bee when GOD proves us?

Anſwer 1. Firſt, examine thy begetting and birth; whether art thou truely regenerated or not? is there a change wrought in thee? haſt thou felt the panges of the new birth, and beene truely ſorrowfull for thy ſins? a living body hath warmth and heat in it, a dead carkaſſe is cold as lead; and therfore examine whether there be any warmth, and fire of zeale in thee or not? For by theſe three things, a true and totall change, a ſerious & hearty ſorrow, and true heate of zeale; a man may know whether hee be regenerated or not.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, examine thy foundation; whether art thou built upon the rocke CHRIST JESVS, or not? that is, haſt thou a ſure and certaine faith in CHRIST? yea haſt thou CHRIST within in thy ſoule?

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, examine thy comfort; whether haſt thou a houſe, and home, and habitation built upon this ſure foundation or not? A houſe where thou dwelleſt, and workeſt, and reſteſt thy ſelfe; a houſe wherein thou rejoyceſt, and deſireſt to end thy dayes? Doſt thou live with Chriſt? and walke with Chriſt? and delight thy ſelfe in Chriſt? yea ſo rejoyce in the fruition and poſſeſſion of him that thou reſolveſt, Neither life nor death ſhall ſeparate thee from thy beloved Lord? Certainly then thou maiſt be aſſured that when the Lord comes to proove the world, hee will approove of thee.

Queſt. 4. What is here particularly meant by water and flood? where it is ſaid, the water deſcended, and the floods came?

Anſwer 1. Firſt ſometimes they ſignifie comfort and delight: thus David ſaith, he leadeth me beſide the ſtill waters (Pſal. 23. 2.) that is, waters of quietneſſe, peace, & joy; but water doth not ſignifie thus in this place.

Secondly, ſometimes water and floods ſignifie affliction, and perſecution, and danger, and ſickneſſe, and temptations, and allurements unto ſinne: as appeares evidently by theſe places, Pſalm. 18. 16. and 32. 6. and 46. 3 and 69. 14. 15. and 88. 17. and 124. 4. 144. 7. Lament. 3. 54. Ezech. 26. 19. Revel. 12. 15. And thus water and floods are taken in this place; whereby our Saviour would teach us, That afflictions, perſecutions, and trials muſt bee expected by the godly, that they may labour the better to arme themſelves againſt them. Reade Pſalm. 66. 12. &c. and 34. 19. Acts 14 22. and 2 Timoth. 3. 12. Revel. 12. 13. and 1. Pet. 4. 12. Anſwer 2. Obſervat.

Why muſt the godly expect affliction? Queſtion. §.

First, becauſe it is their lot and portion. Hebrew. 12. 9. Anſwer 1.

Secondly, becauſe it is the condition of glory; Rom. 8. 17. If we ſuffer wee ſhall bee glorified, &c. 2 Tim. 2. 12.

Thirdly, becauſe Sathan (the ſworne enemie of all the elect) will labour by theſe meanes to overthrow them, and draw them from God. Sometimes the divel tempts them by proſperity, ſometimes by adverſity, leaving no meanes unſought by which hee hath any hope to prevaile againſt them: And therefore they muſt expect to be thus aſſaulted, and labour manfully to withſtand it. Anſwer 3.

Fourthly, God often by this meanes trieth what is in us, and whether we will acquit our ſelves like men, adhering unto him even in the midſt of danger; Thus God tries Iob, who in his heavie affliction promiſeth not to forſake God though hee kill him. And therefore ſeeing that both Sathan thus tempts, and God tries, wee had need to expect afflictions, and to prepare our ſelves for them. Anſwer 4.

What afflictions muſt we expect? Queſtion 6.

First, ſometimes violent windes; that is, externall power, oppoſition, and perſecution. Anſwer 1.

Secondly, ſometimes floods; that is, the wicked cuſtomes of our dayes and times; and the perſwaſions, and allurements of our ſociety and friends. Anſwer 2.

Thirdly, ſometimes ſhowres; that is internall luſts, and aſſaults, by our carnall affections. Anſwer. 3.

Theſe wee muſt expect, and theſe wee muſt labour carefully to arme our ſelves againſt.

1. We muſt bee watchfull over our internall deſires, and take heede of the luſt of the fleſh, the luſt of the eyes, and the pride of life. 1 Iohn 2. 16. for theſe are ſhrewd ſhowres.

2. Wee muſt take heede of the perſwaſions, and examples of men; For,

Firſt, ſome perſwade unto hereſy, and ſchiſme.

Secondly, ſome perſwade unto iniquitie and ſinne, as drunkenneſſe, adultery, theft, and the like: and that ſometimes by word, ſometimes by example. And theſe ſometimes are ſtrong ſtreames.

3. Wee muſt expect, and prepare againſt perſecutions; for theſe are windes, and ſtormes; whether they be First, open perſecution. Or,

Secondly, hatred, loſſe of goods, or ſome inferiour puniſhment. Or,

Thirdly, ſcoffing and deriding: as Iſmael perſecuted Iſaac.

§. 4. And it fell not. Sect. 4.

We may ſee here the ſecurity of the godly; our Si-viour himselfe saying, that those who heare and doe his words are like a house built upon a rocke, which the winds and stormes of temptations and afflictions cannot overthrow: according to that of the Psalmist, Psal. 15. 5. He that doth these things shall never Psal. 125. 1. bee moved: And againe, They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Sion, which cannot bee removed, but abideth for ever. Psal. 125. 1. Yea the phrase or words here used are worth observing for the further proofe of this: In this 25. verse, the word προσέπεσον is used: in verse. 27. προσέκοψαν; the first signifies properly to fall, the second to cut off: To show how that afflictions,

Fall upon
- The righteous, as the stormes, tempests, and floods fall upon the rocke; who notwithstanding all their fury stands immoveable, and is not cut or broken in peeces by them.
- The wicked, and hypocrites, as the axe fals upon the wood, which is cut in peeces by the weight and sharpnesse thereof, reade. Job 38. 11. Psal. 104. 6. and 46. 1.

§. 5. For it was founded upon a rocke.

Section 5. Quest. 1. Answer. What is the meaning of these words.

The Church of God in Scripture is compared to a house, Citie, & Temple; and therefore the beginning, proceeding, and encreasing of the same is rightly compared to a building. Now in a building there must bee a foundation upon which all may rest, and stay, that is put into that same building: And the foundation must be sure, firme, and immoveable; for otherwise it will faile, and so all others parts of the building wanting their stay, will fall to the ground. Now nothing is so firme sure, and immoveable as a Rocke: and consequently no building so strong as that which is raysed upon a rockie foundation. A house (saith our Saviour in this place) builded upon the sand is easily ruinated, & soon: shaken to pieces; but that which is builded upon a rocke standeth sure, and firme, notwithstanding the furie, and violence of the floods, winds, and tempests: So that by a rocke in this place is meant a sure foundation, that will not faile, nor be moved or shaken, how great a weight soever bee laid upon it: And a man that persists in the observation of those things which he hath learnt from Christ is here meant by the house built upon the rocke.

Quest. 2. Answer. How many things are required in a firme and sure foundation?

Three, namely, first, That it be the first thing in the building.

Secondly, that it beare up all the other parts of the building; And Thirdly, that it be firme and immoveable: For as Christ saith, If the eye that is the light of the body, bee darkenesse, how great is that darkenesse? Matth. 6. 23. So, if that which is to support and beare up all, doe faile, and shrinke, all must needs bee shaken and fall asunder.

Question. 3. Answer. Who is this Rocke, or foundation?

Christ onely is that foundation upon which the spirituall building of the Church is raised; because he only is that beginning whence all spirituall good originally floweth, and commeth; and upon whom all the perswasion of the truth of things revealed stayeth it selfe, as being the Angell of the great Covenant, and that eternall Word, that was with God in the beginning; And upon whom all our hope, confidence, and expectation of any good groundeth it selfe; all the promises of God being in him Yea and Amen. 2 Cor. 1. 20. And in this sense the Apostle S. Paul 1 Cor. 3. 11. saith, Other foundation can no man lay, then that which is laid, even Iesus Christ.

Question 4. Is there no other Foundation of the Church but only CHRIST?

Answer 1. First, in generall, In respect of some particular times, persons, and things, and in some particular and speciall considerations, there are other things that may rightly be named Foundations, both in respect of the spirituall building of the Church; and in respect of the frame and fabrique of vertue, and well-doing raised in this building.

Answer 2. Secondly, the first and principall vertue, namely Faith, upon which all other vertues doe stay themselves, & from which they take the first direction that any vertue can give, is rightly named a foundation.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, in respect of the forme of Christian doctrine, the first principles of heavenly knowledge, are rightly named a foundation. Hebr. 6. 1.

Answer 4. Fourthly, in respect of the confession of the true faith concerning Christ, the first cleare, expresse, and perfect forme of confession that ever was made, concerning the same, may rightly bee named a foundation; And in this sence Peters faith, and confession is by divers of the Fathers named the Churches foundation (Leo, in Anniversf. Assumpt. serm. 2.) But they understand not by the faith and confession of Peter, either the vertue, and quality of faith abiding in his heart and mind, or the outward act of confessing, but the forme of confession made by him when hee said, Thou art the Christ, the Sonne of the Matth. 16. living God: upon which forme, as being the rule of 16. all right believing, the Church of God is builded.

Answer. 5. Fiftly, in respect of the supernaturall knowledge of God in Christ, the first and immediate revelation made to the Apostles from whom all other were to learne, may rightly and justly be named a foundation, upon which the faith of all after-commers is to stay it selfe, and from which in all doubts they must seek resolution. And in this sence Bellarmine saith truly, De pont. Rom. lib. that the Apostles may bee named foundations of the 1. cap. 11. Church, according to that description, in the Re- Revel. 21. 14. velation of Saint Iohn, of the wall of the Citie of God, that had twelve foundation-stones upon which it was raysed, and in them written the names of the Lambes twelve Apostles: And in these respects these things may be called foundations, but the maine & principal foundation of the Church is this rocke Iesus Christ.

Verse 1. Verse 1: When he was come downe from the mountaine, great multitudes followed him.

Observat. Many we heard came unto Christ. Chap. 4. 25. and now we see they will not depart from him: teaching us, that the heart being once truely touched to the quicke followeth Christ willingly: The Sermon was long, yet they stay it out; the sermon was ended, yet they depart not; the preacher descends, but yet they leave him not, but follow after him.

Question 1. Why doe so many follow after Christ?

Answer 1. First, because his fame was spread abroad, & great & excellent things were spoken of him. Matth. 4. 24.

Answer 2. Secondly, because his words were sweet & gracious, able to win, & allure. Luke 11. 27. Matth. 7. 28.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, because many were sicke, and diseased;

And

And therefore because hee healed such, many followed after him. Matth. 4. 24.

Question. 2. Whence is it that the word of Christ is now so frequently despised, and contemned?

Answer 1. First, because it is not esteemed as a thing of great price: and therefore men sleight it. Isa. 53. 1.

Answer. 2. Secondly, because the preachers of the Word are either infamous in themselves, or not famous among men; if their lives bee corrupt, or their persons be contemned, the word they bring must needs bee despised.

Answer 3. Thirdly, because there are few or none sicke among us: wee are not sensible of sinne, or sicknesse, or of our spirituall maladies; And therefore wee despise the Physicke contained in the word. The Scribes and Pharisees were not sensible of their spirituall blindnesse; and therefore they sleight Christ and his doctrine. John. 9. 41. Yea hence it is that,

John 9. 41. 1. Wee doe not heare the Word of God with joy, but with wearinesse; because we feele no want of it. Malach. 1. 13. Neither,

2. Doe wee heare it with carefulnesse; that is, so heare it, that wee may lay up what wee heare carefully in our hearts, and practise it diligently in our lives? Acts. 2. 37. and 8. 6. and 10. 33.

Question. 3. Doe all these who follow Christ, follow him out of true zeale?

Answer 1. First, No; because many fell away: John. 6. and many of his followers afterwards crie, Crucifie him, Crucifie him.

Answer 2. Secondly, Many are called, and but few chosen; and therefore all these were not good, Matth. 20. 16. and 22. 14.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, there are divers sorts of followers, namely,

1. Some follow Christ, onely to be healed, and cured of their maladies.

2. Some follow Christ onely that they may eate of his loaves, or be fed by him.

3. Some follow Christ onely, that they may see and behold his miracles.

4. Some follow Christ onely that they may accuse him; or that they may heare or see something by which they may ensnare and entrappe him. And therefore all that follow Christ, doe not follow him out of true zeale.

Quest. 4. How may we know whether we be zealous hearers of the word or not?

Answer 1. First, by the end of our hearing; whether doe we heare that wee may obey? or for some other base, end by end?

Answer 2. Secondly, by our desire to heare; whether doe we hunger after the word of God? or onely heare it upon the Lords day; for the eschewing of the punishment of the law?

Answer 3. Thirdly, by our joy in hearing; whether doe wee heare the word of God with delight? or with a tedious irkesomnesse, as some doe, who thinke never an houre-glasse in the towne so long, as the Churches is?

Answer 4. Fourthly, by our benefit in hearing; whether doe we gaine knowledge by our hearing? or are wee as ignorant as we were? whether doe wee grow up in grace by our hearing? or are wee as dwarfish, and little, and weake, and childish as ever wee were? Whether are wee transformed and changed by our hearing? or are wee the old men wee were still? Certainly, hee that heares for this end that hee may obey, and desireth to heare the word, and delighteth in hearing the word, and groweth up both in knowledge, and grace by hearing the word, is a zealous hearer. But those who heare it for by respects, and doe neither truely desire to heare nor delight in hearing, nor fructifie by their hearing, are no zealous hearers of the word.

Verse 2. And behold there came a Leper, and worshipped him, saying, Lord if thou wilt, thou canst make me cleane. — Verse 2.

§. 1. And behold there came a Leper. — Sect. 2.

Quest. 1. What, and how many things are observeable in this verse?

Answer. Three, viz.

First, the person, who was a Leper; There came a Leper unto him.

Secondly, the Action; he worshipped him, and called him Lord.

Thirdly, the petition, which is folded up in the forme of a Profession — Thou canst cure mee If thou wilt.

Observat. This verse is an history of a Miracle wrought by CHRIST, not long after his sermon; to teach us,

That the end of Miracles is to confirme the doctrine taught and delivered.

Quest. 2. Is this the onely end of Miracles?

Answer. No; for there are in all three ends of Miracles; namely,

First, to confirme the Doctour, and teacher: Thus Nicodemus acknowledgeth CHRIST to have come from God, because of the great workes hee did. John. 3. 2. To this end reade these places. Iohn. 4. 29. and 6. 2. 14. 30. and 7. 31. and 9. 16. and 10. 38. and 11. 47. and 12. 18. Acts. 2. 22.

Secondly, to confirme the doctrine which is taught; Reade for the proofe of this these places. Exodus 4. 2. 6. Marke. 16. 20. Iohn. 2. 11. 23. and 4. 48. and 20. 30. Acts. 2. 43. and 4. 29. 30. and 6. 7. 8. and 7. 36. and 8. 6. 13.

Quest. 3. Why then are not Miracles wrought in our dayes, if they serve for the confirming both of the Doctour and doctrine?

Answer. Because Miracles are not given to beleevers, but to infidels; 1 Cor. 14. 22. Rom. 15. 19. 20. and 2. Cor. 12. 12.

Thirdly, another end of Miracles is to shew spirituall cures by temporall: Christ heales the sicke, to show that he is the only Physitian of the soule: reade Matth. 11. 5. 6. &c. and compare it with Isa. 35. 5. and 61. 1. &c.

And therefore when we reade this, or any other Miracles of this kinde wrought by Christ and recorded in the Gospell; wee should make this use of it, namely,

1. Acknowledge God in Christ. John 17. 3. and 10. 38. And,

2. Acknowledge the trueth of the Gospell. And,

3. That all the infirmities and maladies of our soules are cured only by Christ.

Quest. 4. What manner of disease or sicknes was the leprosie?

Answer 1. First, it was a most loathsome sicknesse: as appeares thus,

1. Those who were Leprous were to be separated from the society of men. Levit. 13. 46. Num. 5. 2.

2. The Leper must have his cloathes burnt. Levit. 13. 52.

3. If any of the Prieſts become Lepers they muſt bee ſeparated, and not ſuffered to offer ſacrifice, untill they were healed. Leviticus. 22. 4.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, the Leproſie was a contagious and infectious diſeaſe; and hence it was that they muſt bee ſeparated, and their garments burnt, and the houſe, and walls, and ſtones removed. Levitic. 14.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, the Leproſie was an hereditarie diſeaſe; as wee ſee in Gehezi. 2 King 5. 27.

Anſwer 4. Fourthly, it was a diſeaſe ſcarce curable; a diſeaſe onely healed by God (2 King 5. 7.) becauſe it was ſent by him as a puniſhment; as wee ſee in Ioab, 2. Samuel 3. 29. and Miriam, Numb. 12. 10. and Gehezi 2. King 5. 27.

Anſwer. 5. Fiftly, hence ſuch ſtrict charge was given by God, that the Leper ſhould diligently obſerve and doe whatſoever was injoyned him by the Prieſt, or Levite, for curing of his Leproſie. Deuter. 24. 8.

Queſt. 5. What may we obſerve in the Leproſie for our inſtruction?

Anſwer. 1. Firſt, that although it was a corporall diſeaſe, yet it was cured by CHRIST; to teach us, That Chriſt cures the body as well as the ſoule; as we ſee in Peters wives Mother; and in Paul 2 Cor. 1. 8.

Queſt. 6. Why doth Chriſt heale corporall infirmities, and diſeaſes?

Anſwer 1. Firſt, that hee might ſhow himſelfe to bee merciſull in all things, both towards body and ſoule.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, that hee might ſhow himſelfe to bee a Cornucopia unto us, from whom wee might have whatſoever is good either externall or internall. Rom. 8. 32.

Anſwer. 3. Thirdly, that hee might ſhow himſelfe to bee Lord both of body and ſoule.

Anſwer. 2. Secondly, the Leproſie was a diſeaſe ſcarce curable, and yet Chriſt cures it; to teach us, That unto him nothing is impoſſible: Chriſt came in the power of the Father, Iohn 10. 38. And therefore he can heale all our diſeaſes, Pſalme 103. 3. Wherefore none ſhould bee terrified with the greatneſſe of danger, whether Temporall (for God can deliver David from the Beare, and Daniel from the lion, and the three Children from the fire) or Spirituall, for whether our ſinnes bee many, or great, or of long continuance, yet the Lord can take them away, and pardon them. Iſa. 1. 16. Ezech. 18.)

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, wee may obſerve, how the Leproſie is a Type and Figure of ſinne: and that in many reſpects. viz.

1. Of all other diſeaſes Leproſie is conceived to be the greateſt: The falling ſickneſſe, the Palſie, the Convulſion, the Plague, are great evils; but either they are not perpetuall, or not diuturnall, or at leaſt a man is not ſeparated for theſe; but the Leproſie is a cleaving evill, and ſo abominable, that hee who is taken therewith is excluded from the ſociety of men. Thus of all evils, ſinne is to bee eſteemed the worſt, and greateſt. Poverty, impriſonment, ſickneſſe, and death are evils; but yet ſuch evils, that either a man may bee delivered from them, or elſe they may become unto him the end of evils; but ſinne is an evill which endures with us, and at length brings us (without repentance) to eternall miſery. And therfore wee ſhould not ſleight ſinne as the moſt doe, thinking it no great matter; but conceive it to bee ſome great, and infinite thing, yea the very Epitomy of all evills: and conſequently a thing which can never be hated, abhorred, or deteſted enough.

2. The Leproſie is an hereditary evill; a diſeaſe which the child hath from the Father, and which is againe by the childe derived to poſterity. So wee,

Firſt, receive ſinne from out parents. And,

Secondly, contaminate our poſterity by ſinne. And therefore both for our owne, and our iſſues ſake wee ſhould take heed of ſin.

3. The Leproſie is a moſt loathſome diſeaſe, odious both to God and men; for the Leper muſt bee ſeparated from Gods ſanctuary, and mans ſociety; So ſinne is unto God ſo abominable that hee cannot endure either to ſee ſinne, or to heare a ſinner: Iniquitie makes man more odious and deformed in the ſight of God, then any monſter or dead Carkaſſe. Ierem. 5. 25.

4. The ſent and ſmell of a Leprous man is of all other diſeaſes moſt grievous and irkeſome unto the noſtrils of any, becauſe all the humours in ſuch are vitiated and corrupted; thus although by reaſon of our corrupt nature, ſinne ſtinke not thus in our noſtrils; yet certainely of all noiſome ſmels (unto the Lord) it is the worſt. Hence the Lord complaines of the wicked, That their throat is as an open ſepulcher: that is, as from a ſepulcher, wherein lies a dead rotten carkaſſe, iſſueth forth a moſt vile ſtench, and unſavoury, and unwholeſome ſmell, when the grave is open; So from a man whoſe ſoule is dead by reaſon of ſinne proceedeth nothing but loathſome ſents. Pſalm. 5. 9.

5. The Leproſie hath his roote within, but yet doth putrifie and corrupt the body outwardly, making the skinne loathſome both to the eye and noſe: So ſinne is rooted in the heart, but buds forth, and ſhowes it ſelfe in the life and converſation. Rom. 7. 18.

6. The Leproſie growes, creeps upon men, and acquires ſtrength by little and little; So ſinne by little and little encreaſeth both in ſtrength, and number: that is, one ſinne taking roote in us, at length wee become to bee hardned therein; and being once thorowly captivated by one ſinne, wee become ſhortly after ſlaves unto others. And therefore Principiis obſta, ſtrangle ſinne in the birth, and ſtop the courſe thereof at firſt.

7. The Leproſie was contagious, and infectious, Levit. 13. 45. and therefore when the Leper went abroade hee had his mouth covered with a cloath, and when hee ſaw any, he cried, I am unclane, I am unclane; that ſo all men might learne to avoide him. Thus ſinne is infectious. Regis ad exemplum; the ſinne of the Father eaſily corrupts the children; the ſinne of the Maſter his ſervants; the ſinnes of ſuperiours which appeares unto men, is a great ſnare unto inferiours; and therefore every man ſhould labour ſo to ſuppreſſe his ſinnes that they may not bee perceived by others, and ſo infect others; and Magiſtrates ſhould bee carefull to puniſh theſe who like Sodom hide not their ſinnes, but diſcover them to the world. And for theſe properties in the Leproſie, the perſon infected muſt bee careſull to uſe diligently all meanes for the redreſſe and cure thereof.

thereof. Deuter. 24. 8. &c. And so must wee in sinne.

Question. 7. How is Leprosie to bee cured? how is sinne to bee healed?

Answer. For answer to this question, I referre the reader to what hath beene said before. Chapt. 7. Verse 5. Cast out the mote, adding onely a word or two out of this verse. This Leper desiring to bee cured repaires unto Christ, and so is healed; and thus must wee doe; flye unto Christ the sole Physitian of the soule, and then wee shall bee safe. None are cured by Christ but those who come unto him; wherefore hee calleth, and exhorteth men to come, Matth. 11. 28. John 7. 37. And therefore wee should prepare our selves by prayer, meditation, and hearing, and then (with the Leper) come unto the Lord.

Question. 8. How must wee come unto Christ?

Answer 1. First, with a true sense of our Leprosie and sinne; none comes unto Christ (as unto a Physitian) but those who are sicke, and Leprous, and diseased; for the sound need not the Physitian but the sicke. Matth. 9. 12. Wee are selfe-lovers; and therefore wee aske daily Cui bono? and enquire what benefit it will bee unto us? And where wee feele no want, wee have no woe, neither labour for the thing awanting unto us; Wherefore wee must bee sensible of our misery, and of the want of Christ, or else wee shall never (with this Leper) run unto him.

Answer 2. Secondly, wee must come unto Christ with humble, and hearty repentance of our sins.

Answer 3. Thirdly, wee must come with hearty prayer; begging and craving mercy at his hands; and that hee would bee graciously pleased to pardon our sinnes, and heale our sores, and purge our soules.

Answer 4. Fourthly, wee must come unto Christ in faith: For when wee are sensible of our sinnes, and of the want of our Saviour; when wee are sorrowfull for our sinnes, and the lacke of our Saviour, when wee desire to leave and forsake our sinnes, and to embrace our Saviour; when we implore fervently the throne of Majestie to free us from misery, and to make us partakers of mercy; then with boldnesse of confidence wee may come unto Christ; being certainly assured that he will heale us as he did this Leper.

Question 1. Why doth this Leper onely of all the multitude worship Christ?

Answer. Because the rest came to see Christ, or at best to heare him; but hee came to pray unto him: They who would see or heare him, might obtaine their purpose the most conveniently, standing upon their feete: but those who would pray unto Christ must prostrate themselves upon their knees, as this Leper did. Teaching us, that humiliation, yea and that of body, becomes those who pray unto God.

Observat. 1.

Quest. 2. Why doth humiliation and humility become those who pray?

Answer. 1. First, it becomes them in respect of God: The heavens, stars, and Angells are impure in comparison of the Lord: And therfore with how great reverence should wee approach unto so glorious a Majestie. Reade 1 Samuel 6. 22. and Psalme 2. 11. and Isa. 66. 2.

Answer 2. Secondly, humility becomes those who pray, in respect of themselves; GOD unto whom wee pray, is cloathed with Majestie and glory, as with a garment; but what are wee that pray? wee are,

1. Most vile creatures in our selves, and in comparison of our God; being wormes and no men. (a) (a) Iob 25. 6. and Psal. 22. 6.

2. Wee come unto God to buy temporall and spirituall provision, for our bodies and soules; or rather to begge it, for wee have neither money nor money worth. (b) And therefore being such vile, and contemptible creatures in regard of God, and so poore and indigent in our selves, wee cannot come with too great humility and reverence before the Lord. (b) Isa. 55. 1.

3. Wee come unto God, or into his presence, as Malefactors, yea as traitors. (c) And therefore if wee desire to finde favour wee must come humbly: If a rebell coming before the King should show small or no submission and reverence unto the King, all beholders would say, he deserved no mercy or pardon from the King. And therefore if wee either consider God or our selves, wee must needs acknowledge, that humility, and humiliation becomes us when we pray. (c) Daniel 9. 7. &c.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, God looks upon those who pray, marking, and observing, both the heart and body in prayer, and accepting of those who come with humble bodies, and humbled soules: Isa. 57. 15. and Psalme 138. 6. And therefore humiliation and humility becomes us in prayer, if wee desire to bee accepted of God.

Answer 4. Fourthly, Humility helpes us in prayer; For it is a meanes

1. To curbe, and restraine, and keepe backe evill affections, and wandring cogitations, when we pray. Yea,

2. It is a meanes to helpe, and rectify our good affections; to wit, both humiliation, and fervor.

Question. 3. Doth every reverend gesture in prayer please God, or approve us unto him?

Answer 1. First, a man may hypocritically show forth some signes of humility and humiliation in his prayers; an hypocrite in his prayer may lowlily prostrate himselfe before GOD; but neither please God therewith, nor approve himselfe unto God thereby: because he doth it for the praise of men.

Answer 2. Secondly, some in their prayers seeme outwardly humble, but it is merely formall, their prayers being without heate, or life: And therefore God accepts neither of them nor their prayers.

Answer 3. Thirdly, some conjoyne these together; that is, are humble in their bodies, sincere in their soules, and fervent in their supplications; and these are acceptable unto God, and approved by him.

Question 4. What gesture did the Saints (in holy writ) use in their prayers?

Answer 1. First, sometimes they prayed with their garments torne; as David did, 2 Sam. 12. and Hezekiah, Isa. 37. 1. &c.

Answer 2. Secondly, sometimes they prayed being arayed in sack-cloath, sitting in ashes, and earth upon their heads, Ionah. 3. 8. 9.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, sometimes they prayed with their hands ſtretched forth, or lifted up. 1 King. 8. 22. and Exod. 17. 11. and 1 Tim. 2. 8.

Anſwer 4. Fourthly, ſometimes they prayed with faſting, weeping, and proſtration, lying flat upon the ground. Thus did David 2. Samuel 12. 16. and Elias. 1 King 18. 42. and Chriſt. Matthew 26. 39. Luke 17. 16.

Queſt. 5. Why doth this poore Leper invocate Chriſt with ſo great vehemencie, as is here expreſſed?

Anſwer. Becauſe hee is ſenſible of the need hee hath of the helpe of Chriſt: From whence wee may obſerve, Obſervat. 2. That the ſenſe of our want and povertie is the beſt way, and meanes unto humiliation. And therefore let us acknowledge our barrenneſſe and poverty of grace; that wee may bee humbled, and alſo made more fervent in our prayers. Certainly wee ſhall never burne with an ardent deſire after Chriſt, nor truely long for him, ſo long as all goes well with us, and wee have affluence, and peace, and joy in temporall things: And therefore let us ſeriouſly conſider theſe things, namely,

Firſt, the danger wee are in by reaſon of Sathan, who like a roaring Lyon ſeekes whom hee may devoure. 1 Peter. 5. 8. And is alwayes watchfull and never weary.

Secondly, let us conſider our unknowne ſinnes; how many they are, both of thought, word, and deed.

Thirdly, let us take ſome notice of our blindneſſe, and drowſineſſe in the wayes of the Lord.

Fourthly, let us obſerve the nature of the world wherein wee live, how readie it is to alienate and eſtrange our hearts from God.

Fiftly, let us conſider that none can preſerve us from Sathan, or the world, or our ſinnes; or redreſſe that naturall, and innate blindneſſe that is in us, but onely Chriſt: That thus being ſenſible of our lacke of Chriſt, we may crie the more fervently after him.

Sect. 3. §. 3. If thou wilt.

Queſt. 1. Is not all doubting condemned? or doth the Leper ſpeake doubtingly?

Anſwer. 1. Firſt, perhaps it was a doubting mixed with faith; and that in a double regard; namely,

1. In reſpect of the Hypotheſis, becauſe hee had no promiſe that CHRIST would heale him. Calvin ſ.

2. Or in reſpect of the Theſis; hee might doubt of the love of Chriſt towards him; and that one of theſe foure wayes, to wit, either,

Firſt, through infirmity, and weakeneſſe of faith; Or,

Secondly, becauſe hee was conſcious of his owne unworthineſſe, that Chriſt ſhould doe it for him. Or.

Thirdly, by reaſon of the greatneſſe of the worke; Leproſie was in a manner held incurable (as was formerly affirmed) And therefore the nature of the griefe might make him doubt of the cure. Or,

Fourthly, through the greatneſſe of the deſire hee had to bee healed: an earneſt and longing deſire after a thing, doth alwayes bring doubting along with it, and therefore no wonder if the poore Leper doubted through the ſtrong and earneſt deſire he had to bee healed.

Secondly, but he doth not ſeeme to doubt of the thing; as appeares thus, Anſwer 2.

1. The phraſe is uſed in the certaintie both of the
   - Theſis; who knoweth whether hee will repent, and turne, and leave a bleſſing behind him (d) that is, certainely he will, if you doe but rend your hearts and turne unto the Lord, verſe 13. (d) Ioel. 2. 14
   - Hypotheſis; thus Caleb ſaith unto Ioſhua, If ſo be the Lord will bee with me, then I ſhall be able to drive out the Anakims. Ioſhua. 14. 12.

2. Here the Leper doth acknowledge that as it is with God, ſo it is with Chriſt, namely, that his power is governed by his will (if thou wilt thou canſt) but in men it is contrary, for they muſt onely doe thoſe things they can, not what they would.

Why doth not the Leper plainly begge this at Chriſts hands, deſiring him to cure him. Queſt. 2.

Firſt, becauſe there was no neede of it; and that in theſe two regards, to wit, Anſwer. 1.

1. Becauſe his maladie and diſeaſe ſpake for him.

2. Becauſe a faithfull heart is manifeſt and open unto God. Anſwer 2.

Secondly, becauſe hee was modeſt; hee had deſerved nothing at Chriſts hands, and the thing which he deſired was great, wherefore hee doth onely inſinuate what he would have.

Thirdly, becauſe wee ought not peremptorily to begge any temporall thing at the Lords hands; it being ſufficient to profeſſe our faith unto God, and to ſubmit our ſelves unto his will. Daniel. 3. 17. Teaching us, Anſwer. 3.

That wee muſt not peremptorily deſire any gifts from God, but referre our ſelves unto his will: Thus Chriſt teacheth us to doe, when thou prayeſt, ſay, Thy will bee done: and thus he doth himſelfe, Father if it be poſſible, let this cuppaſſe from me, yet not as I will, but as thou wilt, Matth. 26. 39. Obſervat.

Why may we not peremptorily deſire good gifts, and bleſſings from God? Queſtion 3.

Firſt, becauſe it is our duety to preferre the will of God before our owne. Anſwer 1.

Secondly, becauſe God is infinite in wiſdome; he knowes a ſtone from bread; and what may be good for us, and what hurtfull, both for the preſent and the time to come: And therefore there is great reaſon that wee ſhould referre our ſelves to his moſt bleſſed will. Anſwer. 2.

Thirdly, becauſe God is infinite in love and good will towards us, as hee knowes what is good for us, ſo hee is willing to give onely that which is good unto us: as hee knowes better then wee what is good, ſo hee loves us better then wee can love our ſelves, wherefore it is beſt for us to commit and commend our ſelves wholy unto his tuition and care. Anſwer 3.

Fourth, wee ſhould not peremptorily begge any thing at Gods hands, becauſe wee ought to love him better then our ſelves, and it is the office of love to preferre his glory before our good. And therfore wee ſhould deſire nothing further then may ſtand with his glory, bee the thing in our apprehenſion never ſo profitable for our ſelves: For otherwiſe we ſhall bee found to bee lovers of our ſelves more then lovers of God. And therefore wee muſt not begge Anſwer 4.

temporall things, as ſome are wont to doe peremptorily; but modeſtly, and ſubmiſſively; as for example,

1. Some begge riches at Gods hands, never conſidering that they may become poyſon unto them (e).

2. Some pray for honours, never remembring that they are ſlippery places (f).

(f) Pſal. 73. 18.

3. Some deſire freedome from ſome calamity, although perhaps it be a precious balme unto them for the cure of their ſicke and diſeaſed ſoules. Wherefore let us confeſſe and acknowledge, that we know not what is, and may be good for us; and therefore referre our ſelves wholy unto the Lord, to be guided, directed and diſpoſed of by him as he pleaſeth.

Queſtion 4. How muſt we begin our prayers unto God?

Anſwer. With meditation; we muſt ruminate, and contemplate of our eſtates, before we ſupplicate unto the Lord of glory.

Queſt. 5. What muſt we meditate of before we pray?

Anſwer. First, of the will of God. This is the confidence that we have in Chriſt, that if we aske any thing according to his will, he heareth us (g). Before we pray, we ſhould ſeriouſly conſider whether thoſe things we are to beg be agreeable unto the will of God or not; for if they be not, we can then have no hope to be heard at all.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, meditate upon the promiſes which God hath made, to heare thoſe, who live, and pray according to his will revealed in his word.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, meditate upon thy owne diſpoſition, eſtate, and wants; And then thou maiſt pray confidently, otherwiſe thou prayeſt either doubtingly or preſumptuouſly.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Thou canſt make me cleane.

In theſe words the Leper doth expreſſe the ſtrength of his faith.

Queſt. 1. How doth he expreſſe or prove his faith?

Anſwer 1. First, by his comming unto Chriſt, as the onely Phyſician of his grievous diſeaſe.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, by his humility, or worſhipping of Chriſt, either by falling upon his knees (as Saint Marke ſaith) or his face, as ſaith Saint Luke, for this was not onely a civill reverence, but a true religious adoration; becauſe he did not honour him onely as a Prophet, but adore him as a God, as appeares plainely by his prayer unto him.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, by his prayer the Leper doth expreſſe his faith, Oh Lord (ſaith he) if thou wilt thou caſt make me cleane; in which words are laid downe a cleare confeſſion of his faith, truſt, and confidence in Chriſt; For,

1. He cals him Lord, and that not onely as a title of honour, but as belonging unto him as God.

2. He aſcribes divine Omnipotency unto him; that he can doe what he will; yea, he can if he will expell and drive away his Leproſie: where we ſee that he is certainely aſſured of Chriſts divine power, neither doth he doubt of his will; and yet he will not preſume, but refers himſelfe wholy to the will of Chriſt, as if he would ſay, Oh Lord if thou wilt thou canſt, if thou wilt not I preſcribe nothing, but leave it to thy free-will to diſpoſe of.

Queſt. 2. Why did he not ſay, Oh Lord thou canſt, and thou wilt make me cleane?

First, becauſe he had no expreſſe promiſe that he ſhould be heard, or healed of this particular grieſe, faith not aſſuring us of freedome from any particular temporall evill. 445

Anſwer. 1.

Secondly, becauſe he knew that God will have us beare the croſſe that he layeth upon us; therefore he will not preſcribe any thing unto Chriſt. Anſwer 2.

Thirdly, hee will not peremptorily ſay, thou canſt and thou wilt, or poſitively deſire that Chriſt would reduce his power into act, and heale him, becauſe hee was not ignorant, that wee are oftentimes ignorant what may be truly good and profitable for us: Faith dare goe no further, neither preſume any more of God then is expreſſed, revealed, and promiſſed in the word; now from the word the Leper is, Anſwer 3.

1. Certainely aſſured of Gods omnipotency & power, that unto him nothing is impoſſible, yea,

2. Of the good-will and mercy of God towards his children in ſpirituall graces: yea,

3. He doubts not of Chriſts love and mercy towards him in temporall & corporall things; but yet he will not preſume ſo farre, as to preſcribe any thing unto Chriſt, or poſitively to pray for any thing, but ſubmits himſelfe thus wholy unto his will; That he can doe what he will, and he knowes he will doe what may be for his owne glory, and his poore ſervants good.

What is the nature of true faith?

First, not onely to aſſent unto, or to beleeve the promiſes of the Goſpell in generall, but alſo particularly to apply them unto our ſelves. Queſt. 3. Anſwer 1.

Secondly, the nature of true faith may be lively ſeene in this Leper; who, Anſwer 2.

1. Doth acknowledge Chriſt omnipotent, and mercifull: And,

2. Doth deny himſelfe, humble himſelfe unto Chriſt, and acknowledge his uncleanneſſe, and unworthineſſe that Chriſt ſhould glorifie his power and mercy in him: And,

3. By a ſure truſt and confidence doth apply the promiſſes, and power of God unto himſelfe; that as Chriſt can doe all things, ſo he will alſo doe what may be for his glory and the good of his unworthy vaſſaile.

Verſe 4. And Jeſus ſaith unto him, ſee thou tell no man, but goe thy way, ſhew thy ſelfe to the Prieſt, and offer the gift that Moſes commanded, for a teſtimony unto them. Verſe 4.

Clichtoveus (a Papiſt) objects this verſe for humane ſatisfactions, thus; if the Lawes which injoyne ſatisfaction be impious, then why doth Chriſt command this Leper to obſerve them now when he is cleanſed, ſaying, Goe ſhew thy ſelfe unto the Prieſt, and offer the gift that Moſes commanded for a teſtimony unto them: where by ſhewing of himſelfe is meant ſecret confeſſion, and by the oblation is myſtically meant ſatisfaction. Objection.

First, the argument being Allegoricall is of no force; for where doth the Scripture ſay, or intimate, that ſhewing and offering doe ſignifie confeſſion and ſatisfaction? Anſwer 1.

Secondly, if we ſhould grant that this precept were Typicall, yet we would not grant that by this offering were ſignified any ſatisfaction: and that for theſe reaſons, viz. Anſwer 2.

1. Becauſe

1. Because no oblation in the Law of Moses was instituted for a punishment, but for a Type.

2. Because Christ himselfe when hee commanded the cleansed Leper to offer, addes the cause, For a testimony unto them: Maldonate expounds the place thus, See thou tell no man, but shew thy selfe unto the Priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, that they, (to wit, the Priests, Scribes, and Pharisees) who most of all oppose me, may be the first witnesses of my Miracles, that so by their owne testimony, their owne incredulity may be reproved. And therefore we deny that Christ here imposed any punishment upon the Leprous man after he was healed; or any thing in the stead of punishment; or that in this precept there was any Type of punishment (h).

Verse 5. 6. Verse 5. 6. And when Jesus was entred into Capernaum, there came unto him a Centurion, beseeching him, and saying, Lord, my servant lyeth at home sicke of the palsie, grievously tormented.

Section 1. §. 1. And when he was entred into Capernaum.

Christ (who knew all things) knew that Capernaum was a most corrupt place; and yet hee comes thither to abide there for a while.

Quest. 1. Why doth Christ come into corrupt Capernaum?

Answer 1. First, To shew, that although they were wicked, yet hee was prepared to call them unto repentance, or to teach us, That the calling of Christ is Observ. wanting to none, except they be wanting unto themselves.

Quest. 2. How doth this appeare?

Answer 1. First, from these places of Scripture, 2 Chron. 36. 16. Zach. 1. 3. Prov. 1. 24. &c. Math. 23. 37. Rev. 3. 20.

Answer 2. Secondly, from the scope of Christ, which is two-fold,

1. The first scope of our blessed Mediatour is our conversion; and this proceeds from the will of Christ.

2. The second scope of Christ is the confusion of the wicked; and this proceeds from necessity, or their obduration: because they will not be converted. And therfore we must needs acknowledge with the Prophet, that our destruction is from our selfe (i).

(i) Hos. 13.

Object. But it may be objected by some, that they seeke, and pray, and yet are not converted.

Answer 1. First, it may be thou seekest, and prayest fainedly, and hypocritically, Math. 15. 9. Or Answer 2. Secondly, impurely: thou seekest, and prayest, but in the meane time continuest in sinne: Or,

Answer. 3. Thirdly, sluggishly, and negligently; and not fervently, Rom. 12. 12. Jam. 5. 12. For undoubtedly, if we seeke Christ, and pray unto him sincerely, purely, fervently, and perseverantly, he will in his good time convert and heale us.

Answer. 2. Secondly, Christ comes to corrupt Capernaum, to hasten vengeance upon the rebellious; or that all excuse may be taken away from them.

Quest. 3. Are all those happy who enjoy the word of Christ?

Answer 1. First, certainely it is a blessed thing in it selfe to be made partakers of the word: and therefore the Spirit pronounceth, The feete of those blessed who bring the glad tidings of peace, Rom. 10.

Answer 2. Secondly, but it may be unto a people a heavy judgement: For,

1. The word it selfe will condemne those who have enjoyed it, but not rejoyced in it, neither beene obedient unto it, Ezech. 2. 5.

2. The word shall be taken away from those in judgement, who will not obey it: Acts 18. The Apostles shake the dust off their feet and depart; and Acts 19. 9. Paul separates the Disciples and sends them away. And this (from whom the word is taken) becomes thus twise miserable; for

First, they are deprived of the word, which is a treasure more to be prized then all the world.

Secondly, the word being once taken away, all judgements both temporall and spirituall will certainely follow.

3. Those unto whom the word was never preached shall be punished lesse, then those amongst whom it hath beene: Tyre and Sidon shall be more favourably dealt withall then Capernaum, at the day of Judgement; and therefore it is evident, that the word accidentally may be unto a people a heavy judgement.

4. The more grace and favour God hath shewed unto any nation or people, the greater and more heavy shall their condemnation be, if they despise or slight the word. Capernaum was lift up unto heaven, by reason of the mercies and meanes offred unto her; but because she made not such use of them as she ought, she was therefore plunged the more deepe into hell. And thus it is cleare that all are not happy who enjoy the word, but some thereby become much more miserable. Math. 11. 23.

Who are made more miserable by the word? Question 4.

First, those who onely receive it; Capernaum receives the word (Nazareth refuseth it) and the Galathians receive Paul Galath. 4. and yet become enemies unto him. Answer 1.

Secondly, those who heare it, but beleeve it not, Hebr. 4. 2. Answer 2.

Thirdly, those who say unto the Prophets prophesie not: and forbid Ministers to preach. Answer 3.

Fourthly, those who neither are allured by the promises, nor terrified by threatnings of the word of God, 2 Chronic. 36. 16. Answer. 4.

Fiftly, those who are weary of the word, and beginne to loath it, Malach. 1. 13. Certainely, it had beene better for all these not to have enjoyed the word at all. Answer. 5.

How may we know whether we make such good use of the word, that we may be assured it is blessed unto us? Quest. 5.

Examine these things viz.

First, dost thou heare the word of God with contrition and compunction of heart; like those who were pricked in heart, Acts 2. 37. or those who cryed out, What shall wee doe? Luke 3. 11. Answer.

Secondly, dost thou heare the word with joy, as Samaria did? Acts 8. 8.

Thirdly, dost thou grow up, and encrease, both in knowledge, and mortification, and faith, and all graces, by the word? 2 Thes. 1. 3.

Fourthly, dost thou with a full purpose of heart, continue and persevere both in hearing, & obeying of the word of God, without wearinesse or irksomnesse? Certainely these are signes that we are better by the word, and it blessed unto us.

§. 2. There

Sect. 2. §. 2. There came a Centurion unto him.

Quest. 1. What was this Centurion in regard of his quality?

Answer. He was a man of great power; for the better understanding of this, observe these things.

First, a Centurion sometimes was a Captaine over fifty; as 2 King 1. 9.

Secondly, sometimes a Centurion had the governing and leading of 128. men.

Thirdly, the ordinary Centurion was Captaine over 256. men, Alex. ab Al. 350. 6.

Fourthly, the Souldiers every morning went to the Centurions Tent to salute him, Alex. ab Al. 359. 8.

Luke 7. 3. Fiftly, this Centurion was above the Elders of Israel (as appeares by his sending of them to Jesus,) and yet he humbles himselfe to Christ, as followes afterwards, to teach us, that not onely poore and base people, but the greatest Potentates must humble themselves to Christ.

Quest. 2. What was this Centurion by nation?

Answer. He was a Romane, not a Jew; now salvation was of the Jewes, Rom. 3. 2. and 9. 4. But yet wee Ephes. 2. 14. see Christ respects him, to shew that the partition wall was now broken downe; and that God was not onely the God of the Jewes, but of the Gentiles also, Acts 10. 34. and 13. 26. 47. and 22. 21.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Came unto him.

The Centurion came not himselfe unto Christ, but came onely by messengers, Luke 7. 3. that is, by the Elders of the Jewes, who were his Intercessours. Comestor. And hence the Papists urge the necessity and warrantableness of the intercession of the Saints unto Christ for us: Objecting many things. Eliphaz bids Job call upon the Saints.

Objection 1. Job, 5. 1 therefore it is lawfull to doe it.

Answer 1. First, Eliphaz is reproved by God, for not speaking the thing which was right.

Answer 2. Secondly, and I rather thinke that Eliphaz derides in that place, then commands such invocation.

Object. 2. The Angels rejoyce at the conversion of a sinner (Luke 15. 10.) therefore they know what is done

Answer 1. here on earth by us.

First the Angels are ministring Spirits for our good, and not the Saints; wherefore it followes not, the Angels rejoyce at our conversion, therefore the Answer 2. Saints are to be prayed unto.

Secondly, the consequence also is false another way: They know what is done by us, therefore they Objection 3. unto are to be invocated, followes not.

The Saints pray for us; therefore we may pray

Answer 1. unto them.

First, for the Antecedent, I grant that the Saints pray in generall for the accomplishing of the body of Christ, and the gathering together of the Answer 2. Saints.

Secondly, for the Consequent: I say it is false; they pray thus in generall for us, therefore wee in particular, and for particular blessings may pray

Object. 4. unto them, followes not. See before, Math. 6. 9.

The Saints see in the face of God all our wants (Math. 18. 10.) Therefore wee may pray unto them for particular blessings.

Answer. The Antecedent is false; for they see the face of God, and therein all fulnesse of joy; but this is nothing unto the world, or unto the things done therein. 447

Dives in hell prayes unto Abraham, Lu. 16. 23.

First, this is but a Parable, and no reall history. Object. 5. Answer 1.

Secondly, Dives prayes but prevailes not, neither obtaines so much as a drop of cold water; and therefore this is but a poore Argument. Answer 2.

Thirdly, the scope of the Parable is to shew that after death wicked men shall not obtaine the least mercy from God. Answer 3.

Fourthly, the Papists say, that Abraham was in Limbo, not in heaven; and therefore this example will not availe them at all: Dives in hell prayed to Abraham in Limbo Patrum; therefore the children of men on earth may pray to the Saints in heaven; this followes not. Answer 4.

First, of Redemption; and this they affirme belongs unto Christ. Object. 6.

Answer. But they give even this unto Saints: For they have prayers unto God to forgive them their sins, and shew mercy unto them, not Per Christi sanguinem, by the blood of Christ, but Per Thomæ sanguinem, by the blood of Thomas Becket: not per merita Christi, not for the merite of Christ, but per merita Pauli, for the merits of Saint Paul. Answer 1.

Secondly, of Interceſſion; and this they say belongs unto the Saints. Answer 2.

Answer. But Christ is our onely Interceſſour, Rom. 8. 34. Hebr. 7. 25. and 9. 24.

The Centurion here sends Legates, and Interceſſors unto Christ; And therefore we may use the mediation and interceſſion of the Saints unto God. Object. 7.

First the office of Christ was not as yet made manifest unto the world; neither knowne unto the Centurion; this new and living way unto God by Christ (Hebr. 10. 21. 22.) was not as yet clearely published, but now it is, and therefore this example proves nothing. Answer 1.

Secondly the Gentiles did seeme to be without the Covenant, Ephes. 2. 12. and hence the Canaanitish woman did count her selfe but as a dog, who had right onely to the crums that fell from the childrens table, and not to the childrens bread: yea, hence it is probable, that this Centurion sends the Elders of the Jewes unto Christ, and comes not himselfe, because he was a Gentile: but now Christ calls all, both Jewes and Gentiles, to come unto him, Math. 11. 28. And therefore this example will helpe the Papists nothing. Answer 2.

Thirdly, these Elders of the Jewes which the Centurion sent unto Christ, were not Saints, but rebels, and enemies; and therefore hence they may as well conclude, that wee may pray unto the damned in hell to be our interceſſors unto God, as the Saints in heaven. Answer 3.

Fourthly, Non est par ratio, the case is not alike, but in many things different; as is evident thus. Answer 4.

1. The Centurion sends living men unto Christ, the Papists pray unto those who are dead.

2. The Centurion speakes unto them; and he 448 fore them; the Papists pray unto those who are not present with them, but in heaven.

3. The Centurion perceives these Elders heare what hee saith, and are willing to assent unto his request, and to goe unto Christ for him: but wee are not sure when we pray unto the Saints, of these things; but may justly doubt whether they heare us alwayes or not? whether our requests bee pleasing unto them or not? and whether they will mediate and intercede unto Christ for us or not? for all these will be hard to prove.

4. The Centurion (as was said before) was a man of greater dignity then these Elders of the Jewes; and therefore hee commands them to goe unto Christ in his behalfe, and not entreats them; but the Papists dare not command, but only pray the Saints to mediate for them. And therefore from this place the Papists can prove nothing.

Answer. 5. Fifthly, this history, and Popish invocation of Saints agree and suite in some things, namely,

1. The Centurion sends rebellious and wicked Jewes unto Christ; and so doe the Papists, when they pray unto some whose soules perchance are in hell.

2. The Centurion gaines nothing by their intercession. Non propter personam Sacerdotum, sed fidem ipsius (k) Christ condescended unto the request of the Centurion, not for the Jewish Elders sake, but for his faiths sake. So Christ heares the prayers of the faithfull when they pray for themselves, but not the prayers of the Saints for unbelievers.

(k) Chrysost. imperf. sup.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Beseeching him.

Question 1. Why doth this Centurion come so humbly unto Christ, seeing hee was so great a man, and in so high place? Naaman the Assyrian would not thus abase himselfe, 2 King. 5.

Answer 1. First, he did this, because he believed in Christ, & faith taught him to be humble; but of this afterwards.

Answer 2. Secondly, because hee had neede of Christ; his servant was sicke, which was an affliction unto him, and therefore hee comes thus humbly unto Christ, Teaching us, Observ. That affliction leades us unto God; or makes us come humbly unto him, Reade these examples. Numbers, 21. 5. 6. 7. and 1 Samuel. 7. 7. and 13. 9.

Quest. 2. How doth it appeare that affliction drawes us in humility unto God?

Answer. 1. First, because in prosperity wee are proud, puffed up, and selfe willed. Sic volo, sic jubeo. But affliction puls us downe, as we see in Reboboam. 2 Chron. 12. 1. unto the 7. verse, and in Ieroboam. 1 King. 13 4. 6. and in Nabuchadnezzar. Daniel. 4. 27. 34.

Answer 2. Secondly, because in prosperity the conscience is hard, and bolted and fast locked against God; but affliction doth soften and unlocke it; as wee see in Iosephs brethren. Genes. 42. 21. and in David toward Shimei. 2 Samuel. 16. 10.

Answer 3. Thirdly, when a man is once wounded, hee is moved to seeke for a Surgeon; when a man is afflicted then hee seekes unto him who hath smitten him for redresse, as we see Psal. 107. 17. 18. 19. & in David, Psal 30. 6. &c. and in Manasses. 2 Chron. 33. 12.

Quest. 3. What are the benefits we reape by affliction?

Answer 1. First, it opens the eyes; in prosperity wee thinke wee are just, and good (Luke 18. 11. and Isa. 65. 5.) But in adversity wee acknowledge our sinnes, and our selves justly punished for our sinnes. Micah. 7. 9. and Eccles. 7. 5. and wee have examples hereof in Cain, Genes. 4. 13. and Ahimelech. Iudg. 1. 7.

Answer 2. Secondly, it mollifies and softens the heart, making it tender; as we see in Esau who weepes for the punishment, Genes. 27. 34. and in David who laments for his sin. 2 Sam. 12. and Psal. 22. and 32.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, it rectifies the life, Read Psalm. 119. 67. 71. and 2 Chron. 33. 14. 16. in which places we shall see that both David and Manasses were made better by affliction.

Answer 4. Fourthly, it makes the blessings, and gifts of God sweet unto us: for as it is a miserable thing to have been happy; so it is a happy thing to have been miserable: health is never so good, as after sickenesse, nor prosperity as after adversity.

Section 5. §. 5. My servant lyeth at home.

Quest. 1. What is here meant by lyeth?

Answer. To lye, signifieth not to be unable to rise; but to be neere unto death.

Quest. 2. What is here meant by home?

Answer. By home hee meanes his owne house; shewing therby, that he had not put him out of dores, but had kept him as well in his sickenesse when he was unprofitable, yea a burthen unto him, as in his health, when he was advantagious for him. From whence we may learne, Observat. That those servants who are sicke are not to bee forsaken in their sickenesse by their Masters: or, sicke servants must not be turned out of dores.

Question 3. Why must masters keepe their servants when they are sicke?

Answer 1. First, because it is a worke of Religion: to visite the sicke is a religious worke. Matth. 25. 37. therfore much more to relieve and care for those who are sicke.

Answer 2. Secondly, because Christians ought to bee φιλόστοργοι, full of affection, and compassion. Christ weepes for Lazarus, John 11. and for Ierusalem. Luke, 19. 41. Paul weepes for Epaphroditus. Philip. 2. 27. and would have us to bee tender over one another, as members of the same body. Rom. 12. 14.

Answer. 3. Thirdly, because otherwise wee should be worse than the heathens or infidels: for although they know not what religion is, yet they know what honestie is, and therefore as a dishonest action, will not forsake their servants when they are sicke, as we see in this Centurion.

Question 4. Whence comes it that some are so hard hearted as to exclude, & extrude their servants in their sickes?

Answer 1. First, it proceeds from this, that we respect our owne proper profit, and not brotherly love: this Centurion doth not thus, but speedily sends the Elders of the Jewes unto Christ humbly beseeching him to cure his servant.

Answer 2. Secondly, it springs from hence, that we doe not remember that we have a Master in heaven. Ephes. 6. 9. Coloss. 4. 1. For if he should extrude us out of his presence when wee are disobedient or unprofitable servants, what would become of us? yea how miserable should we be?

Sect. 6. §. 6. Sicke of the Palsie.

These sicknesses which ever and anone are healed by our Saviour, are types and figures of the diseases & maladies of the soule: from whence we may observe,

Observat. That our soules are sicke of the palsie, untill they be healed by Christ.

What

Queſt. 1. What is the nature of this griefe and maladie?

Anſwer. 1. First, the diſeaſe is in the nerves, and doth ſo ſtop all the chinkes, and pores, that the animall ſpirits cannot penetrate [Thus when the heart is ſtopped and ſhut up, grace, and the ſpirit of life cannot enter. Chriſt knocks at the dore of the heart. Revel. 3. 20. but the hard heart will not open. Pſal. 95. 8. and Rom. 2. 5.] Now hence from the ſtopping of the pores proceeds theſe things, viz.

1. Inſenſibility; for ſenſe is taken away from the nerves, except only when there is ſome heate commixt with them, and then the palſie is painefull: ſo naturally we are inſenſible, and paſt feeling (l) except only then when the conſcience is warmed with the ſight, and ſenſe of ſinne, and then we become deſperate like Cain and Iudas.

(l) Epheſ. 4. 18.

2. By the ſtopping of the chinkes and pores of the nerves, ſo that the animall ſpirits cannot pierce into the ſinewes, is taken away motion. For,

First, when ſenſe is taken away, there is a numneſſe; And,

Secondly, when ſenſe and motion are taken away, then comes the palſie and ſhaking of the hand or heade. Thus it is with us, for naturally,

1. All power of doing good, is taken away, from us. And

2. All motion, that is, we have naturally no power to move our ſelves unto good, or to remove evill from us.

3. Thoſe who are ſorely take with the palſie, ſeeme to be very well ſo long as they lye quiet; but if they once endeavour to walke, or worke, then they either fall, or feele their impotency, & inability to doe that which they deſire. Thus is it with us, ſo long as we lye quiet in the bed of ſin, we are well enough, and happy enough, thinking that we lacke nothing, but are rich, abounding with all things: but if once wee deſire and endeavor to lay hold upon Chriſt, and to worke out our ſalvation, wee ſhall finde that of our ſelves wee are not able to ſpeake a good word, or thinke a good thought, or doe any good deed. Revel. 3. 17.

4. Thoſe who are taken with the palſie, may dreame that they are well, and can walke, and worke, but when they awake there is no ſuch thing: So men lulled aſleepe with carnall ſecurity perſwade themſelves, that they are in an eſtate of ſalvation, but when their conſcience is awakened they finde it otherwiſe. Thus much for the place of this diſeaſe.

Anſwer 2. Secondly, the cauſe of the palſie is a thicke, and clammy fleame which cannot bee purged out: So a viſcous perverſeneſſe and obſtinacie cannot eaſily be expelled, neither loves to be diſturbed, or removed. Acts 19. 9. Hebr. 3. 13. ſtiffe necks hardly bend to the yoake of obedience, Acts 17. 31. and hard hearts will not eaſily relent. Marke 16. 14. but eaſily become rebellious and gainſaying. Jerem. 44. 16.

Anſwer 3. Thirdly, the palſie doth coole all the blood, and the very arteries, and ſinewes wherein the ſpirit of life mixed with blood doth runne: and ſo mortifies them by little and little. So ſinne hath killed all the grace that was in us in our firſt creation, and mortified all our zeale, in ſo much as now wee are but rotten and corrupt carkaſſes, reprobate unto every good worke.

Anſwer 4. Fourthly, we may conſider of the place or part affected with the palſie, which is either,

1. Sometimes one ſide, or one member called the dead palſie; which if it have ſo thorowly ſeazed upon or ſetled and taken roote in that part, that it cannot be removed, at length it killeth the whole body. So one raigning and remaining ſinne is ſuffi ient to bring both body and ſoule to eternall perdition and deſtruction.

2. Sometimes the palſie goes from one ſide to the other, and from thence to the head: So our naturall corruption leades us from one ſinne and degree of ſinne unto another, untill at length it bring us unto finall impenitencie.

3. Although this tough & clammy flegme which is the cauſe of the palſie, ſettle more in one place then in another, yet is it ſpread & diſperſed through all the body: ſo there is a generall corruption in our whole nature, which ſhowes it ſelfe more particularly in ſome ſinne then in other.

4. There is a kind of palſie called σκλοτηρὸν, that drawes the ſinewes of the legs together, and makes lame. And this I conceive was the cauſe of his lameneſſe whom wee reade of Acts 3. So ſinne makes us lame and unable to walke in the wayes of God, and to run the race that is ſet before us.

Anſwer 5. Fiftly, we may conſider the cure of the Palſie; and therein theſe things, to wit,

1. The cure of this diſeaſe is hindered, and the diſeaſe it ſelfe made worſe by the aire, if it be either cold, moiſt, thicke, or cloudy: but is helped by the aire, which is warme, drie, pure, and cleare; So ſin is cured by theſe meanes, viz,

First, by a warme and hot zeale againſt ſinne, and for Gods glory. And,

Secondly, by labour, induſtry, and endeavour, and not by eaſe, and idleneſſe. See before Matth. 7. 5. And Thirdly, by purity, and ſanctity in our lives and converſations. And,

Fourthly, by the comforts and conſolations of the bleſſed Spirit. And therefore, let us labour for the fire of true zeale, ſtriving againſt all ſin, and endeavouring after all grace, fervently and frequently, and then we may expect the internall joy of the holy Ghoſt in our ſoules.

2. The neglect of diet doth diſplay, and cauſe this diſeaſe to ſpread abroad it ſelfe, even unto the benumming of the parte: So to be negligent in avoiding the occaſions of ſinne, to be inconſiderate in our actions and to bee voide of care and circumſpection in our lives and converſations, doth at length bring us to inſenſibility in ſinne. Epheſ. 5. 16. And therefore we muſt be warie, circumſpect, and prudent in all our actions, examining what is good and what is evill, what is helpfull, and what is hurtfull for us, and carefully avoid both ſin & the occaſions of iniquity.

3. The palſie generally, and every kinde thereof is very difficult to bee cured at any time, but if it bee once ſetled, perfected, or the nerves perfectly cloſed it is incurable. So ſin cannot eaſily be expelled, or overcome at any time; but when it is perfect, and ripe unto harveſt it is not to be removed, except the Lord be the more gracious, plucking us as brands out of the fire: And therefore let us labour to prevent it betimes.

Queſt. 2. What is required of us? or how may we be free from this palſie of ſinne?

First,

450

First, in generall come (as this poore man did) unto Christ, and let us not remaine any longer buried (as it were) in our flesh.

Answer. 1.

Answer 2. Secondly, let us come into the aire, that is,

1. Into the warme aire.
2. Into the drie aire.
3. Into the pure aire.
4. Into the cleere aire.

That the Spirit may { Renew us. Strengthen us. Leade us into al purity. Comfort us.

Quest. 3. How may wee know whether we bee yet sicke of the palsie of sin, or cured of it?

Answer. 1. First, wee may know and bee assured that wee yet languish of this disease by these signes following, viz.

1. If we be so pervers in our will (Non persuadebis etiamsi persuaseris:) that wee will not cease from sin although the Lord dissuade us by unanswerable arguments.

2. If we be so hard in our hearts, that we are moved with nothing, changed in nothing.

3. If our hearts be so benummed, and senseless, that we heare the word of God, and all wholesome counsell, as in a dreame or darke speaking.

4. If we be cold in zeale, either against sin, or for God. These are certaine signes of an abiding, and cleaving palsie.

Answer 2. Secondly, wee may be confidently perswaded that we are cured of our palsie by these signes, namely,

1. If our numnesse be changed into sensiblenesse, that we begin to have a feeling of our estates.

2. If our motion returne: that we can in some sort walk in the waies of God, & work out our salvation.

3. If we can move vigorously, like that recovered man, who skipped, and leaped, and praysed God (m) if we can run with patience, cheerefulnesse, & strength, the race that is set before us: rejoycing in the service and worke of the Lord, above all the wayes of wickednesse (n). And thus by the sense of our sins, and estates, and by our repentance, and new life, and true obedience, we may know that by Christ we are healed of our palsie.

(n) Isa. 58. 13. & Psal. 4. 7.

Verse 7. Verse. 7. And Iesus saith unto him, I will come, and heale him.

Sect. 1. §. 1. And Iesus saith unto him.

Wee may here see Christs facility, who doth not deny to come, neither deferre it, who neither saith, I will not come, nor I will come to morrow, but answers, and assents presently to their desires. Teaching us, Observat. That God is alwayes ready to heare us, when we call upon him.

Question 1. How doth it appeare that God will heare our prayers?

Answer 1. First, most clearely from these places of Scripture, Numb. 12. 4. and 2 Sam. 12. 13. & Psal. 32. 5. & 107. 17. 18 19. Isa. 30. 19. Agge. 1. 12. 13.

Answer 2. Secondly, it appeares thus, God hath made us weak, and unable to help our selves and that for these two causes, namely,

1. That we might depend upon him, and his good providence. Deut. 8. 3. And,

2. That being helped, and relieved by him, wee might glorify & praise his name. Psal. 121. 1. 2. And therfore wee may be certainly assured, that when in our necessity wee call upon God, hee will heare and grant our requests.

Answer 3. Thirdly, the Lord is alwayes ready, and prepared to heare, & to help, he stands at the dore & knocks. Cantic. 5. 2. Revel. 3. 20. And therefore we may be sure that when we knocke at the gate of his mercy, he will heare, and open unto us.

Answer 4. Fourthly, that which God forbids us, he will not doe himselfe, there being a sweet harmony betwixt his precepts, and his practise; But the Lord forbids us to delay to give, when we are presently able to supply the wants, and satisfie the desires of those who sue & seeke unto us; [Say not unto thy neighbour, goe, & come againe to morrow, & I wil give thee, if thou hast it by thee] And therfore certainly the Lord will not put us off with delayes, but will grant our requests. Proverb. 3. 28.

Answer. 5. Fiftly, God hath ordained prayer as the way and meanes of obtaining what wee desire; Call upon me (saith the Lord) in the time of trouble, and I wil heare. Psal. 50. 15. And, aske and yee shall have. And therefore we may easily know, what the reason is that so many are not delivered and freed from some misery wherein they are, or some maladie which lies upon them, namely, because they pray not unto God. Yee have not, because yee aske not. James 4. 2. Matth. 7. 7.

Question. 2. Doth God heare all suters? and if not, then whom doth he heare?

Answer 1. First, God heares not the prayers of wicked men. Prov. 15. 8. 29. Iohn 9. 31. Psal. 18. 41. and 66 18. and. Isa. 1. 15. and Ierem. 11. 11. and 14. 12. Ezech. 8. 18. And therfore if we desire that we may be heard, we must lay aside al impietie & ungodlinesse whatsoever.

Answer. 2. Secondly, God will not heare the prayers of hypocrites. Matth. 15. 9. Ezech. 33. 31. And therfore we must put off the cloake of hypocrisie, and cloath our selves with the garments of sincerity, if we desire to be heard.

Answer 3. Thirdly, God heares the righteous. Psal. 6. 8. and 145. 18. &c. & 1 King. 13. 6. And therfore if we desire that the requests which wee offer up unto God may bee heard and granted, wee must labour to bee made holy and righteous.

Quest. 3. Doth God heare all prayers, and if not, then what prayers doth he heare?

Answer. He heares only godly prayers, & such as are powred forth according to his will. 1 Iohn 5. 14.

Quest. 4. How must we pray?

Answer. Pray according to these three rules, to wit,

Rule 1. First, in generall pray in faith for whatsoever thou desirest. Matth. 21. 22. Iames 1. 5. &c.

Rule 2. Secondly, when thou prayest for spirituall graces pray thus, namely,

1. Beg them in the first place: not as the Poët saith, quærenda pecunia primum, but as our Saviour saith, Seeke first, the Kingdome of heaven, and the righteousnesse thereof. Matth. 6. 33.

2. Beg them earnestly, and ardently, yea with a true and unfaigned cordiall desire, like Esau who sought for a blessing with teares. Genes. 27. 34. And therfore wee should labour to set an edge upon our prayers, and to crie mightily unto God, as Psal. 27. 4. and 42. 1. 2. and 84. 1. 2. 10.

Rule 3. Thirdly, when thou prayest for temporall blessings, then moderate thy requests thus, viz.

1. Rather deprecate, and pray against evils, then desire pleasant things, like Hezekiah who prayed against his enemies (Isa. 37.) and against death. Isa. 38. 2. or Isaak who prayed against Esau. Or, Hannah, who desired that her reproach might bee taken away. 1 Sam. 1. 10.

2. Be

II. Be not desirous of temporall blessings: that is,

First, love not temporall good things too wel, prize them not too highly: neither

Secondly, complain too much of evils, or crosses; that is, neither fear them too much, nor sorrow for them too immoderatly.

III. Confesse, that thou hast deserved greatest evils then lye upon thee; if thou want any good, or necessary blessing, confesse, and acknowledge, that God justly doth with-hold it from thee: if thou praiest against any evil, acknowledg that thou hast not deserved, that it should be removed, or taken away from thee, but that it should cleave unto thee; untill it had consumed thee, Daniel 9.7. &c.

IV. Pray with this reservation: Thy will be done, Matth. 6.11. and 26.39.

Quest. 5. How doth God hear our prayers?

Answ. 1. First, Negatively, Non ad voluntatem, voluptatem; he doth not alwayes hear us according to our desires, because wee often ignorantly desire a Scorpion, instead of fish, Luke 11.11. Sick men, mad men, and children often call, and cry for those things which are hurtfull for them, but parents and friends will rather deny them, then grant to give them, because they know they are hurtfull: And thus our All-wise Father deales with us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, affirmatively, he hears us Ad bonum; that is, in those things which tend both to our good, and his own glory.

Sect. 2. §. 2. I will come.]

Quest. 1. How doth Christ promise, what he doth not perform? How is this true, which he saith, I will come, when it is evident by the consequent verses that he came not to the Centurions house?

Answ. 1. First, Christ came unto him, Non corpore, sed potentia sanandi (Comestor) not in person, but in power, because he healed him, although he came not at him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, he went, untill he was hindred; for he begun to go towards the Centurions house, (as Saint Luke saith) and came neer unto it, not staying untill the Centurion hindred him by another message.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ speaks hereby potentially; that is, I will come to thy house, and come to thy servant, if those desire it: And therefor this promise I will come, is Promissio benevolentiæ, non assertio operis (Carthus.) a promise of good will, not of worke; or of what hee was content to do, not what really hee would do. And thus Christs promise is true, either Potentialiter, or Interpretative, or Conditionaliter, potentially, or intentionally, or conditionally.

Quest. 2. Why doth Christ say I will come?

Answ. 1. First, that hee might shew, that he did not despise the lowest; although he was a servant, yet hee would vouchsafe to go unto him. He refuseth to go with the Ruler, John 4.49. but promiseth to go to this poor servant, although this was not desired of him, as appears by the second message.

Secondly, Christ promiseth to come, although this be not requested, to shew how that he is ready to give us more then wee desire, or pray for: Answ. 2. Hee is able to give us more then we are able to aske, or think, Ephes. 3.20. And we have examples, both of his power and love, in Salomon, giving him wisedom in a greater measure then hee desired, and over and above riches which hee desired not, 1 King. 3.13. As also in David, 2 Sam. 7.18. and 2 King. 3.18.

Why doth God give us more then we desire? Quest. 3.

First, because he loves us more then wee love our selvs. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because hee knows better what we want, then we do our selves. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, because we often want what wee are ashamed to beg; and therfore hee gives it without asking. Answ. 3.

Wherein doth the love, and mercy of God appear towards us? Quest. 4.

First, in that he bears with, and suffer us, with much long suffering, and patience; although we daily, and greatly offend him by our manifold transgressions. Answ. 1.

Secondly, the love of God appears in this, that he greevs for us, as a Father for his children when they take lewd courses. Reade Amos 2.13. Ezekiel 18.31,32, and 33.11. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, Gods infinit love, and mercy shews it selfe towards us, by giving Christ unto us, and for us; all which were more then we begged of him. Answ. 3.

But God often gives not unto his children what they desire; for Paul prayes often, and yet is not heard, 2 Cor. 12.8. Object.

First, if God give us not that individuall, and numericall thing, which wee pray for, yet he wil give us ἀντίλογόν τι, something which may be as profitable for us; and thus hee dealeth with Saint Paul, not taking away the temptation from him, but assisting him so with his grace, that hee was not overcome thereby; which undoubtedly was the greater grace, and more rare blessing. Answ. 1.

Secondly, although God do not give us what wee demand, yet he doth so order, and dispose of all things, that every thing workes for the good of his children, Rom. 8.28. Now it is much better to draw sweet out of bitter, then to take away the bitter thing; much better to make our affliction good, and profitable for us, then to take it away from us. Answ. 2.

Vers. 9. For I am a man under authority, having souldiers under me: and I say to this man, go, and he goeth; and to another, come, and he commeth; and to my servant, do this, and he doth it.

§. 1. For I also am a man under authority.] Sect. 1.

What comparison doth the Centurion make between Christ and himselfe? Quest.

First, hee compares the person of Christ, and himselfe together; and this comparison is Majoris ad minorem: For I am a man, intimating, that Christ was more then a man. He doth not compare himselfe with Christ, as equall, but as inferiour Answ. 1.

452 riour unto him; hee doth not deny that Christ is a man, but acknowledgeth also that he is God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, hee compares the condition of Christ, and his own condition together; and this Comparison is Inferioris & superioris; I am a man under the authority of another; to wit, of the Colonell, Generall, and the Emperour Tiberius: But thou art subject to the power of none, but like God himselfe, art of absolute power.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, hee compares the power of Christ, and himselfe together; and this Comparison is Majoris, and Minoris: I have souldiers (a cruel kind of men) under me, and I say unto one man go, and hee goeth, unto another come, and hee commeth; and to my servant doe this, and hee doth it: And therfore I know that sickneſſe and death, will much more obey thy word; and if thou say to the palsie, depart, it will depart; and to health returne, it will return, o.

o Parens. s. p. 676.

Vers. 10. VERS. 10. When Iesus heard it, hee marvelled, and said to them that followed, verely I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no not in Israel.

Sect. 1. §. 1. I have not found.]

The phraſe here of not finding, doth denote a seeking, from whence two things might be observed, viz.

First, that Christ doth search diligently, and mark all our actions.

Observ. Secondly, that Christ doth expect, and look for faith from us: of the first only in this place, viz.

Quest. That although God be in heaven, yet hee beholds, marks, and observes all our actions.

Quest. 1. How doth this appear?

Answ. 1. First, most clearly from these places of Scripture, Iob 34. 21. Psalme 14. 2. and 33. 13, 14. and Prov. 5. 21. and 15. 3. and Ierem. 32. 19. And Answ. 2. Secondly, because nothing can hinder his sight: here observe, that many things may hinder man from seeing, but nothing can hinder God: as for example.

I. A veil, or covering hinders men from seeing of things; but all things are open unto the eyes of the Lord, and from his sight nothing is covered.

II. Absence of a thing hinders a man from the sight therof; but all things are alwayes present with, and before God, because he is every where.

III. A multiplicitie of objects hinders a man, and that three manner of wayes; namely, either.

First, it hinders his sight: a man that hath many objects to behold, cannot see them all together; but God sees all things at once. Or

Secondly, it hinders his observation; for he who hath many objects to looke upon, can observe nothing diligently, or at least his observation is so much the lesse: but God observes all things that are done at once, as diligently, as if his eye and mind were intent but upon some one particular action. Or

Thirdly, it hinders his remembrance; a man that hath many things to behold, doth easily forget many things, because one thing drives out another: But God forgets nothing at all, having Rowls and Records in heaven, wherein all things are writ that are done on earth.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Tantam, so great faith.] Sect. 2.

Our Saviour seems here to imply, that he had found faith in some Israelites, and although it was much lesse then the Centurions faith, yet he did not reject it: Teaching us,

Observ. That God doth not reject Infants, and those who are weak in faith, Matth. 12. 20. and 19. 14. True it is, that wee ought to be

First, Ardentes zelo, hot through true zeale, as Elias, Christ, and Paul were. And Secondly, Lucentes vita, pure, and immaculate, in our lives and conversations, Mat. 5. 16. Phil. 2. 15. Yea

Thirdly, Fortes constantia, strong, resolute, and perseverant in the practice of Religion, Colos. 1. 25. and 1 Pet. 5. 9. Yet Christ passeth by, and pardoneth many sins in us, and beareth with many infirmities, not rejecting us because we are weak in faith: And therefore tender consciences may here find comfort in a three-fold distresse; to wit.

I. Art thou dejected, and in heavineſſe, because thou hast been a great sinner? then remember, that such were Mary Magdalen, and Zacheus, and the thief, and many Publicans, unto whom Christ shewed mercy: And therfore hee will bee gracious also unto thee, if with them thou dost repent, and beleeve,

II. Art thou dejected, and drenched in tears, because thou art weak in faith; then remember that Christ hath promised, that hee will not break a bruised reed, nor quench the smoking flax.

III. Art thou cast down, because thou art weak in sanctitie, and obedience? then remember that Christ hath promised to give thee life, and light (Ephes. 5. 14.) and to cure all thy infirmities, Psalme 103. 3. And to prune thee, and enable thee to bring forth much fruit, p.

p Iohn 15. 2.

Quest. 1 What doth God require of us unto this comfort?

Answ. 1. First, that we have a good foundation, viz. a sincere heart within.

Answ. 2. Secondly, that wee endeavour, and strive unto perfection, not acquiescing in any degree of grace received, but labouring that we may grow from a weak faith to a strong, from a small faith, to a great.

Quest. 2. How is there a greater faith, and a lesse, or in whom?

Answ. 1. First, sometimes in divers men: thus the time was when Peters faith was greater, and Thomas his faith lesse.

Answ. 2. Secondly, sometimes in the same man, but at divers times faith is greater and lesse: Thus sometimes Paul saw clearly, sometimes but in a dark speaking, 1 Cor. 13. Our faith is more quick sighted at one time, then at another.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, there are divers degrees of faith, as of age: sometimes we are Infants, and weak, sometimes times men of ripe years: Thomas his faith at first was very weak, but afterwards a strong, and comfortable, applicative faith. Reade 2 Cor. 10. 15. and 2 Thessal. 1.3. and Ephes. 1.13.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Fidem, so great faith.]

Observ. Wee see here that it is faith, which the Lord principally looks after, and respects, as also Mat. 9.22. and Marke 25.

Quest. 2. Who here deserve blame, and reproofe?

Answ. 1. First, those who care not for this excellent grace of faith, which Christ so highly esteems, Luke 18.8.

Answ. 2 Secondly, those who presume, and erre concerning the faith: saying, Let us sinne, that grace may abound, Rom. 6.1.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who are careless in examining the truth of their faith, trusting to some false, and deceivable signes.

Quest. 3. What is true faith?

Answ. It is a certain perswasion of the love of God, given unto us from the Holy Ghost, by the word; wherby being changed and renewed into a new creature, wee have Christ dwelling in us, and leading us unto every good worke.

First, faith is a certain perswasion, as appeares Rom. 8.38. Heb. 10.22.

Secondly, it is given, or wrought by the Holy Ghost, as is clear from Rom. 5.5. and Ephes. 1.18.

Thirdly, the Holy Ghost works faith in us by the means, and ministerie of the word, Iohn 17. 10. Rom. 10.17.

Fourthly, the Holy Ghost having by the word of God wrought faith in us, hence we are renewed, and changed into new creatures, Iohn 1.12,13. and 2 Cor. 5. 17.

Fifthly, wee being renewed, and our hearts cleansed, Christ vouchsafeth to dwell in us, as is evident from 2 Cor. 6.16. and 13.5. and Galath. 2. 20. Ephes. 3.17. Revelat. 3.20.

Sixthly, Christ dwelling in us, our faith becomes an active, and operative faith, Gal. 5.6.

Quest. 4. How is true faith known, or discerned, or how may wee know whether our faith be true, or not?

Answ. Let us prove our faith, and measure our selves by the nature of true faith, according to the description before expressed in the former Question.

First, faith is the worke of the Holy Ghost, wrought by the word: And therefore all those who beleeve, follow the conduct of the Spirit, framing their lives according to his will revealed in the word: and not according to the lusts, and desires of the flesh: for the proofe of this observe, p Rom. 8.14.

I. All men are the vessels of God, Esay 52.11. and 1 Thess 4.3. and 2 Tim. 2.20.

II. But there are two things wanting in us; to wit,

First, we have no oyle; we are naturally but empty Lamps. Neither

Secondly, are we able to receive oyle, for the naturall man cannot understand the things that be of God, 1 Cor. 2.14.

III. Therefore against this vacuity, and emptinesse, God hath given a remedy: namely.

First, the word, this is the oyle which enlightens us. And Secondly, the Holy Spirit opens the heart, as he did the heart of Lydia, and makes it capable to receive this oyl, and to understand this enlightning word. And Act. 16. 14.

Thirdly, then infuseth this oyl of grace, and spirituall knowledge into our hearts, Rom. 5.5.

IV. And hence comes the effectuall vocation, when we answer to Gods call. For

First, the word cals us, Rom 10. but we refuse to hear it, Esay 53.1.

Secondly, the Spirit of God opens the heart, enlightens the eyes, and giveth unto the mouth a taste, and relish of the word of God, and heavenly things: but we are ready to relapse, and fall from all these graces, Heb. 6.4, 5, 6.

Thirdly, the Spirit doth imprint, stamp, and set on the seale: so sealing us unto the day of our salvation, q. And being thus sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, we then beleeve, Ephes. 1.13. And thus we see that faith is the worke of the Holy Ghost, and how it is wrought by the word. q 2 Cor. 1. 21,22.

Secondly, faith being once wrought in us by the Spirit, we are then confirmed, rooted, grounded, and established in the faith, Coloss. 1.25. and 2.6.7. Whence proceeds,

I. Internall peace of conscience, Philippians 4.7. And

II. Spirituall joy, and rejoycing, Rom. 5.1. and 14.17. and 1 Pet. 1.8. And

III. Externall profession of Christ, Religion, and of our faith in Christ, 2 Cor. 4.13. and 1 Timoth. 6.12.

Thirdly, faith being wrought, and infused in us, and wee established in faith, then wee are renewed, and sanctified, both in heart and life: for Faith purgeth the heart (Act. 15.9.) and the heart being purged, the life will be pure: wherefore faith is called a holy unction r; because from hence, r 2 Cor. 1. 21.

I. We have victory both over
- Sin, Rom. 6.14. Sin shall no more have dominion over you, because you are under grace. And the
- World, 1 Iohn 5.4. This is the victory that overcommeth the world even your faith. And the Devill, 1 Iohn 2.13. and 1 Pet. 5.9. and Rom. 16. 20. Ephes. 6.16.

II. Hence wee have power of fructifying in good works, and the fruits of obedience, and sanctification, Iohn 15.2.3. and Gal. 5.6. And therefore there is little signe of any faith, wher either sinne raigns, or God is coldly, or remissly served.

Fourthly, faith being wrought in us, & rooted in us, and wee renewed and sanctified thereby, hence we have hope, according to the Apostles prayer. Now the God of hope fill you with all joy, and peace in believing, that you may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost, Rom. 5.13. and 1 Peter 1.5. And hence from this confident hope, and 454 assurance that we have (in God) of eternall life, we hunger, and desire, and long to be dissolved, and to be with Christ, Philip. 1. 23. and 2 Corinth. 5. 2. &c. And therfore let us judge our selvs, and our faith, by these things.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Not in Israel.]

Quest. 1. What is meant here by Israel?

Answ. 1 First, some understand these words figuratively, of the faith of the Gentiles, and Jewes, Hier. s. But that this is not the meaning, will appear by and by.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand this only of the incredulous, and unbeleeving Jewes: but this cannot be the sense of the place; because greater faith in the Centurion, implieth a lesse in the rest: I have found faith (saith Christ implicitly) in Israel, but in none so much as in this Centurion: And therfore by Israel cannot be meant the unbelevers.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some understand these words onely comparatively; as though the Centurions faith were not greater simply, but only comparatively, in regard of some circumstances; to wit,

I. In respect of the person. Plus est idiotam pauca sapere, quam virum multa † It is more for a child to understand a few things, then for a man, many.

† Chrys. imperf. s.

II. In respect of the means, it is more for an illiterate man to understand some few hard, and difficult things, then for a great, and deep learned Scholler to understand many: it is more for a man to be good, in bad and ignorant places, where hee hath neither good examples, exhortations, nor instructions, then in good places; where hee hath many shining lights, and holy means. And therfore, although this Centurions faith in it selfe, were but equall to the faith of many Israelites; yet in regard that he was a Roman, and they Jewes, hee not injoying those meanes which they did, his faith may be said to be greater then theirs. Thus some, I say, expound these words, and indeed this hath a fair glosse, and helpes something; but there is something more in the words, for his faith was greater, Revera; as followes by and by. Now these three Expositors interpret the word Nimis stricte.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, some by Israel so understand every Israelite from the beginning: as if our Saviour would say, I never found, or there never was in any time, in all Israel one of greater faith, then this Centurion, neither Abraham, nor any other. True it is, that this phrase is sometimes thus used, as in Matth. 11. 11. Among them (saith Christ) that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater Prophet then Iohn the Baptist; that is, not any as yet: But yet it is not thus taken in this place, because here our Saviour speaks of the time present onely; that as yet in his preaching and journeying, hee had not found one in Israel of greater faith; except those which follow.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, some understand this of the time, wherein Christ was upon the earth, and of all absolutely in that time; that is, there was none at all, in all Israel of greater faith then this Centurion. As the three former answers expound the words Nimis stricte, so these two latter Nimis late: for wee must neither extend them to all times, nor to all persons of this age, whereof Christ speaks; as though the Centurions faith were greater then Peters, Iohns, or the blessed Virgins: for certainly Maries faith was greater and Peters, for he walked upon the waters: And therfore this is to be understood of the auditors, and hearers of Christ, and not of his family.

How was the faith of the Centurion greater then all Israel. or then the faith of any in Israel, except the family of Christ? Quest. 2.

First, Respectu temporis, in regard of the time, wherein he beleeved, Quia Deitas Christi nondum mundo agnita, (Calvin. s.) Because the Deitie of Christ was not as yet knowne unto the world; but he acknowledged it. Answ. 1.

Secondly, Respectu personæ, in regard of the person beleeving; because he was, Answ. 2.

I. A Heathen, not a Jew.

II. A Souldier, not a Scribe, or Pharisee, or Doctor of the Law.

III. A man who was a stranger from the means of knowledge; for hee was not (that we reade of) a Proselite, or Disciple, or hearer of the Scribes, and Expounders of the Law: And yet hee beleeves.

Thirdly, his faith was greater, Respectu laboris, in regard of the practise of his life, and his private meditations and contemplations: he was a stranger unto the outward means, which were proper unto the Jewes, at contemplatur (Chrysost. s.) but yet hee was no stranger unto internall spirituall, and divine meditations, and contemplations, but therein more frequent then Israel. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, the Centurions faith was greater, Respectu humiliationis, in regard of his humiliation; hee doth thinke himselfe unworthy that Christ should do any thing for him, vers. 8. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, and lastly, his faith was greater, Respectu roboris, in regard of the strength therof, for he doth not seek a signe (as the Jewes elsewhere did) but rests only in the word, Speak but the word, and my servant shall be whole, vers. 8. hee doth not say, Come quickly, as the Ruler did, Iohn 4. 49. but only makes his case known, and so leaves it; Lord (saith he) My servant lyeth at home sick of the Palsie, grievously tormented, vers. 6. Yea, his faith doth exceed the faith of Martha (who scarcely beleeved, Iohn 11. 21. 24.) and of Philip (who knew not the Father, Iohn 14. 8.) and of Thomas Didymus (Iohn 20. 25. who would not beleeve without some ocular evidence) but this our Centurion beleeves in Christ, boldly, confidently, and fully; Speake but the word oh Lord, and it is enough: say but to the Palsie depart, and to health return, and then I know my servant shall bee whole. Answ. 5.

If the Centurions faith were thus great, then why doth he in the beginning send the Elders of the Jews to fetch Christ, as it appeares hee did, Luke 7. 3. where it is said, Hee sent unto Iesus the Elders of the Iewes, beseeching him that hee would come, and heale his servant. Quest. 3.

First, it may be, he staggered in faith, & decubted at Answ. 1.

at first, and afterwards repents him of his weakenesse, and doubting.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but I rather think, that he doubted not at all; but only desired Christ to help him, and to heale his servant; and that the Jews, (without the Centurions knowledge, or injunction) did desire Christ to come.

Quest. 4. Why doth hee not at first forbid Christ to come, if hee were so confident of his power? for it appears that this prohibition was not sent, untill Christ came neer unto the house, Luke 7.6.

Answ. Although hee fully beleeved that Christ was able to heale his servant, yet hee little thought, (or at least was altogether ignorant) that Christ would promise more then he durst aske: he desires that Christ would be mercifull unto his servant; Christ answers that He will come unto him, and heale his servant: now the promise of Christs comming was more then the Centurion desired, or more then he thought himself worthy of: And therfore when he perceives Christs purpose, and hears his promise of comming unto him, then he sends this second message: Lord speake but the word, and my servant shall be healed.

Observ. We may learn from this Centurion, that those who enjoy the lesse outward means, have sometimes the greater faith; those who are more remote from the externall means, are neerest unto God. As wee see in the Wise men, to whom the Nativity of Christ was declared, and not to the Scribes, Mat. 2. And in those Publicans and Harlots, who entred into heaven, when the Pharisees were shut out, Mat. 21.31. &c.

Quest. 5 How can this stand with the alligation of the promises unto the means? Doth not God promise a blessing unto the use of the means: how then can this be true, that often those who are deprived of these means are the best?

Answ. 1. First, we must distinguish between an ordinary, and extraordinary thing; that those who are deprived of the ordinary means of grace, and salvation, should be better then those, who enjoy the meane, is extraordinary; for ordinarily it is otherwise.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we are tied unto the meanes, but God is not; wee must not look for miracles, but use the means; yea, if wee neglect those means, we can expect no blessing, or favour from God at all; but God is left free, and hee can worke without means, as well as with them; and as strongly, powerfully, and perfectly: and would have us to see and acknowledge, that the means are made effectuall only by him.

Quest. 6. How is the want of means supplied?

Answ. 1. First, Ex parte Dei, on Gods part, the lack of the meanes is supplied by internall grace, 2 Corinthians 3.17.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Ex parte nostra, on our part, the want of the meanes, is supplied by contemplation, prayer, and the exercises of piety; as wee may perceive in the Eunuch, and Cornelius.

Quest. 7 Wherein is the Centurion to be imitated by us?

Answ. Wee must imitate him.

First, Contemplande, in contemplation; for that supplyes the lack of the meanes, where they can not be had, as rumination doth nourish the means, wher they are bad. Mary is commended, because she ponders those things in her heart which she heard; and it is not enough to hear, or reade much, except wee seriously meditate of those things, which wee reade and hear.

Secondly, Humiliande, by thinking basely and contemptibly of our selves: here observe two times, viz.

I. In the entrance into the profession of Religion, and then many are lowly, as the Monks, when they first enter into orders, or when they aim at some great future preferment.

II. After they are sealed with the Spirit of promise: now for men to be truly humbled with a sense of their infirmities, and weaknesse, after they are effectually called, and truely assured of their election and calling, is both good and pleasing unto God, t. t Phil. 3. 13. &c.

Thirdly, in the measure, and strength of his faith, wee should learn so confidently to beleeve in God, that wee durst commit our selves unto him wholly, cheerfully, and by and by.

VERS. 11. And I say unto you, that many shall come from the East, and West, and shall sit downe with Abraham, and Isaac, and Iacob in the kingdome of heaven. Vers. 11.

Object. They are said to be but few, Mat. 7.14. and 20 16. and 22.14. Yea, experience shews how few they are, for wee reade but of eight in the old world, in whom the Church was preserved, and yet not all those eight good: wee reade but of one Abraham, Gen. 12.1. And of two in the hoast of Israel, Caleb and Iosua, Numb. 14.30. Therefore how doth our Saviour say, that many shall come unto heaven?

Answ. 1. First they are few comparatively, in regard of those who perish: according to that of the Apostle S John, Wee are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickednesse, 1 John 5.19.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but absolutely they are many: as appears in generall from these places, Gen. 33.16. and 15.5. and Revel. 7.9. And more particularly thus.

I. It were opposite to the glory of God, not to have many to glorifie him in heaven. And

II. It were opposite to the death of Christ, not to have many saved therby. And

III. It were opposite to the ministery of so many millions of Angels, who are made ministring Spirits, Heb. 1. God made all things for his glory: and therfore certainly hee would decree, and ordain many to glorifie him in heaven, where hee is most truly glorified. Christs bloodshed, suffring, and death were of infinit value, and himselfe of infinit price and esteeme with God: and therfore undoubtedly the Lord would appoint many to be ransomed, redeemed and saved by him. The number of the Angels which stand

456 ſtand about the throne of God, is ten thouſand times ten thouſand, and thouſands of thouſands, Rev. 5. 11. And therfore certainly God hath many Saints, for whoſe good theſe hoaſts of Angels are employed; and conſequently, there are many who ſhall come into the Kingdom of heaven.

Sect. 2. §. 2. From the Eaſt and Weſt.]

Queſt. 1. Who are theſe who come from the Eaſt and Weſt?

Anſw. The Gentiles; this is confirmed from Eſa. 49. 6. and Luke 1. 32. Acts 9. 15. and 13. 47. and 22. 21. and 26. 23. &c. Rom. 3. 29. and 9. 22. &c. and Chap. 11.

Queſt. 2. Why ſhall many of the Gentiles bee made partakers of the kingdome of God?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe they hearkned unto God; from whence we may learne, that thoſe who hearken to the word of God ſhall be called: Reade Act. 10. 35. and 13. 26. And therefore we ſhould highly eſteem the hearing of the word of God, it being the means of our vocation, and of the opening of our heart, Act. 16. 14. and of the removall of the vail of ignorance from our eyes, 2 Cor. 3. 16.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the Jews hardning themſelvs, God therfore doth of ſtones raiſe up children unto Abraham, and makes the Gentiles his ſonnes.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And ſhall ſit down.]

Queſt. 1. What is meant here by ſitting?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſometimes ſitting ſignifies Loco manere, to abide in a place, as Marke 14. 34. Sit yee here (that is abide in this place) and watch.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, to ſit, ſometimes ſignifies to bee quiet.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, to ſit, ſometimes ſignifies to poſſeſſe glory: Then ſhall the Sonne of man ſit upon the throne of his glory, Mat. 25. 31.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, to ſit, ſometimes ſignifies to feaſt and banquet, as Matth. 14. 19. Luke 7. 36. and 12. 37. and thus in this place it is taken for our feaſting, and banquetting in heaven, as is plainly expreſſed, Luke 13. 29.

Obſerv. Whence we learn, that Chriſtians are not called unto miſery, but unto mirth and feaſting.

Queſt. 2. What kind of banquet are we called, and invited unto.

There is a three-fold banquet: to wit,

Anſw. Firſt, Symbolicall, in the Church; namely, the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, becauſe the children of God are there made partakers of the body of Chriſt, which is meat indeed, Iohn 6. 51. 55.

Secondly, Spirituall, in this life; this banquet is deſcribed, Prov. 9. 2. &c. and Cantic. 8. 2. Luk. 14. 16. Pſalme 63. 5.

Thirdly, Celeſtiall, hereafter in the kingdome of heaven, Revel. 27. and 7. 17. and 19. 9.

Queſt. 3. What is required of thoſe, who deſire to bee made partakers of this heavenly Banquet?

Anſw. They muſt give themſelvs to frequent meditations, therby labouring to prepare themſelvs for this heavenly Banquet.

Queſt. 4. What muſt wee meditate of?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, remember that there is a period, and end of all men: It is appointed unto all men once to die, Heb. 9. 27. And,

Anſw. 2. Secondly, that we have lived long already; and therefore it is time now to prepare for death. And Anſw. 3. Thirdly, remember how great horror is prepared for thoſe, who are not prepared for death, or who die unprepared.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, meditate daily of the ſudden approach of death; how it comes like the pangs of a woman with child, and a thief in the night, 1 Theſſ. 5. 2, 3.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, meditate continually of thoſe things which are in heaven, that thou may be the more carefull to prepare thy ſelf to enjoy them.

Queſt. 5. What, and how great things are in heaven?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, although what they are we know not particularly: yet this in generall wee know, that they are Optima, the beſt things that ever wee enjoyed, or can wiſh to enjoy, Pſalme 36. 8.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, in heaven wee ſhall enjoy good things and repletionem, to the repleniſhing, and ſatisfying of our ſoules: for there wee ſhall want nothing that wee can wiſh for, Pſalme 22. 26. and 17. 15.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, wee ſhall enjoy the joyes of heaven with joy of heart; nothing ſhall diſturbe our peace, no care ſhall accompany that Crown which there ſhall be ſet upon our heads, neither ſhall any ſorrow afflict our ſoules (Pſalme 16. 11) for there is full, compleat, and perfect joy.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, this joy and felicity ſhall be perpetuall, and eternall, world without end, Pſal. 16. 11. Ezech. 47. 12. Revelat. 22. 2. And therfore let us ſo ſeriouſly meditate of theſe joyes, that we may be carefull ſo to live here, that whenſoever the Lord ſhall take us hence, wee may be ſure to bee made partakers of them.

Queſt. 6. Are the children of God miſerable in this life, and only happy in the life to come?

Anſw. They are bleſſed even in this life, as appears by thoſe many, and great bleſſings here beſtowed upon them, viz.

Firſt, they are endued with knowledge: ſo long as they are naturall, the word is unto them as a ſtrange language, which they cannot underſtand: but when once they are anointed with ſpirituall grace, then the eyes of their underſtanding are opened, and they enabled to ſee, and perceive ſpirituall things.

Secondly, they are endued with ſtrength in ſome meaſure, to perform what they know to be their duty, Pſal. 65. 12. and Ier. 31. 12. and Iohn 7. 37. &c.

Thirdly, hence they have a good conſcience, which doth not accuſe, but excuſe them; for from ſincerity of obedience ariſeth peace of conſcience, Proverb. 15. 15.

Fourthly, even in this life the righteous have internall blaſts [v] that is, not only the motions of the ſpirit, but alſo the joy of the Holy Ghoſt, and ſome ſweet, and comfortable taſte, of the powers and joyes of the world to come.

[v] Cant. 4. 16.

Fifthly, the children of God are moſt happy men men even in this life, by reason of their society with the Saints on earth, and their union and communion with Christ by faith, and the fruition & possession of the Holy Ghost in their souls, who remains and abides with them, to direct, instruct, strengthen, counsell, comfort, and enlighten them, all the dayes of their life.

Quest. 7. Have the Saints no Banquet on earth; are they only invited to feast it in heaven?

Answ. The Saints on earth are frequently invited to a heavenly Banquet: to wit, the Lords Supper; and therefore they should prepare themselves, as unto a Banquet, when they come thither: In this feast observe these things: namely,

First, that the Table, is the Table of God; and therefore called the Lords Table.

Secondly, at that Table Christ serves; who gives food, and dainties to all his welcom guests.

Thirdly, the food he gives, and which wee there eate, is his body.

Fourthly, the guests are the Patriarkes, Prophets, and Apostles; for they all ate the same spirituall meat, and all dranke the same spirituall drinke, 1 Cor. 10.1.2. &c. and Heb. 12.22.

Fifthly, the fruit of this feast is most weighty; For it is either,

I. A seale unto life, and salvation: Or,

II. A testimony against us unto condemnation, 1 Cor. 11. 31. And therfore we had need be carefull so to prepare our selves unto this Holy Table, that we may receive the pledges of love, and seales of life from Christ, and not arguments of our condemnation.

Quest. 8 How must wee come unto this heaveuly Banquet?

Answ. 1. First, in generall come with reverence, in regard of the prefence of God, and Christ there.

Answ. 2. Secondly, come with conscience of thy sins; and that after serious examination of thy selfe, wayes, and actions by the word of God.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, come with a purpose of heart to leave thy sinnes: yea, all sins, and that for ever: And that thou maist be the better enabled hereunto,

1. Labour to hate all sins with a perfect hatred, in regard, both of sin it selfe, and the punishment therof, looking upon it with horrour, hatred, fear, and disdaine.

II. Pray fervently, and heartily unto thy God, that he would enable thee to leave, and forsake al sinnes, and preserve thee from the love of any, so long as thou livest.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, come with assurance of pardon; without faith nothing wedo, is either pleasing unto God, or profitable unto our selves; and therfore if wee come reverently unto the Lords Table, with a sight and sorrow for our sins, and a sincere purpose of heart hereafter to leave, and loath them: wee may build, and rely upon the gracious promises of Christ, who hath assured such of mercy and pardon, Matt. 11.28.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, come with thanksgiving; for that is necessary at a true feast: If we should rise from a feast, or banquet, where wee had abundantly satisfied our appetites, and forget, or neglect to give thankes unto God, wee should be more like beasts then men, more like Pagans then Christians: How much more needfull and requisite, then is it that we should powre forth our soules in thankfulnesse unto God, for that unparalelled mercy, in giving Christ unto death for us. Sect. 4.

§. 4. With Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob.

Quest. 1. Whether were the Patriarkes in heaven, or in Limbo before Christ came?

Answ. 1. They were not in Limbo Patrum.

The Papists to prove the contrary hereunto, that they were, object many things, of which briefly.

Objct. 1. The Prophet David propheſying of Christ, saith, that hee shall lead captivity captive; that is, shall bring the Fathers out of their prison, wherin they were detained, and lead them unto heaven, Psalme 68.18.

Answ. 1. First, this cannot be understood of the Saints or Patriarkes, because they were not lead into captivity.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the place is plainly meant of Christs Triumph over Sathan.

Objct. 2. It is said plainly of Christ, that He brought forth the prisoners out of the Pit, or Lake (Zach. 9. 11.) Now out of hell there is no redemption; and therefore the Fathers were in Limbo untill Christ came.

Answ. This place is urged by the most of the Papists, for the proof of Purgatory, and cannot be meant of this Limbus, which they fain for the Fathers; for in Limbo Patrum was nothing but quiet and peace, but in this prison (mentioned by the Prophet Zachary) is sorrow and paine, as the Papists confesse: and therefore this place, as unfitly alleaged for the confirmation of the present controversie, according to the opinion of their best Writers, I passe by.

Objct. Saint Peter saith, that Christ preached to the Spirits that were in prison, 1 Pet. 3.19. &c. Therfore untill Christs comming the Fathers were in Prison.

Answ. Having elsewhere amply to confider of this place, I here leave it with this answer; that certainly the Apostle speakes of Christs triumph over the damned, and of Noahs preaching unto those, who were now in hell.

Objct. 4. But the same Apostle saith, that the Gospel was preached to those who were dead, 1 Pet. 4.6. And therefore the Fathers were in Limbo, for who else can be meant but they?

Answ. The Apostle there means those who were dead in their sins, as is plainly perceived by the place.

Quest. 2. How doth itappear, that Limbus patrum is but a Fable?

Answ. By these few and

First, because the Spirit, and soule of a good man, when it departs from the body, goes unto God, who gave it, Eccles. 12. 7. And this was affirmed by Solomon before Christ came.

Secondly, because Christ would have the soules of his children to be where he is. John 17. Now he was in heaven, not in Limbo; yea, he is the God of Abraham, as hee saith himself elsewhere; and the Text calleth leth the place, where Abraham was, the kingdome of heaven (a title never given to their fained Prison, or Cell:) And therfore the Fathers were not in Limbo.

Thirdly, because the Scriptures speak only of two places, heaven and hell, Mat. 25. of two sorts of vessels, of anger and mercy, Rom. 9. For both Abrahams bosome, and Paradise signifie Heaven, as Augustine most truly affirmes.

Plain Arguments, &c.

Fourthly, because wee and the Fathers are saved both one way, and by one and the same faith: hence Christ saith, Abraham saw me. Iohn 7. And the Apostle saith, that wee and they were made partakers of the same Sacrament, 1 Cor. 10. 1. And therfore why should they be debarred so long out of heaven, more then we?

Fifthly, because the death of Christ was powerfull, and effectuall, before he was crucified; hee was a Lambe slaine from the beginning of the world, Revel. hee is one and the same to day, and to morrow, and for ever, Heb. 13. And all things are present with God, he being immovable: And therefore they were saved by faith in Christ to come, as well as wee by faith in Christ already come.

Quest. 3. Why doth our Saviour here only name Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob?

Answ. 1. First, because the Scriptures are wont to preferre these before others; as it is often said, the God of Araham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because thus Christ would avoid the occasion of novelties, by only naming those who they all knew; and thus doth Stephen, Act. 7. from verse 2. begin at Abraham, and so proceed unto the rest; that they might not say, he preached novelties, and strange things unto them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because these were before the Law of Ceremonies was given: therfore our Saviour names these, that he might establish the doctrine of faith: and hence it is, that Paul also insists so much upon the example of Abraham, Rom. 4. Whence we may learn.

Observ. That the way unto salvation is by the faith of Abraham, and not the sacrifices, and ceremonies of Moses: Reade for the proof hereof the Epistle to the Galathians, and to the Hebrews, and the three first Chapters unto the Romans: and besides, remember that there were never two wayes unto salvation: true it is, that the means were divers, for the Lord instructed his servants, sometimes by Apparitions, sometimes by Visions, and sometimes by his word, Heb. 1. 1. But there is but one way only of faith unto salvation. Reade Iohn 8. how Abraham desired to see Christ; and Heb. 11. how all the faithfull were saved by faith in Christ; and how Moses refers them unto the Prophet, Deut. 18. which is Christ, Act. 3. & 7. and Philip. 3. 9. &c.

Sect 5. §. 5. In the Kingdome of heaven.]

Quest. 1. Whether doth our Saviour here speak of the kingdome of Grace, or of Glory?

Answ. 1. First, certainly it may bee extended unto the kingdom of Glory; because sitting signifies rest.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but it is to begin in the kingdom of Grace, because it is said here Venient, They shall come.

Observ. From whence we may learn: That the Church of Christ is the Kingdom of Heaven.

VERS. 12. But the children of the Kingdom shall be cast out into utter darknesse: there shall be weeping, and gnashing of teeth. Vers. 12.

§. 1. The Children of the Kingdom.] Sect. 1.

Quest. 1. What is meant here by the word Kingdom? The Church Militant. Answ.

Quest. 2. Why is the Church Militant called a Kingdome?

Answ. 1. First, because it is the onely way unto the Kingdom, as was said before.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is the peculiar Kingdom of Christ:

For all that.

God, so he rules over all the world, and is called the King of Kings, and the Lord of Lords, 1 Tim. 6. 15.

Christ, God and man, so hee raigns over his body, the Church; thus he is said to raign over the house of Iacob, Luk. 1. 33. And we are said to be translated into this his kingdom, Colos. 1. 13. which at the last day hee will deliver over to his Father, 1 Corinthians 15. 24. 27.

Observ. We may from hence learn, that those who are within the Church, should live as the subjects of Christ, and as subjected unto Christ, Rom. 1. 5. Deut. 18, 19.

Quest. 3. Why must we be subject to the laws, ordinances, and behests of Christ, as subjects are to their Soveraigns?

Answ. 1. First, because of that relation which we have unto him; hee is our Lord, and Husband, Ephesians 5. Our Father, Esa. 9. 6. Our Head, Ephesians 4. Our God, as is expressed in the Creed: And therfore there is great reason that we should be subject unto him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because he hath deserved this subjection: He hath redeemed us from death, by death; and from that spirituall servitude that wee were subject unto under Sathan, by submitting himselfe unto the form of a servant, Luk. 1. 75. Titus 2. 14. Philip. 2. 7. &c. When Kings ransome any it is for their service, and so doth Christ, who redeemed us, that we might henceforth serve him in righteousnesse, and true holinesse, Rom. 6. 18. 22. all our dayes.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we must be subject unto Christ, because he will avenge himselfe upon, and destroy those who are disobedient unto him. Reade Rom. 2. 8. Ephes. 5. 6. and 2 Thessal. 1. 8.

Quest. 4. Why are these who shall bee cast out called Children?

Answ. 1. First, because they were born of Abraham according to the flesh.

Second-

Answ. 2. Secondly, because they were in the bosome of the Church by the Sacrament of Circumcision: And yet notwithstanding this they are to be cast out: Teaching us, Observ. That those who are most dear unto God in outward prerogatives, and priviledges, may perish, Ierem. 22.5. 24.& 44.26. Iohn 8. 33.41. and 9.40. Act. 6.14.

Quest. 5. Why doth, or will God reject those whom hee hath chosen to be a people unto him, as hee did here the Jews?

Answ. 1. First, because he is a God of such pure eyes, that he cannot endure to behold sin in any, Habak. 1.13. Ieremiah prayes for the people, but God answers him, they have sinned grievously, and therfore he will not hear his prayer, neither must he pray any more for them [a]: So also the Lord answers Ezechiel, Their sin is very grievous, and therfore my eye shall not pitie them [b].

a Ier. 14. 10. &c. b Ezech. 9.9. &c.

Answ. 2. Secondly, all the promises of God are conditionall, as are also his threatnings; and therfore no wonder if hee turn blessings promised into curses, when the conditions are not fulfilled upon which hee offers mercy. Reade Ierem. 5.25. Esay 59.1. and 38.1. Rom. 11.22. Ezech. 18. 26. and 1 Sam. 2.30.

Many there are among us, who have divers Egyptian Reeds to lean upon, which at length will deceive them: As for example.

First, some say our Fathers were enlightned, and delivered from the darknesse of popish blindnesse, and made Partakers of the truth: And therfore wee may hope that God will still continue to be gracious unto us, and continue the means of grace and salvation among us. But woe be unto us if we have no other staffe to trust unto, but only this; for God did thus unto Iudah, and yet at last tooke away the Hedge, and laid waste the Vineyard, Esay 5 27.

Secondly, others say, our Fathers forsooke Popery, and embraced the truth; and wee have done so also, still cleaving unto the same Religion, abhorring the Whore of Babylon with all her trash; And therfore we may hope for mercy: But alas this is but a broken Reed, for wee may professe the truth Ore tenus, and draw neer unto God with our lips, having our hearts far from him, and neer unto sin, and then hee will not regard us, Mat. 15 9.

Thirdly, some say, oh but we have entred into a Covenant with God, to serve him with all our hearts, and with all our soules, 2 Chron. 15. 12. But this is worth nothing, except wee perform our promises, and pay our vowes, continuing and abiding in the service of God unto the end, for this only hath a promise of blessednesse and mercy.

Sect. 3. §. 2. Shall be cast out.

Object. 1. It may here be objected, Christ hath promised, that He will not quench the smoking flax: and St. Iames 2.13. saith, that mercy rejoyceth against judgement: yea, election, which is the foundation of God, is firm and sure, Rom. 11.29. and 2 Tim. 2. 19. How then doth our Saviour here say, That the Children shall bee cast out?

Answ. 1. First, in generall, the foundation of God stands firm, his Decrees being like the Lawes of the Medes and Persians, which cannot be revoked.

Answ. 2. Secondly, true it is, that Christs mercy is infinit, but mercy must not evert and overthrow Iustice: for this is an Attribute as well as that.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, none are threatned here to bee cast out, but only those among the children of the Kingdom, who did apostatize, and fall away.

Object. 2. But those who are threatned to be cast out, are the people of God, with whom God hath made a Covenant; now will Christ neglect his Covevenant made with them?

Answ. 1. First, hee will not, hee doth not; as appears thus.

I. He confesseth that salvation is of the Jews, and belongs unto them, Iohn 4.22. Hence

II. He denieth the Canaanitish woman her request at first, because mercy was proper unto the Israelites, Marke 7.27.

III. He commands his Apostles to goe unto the Jews, not unto the Gentiles, Matth. 10. 5. 6. Yea,

IV. The Apostles obey, first confessing that the tender of mercy belongs primarily unto the Jews, Rom. 3. 2. and 9. 4. And then practising their Masters mandate, Act. 3.25. and 10.14. and 11.19.13 46.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Jewes were rejected for their sins, and not for any breach, or neglect of Covenant in Christ. Reade Esay 1. and Amos 1.3. &c. and 2. 4. &c. and Rom. 2.28.

Quest. 1. For what sins were these children of the Kingdom, the Jews, cast out?

Answ. 1. First, for their Incredulity, because they would not beleeve, Rom. 11.

Answ. 2. Secondly, for their contempt of the word of Christ.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, for their obstinacie, hardnesse of heart, and perverseneſſe: Reade Esay 48.4 Mark. 3.5. Act. 7.5, and 13.45.50. and 14.19. and 17. 5. and 18.6. 12. and 21. 27. and 25. 2. From hence wee may learn, Observ. That obstinacie against, and contempt of the word, brings ruine, and destruction upon the contemners.

Quest. 2. How doth this appear?

Answ. 1. First, plainly by these places, Esa. 5.24. and Ier. 13.10. and 19.15. and Ezech. 7. 10.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because God hates those who are obdurate and obstinate, Psalme 95. 8. Rom. 2. 5. Esay 65. 2. and 5.24. Ier. 6.10.11. and 28 32.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, God loves those who tremble at his word (Esay 66. 2,5.) and therfore contemners thereof shall find no mercy.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, God doth ordinarily convert men by the word (2 King. 22. 19. Ezech. 11. 19. and 2 Cor 3.3.) and therfore there is small hope of the conversion (but great fear of the confusion) of those who despise this ordinary means of salvation.

Answ. 5. Fifthly the word is powerfull, and sharp, like a two edged sword, which is able to divide betwixt the marrow and the bones (Heb. 4. 12.) And therefore when it doth not mollifie, and humble, it is a 460 ſigne of a heart come to an exquiſite hardneſſe. Wherfore wee ſhould (when the word workes not upon us) complain of the hardneſſe of our hearts, and labour for the redreſſe therof.

Queſt. 3. How many fold is hardneſſe of heart?

Anſw. Two-fold.
- First, obſtinate, and perverſe, as Ier. 44.16. The word that thou ſpeakeſt unto us in the name of the Lord, we will not do; but we will do whatſoever proceedeth out of our own lips.
- Secondly, blind, and ignorant; hence it is ſaid, that our Saviour was angry, διὰ τὴν πωρώσιν τῆς καρδίας, for the hardneſſe, or blindneſſe (for the word bears both) of their heart, Marke 3.5. And hence alſo hee taxeth their dulneſſe, and ſlowneſſe of heart, Marke 16.14.

Sect 3. §. 3. Into outer darkeneſſe.

Queſt. What is the meaning of theſe words?

Anſw. 1. First, They ſhall be caſt into outer darkeneſſe; that is, into the corporall, and palpable darkneſſe of the infernall priſon, preſently after their death, in regard of the ſoule; and at the day of judgement, both in regard of ſoule and body.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, Darkneſſe is no other thing then a privation of light; now light is two-fold: namely,

I. Spirituall, as wiſedom, grace, and truth: Now the privation of this light is internall darkneſſe, and ignorance, in the ſpirit, and inward man.

II. There is a ſenſible, and corporall light, whoſe privation is outer darkneſſe: and this is the darkneſſe ſpoken of in this place: For although there be fire in hell, yet it is a darke, and ſmokie fire, and not clear; except only ſo, as the damned may ſee one another, for the greater increaſe of their miſery d.

d Carthus. f.

Verſ. 13. VERS. 13. And Ieſus ſaid unto the Centurion, go thy way, and as thou haſt beleeved, ſo be it done unto thee: And his ſervant was healed in the ſelfe ſame houre.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Go thy way.

Queſt. 1. What is the ſenſe, and meaning of this phraſe of ſpeech?

Anſw. It ſignifies a diſmiſſing of one in peace, and is an argument of love and mercy. Reade 2 Sam. 14.8. Marke 5.34. Luke 17.19. Whence wee learne, Obſerv. That the Lord at laſt doth diſmiſſe, and ſend away in peace all his Petitioners.

Queſt. 2. How doth this appear?

Anſw. It appears thus, viz.
- First, from theſe places, Eſay 57.19 and Iohn 14.27. and 2 King. 5.19. Mat. 15.28. Iohn 4.50.
- Secondly, becauſe he is the God of peace, 1 Theſſal. 5.23. Philip. 4.7.
- Thirdly, becauſe peace is the effect of Iuſtification, Rom. 5.1. Whence the Angels ſing peace on earth, becauſe they who are juſtified by him, have true peace, Luke 2.14.
- Fourthly, becauſe this peace is our armour, and weapons againſt affliction, Iohn 16.33. And therfore certainly the Lord will give peace at length to all that ſue, and ſeek for it at his hands.

How muſt wee wait, and expect for this peace untill we obtaine it? Queſt. 3.

Anſw. 1. First, patiently, I waited patiently (ſaith David) for the Lord, and hee inclined unto me, Pſal. 40.1.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, induſtriouſly; wee muſt not expect and await the Lord in our beds, Cantic. 3.1. but in his wayes and ordinances.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly perſeverantly, knowing that our times are in Gods hands.

Verſ. 14. VERS. 14. And when Ieſus was come into Peters houſe, he ſaw his wives mother laid, and ſick of a Fever.

Sect. 1. §. 1 He ſaw his Wives Mother.

Queſt. 1. What may wee ſay, or think of the Popiſh prohibition of Prieſts marriages?

Anſw 1. First, that it is oppoſit to Scripture, which ſaith It is better to marry then to burne, 1 Cor. 7.9. Yea, and that when marriage is leſſe convenient, verſe 26. 32. And therfore even then they may marry, verſe 2. But now with the Papiſts fornication is better then marriage, for the former violates not the vow, but the latter doth, as they ſay g: though Saint Paul ſay, It is honourable, and Whoremongers God will judge, Heb. 13.4.

g Bellar. de Monach. l. 2. c. f. 1265. A.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, it is oppoſite to Antiquitie to forbid marriage, as they now do; for the proofe hereof obſerve theſe two things: namely,

I. The authority of this Prohibition, from whence it was: here obſerve,

First, the Apoſtles did only approve of ſingle life, and commend it unto us by their example.

Secondly, they did not poſitively herein ordain, or eſtabliſh any thing: Pope Siricius being the firſt that did directly command it. See 82. Diſt. §. plurimos, et gloſſ. Litera i.

II. Obſerve the degrees of this Prohibition, how far it differs from the Prohibition of thoſe of former times: For

First, the Ancients did enjoyn a ſeparation of the Miniſter from his wife; but this ſeparation was not totall, that they ſhould never come together again, as appears by Epheſ. 5.32. and Canon. Apoſt. 5. and 28. Diſt. §. Si quis docet, et §. Si quis diſcernit.

Secondly, the Ancients did prohibite the Miniſter the knowledge of his wife; but this prohibition was not perpetuall, that he ſhould never know her (as appears 28. Diſt. §. de Syracuſan, and 31. Diſt. §. Quoniam) but that he ſhould not know her, Tempore officij diebus miniſterij, when hee was to undertake, and diſcharge his miniſteriall function: And this the Fathers thought decent, 28. Diſt. §. de Syracuſan.

Thirdly, the Ancients did prohibite the contracts tracts of the Ministers; but this prohibition was not universall (28. Dist. de Syracusani. & 5. Diaconi) as though they might not be contracted at all to any; but only that they might not be contracted a second time (that is, might not marry twise) neither to a widow, nor to an infamous person.

But the Papists now adayes, do not onely forbid Bigamy, or marrying with widows, or infamous women, but all contracts and marriage; yea all carnall knowledge of their wives, if perhaps they have been married before they entred into orders; yea a totall separation, for they cast the wives out of their husbands house, and habitation, directly contrary to the Canons, and all antiquity.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the doctrine of the Papists is opposite to Antiquitie in punishing offenders in this kind: For,

I. Adulterous, and unclean Ministers were to be cast out of the Ministerie, 28. Dist. 5. Presbyteri. But the Papists now adayes observe not this; for if all uncleane Priests were cast out, they would have but few left in their Cloysters.

II. Episcopus fornicationem pretio permittens suspendendus, (83. Dist. 5. Si Episcopus) If any Bishop shall by any licence, or for any bribe, tolerate, or permit fornication, or whoredom, hee shall be suspended, this was the ancient Law: But now it is otherwise, as appears by the hundred grievances of the Germaines.

Sect. 2. §. 2. And sicke of a fever.]

Hilary allegorizeth this verse very acutely, Peters house signifies the body, his wives mother signifies Infidelity, whose daughter (Free-will) the soule marries, but the presence of Christ cures it (Hilar. ſ.) But me thinks the Mother in law should rather signifie the Will, and the Fever signifie Infidelity, which are cured by Christ: But passing by this, I will instance but only upon one thing in generall: Before wee showed how sinne, and the sickneſse of the soule was like unto Leprosie, and the Palsie; wee will now shew, how sinne in the soule may bee resembled to a Fever in the body.

Quest. 1. How, and wherin is sin like unto a Fever?

Answ. 1. First, sin may be likened unto a Fever, Respectu originis, in regard of the originall therof: For

I. The Fever ariseth within, in the bowels, and intrals; and although the Symptomes be without, yet the cause lurks within. So the cause of all actuall transgressions, which appear in the life, is that originall corruption, which is within in the heart, Rom. 7. 23, 24.

II. The Fever ariseth from a three-fold cause; namely, either

First, from some pestilentiall, and obnoxious aire without: Or

Secondly, from the society of those who are infected, or sick of a Fever. Or

Thirdly, from some internall corruption in the body, or humours; and this is the cause for the most part. Thus sinne either comes,

I. From the infection of Sathan, (1 John 3. 8.) and the allurements of the world: Or

II. From the society of wicke l men, 2 Cor. 6. 14. Ephes. 5. 11. Or, 463

III. From the internall corruption, and concupiscence of the heart, Rom. 7. 5. Iam. 1. 14. 1 John 2. 16.

Secondly, sinne may be resembled to a Fever, Answ. 2. Respectu naturæ, in regard of the nature thereof. For

I, The substance of the Fever is a heat besides nature, which extinguisheth the naturall heat: So the fire of concupiscence, and lust of sin, doth extinguish the fire and heat of zeale: For where sin is hot, there zeale is cold.

II. The Fever ariseth diversly, from divers humours; to wit, sometimes from choller, sometimes from melancholy, sometimes from blood; and yet it is one, and the same Fever. So sinne sometimes ariseth from the lust of the flesh, sometimes from the lust of the eyes, sometimes from the pride of life (1 John 2. 16.) And whatsoever the root is, the fruit is sin.

III. There are two kinds of Fevers; a continual Fever, and a Fever with some intermission: now this hath his seat in a more ignoble place, but that in the vessels themselves, and veins, and blood. This is diversly expounded: to wit,

First, some expound it of the divers degrees of sinning; Some sin with some intermission of repentance, some sin perpetually.

Secondly, some expound it of Adam, and us who are now corrupted by Adam: Hee at first was pure, and therfore sin in him was with some intermission, but in us it is continuall, because in sinne wee were conceived, and brought forth in iniquity.

Thirdly, some expound this of the sins of naturall, and regenerate men: The unregenerate sin continually, the regenerate but sometimes: Sin in the naturall man hath his seat in the vessels, in the whole nature, à capite ad calcem, from the head to the heel; but in the spirituall, and regenerate man, sin hath his seat only in the ignoble part (the flesh) In me, that is, in my flesh dwels no manner of thing that is good, Rom. 7. And therfore naturall men must labour to be renewed in the Spirit of their minds, Rom. 12. 2. Ephes. 4. 23. Now this intermissive Fever again is two-fold: namely,

First, Ephemera, which lasts but for one fit, or one day, and comes no more: Thus the best sometimes fall into some one grievous sinne or other once, but are never after overtaken therwith; as Noah, who was once drunk, and Lot once incestuous, and David once adulterous; and as Peter who once denied his Master. And

Secondly, Putrida, when the humours being partly corrupted, upon every distemper, the Fever is ready to return: And thus both the regenerate, and the unregenerate are often overcome by some one sin or other; we carry a body of sin about us, and wee have the reliques of sin in us, which oftentimes prevaile against us.

Thirdly, sin may be resembled to a Fever, Respectu modi procedendi, in regard of the manner of the proceeding therof. For Answ. 3.

I. The Fever begins with the heat, and warmth of the body, that being the first thing that sen-

464 sibly it ceazeth upon, and infrigidates, and makes cold the whole body: So sin first ceazeth upon zeal, making that first luke-warm, then by and by stone cold.

II. At the first the Fever makes us cold, but by and by wee burn. So at first we are afraid of sin, by and by fearlesse therof; at first our affections freez, afterwards fry in the love of sin; at first wee abstain from sinne, and are hardly drawn to the committing of sinne, but by and by custome makes it habituall, and naturall unto us, and us insensible of it.

III. In a Fever, when we are cold, yet even then we are hot within, though we are not so sensible of that heat: So even then, when the naturall man fears, and trembles to commit sin, there is the fire of evill concupiscence, which in time sets on fire the whole course of nature, & shews it selfe outwardly in the practise of sin.

IV. The Fever inflames the whole body, even to the very toes of the feet: So sin wounds and enfeebles us, from the crown of the head, to the sole of the foot, Esay 1.6.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, sinne may be resembled to a Fever, Respectu effectuum, in regard of the effects: For

I. The Fever, (in membris) in the parts of the body workes this effect, it debilitates and weakens the whole man, so that hee cannot walke forth of doors; nay, hee cannot walke within his owne house, neither is able to stand, but forced to sit or lye, and keep his bed: So by sinne we are so weakned, that wee are neither able to walke in the wayes of God, nor run the race that he hath set before us, nor worke out the work of our salvation, with fear and trembling.

II. The Fever (In intellectu) in the understanding works this effect, it disturbs & takes away the use of reason; making a man not know what he saith, or doth: And this is for the most part (or at least very often) mortall and deadly. So when men grow obstinate, and bold in sinning, and are neither sensible of sinne, nor punishment, but will do whatsoever they will (Ier. 44. 16.) it is an argument of a soule not distant from death.

III. The Fever (In appetitu) in the appetite produceth these effects: namely,

First, it loaths the most wholsome things: So sinne makes us to loath both,

I. Good workes, and duties, and exercises of religion; like the Iews, who cryed, when will the new Moons, and the Sabbaths be done, that we may return unto our sins? Malach. 1.13.

II. Good Counsell, for that we think to bee a hard saying, and we cannot endure it, Ioh. 6.60.

Secondly, as the Fever loaths that which is wholsome, so it longs for that which is unwholsome: So wee loath the heavenly Manna of the word, and spirituall graces, and love the vaine pleasures of sin, although they be but for a season, and the end therof destruction, and death, Rom. 6.23.

Thirdly, In a Fever there is a thirst not to bee quenched, or satisfied, but insatiable, having no moderation in drinking, if it can come unto liquor: So many are furious in sinning, and cannot cease to sin, [h] although they see oftentimes, that [h] 2 Pet. 2. 14.

I. The thing is childish, and of that nature, that it is a shame for a man to be besotted therewith. Yea,

II. That the event is perillous, and dangerous. And,

III. That both the estate is lessened, and impaired, and the body enfeebled, and enervated therby. Thus no feverish man is more mad after drink, then wicked men are after their sins.

Fourthly, Potus factitij, made drinks quench not the thirst (in a Fever) but now pleaseth the Pallat, and by and by displeaseth it, it being only cool things which allaieth, and asswageth the heat therof, although often they kill, because the stomack is not able to bear them. So it is not ordinary comforts that appease the soule (because they cannot fill the soule) neither can they allay the heat of a wounded spirit; but it is the word, and the comminations, and promises thereof, which afford ease and peace to the troubled heart: And yet sometimes this cooling Cordiall doth kill, and drives accidentally to desperation, as we see in Cain, Gen. 4. and Iudas, Mat. 27.

Fifthly, sinne may be resembled to a Fever, Respectu finis, in regard of the end thereof. For

I. Sometimes it ends in health, and life of it selfe; that is, a man recovers sometimes out of a Fever, without the use of any means, or help of any man.

II. Sometimes the Fever ends in health, and life, by the use of good means, and the helpe of the Physician.

III. Sometimes the Fever ends in a sickly, and weakly estate; that is, when the Fever leaves a man, oftentimes he fals into deafnesse, and swellings, and boyls, and the like.

IV. Sometimes it ends in death: Fevers often bring men to the period of their life; now this is two-fold, viz.

First, sometimes a Fever brings a man to a speedy death, when he dies therof.

Secondly, sometimes it brings a man unto a lingring death, and that either,

I. By an Hectick Fever, which inflames the heart, or lungs: Or,

II. By bringing a man into a Dropsie. Now to apply this.

First, sinne herein differs from a Fever; this (as was said) sometimes ends in health, and life, without the use of physick, or helpe of the Physician; but never that, for sin cannot be cured, or healed of it selfe.

Secondly, sin is cured and healed by Christ, who is the only Physician of the soule.

Thirdly, if sinne end not thus, in health and life by Christ, then it ends either

I. In a dry Hectick Fever, and a barrennesse of all good fruits: Or

II. In a cold Dropsie, or Lukewarmnesse in Religion. Or

III. In a deafnesse, and unwillingnesse to hear the word of God. Or,

IV. In filthy Vlcers, and putrified Boyls of actuall transgressions.

V. The safest Crisis, or conflict of nature in this sicknesse, is evacuation, and that either by vomivomiting, purging, sweating, or bleeding: So we must labour, either to vomit up our sinnes by Confession, or sweat them out by Contrition, or purge them out by alienation, and separation, or else (if the Lord love us) he will bleed us, and make us forsake sin by affliction: as hee did by David and Manasses.

Quest. 2. How may we know, whether we are sicke of the Fever of sin, or not?

Answ. By these plain signes: namely,

First, if without thou be inflamed with the lust of sinne, or if it shew it selfe in in thy life, and actions.

Secondly, if the fire of concupiscence kindle thy affections unto evill, although as yet it doth not appear by thy actions, and outward man.

Thirdly, by examining what drink pleaseth us best; whether is the word of God unpleasing to our taste, or not? certainly if we be refreshed, and comforted with the pleasures of sin, and that the word of God relisheth not with us, we are feverish.

Fourthly, by examining whether Christ hath cured us or not: whether we be freed from the Fever of sin, or not? For this Fever of the soule differs from the bodily Fever: there being many in health of body, and free in body from the corporall Fever, but none at all from the Fever of sinne; for therewith all the sons of Adam, and children of men are infected: And therefore two things are to bee enquired after: to wit,

I. Whether hast thou sought unto Christ, the Physician of thy soule, or not? hast thou made thy case, and griefe known unto him; and desired him to heale thee?

II. Whether hath Christ answered thee in thy request, or not? whether hath hee healed all thy sins, and cured all thy infirmities; so weakning the reliques of corruption in thee, that now it cannot prevaile against thee?

Fifthly, examine whether thou be changed or not, from sicknesse to health? canst thou say with Paul, I was given to such and such sinnes, but I found mercy 1 Tim. 1. 13.; the Lord plucking me as a brand out of the fire? dost thou find a change, both in thy affections and actions, from evill unto good?

Sixthly, examine whether art thou sound, well, and healthfull in thy limbs and members? canst thou walke in the waies of God cheerfully, canst thou run the race that is set before thee swiftly, and constantly; canst thou worke out the worke of thy salvation thorowly?

Seventhly, art thou not enclining to a Hectick Fever, or a Dropsie, or deafnesse of eares: that is, art thou not barren of grace and all goodnesse? or at least Lukewarm, in the service of God; or of deaf and dull eares to hear the word of God? Certainly by a serious examination of these things, we may know, whether with Peter wives Mother, (before Christ came) we are sick of a Fever, or by Christ cured and freed from our Fever, as she was. 465

Vers. 16. And when the Even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and hee cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick. Vers. 16.

We may learn hence: That it is Christ onely who frees from Sathan, hee only being stronger then him, Luke 11.21. Observ.

By what means are we freed from the Devill, or the Devill dispossessed? Quest. 1.

First, the Heathens used charmes and enchantments, hoping therby to be preserved from him, and to dispossesse him; their charms were, Answ. 1.

I. Either by magicall words: Fernel. abd. caus. Or,

II. By the Picture of Solomon in a Ring. Iosephus. Or

III. By the herbe Cynocephalia, which is very effectuall against poyson. Appion. Gram. Plin. 30 l. 2. Or,

IV. By Amulets hung about their necks, Plin. ib. Or

V. By the art of Nieromancy; and conjuring. But all these are too weak to produce such an effect as this is, to deliver, or preserve from the Devill.

Secondly, the Papists perswade themselves, that they can dispossesse men, and drive away devils by troops (and that) by Ceremonies; as by holy water, and the signe of the Crosse, and the seven penitentiall Psalms, and a lighted Taper, and a Censer, and a holy Fryers Hood. Iacobus de Chusa, and Wyerus. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, God doth deliver, preserve, and free us from Sathan miraculously; and that sometimes by the name of Christ (as in the Acts of the Apostles) and sometimes by prayer and fasting. Answ. 3.

How doth Christ cure those who are possessed with devils; or those in whose heart sinne and Sathan remains? Quest. 2.

Answ. By these means, viz.

First, by overcomming Sathan himselfe for us.

Secondly, by disarming, and weakning the power of Sathan.

Thirdly, by casting of sinne, and Sathan out of our hearts.

Fourthly, by arming us, both with offensive, and defensive weapons against Sathan, Ephes. 6.12. Enabling us so to resist him, that hee is forced to flee, or to be foyled, Rom. 16.20.

Vers. 17. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the Prophet, saying, himselfe tooke our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses. Vers. 17.

It may here be objected, Christ did not heale Object. the 406 the ſick, and diſpoſſeſſe thoſe who were poſſeſſed; for this end, that the Propheſie might bee fulfilled: for then if the Prophet had not foretold it, he would not have done it, Muſcul. & Gualt. ſ

Anſw. 1. First, God doth diſpoſe it unto this end; as he did his flight into Egypt (Mat. 2. 15.) and his return into Nazareth (Mat. 2 23.) and the Souldiers caſting lots about his garments (Mat. 27. 35.) and that a bone of him ſhould not bee broken (Iohn 19. 33.) and divers other paſſages. From whence we may learn,

Obſerv. That our voluntary actions, are indeed governed, ordered, and diſpoſed by the providence of God. Reade Act. 2.23. and 3.18. and 4.28, and 13.27. And beſides, remember that it is the will of God, not the will of men, which is the rule of the world, Daniel 4. 32. Hence it is ſaid, Man purpoſeth, but God diſpoſeth. For

I. If the purpoſe and intention of man bee according to the will of God, then God will direct it; Thus Aſſur was Gods rod, Eſay 10. But

II. If mans purpoſes and intentions diſſent from the purpoſe, and will of God, then God corrects it: Balaam at firſt had a deſire to goe to Balak, but God forbids him: afterwards he had a deſire to curſe the Iſraelites for Balak, but God

Queſt. 1. will not permit it, Num. 23. It may here bee demanded, whether we deſire to eſtabliſh and maintain Stoicall fate, and a neceſſary ſeries of cauſes? For this is heatheniſh, and unbeſeeming Chriſtians to avouch; Abſit a fidelium cordibus, fatum aliquid dicere, Greg. hom. 10. Vide Thom. 1. qu. 116. &c.

Anſw. Certainly, wee goe not about to eſtabliſh Stoicall Fate, but Chriſtian Providence

Queſt. 2. Wherein doth Stoicall Fate, and Chriſtian Providence differ?

Anſw. 1. First, Reſpectu originis, in regard of the originall thereof, becauſe Stoicall Fate doth depend upon the influence of the ſtars: And therefore Thom. denies it, ibid.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, they differ, Reſpectu aſcenſûs, in regard of the aſcent; becauſe Stoicall Fate doth tie the gods themſelves, and ſubject them thereunto.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, they differ, Reſpectu deſcenſûs, in regard of the deſcent, becauſe the Stoicall Fate binds all ſecond cauſes. And therfore we ſhould avoid the name of Fate: Si quis Dei voluntatem vel poteſtatem Fati nomine vocet, ſententiam teneat, et linguam corrigat: If any ſhall call the will, or power of God, by the name of Fate, let him hold ſtill the opinion, but amend the phraſe.

1 Auguſt. civit. Dei 51.

Queſt. 3. Is nothing caſuall, contingent, or mutable?

Anſw. There are two things certain: to wit,

First, that there are many things mutable in regard of us, and many things caſuall, which fall out contrary to our expectation; as Inachus ſaid of Io, Tu non inventa reperta es, he could not find her, when hee ſought for her; and when hee thought not of her, then hee found her: So a man digging a grave may find a treaſure.

Secondly, nothing is contingent, in regard of God, but all things are certainly ordained.

Queſt. 4. Muſt wee not uſe the means?

Anſw. 1. First, certainly wee muſt, and that for theſe cauſes: namely,

I. Becauſe God hath ordained, that by the uſe of the means wee ſhould attain unto the end.

II. Becauſe God hath commanded the uſe of the meanes, if we deſire to obtain the end.

III. Becauſe we tempt Gods providence, if wee neglect the means, Matth. 4.

Secondly, but we muſt not uſe the meanes for this end, that we may change, or alter the decree of God (Eſay 46. 10.) but that we may be excuſed. And therfore the uſe, both of evill, and doubtfull means is altogether inexcuſable. Anſw. 2.

And thus much for the firſt generall anſwer unto the Objection.

Secondly, it was neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould fulfill the Propheſies, for the confirmation of his ſending from God: hee hereby proves himſelfe to be the Meſſias, who is ſent from God for the redemption of mankind, becauſe whatſoever was foretold by the Prophets, concerning the Meſſiah, is fulfilled by him. Reade for this purpoſe theſe places, Matth. 11.5. and 26.54. Mark. 14.49. Luke 22.27. and 24.44. Iohn 18.9. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, our Saviour by his miracles, and healing the ſick, and diſpoſſeſſing of the poſſeſſed, doth ſhew that the Propheſies are fulfilled, not only in the ſoules, but alſo in the bodies: For there is herein a reciprocation, as appears thus. Anſw. 3.

As in the Goſpel, corporall things denote ſpirituall; as for example;

I. Leproſie denotes the corruption of our nature, and Chriſt by healing Lepers, doth ſhew that it is he, and he only that takes away, and heals the leproſie of ſin.

II. Chriſt gives unto the blind their ſight, to ſhew that hee is the light of the world, Mal. 4.2.

III. Chriſt by making the deafe to hear, doth ſhew, that he is the Doctor of the ſoule.

IV. Chriſt by curing Fevers, doth ſhew, that it is he only that allayes the fire, and the heat of concupiſcence within us.

V. When Chriſt opens the mouth of the dumb, he would have us to learn, that he onely teacheth us to cry Abba Father, Gal. 4.6.

VI. Chriſt by healing thoſe who were ſick of the Palſie, and reſtoring the Lame unto their limbs, would have us know, that he is the onely Phyſician which corroborates, and enables us, to worke the worke, and walke in the wayes of God.

VII. When Chriſt diſpoſſeſſeth, and driveth away devils, he would have us know, that firſt hee is that ſeed of the woman, who was of old foretold, ſhould break the Serpents head, Gen. 3. And Secondly, that it is only he, that enables us to trample Sathan under our feet. Rom. 16. 20.

VIII. Chriſt by raiſing the dead unto life, doth teach us, that it is hee who gives the ſpirituall life of grace unto us, and who for us purchaſed life everlaſting.

So in the Prophets ſpirituall things are applied unto the body; as in this verſe: Whence we might learn: That it belongs unto the Meſſias, not only to cure ſoules, but bodies alſo, Pſalme 103.2,3.

Queſt. 6. Why doth it appertain unto Chriſt, to cure and and heal bodies, as well as ſouls.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe he redeemed both bodies and ſouls; and therefore both are his, 1 Cor. 6. 20.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe he commands us to ſerve him, both in ſouls and bodies, (Rom. 12. 1.) And therefore (as our Lord and Maſter) it belongs unto him to be carefull of both.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, corporall evils are the puniſhments of ſin; and therefore it belongs to him, to take away both the evill of ſin, and the evill of puniſhment, both the cauſe and the effect.

Verſ. 18. Verſ. 18. Now when Ieſus ſaw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other ſide.

Sect. 1. §. 1. When Ieſus ſaw great multitudes.

Obſerv. It appears here, that many were preſent, but Chriſts departure ſhews, that he was not well pleaſed with them: From whence we may learn, That there may be many hearers, and yet but few good.

Queſt. 1. How doth this appear?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, evidently by theſe Scriptures, Mat. 3. 7. and 7. 21, 22. and 8. 1. and 12. 15. and 13. 2. and 14. 13. and 15. 30. and 19 2. and 20. 16, 29.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, by theſe two reaſons; namely,

I. Becauſe many followed Chriſt for ſome temporall gain, to wit, either that they might be healed, or fed by him, Ioh. 6. 26.

II. Becauſe many heard him for novelries ſake, as the ſtony ground, who rejoyceth at the firſt, and falleth away, and relapſeth at the laſt, Mat. 13. 20. and Ioh. 6. 66.

Queſt. 2. Is it not a good thing to ſee people flock unto the Word, and houſe of God?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, certainly to come to the Temple, is but an externall work, and is eaſily done.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, to come to the hearing of the word, is a thing of good repute, and to abſent our ſelves from thence, or to be negligent in hearing, is a ſhame: and therefore many repair thereunto.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, but thus to flock to the houſe of God, is good; namely,

I. That thou maiſt there worſhip, and ſerve God, by prayer.

II. That thou maiſt feed thy ſoul, by hearing.

III. That thou maiſt gain ſomething either for thy information, or reformation, or conſolation, or corroboration, or inſtruction, or direction in the way of grace.

Sect. 2. §. 2. He commanded them to depart unto the other ſide.

Queſt. 1. Why doth Chriſt command them (that is, thoſe which were in the ſhip with him) to depart? Did Chriſt deſire to hide, or conceal himſelf from thoſe who ſought for him? Non cadit in [a] bonitatem Salvatoris circumcurſantes linquere [a]. How can this ſtand with the goodneſſe of our Saviour, to depart from, and forſake thoſe who run up and down to ſee and hear him?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it may be Chriſt departed, that they might ſeek him more intently, and earneſtly; as the Mother ſometimes ſeems to depart from the Childe, that it may more diligently ſeek her, and more affectionately cry after her. So, Chriſt would have them ſeek him with tears, and ſeriouſly to endeavour to finde him, thinking no pains too much. 465

Anſw. 2. Secondly, perhaps Chriſt was weary, and therefore deſires to depart, that he may reſt himſelf; for his body was ſubject to our infirmities, (Heb. 4. 15.) whence he prays againſt death.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, becauſe there were great multitudes, therefore he departs, that he might avoid vain-glory, (thus thinks Chryſoſtom ſ.) Teaching us hereby, to avoid and ſhun all vain-glory, as much as we can, Philip. 2. 3. Gal. 5. 26. and 1 Theſ. 2. 6. Obſerv.

Queſt. 2. Why may we not ſeek the praiſe of men, in the performance of good works?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe the applauſe of the world, is the reward of Heretikes and hypocrites, Matthew 6. 2, 5, 16.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe this would argue us to be blinde, and ignorant of our ſelves or our own conditions. It was the proud Phariſee, who was ignorant of the corruption of his own heart, who boaſted of himſelf, Luke 18. 11. And ſhe was but a poor, and blinde, and miſerable Church, who boaſtingly ſaid, She was like a Queen, wanting nothing, neither ſhould ever be moved, Revel. 3. 17. And thoſe who know themſelves, know with Paul, that in them (that is, in their fleſh) dwels no manner of thing which is good; for they have no good thing in them, but what they have received from God: and therfore it were great pride to be proud of it, and inſolent arrogancie to boaſt of it, as though they had not received it.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, he departs, becauſe he would not be hindred from praying: teaching us thereby, that prayer is not to be neglected, but frequently to be performed, Epheſ. 6. 18. Mat. 7. 7. Col. 4. 2.

Anſw. 5. Fiftly, Chriſt leaves this multitude, and departs, becauſe it was neceſſary that he ſhould preach to others, as well as to theſe.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, he departs from this multitude, leſt they ſhould go about to make him a King, Iob. 6. 15.

Anſw. 7 Seventhly, he commands his Apoſtles to put off from theſe, becauſe he knew they were wicked, and he judged them unworthy of his preſence, or of his preaching.

Anſw. 8. Eightly, Gualter (ſup.) gives another reaſon of Chriſts departure, and that is this, becauſe his Diſciples (who were hitherto accuſtomed, and acquainted with nothing but pleaſant things) might be accuſtomed unto afflictions, and dangers; for afterwards, verſe 24. we finde, that they were in perill, by reaſon of a great tempeſt upon the Sea.

Verſ. 20. Verſ. 20. And Ieſus ſaith unto him, The Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have neſts: but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

Sect. 1. §. 1. But the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

Obſerv. Chriſt here calleth himſelf ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, the Son of man, not ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀνθρώπου, the Son of a woman, 466 man, and therefore he was born, and begotten of mans seed.

Answ. 1. First, this phrase, the Son of man is an Hebraisme; for [Ben Adam] the Son of man, signifieth no more than [Adam] Man, as evidently appears thus, because Adam himself is called [Ben Adam] The son of man, although he was neither begotten by a man, nor born of a woman.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Nazianzen answers, Christ is called ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, The Son of man, in the singular number, because he came from man onely, ex unâ parte, in regard of his humane nature, which he took from his mother Mary, and not from man: But others are called οἱ υἱοὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, the sons of men, in the plurall number, because they have their bodies both from Father and Mother.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Augustine answers, Christ is called the son of man, that he might manifest, and shew unto us, the great benefit which man hath received, by his taking mans nature upon him.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, he is called the son of man, that so his Humanity may be distinguished from his Deity.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, Tertullian answers, he is called the son of man, that so we might acknowledge him to be true man, as well as true God. But the true sense of the words is gathered from the Hebrew phrase [Ben Adam, i. e. Adam] the son of man, that is, Man.

We see here how Christ calleth himself, the son of man, although the phrase be elsewhere a phrase of contempt, as Iob 25.6 and Psa. 8.5. to teach us, Observ. 1 That Humility becomes the best. Reade for the proof hereof, Prov. 11.2. and 16.19. and Mat. 11.29. Gen. 28.17. Phil. 2.7.)

Quest. 1. Why must the children of God be humble?

Answ. 1. First, because it is a laudable and praise-worthy vertue, Prov. 25.7. and Luke 14.10.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because God will avenge himself upon those who injure or wrong the humble, Psal. 18 27. and 34.18. Prov. 22.22.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because God will teach the humble to wait, and expect for him with patience, Psalme 33. 20.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because Humility is a signe of a good spirit; for the spirit of the world doth exalt and puffe up, but the spirit of God doth humble, as we see in Iacob, Ioseph, and David, Psalme 131.1.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because God will in his due time exalt those who are humble; for Humility goes before Honour, Prov. 18.12. and 29.23.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, because God will hear the prayers of the humble, Psalm. 10.17, &c. and 102.17. and 138.6.

Our Saviour by these words, The Son of man hath not where to lay his head, doth shew the poor

Observ. 2. estate wherein he was; thereby teaching us, That the best, and most holy, are sometimes brought to great poverty and want.

Quest. 2. How doth it appear, that the pious are often poor; for they have promises in the Word to the contrary, and that whatsoever they do, shall prosper, and they shall have no lack?

Answ. It is evident, by the examples of Christ and his children:

First, if we look upon Christ, we shall finde him in his Nativity born in a stable, and laid in a manger, (Luke 2. 17.) afterwards nourished and maintained by others, (Luke 8.3.) not having mony to pay Tribute withall, (Mat. 17.27.) yea robbed of his garments, (Mark 15.24.) and destitute (when he was dead) of a sheet to be wrapped in, of a Sepulcher to be laid in, of sweet odours to embalm him [d]. d Ioh. 19. 38.

Secondly, if we look upon the Patriarchs [e] or Apostles, we shall see them to be as poor as their Lord and Master [f]. e Heb. 11. 36, &c. f Acts 2. and 4. and 3.6.

Why doth the Lord permit Christ, or the Saints, to be poor, seeing he hath promised his delight shall be in them, and his care for them? Quest. 3.

First, Christ was made poor, that he might make us rich, 2 Cor. 8.9. And Answ. 1.

Secondly, the Saints are often poor, that they may learn Contentation in outward things, 1 Tim. 6.6,8. And Answ. 2.

Thirdly, the Lord permits Christ and his children to be poor, that so he might sanctifie Poverty, which otherwise is a punishment of sin. And Answ. 3.

Fourthly, the Lord lets the righteous fall into poverty, that so he might commend the poor unto us, as companions of our afflictions. And Answ. 4.

Fifthly, Christ was poor, that so the prophecies concerning him, might be fulfilled; David saith, He was poor, and in misery: and herein he was a Type of Christ, or (as some think) speaks it prophetically of Christ [g]. And Answ. 5. g Carthus. in.

Sixthly, Christ was poor, that so he might shew to the people, that he did as he said, and practised what he preached: He came to preach, and teach men the contempt of riches, and of the world, and therefore it was not sutable for him to abound in riches. Carthus. ſ. Answ. 6.

Seventhly, Christ was poor, that not onely by words, but also in deed he might shew the truth of the life to come: for by a contempt of all temporall things, is fully declared a sure and certain hope of another life after this. Answ. 7.

Eighthly, Christ was poor, lest it should have been thought, that he drew Disciples after him for covetousnesse sake. Answ. 8.

Ninthly, Christ was poor, to teach us, that his kingdom was not of this world. Answ. 9.

§. 2. Iesus saith unto him. Sect. 2.

In this verse is contained Christs answer to the Scribe, who offered to follow him; and in the answer two things are observable, viz.

First, the sum of it; wherein is shewed:
- First, what the creatures have; The Foxes have holes. The Birds have nests.
- Secondly, what Christ hath not, The Son of man hath not where, &c.

Secondly, the Application of it, in these words, Iesus saith unto him. And therefore, although they be first in shew, yet they are last in the order of nature, which order I here now observe.

Our Saviours answer to the Scribe, seems to be not pertinent; and indeed, it doth not handsomly square with the words of the Scribe, but with his minde, meaning and understanding most pro-properly, which Christ shews is not hid from him; but as he hears the words of the mouth, so hee sees and knowes the thoughts of the heart; whence we may learn:

Observ. That Christ knowes the secrets of the heart, Psalme 7.9. *Zach.*4.10. *Heb.*4.12,13.

Quest. How doth it appear, that Christ sees the secrets of the hidden man of the heart.

Answ. 1. First, because he made the heart, Psal 33.15.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because he is true God, and this is Gods Royall Prerogative, *Ier.*17.9,10.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is clear that he sees the heart, because he is angry, and threatens to punish for the sins of the heart, and inward man, *Ier.*16.16.17. and 17,10. and 32.19.

Vers. 21. 22. Vers. 21, 22. And another of his Disciples said unto him, Lord suffer me first to goe, and bury my Father: But Iesus said unto him, follow me, and let the dead bury their dead.

Sect. 1. §. 1. And another of his Disciples said unto him.

Quest. 1. What is meant by this word Disciple?

Answ. 1. First, commonly this name Disciple is attributed to the twelve selected Apostles.

Answ. 2. Secondly, sometimes it is given to the seventy Disciples.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, sometimes for all those who purposely followed him: I dare here determine nothing positively, but only say with Beza, that this was none of the twelve; but whether hee was one of the seventy, or not, I know not.

Quest. 2. Why doth not Christ reject him, and let him go, as well as the Scribe?

Answ. 1. First, some answer, because he was his Disciple, one of his servants, and family.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but I conceive that this Scribe which Christ suffers to depart, was one of his Disciples also (at least outwardly) because it is said here; Another of his Disciples said unto him, &c. which seems to imply, that this Scribe whom Christ answered, was one of his Disciples also.

Quest. 3. If both these were Disciples, then why doth Christ detaine the one, and dismisse the other?

Answ. Because he would: whence we may learn,

Observ. That salvation depends upon the mere mercy, and free grace, and dispensation of God. Reade Iames 1.18. and Titus 3.5. and Rom. 9.18. and verse 15. and *Exod.*33.19. Luke 17.34. Yea, our dispositon unto good, is not the cause of Gods love towards us, but the effect.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Suffer me first to go and bury my Father.

Quest. 1. What doth this Disciple desire of Christ?

Answ. Leave to depart; hee seemes to be of a good, and honest heart (because Christ recals him, and retains him) and yet hee begs temporall things before spirituall: From whence we may observe;

Observ. 1 That there are Reliques of sinne, remaining in the Regenerate, Rom. 7.23, 25. and 2 Corinthians, 12,8,9.

Quest. 2. Why hath God left the remainders of sin in his children?

Answ. 1. First, sometimes to prove, and try us, whether we will strive to hate them, and expel them, or not, *Exod.*20.20. *Iudg.*2.22. 467

Answ. 2. Secondly, sometimes to humble us; that having such strong enemies, and reliques within us, wee might never be puffed up, but stand in awe, and fear, 2 *Chron.*32.25.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, alwayes to exercise us; God would not have Adam idle in Paradise, but he must dress the Garden, Gen. 2.15. Much lesse must wee be idle in this wicked world; and therefore that wee may be alwayes employed, the Lord hath left us enemies, that wee might bee the more watchfull, and carefull over our selves, and more couragious against our enemies. Reade Iob 7.1. and *Ephes.*6.12. &c. 2 *Tim.*4.7. &c. Heb. 12.1.4. and 1 *Pet.*2.11. And therfore the best, and al the Saints have their duties required of them, as long as they live: namely,

I. To weed, and root sin and vice out of their hearts. And

II. To hold fast what they have, whether grace, or strength against sin, *Revel.*2.11. And

III. To labour daily, to grow, and increase in grace, and strength more and more.

Quest. 3. For how long time did this Disciple aske leave to be gone?

Answ. Only for a small time, but untill hee could bury his Father: and yet Christ would not permit it.

Observ. 2. To teach us, that we must not absent our selves from Christ, not for a small time; but must labour to be present with the Lord continually; either in our words, by speaking of him, or in our hearts, by thinking of him, or in our works, by serving of him.

Quest. 4. Why must wee never depart from our Lord Christ?

Answ. 1. First, because in Negative Precepts we are obliged, Semper, & ad semper, we must never doe any thing which is forbidden us, as long as we live.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because we are alwayes in danger of sinning, and can bee free no longer then we stick close unto him: the occasions of sinne occurre daily, and wee shall daily fall into sin, except Christ protect us: And therfore we must be carefull never to forsake him.

Quest. 5. Must we never sin at all? this is too strict. May we not take liberty sometimes unto evill?

Answ. 1. First, sinne is poison, and therfore as a man must not once take a draught thereof, no more must hee sinne once; for one Cup of poyson is mortall to the body, and one sin to the soule.

Answ. 2. Secondly, sinne is a Serpent; and therefore if it can but get entrance with the tip of his tayle, hee will wind in his whole body: Suggestion unto evill being harboured, brings a man often times at length to finall impenitency.

Quest. 6. Why did this Disciple desire to depart?

Answ. To bury his Father.

Qu. 7. Whether was his Father dead (as Chrysostome thinkes) or onely aged, and decrepite, as Guilber imagines, and also Calvin? Whether was hee Mortuus, or Moribundus?

Answ. It matters not much whether, seeing the Scripture herein is silent; although I rather thinke the latter.

468 If his Father were dead, was it not a good worke to bury him? and if he were old, was it
Queſt. 8. not well done to attend upon him, and to comfort him? why then is it not granted?

Anſw. 1. First, certainly children are to honour, and tender their aged Parents, Levit. 19. 3. Prov. 23. 21.22. and it is an unchriſtian thing not to bury the dead.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, but the compariſon is here, whether we muſt forſake Chriſt, or Parents; and from our Saviour we are taught to contemne Parents, in reſpect of Chriſt.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, Chriſt forbids him to goe to his Father, by reaſon of the danger which was in it: namely,

I. His naturall affection unto his Father, might eſtrange his affection from his Maſter. Or

II. With Demas, the world might draw him away; that is, the inheritance, or riches which hee ſhould enjoy by his Fathers death, might bewitch and enſnare him, Chryſ. ſ.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, our Saviour doth not prohibite him, becauſe Parents are to bee deſpiſed, but becauſe heavenly doctrine, and ſpirituall, and ſaving knowledge is more neceſſary, Chryſ. ſ. Whence wee may learn, Obſerv. 3 That no excuſe is to be admitted, which diſtracts from Chriſt, or Religion, Luke 14. 18.

Why muſt nothing with-hold, or withdraw us from Chriſt?

Anſw. 1. First, becauſe wee are wholly, and peculiarly his, being redeemed by him, 1 Cor. 6. 20.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe we have but a ſmall time to ſerve him in, much time being ſpent wherein we ſerved him not at all, 1 Cor. 9. 27. &c.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, becauſe all things are nothing in regard of Chriſt, and his ſervice; there being nothing which can afford us ſo much profit, pleaſure, hearts eaſe, and true content, or make us ſo truly happy, as Chriſt can.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Follow thou me.

This Diſciple deſires leave to depart, but Chriſt will not permit it: Teaching us,

Obſerv. 1 That Chriſt recalleth thoſe, who are about to depart from him. For as he calls ſome (Prov. 1. 20, &c. and 8. 1. and 9. 3. Eſay 55. 1. Matth. 11. 28. Iohn 7. 37. Revel. 22. 17.) ſo he recals others, Ier. 3. 1. 12.

Queſt. 1. How doth God recall thoſe who ſtray from him?

Anſw. 1. First, ſometimes by himſelfe; thus he called the woman of Samaria, Iohn 4. 9. and Paul, Act. 9.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſometimes by his Prophets; thus he recalled the Iſraelites, 1 Sam. 7. 5.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, ſometimes by good, & godly Kings, 2 Chron. 30.

Anſw 4. Fourthly, ſometimes by neighbours, or ſervants; thus he called back Naaman, 2 King. 5. 13.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, ſometimes God reclaims by Angels; thus he did the Iſraelites, Iudg. 2. 2.

Queſt. 2. Why doth Chriſt call back thoſe who would depart?

Anſw. 1. First becauſe hee would not have them to periſh, Ezech. 18. 23. 32. and 2 Pet. 3. 9.

Secondly, becauſe hee doth not deſtroy the wicked by and by, but ſpares them long, giving them a large time of repentance, to ſee if they will turn unto him, Ezech. 34. 6. 7. and 2 Chron. 36, 16. Rom. 2. 5. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, Chriſt will not ſuffer his to depart from him, becauſe hee hath promiſed to direct them: Our Saviour doth not only receive thoſe who come unto him, or begin to worke the worke of grace in the Elect, or to prepare them, or to give power unto them, to obey if they will (as he did unto Adam;) But he hath promiſed to refrain them, and curbe them from ſin, and keep them: Yea, to bee a Phyſician unto them, Matth. 9. and by his Spirit to direct them in the wayes of grace, Iohn 14. Anſw. 3.

How doth God refrain, and keep back, or call back his children from ſin? Queſt. 3.

First, ſometimes by a preventing grace: My grace ſhall be ſufficient for thee, 2 Cor. 12. 9. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, ſometimes by affliction, as hee did Iehoſhaphat, 2 Chron. 19. 2. and Manaſſes, 33. 12, 13. Anſw. 2.

But many are corrected, who are not converted, many afflicted, who are not reclaimed from ſin, Proverb. 1. 24. &c. Object:

First, certainly it is moſt true, as wee ſee in the Iſraelites (Ier. 44. 16. and 51. 9.) and in Pharaoh, who were hardned under the rod, Exod. 9. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, but there are in correction two things to be obſerved: namely, Anſw. 2.

I. It is an excellent ſigne when affliction doth curbe, and call us back; and with Peter, makes us weep bitterly, Mat. 26. and with Paul, be obedient to Gods voice, Act. 26 19. and Gal. 1. 16. and with David to humble our ſelves, 2 Sam. 12. And on the contrary, it is an ill ſigne, not to bee reclaimed by correction, but more hardned.

II. For a wicked man not to be corrected, but be permitted to ſin willingly, without any bridle of reſtraint, is a moſt miſerable ſign of a man in a moſt deplorable eſtate, and condition: yea, of a Baſtard, and not a Son, Heb. 12. 8.

How muſt we follow Chriſt? Queſt. 4.

First, ſome follow to proſecute, and ſlay, thus Aſabel followed Abner, 2 Sam. 2. 19. but wee muſt not thus follow Chriſt. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, ſome follow to imitate; thus wee are forbidden to follow a multitude unto evill, Exod. 23. 1 but are commanded to follow Chriſt; for we muſt ſtrive and labour to imitate him, 1 Pet. 2. 21. But yet this following is not meant in this place. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, ſome follow that they may be protected, and fed: Thus the Lord promiſeth, that if his people will feare, ſerve, and obey him, then they ſhall continue following the Lord their God (1 Sam. 12. 14.) that is, then God will ſtill continue to protect, and provide for them. Thus many followed Chriſt, that they might be fed by him; but this following is not ſpoken of in this place. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, ſome follow Chriſt, as Diſciples, and ſervants; and this is that which is here commanded. Anſw. 4.

From whence we may learn, that we ought to follow Chriſt, as ſervants follow their Maſters, giving our ſelves wholly up unto him, both in bodies Obſerv. 2 bodies, and soules Reade Num. 14. 24. and 32. 15. and Deut. 13. 4. and 1 Cor. 6. 20.

Quest. 5. What is required of servants towards their Masters?

Answ. 1. First, a servant must forsake all other men, and adhere only unto his Master; because a man can not serve two Masters, Mat. 6. 24. and 19. 27. and John 10. 5. and 1 King. 18, 21.

Answ. 2. Secondly, a servant must acknowledge him whom he serves to be his Lord, and Master, Mal. 1. 6. John 14. 4 27.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, a servant must diligently, and industriously apply himselfe to his Masters busines, Deut. 28. 14. and Jer. 48 10.

Quest. 6. Why must we serve Christ?

Answ. 1. First, because he redeemed us for this end, that wee might bee a peculiar people unto himselfe, serving him in righteousnesse, and true holinesse, Luke 1. 75. Titus 2. 14.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is a great honour to serve the Lord; and therefore we should not be ambitious in other things, and here negligent. It is held no small honour, nor privilege to bee the Kings servant; and therefore much more to be Christs.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is our duty to serve Christ; and therefore there is great reason to serve him.

I. Souldiers will follow their Captain; and therfore wee should follow Christ, who is our Chieftain, and Leader.

II. Orphans should follow their Guardians; and therfore we ought to follow Christ, our only Defender, and Protector.

III. Children should follow their Parents; and therfore wee ought to follow Christ, our everlasting Father, Esay 9. 6.

IIII. Schollers should follow their Masters, and Pupils their Tutors: wherfore it is our duty to follow Christ, our Doctor and Teacher.

Quest. 7. How may we know, whether we serve Christ or not?

Answ. By what was said before, Question 5. That is, let us examine our selves, by these signes; namely,

First, whether doe wee forsake all things for Christ? that is,

I. All our sins: because we know that sinne is contrary to the service of Christ: yea, directly opposite unto Christ; therfore for Christs sake we desire to abstaine from sin, and whatsoever is evill, Deut. 8. 19. Hos. 2. 7. Rom. 6. 2. 18. 22. This is a good signe of a good servant.

II. Doe wee for Christs sake deny our owne wils, submitting our selves wholly to be guided, and directed by him? (Numbers 15. 39. and Iob 31. 7.) Certainly it is a hopefull signe, of a happy servant: Thus wee must examine our selves, whether we acknowledge Christ only to be our Master, or whether Sathan, the world, sin, or our own wils, be our Master.

Secondly, examine whether thou carriest thy selfe as becometh a servant: for it is not enough for a servant to acknowledge such an one to bee his Master, but hee must behave himselfe also like a servant, both in mind, humbling himself unto his Master, and in life, doing the worke, and service of his Master, and that not with eye service, but in singlenesse of heart. So the servants of the Lord must serve him with their minds, and hearts, and inward man (1 King. 14. 8. Mat. 8. 19. and 15. 9 Deut. 30. 10. Rom. 7. 15, 19.) and also in their lives, working the Lords worke, and not their own, Mat 5. 16. Psalme 38. 20. Ephes. 4. 1. Philip. 2. 15. and 1 Tim 6. 18. and 1 Pet. 2. 19. 469

Thirdly, examine we, whether we worke the worke of the Lord industriously, or negligently; servants must be both painfull, and carefull, and constant, in their Masters service: And so must wee.

I. Be diligent in the service of the Lord, and the exercises of Religion; not performing them remisly, superficially, or sleightly, but diligently, and industriously, Phil. 2. 12. and 3. 12. Heb. 12. 4.

II. We must be carefull, as well as painfull, lest through carelesnesse, heedlesnesse, or forgetfulnesse, we do something which we should not, or leave undone something, which wee should do, Ephesians 5. 16.

III. We must be constant, and perseverant in the service of Christ, as well as industrious, and carefull. Wee must not take the Plow of God in our hands, and look back; wee must not begin in the spirit, and end in the flesh; we must not begin the Lords worke, and give over: But wee must continue running till our race be finished; we must continue fighting, untill the last enemy Sathan be overcome; we must continue working, untill the Evening, and Sun-set of our life, Num. 14. 24. and 32. 11. Deut. 1. 36. Iosh. 14. 14.

How must we follow Christ? Quest. 8.

First, in faith; walking by faith, not by sight, (2 Cor. 5. 7.) placing our whole confidence, and affiance in him: But this is Christs worke, (Iohn 6. 29. Philip. 3. 14.) hee only enabling us hereunto. Answ. 1. 1 Sam. 12. 14.

Secondly, as wee must follow Christ by faith, (beleeving in him) so wee must follow him by obedience, obeying of him, in whatsoever he requires of us, Deut. 13. 4. Iohn 14, 15. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, we must follow Christ in profession, professing him before men, and our selves to bee his servants, Romans 10. 10. Answ.

Fourthly, wee must follow Christ in imitation, Philippians 2. 5. and Ephes. 5. 1. Hebr. 12. 2. and 1 Pet. 2. 21. and 1 Iohn 2. 6. and 1 Cor. 4. 16. and 1 Thessal. 1, 6. Answ. 4.

Wherein must we imitate Christ? Quest. 9.

First, in humility, for hee was humble, Mat. 11. 28. Answ. 1.

Secondly, in patience; for he was as a Lambe dumb before the Shearer, 1 Thess. 2. 14. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, in love towards our brethren; for he loved all his, 1 Iohn 3. 16. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, in love unto our enemies; for hee doth good unto the evill, Mat. 5. 44. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, in freedom from fraud, and deceit; for no guile was found in his mouth, 1 Pet. 2. 22. Answ. 5.

Sixthly, in the love of goodnesse, and good duties; for he was given unto prayer, and holinesse, Luke 22. 39. Answ. 6.

§. 4. Let the dead, bury their dead. Sect. 4.

470 Quest. Is the burying of the dead to bee neglected, and omitted as evill, that our Saviour will not permit this Disciple to bury his Father?

Answ. 1. To bury the dead is a Christian worke; and therfore Christ doth not simply prohibite it. Reade Gen. 25.9. and 35.29. and 47.29. Iosh. 24. 30. Amos 2.1.

Quest. 2. Why doth humanity, and Christianity require that the dead should be buried?

Answ. 1. First, because it was given as a curse, not to be buried, but to be cast out like a dead Dog; and hence I conceive it was, that the Fathers, and Patriarkes were so carefull to provide for their Funerals, Genesis 49.29. [m] m Gen. 50.25.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because to lay up the bodies of those who are deceas'd, doth testifie our hope of the Resurrection. Our Saviour to this Disciple, who desired leave to goe bury his Father, answers, Let the dead bury their dead, but follow thou me: As if he would say, thou art now called from amongst the dead, and therefore let them alone, and meddle no more with them, but follow mee. In these words then our Saviour Christ would have us to observe,

Observ. That we are all dead, untill we be called, and quickned by Christ.

Quest. 3. What death doth our Saviour here mean?

Answ. There is a three-fold death; namely, temporall of the body, spirituall of the soule, eternall, both of body and soule: Now the Text speaks of the second; the meaning therefore thereof, is: That all men by nature are spiritually dead in sinne.

Quest. 4. How doth this appeare?

Answ. 1. First, from these places of Scripture, Luke 15. 24.32. Iohn 5. 25. Romans 6. 13. and 2 Cor. 5.14. Ephes. 2.1. and 5.14. and Colos. 2.13.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because sin hath slaine al, Rom. 3.23. and 5. 12. Here two things are to bee observed, viz.

I. God created us pure, good, and living creatures, both in soule, and body; giving unto man a double perfection; to wit,

First, Naturall; and thus in his body he had strength, agility, nimblenesse, soundnesse, health, beauty, and the like; and in his soule, reason, will, memory, judgement; yea all the faculties therof perfect.

Secondly, Spirituall, which consisted in these two things: namely,

I. An immunity from sinne, man in his first creation being without spot, or wrinkle.

II. In strength unto good, man in his first forming, being able to perform whatsoever God required of him: Now this spirituall perfection is called in Scripture, sometimes Vprightnesse, as Eccles. 7.29 sometimes Glory, Rom. 3. 23. & sometimes Honour, Psalme 8.5.

II. The sin of Adam hath corrupted all the sons of Adam, both in soule and body: Vulneratur in naturalibus, & expoliatur in gratuitis [v]: Mankind by the sin of the first man, is wounded in his naturall faculties, but killed outright in his spirituall; as appears thus.

v Beda Glos. ord. & Luk. 10.

First, although our naturall faculties remaine, yet they are wounded with a deepe, and double wound, viz.

I. Hebetantur in tanto, they are dull, senslesse, blockish, and brutish in regard of what they were at first before the fall.

II. Divertuntur a vero objecto: All the members of our bodies, and faculties of our souls, are now as so many instruments of the service of sin and satan; man by nature rebelling against God, both in soul and body.

Secondly, our spirituall faculties, and graces (whereof the present Text speaks) are wholly, and altogether killed, and that in this order.

I. Adam by sinning, forsook and left God: [n] hence Thomas calls originall sin, Ablationem mentis à Deo; & aversionem voluntatis (Aq. 1, 2, 82, 2.) An alienation of the soul, and aversion of the will from God.

n Augustin. civit. Dei. 13.13.

II. Adam having forsaken and left God, loseth originall righteousnesse: Hence Aquinas [o] saith, Originale peccatum est carentia justitiæ originalis; Originall sin is a deprivation of originall righteousnesse.

o Thom. 1. 2. 82.1. ex Anselm.

III. Adam having lost his originall righteousnesse, is then forsaken of God, Desertus ab eo primò, [p] whom first he forsook; for as God was primus in Amore, so he was ultimus in desertione: that is, God loved us before we loved him [q], but God left us not untill we had left him. Deseruit Adamum Deus, id est, ablulit gratiam, quâ stare posset [r]; God forsook Adam, that is, withdrew from him his grace, whereby he might stand. And this was true death. Illud (Gen. 2. 17.) intellige, cum anima deseritur a suâ vitâ, viz. Deo [s]. That death which is threatned, Gen. 2.17. is a spirituall death, when the soul is separated from her life, that is, God [t].

q 1 Ioh. 4. 10.
r Aug. de corr. & gratia.
s Aug. de civit. Dei. 13. 15.
t Ephes. 4. 18.

IV God having left and forsaken man, hence followeth these two things; to wit,

First, corruptio impacta, sin and uncleanesse doth seaz upon man radically and hereditarily; insomuch as the Father now doth derive sin, as well as life, unto his childe; as Gehazi did leprosie to his posterity [u]: yea every man is contaminated and corrupted from the crown of the head, to the sole of the foot, (Esa. 1. 6.) the very imaginations and cogitations of man being evill, Gen. 6.5. and 8. 21. Omnes animæ partes inficit, Sin hath now tainted and polluted all the parts of the soul, saith [w] Thomas: yea four deadly wounds did man receive by sin, said Beda, (Glos. ordin. s. Luc. 10) In ratione ignorantia, In voluntate infirmitas, In irascibili malitia, In concupiscibili concupiscentia.

u 2 Kings 5. 27.
w Thom. 1. 2. 82. 3. & 3. 3.

I. In his reason	He was wounded with	Ignorance.
II. In his will		Weaknesse.
III. In his irascible faculty.		Malice.
IV. In his concupiscible		Lust and concupiscence.

Secondly, Potestas boni ablata; God having left man, he left grace, and the power of doing good; so that now, though he would do good, he cannot; and though he would not do evill, yet he doth it daily, Rom. 7. 18, 19. Postquam anima Deum deseruerat, famulam (carnem) subditam omnino non habebat [x]; After the soul ran away from the Lord her God, her servant (the flesh) would be no x Aug. civ. Dei. 13. 13

no longer subject, or obedient unto her; but as she rebels against her Master, God, so the flesh rebels against her Mistris, the Soul. So that now Man by his own strength can neither

I. Do any thing that is good, Rom. 7. 14, 19. Neither

II. Have any good desires; for God gives the will, as well as the deed, Phil. 2. 13. Neither

III. Think a good thought, 2 Cor. 5. 3.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, that which hath been said, that all men naturally are spiritually dead in sin, will most evidently appear, by a plain observation of the Degrees of Adams fall, which were these;

I. Sathan (under the form of a Serpent) tempts man, Gen. 3. 1, &c. Heb. 2. 14.

II. Adam is overcome by the Tempter, and sins against God, Gen. 3. and Rom 5. 12, 14.

III. Adam by eating of the forbidden fruit, violates and tramples the Law of God under his feet, Gen. 2. 17.

IV. From the violation of the Law, springs up corruption; that is, the Law being broken, man became to be corrupted, Iob 15. 14. and 25. 4. Psalm 51. 7.

V. Mans nature being corrupted, sin presently shews it self in the life and actions, growing and encreasing in strength daily more and more.

VI. Hence we were detained in the chains of death, and sate in the shadow of death, (Luke 1. 79.) as condemned persons are reserved unto the day of execution.

Object: Against that which hath been said, that naturally men are dead unto all good, it will be objected, The Morall man performs many good works, yea doth many duties which the Law of God enjoyns: And therefore we are not killed out-right in our spiritu.ll faculties.

Answ. In every good action there are two things to be considered; namely, Instrumentum operans, & Anima movens: First, the work wrought; then secondly, the first mover of the work: The action performed, must be good, and such as the Law commands; and the intention must be good also, in the performance of the work, for otherwise the action is not accepted. Simon Magus made a dead body to stir the eyes, head, and body, but it was far from true life: so, a Morall man may perform a Morall good work, but yet it is but a dead work, because it proceeds not from the life of Grace, Heb. 9. 14.

Quest. 5. How, or wherein are naturall men dead?

Answ. 1. First, they are dead in regard of Grace, and that in a double respect, viz.

I. They can do nothing that good is, (Rom. 7. 14, 18.) All their works being either fooliſh, or proud, or counterfeit, or hypocriticall, or phariſaicall, or weak, or performed for fear of God, or man.

II. They cannot cease to sin, 2 Pet. 2. 14. Rom. 7. 5.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they are dead in regard of life eternall; for so long as they are naturall, there is no hope of heaven, or salvation, Iohn 8. 21. and Rom. 6. 16, 21, 23.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they are dead in regard of joy and comfort; for to the naturall man there can be no true peace: indeed a man may sleep in a wilderneſſe amongſt wilde beasts, or in the ships Maſt, and neither perceive, nor conceive, nor fear danger: but when he awakes, he will with terrour and amazement, consider of his perill: so, Naturall men may lull themselves in a carnall security, and cry peace, peace, unto themselves, but if ever they awake, they will have an horrible expectation of wrath to come[z].

z Heb. 10. 27.

Fourthly, they are dead in regard of sense: for Answ. 4.

I. They are not sensible of their evill condition, nor perillous estate, Esa. 28. 14. Revel. 3. 17. Nor

II. Are sensible of their wants, or of those good things which they are deprived, and disinherited of: and therefore, not being sensible of the lack of them, do not earnestly endeavour for them, or seriously desire them, Psalme 42. 1. and 63. 1. and Iohn 3. 19.

Quest. 6. What things must not the naturall man trust in, or adhere unto?

Answ. 1. First, not to his naturall strength, in performing of what is good, for that is but weakneſſe, Iob 14. 4. and 15. 14.

Answ. 2. Secondly, not to his wit or wisdom, in understanding of what is good: for although he may understand many things which concern his body and temporall estate, and be very crafty in outward things; yet spirituall things he is not able truly to take up, 1 Cor. 2. 14.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, not to his wisdom, in avoiding of evill; for Sathan is more crafty to tempt and assault, than any naturall man can be to resist and withstand temptation: because naturally our judgment erres, and our care sleeps.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, not to the strength of his resolution; many a man resolves that he will never swear more, nor be drunk more, nor fall into his accustomed sins any more; but yet at length starts aside like a broken Bow, turning with the Dog to his vomit of sin. Indeed a natural man may be resolute in worldly things, but not in the things of the Lord, because he hath no true love unto God, or goodneſſe within, nor any true change of his affections.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, the naturall man may not trust to his own honesty in obeying; for he cannot obey God, either generally in all things, or perpetually for all times, but onely sometimes, and in some things; which comes far short of true obedience.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, he must not trust to his conscience, in repenting, or condemning of sin: for

I. Often the naturall man condemns another mans sins, but not his own. And

II. Often erects a false repentance; as the Drunkard after his Cups, and the Swearer after his Oathes, will cry God mercy, and beat their hands upon their brests; and think this their repentance will serve the Lords turn, and procure from him pardon. Yea

III. Oftentimes, the naturall man seems to expresse a great measure of hearty sorrow; but it is for the punishment, not for the sin, as Ahab did, 1 Kings 21. And therefore God will not accept of it.

Se-

472 Seventhly and lastly, let not the naturall man
Answ. 7. trust to his confidence or faith, in beleeving; for the faith of such, is but blinde presumption, Esa. 28.18. Thus I say, the naturall man must neither trust to his strength in working, nor to his wit in understanding, nor to his prudence in avoiding, nor to his power in resolving, nor to his honesty in obeying, nor to his conscience in repenting, nor to his confidence in beleeving; for in all these he may be deceived.

Quest. 7. What things or works may a spiritually dead naturall man do?

Answ. The naturall man may do these things, to wit.

First, he may sin greedily, with the full bent, and consent of the will, Ephes 4.19. he may run on unto sin, as a horse unto the battell.

Secondly, he may perform naturall works; as eat, drink, sleep, and the like.

Thirdly, he may perform politick and civill works; as buying, selling, trading, purchasing, &c.

Fourthly, he may perform Morall works, or the acts of vertue; he may give Alms, forgive offenders, love true and honest dealing, be chaste, and temperate, and the like.

Fifthly, he may perform religious actions, quoad materiam informem, in regard of the dead letter, or liveleſse outward work; for he may hear the word, he may pray, he may fear the wrath and anger of God, he may be pricked in heart, yea (with Herod, Mark 6.20.) he may obey in many things. Reade Heb. 6. 4,5,6. But Sixthly, he can do nothing well, quoad formam formally, or in regard of the manner of doing: This form of good works, is faith, and without this nothing we do can be pleasing unto God[a]. Deus remunerator Adverbiorum[b]: God rewards Bene, onely that which is well done, in regard of the manner. And therefore naturall men being without faith, all their works are but like Sodoms fruit, or deaf Nuts, or (as Bellarmine saith) a carkasse which hath strong, and well set members, but wants life.

a Heb 11. 6.
b Bern.

Quest. 8. Is there no hope of life then to the naturall man?

Answ. He may live again, although he be dead,

But by the help { Of another, not Of himself; } and that { Miraculously; not Naturally, or Physically.

A man that is dead, cannot infuse life into himself, but he may be restored unto life by another, (as many were, whereof we reade in holy writ) But even this is above nature, and plainly miraculous, for any to restore a dead man to life: So is it with naturall men, they are dead in sin, and it is not in their power to quicken themselves, or to infuse the life of grace into themselves; but it is the work of another, namely, of Christ, and that not by any naturall, but by a supernaturall work, who regenerates us by his Spirit, Joh. 3.3,4,5.

How may dead men be revived, and restored unto life? Quest. 9.

Answ. They must do as Martha did, when she desired, that her dead brother Lazarus might bee raised up to life: that is,

First, they must fetch Christ unto the dead soule: Then

Secondly, they must pray, that the stone of insensibility may be removed; that is, that their hard hearts may be mollified, and softned, and made sensible of sin.

Thirdly, pray that he may heare the voice, and call of Christ, and word of God, which calleth him from the grave of sin, and perdition.

Fourthly, pray, that being called, and hearing Christs voice, hee may come out from the grave of sin, forsaking it, and leaving it for ever.

Fifthly, pray that his face being unbound, hee may see Christ, John 11.44.

Sixthly, when he is raised up by Christ, and seeth him, then let him sup with him, and stay with him, and never depart from him, Revelations 3.20.

Seventhly, by how much longer hee hath laid in the grave of sin, or death, or by how much the worse hee stinks, in regard of his wicked life; by so much the more fervently, and constantly pray, untill he be raised, and restored.

How may we know, whether we are spiritually dead or not? Que. 10.

Answ. Examine in thee these things: namely,

First, art thou given to thy pleasure, following that with joy, but hearing the word of God with wearinesse, calling that a hard saying b? Then certainly thou art but a dead man. b Iohn. 6. 60.

Secondly, art thou glewed unto the world, and thy wealth, and profit? Iames 4.4. 1 John 2.15. Undoubtedly then thou art yet dead in sin.

Thirdly, art thou puffed up with worldly wisedome, which is contrary to the wisedome of the Spitit? then it is a signe that thou art not as yet quicked, Rom. 8.6. &c.

These three hold men diversly: to wit,

First, pleasure luls men asleepe.

Secondly, the world compels men (as in chaines) to obey, and serve her.

Thirdly, wisedom deludes, and deceives men, with false shewes.

Fourthly, art thou not as yet regenerated, and changed? then certainly the life of grace is not as yet infused, John 3.5.

Fifthly, dost thou not as yet beleeve? then it is to be feared that thou art yet alive in nature, but dead in grace.

Wherein must naturall men labour to acquire life? Quest. 11.

Answ. 1. First, in generall, in the whole man; that is, both in the body and soule, in the outward life, and in the inward man, in the will, and memory, and reason, and spirit, and mind, Ephesians 4. 24. and 1 Thess. 5.23.

Se-

Anſw. 2. Secondly, more particularly, we muſt labour to acquire life in three things: to wit,

I. In ſenſu, in our ſenſe and apprehenſion: Nothing comes unto the underſtanding, which was not firſt in the ſenſe; and therefore we muſt labour that our underſtandings may be enlightned, and that the ſcales of ignorance may fall off from our eyes, becauſe ſenſe is the outer gate of the ſoule, Epheſ. 1. 18. Rom. 11. 8. and 1 Iohn 2. 11. In a word, he that deſires the light of grace, muſt labour firſt to be ſenſible of the blindneſſe of nature; and he who longs for ſpirituall life, muſt ſtrive to be ſenſible of that ſpirituall death, wherein he lies buried, Luke 11. 34.

II. In fide, in our faith, and confidence; faith is the eye wherby wee ſee God, Mat. 5. 8. faith brings us to ſaving knowledge, Iohn 17. 3. and workes in us true experience of the love of God:

c Philip. 3. 10. And therefore let us not content our ſelves with dead dreams, or carnall conjectures, but labour for a true, lively, working, and applicative faith.

III. In robore, in our ſtrength, and power; that is, labour that wee may bee ſtrengthned with d Epheſ. 3. 16. might, and power, in the inward man, not contenting our ſelves with the power of nature, which is but impotency it ſelfe. Now this living, or lively power which we muſt labour for, is three-fold: namely,

Firſt, Poteſtas pugnandi, power to fight againſt ſinne, and Sathan manfully, untill we have pree Heb. 12. 4. and 1 Pet. 2. 11. vailed e.

Secondly, Poteſtas obediendi, power to obey God in ſome good meaſure, in that which he requires of us, in a new life.

Thirdly, Poteſtas amandi, gaudendi, power to love God, and good duties, and to rejoyce in the performance thereof, Eſay 58. 13.

Que. 12. From whom is this life to be acquired?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, we muſt ſeeke it of God the Father, Eſay 25. 8. Hoſ. 13. 14. Rom. 4. 17.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, we muſt ſeek it of God the Sonne, Luke 1. 78. 79. Iohn 1. 4. and 2 Cor. 5. 15. and 2 Tim. 1. 10.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, wee muſt ſeek it of God the Holy Ghoſt, Iohn 6. 63. Rom. 8. 10, 11. and 1 Cor. 6. 11. And therefore let us invocate God the Father, in the name, and mediation of God the Sonne, to infuſe this ſpirituall life of grace into us, by the operation of his bleſſed Spirit.

Que. 13. What means muſt we uſe for the obtaining of this ſpirituall life?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, wee muſt be watchfull, and circumſpect over our wayes (Epheſ. 5. 15.) for grace is not found in the way of ſecurity, or with ſleeping upon the bed of eaſe, Coloſ. 3. 1.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, we muſt be diligent in hearing, Iohn 5. 24, 25. and 2 Tim. 1. 10. Now there are two things to be heard: namely,

I. The Law; this wee muſt hear that we may be humbled therby, Rom. 7. 9.

II. The Goſpel; this we muſt hear, that we may be counſelled and comforte therby, 2 Cor. 2. 16.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, we muſt die unto ſin; Generatio unius eſt corruptio alterius, the vivifying of grace, is the mortifying of ſin: And the more grace increaſes, the more ſin decreaſes, Rom. 6. 11. and 1 Cor. 15. 36.

Now there are two kinds of death: namely,
- First, Concupiſcentiæ, of ſinne and luſt (Coloſ. 3. 5.) for all ſins, evill affections, and luſts, are to be mortified.
- Secondly, Confidentiæ, of hope and confidence; for wee muſt deny our ſelves, & not truſt at al in any thing we do.

Fourthly, wee muſt labour to beleeve, Iohn 8. 24. And that by a faith, not of our own framing, but of Gods infuſing, Coloſ. 2. 12. Anſw. 4.

Fifthly, we muſt perſevere in all theſe as long as we live; that is, both in watchfulneſſe, and hearing, and mortifying of ſinne, and beleeving with a faith approved by works, Revelat. 2, 11. Epheſ. 6. 13. Anſw. 5.

What ſhall wee gaine by this ſpirituall life, that we muſt take ſo much paines for the procuring of it? Que. 14.

Firſt, if wee be made partakers of this life of grace, then we ſhall bee made fellow Citizens of the Saints; yea the Heirs of God, Rom. 8. 17. Epheſ. 2, 6. 19. Anſw. 1.

Second. by this ſpirituall life, we gain ſpiritual liberty (2 Cor. 3, 17.) from ſin, Rom. 6. 14. & 8. 11. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, by this life we gain light, and knowledge, and ſpirituall rejoycing, Eſay 9. 2. Luke 1. 80. and 1 Pet. 1. 8. And therfore it is worth al the paines. Anſw. 3.

VERS. 25. And his Diſciples came to him, and awoke him, ſaying, Lord ſave us, wee periſh. Verſ. 25.

§. 1. His Diſciples came to him. Sect. 1.

This action of the Diſciples, in comming to Chriſt, may teach us the degrees of our comming unto Chriſt.

How do we come unto Chriſt? or by what ſteps? Queſt.

Firſt, the carnall man is abſent from Chriſt, and a ſtranger unto him, Mat. 18. 11. Luke 15. 13. Epheſ. 2, 12. and 1 Pet. 25. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, therefore God ſends affliction; as to the prodigall poverty, and to the Jews miſery, Pſalme 107. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, and then we come to him (Pſal. 119. 67. 71.) One of theſe two wayes, either Anſw. 3

I. By prayer, as the Diſciples here did, crying, Lord ſave us. Or

II. By repentance, as the Prodigall did: Father I have ſinned againſt heaven, and againſt thee.

§. 2. They awoke him. Sect. 2.

Chriſt indeed is ſometimes abſent from his children, which is here expreſſed by his being aſleep.

How is Chriſt abſent from his children? Queſt.

Firſt, ſometimes he is abſent from them, by withdrawing his grace from them, and permitting them to ſin: thus he abſented himſelfe from Peter, and David, for a time. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, ſometimes he is abſent from them, in comfort; when hee permits them to fall into Anſw. 2.

grievous

474 grievous afflictions; thus hee abſented himſelfe from Iob for a time, and from David, Pſal 22.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Save us, or wee periſh.

The Diſciples here in their diſtreſſe pray unto Chriſt, and are preſerved: whence we may learn:

Obſerv. That the prayers of the righteous ſhall certainly be heard.

Obiect. But many pray, whom God anſwers not.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, God is alwayes able to heare, and helpe us if he pleaſe, Daniel 3.17.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, if he do not helpe us when we pray, yet he will turn his deniall, and our diſtreſſe unto our good: for all things worke together for the beſt unto the righteous, Rom. 8.28.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, and although hee do not helpe us at the firſt, yet he can afterwards; as we ſee in Iſraels fighting againſt Benjamin, who was overcome once & againe (Iudg. 20.21.25.) although God bad them fight (verſe 18.23.) but at length they wholly overcome them, verſe 35. &c.

Verſ. 26. VERS 26. And hee ſaith unto them, why are yee fearfull, O yee of little faith? Then he aroſe, and rebuked the winds, and the ſea, and there was a great calme.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Why are yee fearfull?

Queſt. 1. Why doth our Saviour here reprove, and upbraid them? is not prayer unto Chriſt in diſtreſſe a ſigne of faith?

Anſw. Our Saviour doth not upbraid them for praying; but for theſe things, namely,

Firſt becauſe they were fearfull, & cowardly; for the righteous ſhould be as bold as Lyons, Prov. 28.1.

Secondly, becauſe they doubted; and that,

I. Of ſafety, ſave us, or we periſh. And

II. Of Chriſts care of them: Careſt thou not that we periſh, Marke 4.57.

Queſt. 2. How doth it appear, that they doubted of Chriſts care of them?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, by their running unto him; as though Chriſt could not do, what Paul did: The Apoſtle ſaith, though he was abſent in body, yet he was preſent in care, Coloſ. 2.5. and 1 Cor. 5.3. And therefore certainly much more is Chriſt: yea, in regard of his Deitie hee is every where preſent: And therefore there was no need of their running unto Chriſt, to put him in mind of their danger.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, it is evident that they doubted of Chriſts care of them, by their awakening of him; And they awoke him, ſaying, Maſter ſave us: as though with the body, and humanity, the Deitie had ſlept: when as indeed, Hee that keepeth Iſrael, doth neither ſlumber nor ſleepe, Pſalme 121.4.

Queſt. 3. Is it not good to fear, that our Saviour thus upbraids them, Why are yee fearfull? Yea, if it bee not good to fear, then why doth Chriſt ſleepe, and by ſleeping thus terrifie them?

Anſw. Chriſt ſlept, not that he might affright them, but that he might exerciſe them, and learn them by danger, not to fear danger. Whence wee may obſerve, Obſerv. That diſturbing, and diſquieting fear, is to be expelled out of the heart of the faithfull, Luke 12.32.

Queſt. 4. How many ſorts of fear are there, that wee may learn which is good, and which is bad?

Anſw. There is a twofold feare, to wit,
- Firſt, of God, which is a godly feare.
  - Firſt, dangers are to bee feared providently, Geneſis 32. 9. &c.
  - Secondly, dangers are not to bee feared with a Diſtracting feare; for that is here forbidden, and Matthew 10. 28. and Luke 1.74. Eſay 8.12.
- Secondly, of men, which is a worldly fear: herein obſerve theſe two things;

Queſt. 5. Why is this diſtracting, and diſturbing feare to be expulſed, and driven away?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe this fear ariſeth from ſin, Geneſis 3.7.10.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe this feare is threatned as a puniſhment of ſinne, Deuter. 32.25. Iob 18.14. Prov. 3.24.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, becauſe it is a ſign of diffidencie, and diſtruſt: for the faithfull (for the moſt part) are free from it, 2 King. 6.14, 15. Daniel 3. and 6. Pſal. 3.7. and 23.4. and 27.1. and 46.3. Wherefore this feare argues either, I. No faith. Or II. a falſe faith; or III. A ſleepie faith, or IV. A weak faith.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, becauſe this terrifying fear ſhall be puniſhed, Revel. 21.8.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, this feare is to be expelled, becauſe wee have promiſes of protection, and preſervation, and helpe, Eſay 41.14.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, this feare deters us from the profeſſion of Chriſt, and the Goſpel: and therefore there is great reaſon that it ſhould bee caſt out of the heart. Reade Iohn 9.22. and 12.42.

Queſt. 6. What muſt we feare?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, wee muſt feare God: and that

I. Leſt we offend him, and provoke him unto anger by our ſins. And

II. Leſt we neglect to glorifie him in our lives, and converſations. And

III. Leſt we ſhould forget him, and not have him alwayes before our eyes.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, wee muſt feare our ſalvation. And that I. Leſt through careleſneſſe, or fearleſneſſe wee ſhould fall into ſinne, Epheſians 5.15. And II. Leſt wee ſhould be temporally puniſhed for our ſin, as Ier. 36.16. and 1 Corinthians 11.32. And III. Leſt wee ſhould be eternally tormented for our iniquities, Deut. 28.66. Heb. 4.1.3.

Sect. 2. §. 2. O yee of little faith.

Obſerv. 1 Our Saviour by this phraſe, would have us take notice: That faith may be true, although it be ſmall: as appears by Matth. 6.30. and 16.8. and Luke 12.28. and Mat. 14:29. Marke 9.24. Cum fides in Obiecto, non erret, ſed illud in multis tribulationibus cum fiducia quantumvis languida apprehendere expetit, & conatur, debilis fides eſt, vera tamen. Chemnit. 1.185.a.

Why

Quest. 1. Why is true faith sometimes small?

Answ. Because although faith bee given from above, (Ephes. 2. 8) yet it is not given miraculously, but by the means of the word, Rom. 10. 15. &c. Hence it is said, the sower sowed seed, Mat. 13. 1. and the kingdome of God is like unto a graine of mustard-seed, Mat. 13. 31. which groweth up by little and little, Marke 4. 26. &c. And hence it is sometimes greater, and sometimes lesser. For the better understanding of this observe,

First, the Schoole-men say, that faith is lesse, in a double regard: namely,

I. Quoad objectum, in regard of the object; because expresly some beleeve fewer things then others do, Thom. 2. 2. 5 4.

II Quoad participationem, in regard of the participation; and that either

First, Ex parte intellectus, because some have lesser understanding, then others. Or

Secondly, Ex parte voluntatis; because some have,

I. Lesser promptitude and readinesse in beleeving, then others; some being more dull, lazie, and sluggish then others are. Or

II. Lesser devotion; some being lesse zealous, then are others. Or,

III. Lesser confidence, and trust; some being more fearfull then are others.

Secondly, our Divines affirm faith to be lesser in a double regard also: to wit,

I. Fructibus, in regard of the fruits therof; as holinesse, strength, zeale, constancie, joy, and the like.

II. Gradibus, in regard of the degrees, or nature of faith; as in apprehension, and application. Perkins. And therefore Chemnitius observes, that

First, sometimes faith is great, as Mat. 8. 10. and 15. 28. And Secondly, sometimes faith is small, as Matth. 14. 31. And Thirdly, sometimes faith is weak, and that either in { Acknowledging, Rom. 14. 1. Or / Trusting, Mark 9. 24.

Thirdly, observe, faith is lesser sometimes in regard of { Others; that is, one mans faith is greater then anothers, as one star differs from another in glory, 1 Cor. 15. and Rom. 14. 1. and 15. 1. / A mans selfe; that is, sometimes faith in one & the same man is greater, and sometimes lesse, and that either, { Ordinarily; and thus a mans faith is lesse, when he is newly regenerated, then afterwards, Heb. 5. 12. / Extraordinarily, in the houre of temptation; which is occasioned, either { First, by reason of some sinne committed: Or / Secondly, because the Holy Spirit of God is grieved[u]: and that either, 1. By the love of sin: or 2. By the neglect of the exercises of Religion: or 3. By the extinguishing of the good motions of the Holy Spirit. Or / Thirdly, because God with-draws his grace, and spirituall light for a time[o].

1 Sam. 12. Psal. 22. & 32. [u] Ephes. 4. 31.

Observ. 2. We may observe againe from these words, Oh yee of little faith, that faith is accepted, but weakenesse is reproved: whereby our Saviour would teach us: That the children of God should labour that their faith may grow ripe, and increase unto perfection. Reade Ephes. 4. 13. 15. and 2 Pet. 1. 10. and 1 Pet. 2. 2, 3. and Mark 4. 40.

Quest. 2. Why may wee not content our selves with a weak faith (which is true) but wee must thus endeavour after a strong faith?

Answ. 1. First, faith, and the increase of faith is the principall worke of a Christian; This is the work of God, that yee beleeve on him whom he hath sent, John 6. 29. Yea this is the function of a Christian; for wee are called Fideles, faithfull; because our worke is to strive to bee rich, and perfect in faith: yea wee are called Christiani, Christians, because wee depend wholly upon Christ by faith: And therfore there is great reason, that we should labour, and endeavour to grow up, and increase therin.

Answ. 2. Secondly we are commanded to beleeve [This is his Commandement, that we should beleeve on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, 1 John 3. 23.] And therfore it behoves us to labour to be perfect in faith.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, faith is our chiefest armour against Sathan; it is the shield wherwith we quench all the fiery darts of the Devill (Ephes. 6. 16.) yea a Brest-plate (1 Thess. 5 8.) and therefore wee must resist this our enemy with faith, 1 Pet. 5. 8. Great reason is there then, that all those who desire to be free from Sathan, should labour for faith, and the increase therof.

Quest. 3. Who are blame-worthy in this particular?

Answ. Those who neglect faith: For if the children of God must labour, that their faith may increase, and grow ripe unto perfection; then much are they too blame, who neglect the acquiring, or augmentation of faith: For

I. Those who have not faith, should neither give sleep to their eyes, nor slumber to their eyelids, untill they be made partakers thereof, wee being without God in the world, so long as wee are without faith in our soules.

Quest 4. Here those who have not as yet attained unto this excellent, and singular grace of faith, may demand first, how they may be incited, or induced to labour thus earnestly for it? I answer, let them seriously remember these two short particulars

476 culars; to wit, I. By faith they shall have true, spirituall, internall, and solid joy; according to that of the Apostle, Although we have not seene God, yet wee love him, and loving him, beleeve in him, and beleeving in him rejoyce with a joy unspeakable, and glorious, 1 Pet. 1. 8. He that beleeves in God, hath the witnesse in himselfe, and is not beguiled with presumptuous perswasions; and therefore hath true cause of rejoycing: but he that beleeves not can have no true hope, and consequently no solid joy, Rom. 5. 3, 4 II Let those who are as yet destitute of faith, remember, that they cannot more profitably bestow their paines any where, then here: they cannot labour for any thing of more worth then faith is; because that is the hand, wherby wee apprehend Christ, and apply him unto our selves, that is the eye wherby we behold Christ; that is the foot, by which we walke unto Christ: yea, that is the seale, wherby all the promises of the Gospel are confirmed unto us: And therefore nothing is more profitable for us, nothing can make us more happy, then faith in Christ can.

Answ.

Quest. 5. Secondly, those who are not as yet made partakers of faith, and by the two former particulars are incited, and moved to desire it, will yet againe demand.

What means must they use for the acquiring of it?

Answ. 1. First, a man cannot beleeve of himselfe, or obtaine faith by any naturall, or physicall power, it being wrought in us by the blessed Spirit of God, Rom. 8, 14.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but wee must labour to confirme our faith, by our good workes, 2 Pet. 1. 10. That is, he that perswades himselfe that he beleeves, must shew his faith to be true and lively, by the fruits of sanctification.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, wee must use those meanes for the acquiring of faith, which God requires: that is, we must be carefull, and diligent hearers of the word (for faith comes by hearing, Rom. 10. 17.) and we must be fervent, and frequent in prayer unto God, that hee would infuse this grace of faith in us by his Holy Spirit. II. Those who have faith should not rest, nor content themselves with a weake, or small measure thereof: But remember, that graces are not given to bee misspent (as the Prodigall did his portion) nor to bee kept without any augmentation, or increase (as the servant did his Talent, which hee hid in a Napkin) but to multiply and increase: For the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withall 1 Cor. 12. 7.; and therefore the servant is condemned, because hee did not put out his Masters money to the Banke, Luke 19. 23.

Quest. 6. How is this grace of faith to be nourished, and increased?

Answ. By these meanes, namely,

First, by the word of God, Ex iisdem nutrimur ex quibus generamur; as the word is a seed to beget those, who are not begotten; so bread to feed those who are begotten; yea, milke wherby babes become young men, 1 Pet. 2, 12. And therefore we must be frequent in hearing, reading, meditating, and conferring of the word of God.

Secondly, by fighting, and striving against sin, Sathan, the world, and our owne corrupt lusts, Heb. 12. 4. and 1 Pet. 2, 11. and 5 8, 9. Ephes. 6. 13. &c.

Thirdly, by faithfull, and fervent prayer unto God; crying daily unto God, as the Apostles did unto Christ, Oh Lord increase our faith, Luke 17. 5. Ephes. 6. 18.

What is faith? Quest. 7.

First, Grammatically, Fides à fio; Dicitur fides quia fit; it is called faith, because it is made: Answ. 1.

And therefore faith is twofold, viz.
- Activa, first active (faciens veritatem) and is called Fidelity. — Hinc — facta
- Passiva, secondly, passive (credens veritati) and is called perswasion. — fides — habita.

Secondly, according to the Greeke, πίστις and πιστὸς, are either taken Answ. 2.

I. Actively, and thus God is said to be faithfull, 1 Cor. 1. 9. and his word to bee faithfull, 1 Tim. 3. 1. and 4. 9: and his Ministers to bee faithfull, 1 Cor. 4. 2. Because God workes faith in his children, by the word, and Ministers thereof. Or,

II. Passively; and thus they of the Circumcision, and Timothies Mother, and divers beleeve in God, Act. 10. 45. and 16. 1. and 2 Cor. 6. 15. Now the question here is concerning the passive, not active faith.

VERS. 28. And when he was come to the other side, into the country of the Gergesenes, there met him two possessed with devils, comming out of the tombes, exceeding fierce, so that no man might passe by that way. Vers. 28.

What is meant here by being possessed? Quest. 1.

For answer hereunto, the Reader may remember, that there is Answ.

First, Obsessio quæ est duplex;
- Primò, Corporalis, visûs, auditûs, tactûs.
- Secundò, Spiritualis, tentationibus, terroribus.

Secondly, Possessio quæ est duplex
- Primò, Corporalis, cum Sathan residet.
- Secundò, Spiritualis, in Dominio peccati, 2 Tim. 2, 26.

How doth Obsession, and Possession differ? Quest. 2.

First, Obsession is common unto all, for the Devill can besiege any. Answ. 1.

Secondly, but none can be possessed by Sathan, without a speciall leave given by God. Answ. 2.

How doth the Devill impugne, and assaile man? Quest. 3.

First, Tentando, hee impugnes him by temptation unto evill; and this he doth of himselfe. Answ. 1.

Se-

Answ. 2. Secondly, Lædendo, puniendo, by harming, and punishing of him; and this hee doth from God, Thom. Aq. 1.114.1.1.

Quest. 4. Whether is Obsession, or Possession worse? and if Possession, then what kind of it?

Answ. 1. First, in generall, those persons are most miserable, that are possessed within.

Answ. 2. Secondly, more particularly, there are three things, or three sorts of miserable men to bee distinguished.

I. Some are afflicted by Sathan in their senses; that is, molested, terrified, or affrighted with some Diabolicall sights, or noyse, or touching, or the like. And this wee greatly abhorre, and feare.

II. Some are possessed by Sathan in their bodies: And although this be farre worse, then the former, yet we do not so much abhorre, and feare it; and that

First, partly because we are not sensible of it. And,

Secondly, partly because the mind is estranged.

III. Some are possessed by Sathan in heart; and this is most perillous, but most of all sleighted, and neglected.

Quest. 5 What may wee observe in the Allegoricall sense of this History?

Answ. Allegorically it shewes us our estate, and condition without Christ: Or, that we are under the captivity of Sathan, untill Christ free us, Iohn 8.44. Ephes 2.2. Iohn 12.31. and 14.30. [a]

Quest. 6. How doth it appeare, that naturally wee are the Devils slaves?

Answ. Because sinne hath captivated, and enthralled us, Rom. 3.23. and 5.12. and 7.14. Sinne is

First, the Devils Ensigne, or Flag; as in a ship, or Castle overcome the Ensigne of the Conquerour is hung out, so the Devill having conquered us, hath hung out his Flag; that is, imprinted sinne in our nature.

Secondly, sin is the law of Sathan, Iohn 8. 44. Ephes. 4.27. and 1 Iohn 3.8. &c. But Christ freeth us both from Sathan, and sin, Luke 11.22. Iohn 8.36. Rom. 16.20. Colos. 2.14. and 1 Iohn 5.20. and Revel. 13.4.

Quest. 7. How doth Sathan possesse naturall men, or all men before they be freed by Christ?

Answ. 1. First, in generall, as the peace of God abides in the heart of the faithfull (Colos. 3.17.) so Sathan sits within, and remaines in the heart of the naturall man, wholly possessing, wholly directing him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, more particularly.

Vntill we be freed by Christ, Sathan possesseth us

Answ. First, In intellectu, in the understanding: and that in three regards, viz.

b 1 Cor. 2. 14.
c Rom. 1. 20.

First, the natural man cannot take up, or comprehend God, or spiritual things [b]: Indeed he may have some outward knowledge after his corrupt manner [c], but he can know nothing spiritually, or profitably.

Secondly, the natural man is wise unto evil, & very crafty; Adam can cover his nakednes with Fig-leavs; & Iosephs brethren subtilly hide their selling of him; & David craftily plot the murder of Vriah. Thus by nature we are wise unto wickednes.

Thirdly, the naturall man cannot beleeve the truth of God, 2 Thess. 2.9.10.11.

d Esa. 53. 1.
e Iohn 6. 60.
f Ephes. 4. 18.
g 2 Pet. 2. 14.

Secondly, In affectu, in the affection, as appears thus.

First, the naturall man doth not love spirituall things: hee regards not the word of God [d], but thinks it a hard saying [e].

Secondly, the naturall man is mad upon sin; selling himselfe to worke wickednesse, and that with greedinesse [f]; and not ceasing to doe evill [g].

Thirdly, the will of the naturall man is violent, and obstinate, and headstrong, and will not endure to be curbed, Ier. 44.16.

Thirdly, In memoria, in the memory, as appears thus.

First, good things are very hardly imprinted in the memory of the naturall man, Psalme 50.22. and 2 Pet. 1.9.

Secondly, evill things are greedily received into the memory, and strongly retained by it: yea hence comes a custome of sinning, because the memory doth frequently suggest some evill.

Fourthly, In sensibus, in the senses, as is thus most evident.

First, they are easily carried unto outward objects; the eye is easily perswaded to behold beauty, or to look upon the sparkling of the wine in the Glasse: and so of the rest of the senses.

Secondly, the senses being transported by alluring objects, do draw the judgement also along with them: reason being once captivated, is easily drawn away from God, and led aside.

Fifthly, In vitâ, in the life; we are naturally taken captive of the Devill at his will, 2 Tim. 2.26. for he hurries the naturall man sometimes unto drunkennesse, sometimes unto murder, yea unto every kind of evill.

Sixthly, In Ore, in the mouth. For

First, the Devill filleth the naturall mans mouth with blasphemous swearing, lying, lascivious, and opprobrious speeches. And

Secondly, the Devill doth exasperate the tongue of the naturall man against Religion, making him sometimes dispute against religion, and sometimes slander, detract, mock, and deride the religious.

Seventhly, In imaginationibus, in the cogitations, and thoughts; they being evill, and that continually, Gen. 6.5. and 8.21.

478 What must we doe to bee freed from Sathan, who doth thus possesse us?

Quæ. 18. Pray unto Christ, who is stronger then Sathan, that he would be pleased

Answ. First, to enlighten our understandings, that we may perceive those things which are good. And

Secondly, to change our affections, that wee may love those things which are good. And Thirdly, to helpe our memories, that we may retaine those things which are good. And Fourthly, to set a watch over our senses, that we may delight in nothing, but what is good. And Fifthly, to sanctifie our whole life, words, and thoughts, that all we do, speake, or thinke, may be good. And Sixthly, that he would be pleased to give us a true sight, and knowledge of our selves, and wants; and to make us partakers of himself by a lively faith.

Sect. 2. §. 2. They were exceeding fierce.

Quest. 1. Whence was it that these two possessed men were so fierce?

Answ. Not from themselves, but from Sathan in them; from whence we may observe, Observ. 1 That Sathan naturally is very cruell, and bloody. Reade Esay 5.29. and 14.16,17. Revel. 9.7.8,9,10. and 12.12.

Object. 1. The Devill is somewhat crafty, but not so cruell: yea he is easily found out.

Answ. So is a Lyon or Bear easily found by his prey; yea as they seeke their prey, so doth Sathan, 1 Pet. 5.8.

Object 2. But the Devill for the most part appeares in some vile, base, and contemptible shape; sometimes in the likenesse of a Frog, sometimes of a Mouse, sometimes of a Spider, sometimes of a Bee, or Fly; And therefore he is not so bloody, or cruell, as was affirmed.

Answ. The Devill doth sometimes hide his malice, and his sting, and the instruments of his cruelty, transforming himselfe into an Angell of light, 2 Cor. 11.14. that so hee may the more speedily, and unexpectedly destroy: The Fowler hides the net, and shews only the shrap; the Panther hides his fangs, and holds forth only his sweet, and beautifull skin; the Crocodile cryes like a child, that cruelly he may slay men: And thus bloody cruelty is covered with the vaile of crafty simplicity.

Object. 3. The Devill is ruled, governed, over-swayed, and commanded by an old woman; yea often by an Idiot, which shews that he is not thus cruell, as was affirmed.

Answ. They seeme to govern, and rule him, but hee in truth, and very deed rules, and commands them.

Object. 4. The Devill gives riches, and good things, and pleasures unto his servants; and therefore hee is not fierce, bloody, and cruell.

Answ. Certainly, the Devill will give a man two Talents of silver for his destruction, as he did unto Gehazi; yea set men up in slippery places, that he may destroy them [h], being willingly contented, that they should spend their dayes in good things, that thus in a moment hee may bring them down into the pit, Iob 21.13.

h Psalme 73.6.18

Sathan delivers many from paines, and evils, and that by good prayers; and therefore it is clear, that he is not bloody, and cruell. Object. 5.

First, hee freeth sometimes from those evils, which are inflicted by himselfe; Non sanando, sed cessando, he doth not properly heal, and cure evils, but only cease from inflicting of evils, Abdias in S. Bartholomæo. Answ. 1.

Secondly, he freeth men from evils, after they have sacrificed, prayed, sued, and sought unto him; for untill then hee hath no power over their soules. Id. Ibid. And when men are content to bequeath their soules unto him, for the health of their bodies, then he is content to cure, and heale their bodies. Answ. 2.

But the Schoolmen deny fury, or concupiscence to be in the Devils, Quia nil in ijs irascibile, vel concupiscibile, (1 hom. 1. 59. 5.) Quia pertinent hæc ad appetitum sensitivum, non intellectivum, Ibid. Yea, sense, memory, and phantasie are not properly in devils, but only understanding, mind, or will, Aquinas. Object. 6

Certainly, as these are perturbations, arising from sense, they are not in devils; but are said to be in them Allegorically, because they have a cruell, and deadly hatred against man-kind, out of an implacable envie. Answ.

But the sacred Scriptures witnesse, that the Devill is fearfull, and will fly away if hee be resisted, Iames 4.7. for otherwise it were in vaine to resist him, Ephes. 4.27. Object. 8.

First, the Devill is not such a Coward, as many make him to be; the Drunkard, Swearer, and cruell person will say, I defie the Devill, and I feare him not: But these are lamentably deceived; for whilst openly they defie the Devill, secretly they are possessed by the Devill. Answ. 1.

Secondly, the Devill flies only from the faithfull, when he is resisted by them, 1 Pet. 5.9. Now this power comes from heaven, not from themselves; for the Devill is too strong to bee overcome by any arm of flesh, as we may see by those dangerous tals, and direfull foiles he hath given to the best of the Saints, when God (but for a while) hath with-held his grace. Answ. 2.

If Sathan be thus fierce, cruell, strong, and powerfull, then how comes it to passe, that hee doth no more harm then he doth. Quest. 2.

Oftentimes hee would do harm, and cannot, because his power is not absolute, but subordinate. Si posset quantum vult, nemo justorum remaneret i; If he were able to do what he desires, hee would not leave a righteous man in the world; Sathanæ voluntas semper iniqua, potestas nunquam injusta; quia habet voluntatem à se, potestatem à Deo, Greg. moral. The will of Sathan is alwayes wicked, but his power is alwayes just, because hee hath his power from the good God, but his wil from his wicked selfe. And therefore as farre as his sleeve, or chain, or power will reach, hee is most cruell. Answ. i Aug. s. Psalme.

How doth it appear, that naturally the Devil is fierce, cruell, and bloody? Quest. 3.

First,

Answ. First, from the nature of Sathan, or the nature of an Angell: For as the spirituall Image of God in man was lost by the fall of man, but the naturall Image remained: So in Sathan, the naturall power of the Angels remaineth still, but their spirituall love is changed into hatred: Now the power of the Angels we know is great, as appears by the slaughter of those 185000. which were slaine by one Angell in one night: And therefore if the naturall power of an Angell remaine in Sathan, and his spirituall love bee changed into implacable hatred; then without doubt by nature he is fierce, and cruell.

It appears three manner of wayes, viz.

Secondly, from the names given unto him; hee is called a Lyon (1 Peter 5. 8.) a Dragon, a Serpent (Revelat. 12,3.9. and 20.2. Psalme 91. 13.) Leviathan, (Esay 27.1.) Behemoth, a strong man armed (Luke 11.21.) a Murderer from the beginning (John 8.44.) Lightning, (Luke 10. 18.) An Enemy, Matthew 13.25. ἀντικείμενος, an Adversary (1 Tim. 5. 14.) Abaddon, and Apollyon, Revel. 9.11.

Thirdly, from his works, consider but how grievously he afflicted Iob, in his estate, children, body, mind, wife, friends, and dreames, leaving no means unsought, to make him miserable, as farre as the Lord would permit him: And in the New Testament we reade how hee sifted Peter (Luke 22.31.) and buffeted Paul, 2 Cor. 12.9.

Quest. 4. How is Sathan this fierce, and cruell enemy to be expelled, and cast out?

Answ. 1. First, Negatively, because he is strong, and fierce; therefore he cannot easily, or with sluggish endeavours be expelled, or cast out.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Iacobus de Valentia, (in Psalm. 6.) prescribeth unto us three excellent rules, for the driving him way.

I. He must be cast out, Cum pudore, with shame, and blushing; that is, we must learn, and labour to be ashamed, and confounded for our sinnes, wherby we became the captives of Sathan. Read these places, and strive to imitate the practise of these Presidents, Ezra 9.6. Daniel 9.7, 8 Rom. 6.21. and 2 Cor. 7.11. Ier. 31.19. and 3.3. and 6.15. and 8.12.

II. He must be cast out, Cum violentia, with force, and violence; that is, we must resist sinne and Sathan manfully, striving against them, even unto blood (Heb. 12.4.) like Iacob, who wrastled all the night with the Angell (Gen. 32. 24.) that so wee may become strong in faith, 1 Pet. 5. 9. Nam quo magis vides rebellantes, eo acrius expugnare contendis[k]. The more earnestly we strive to overcome Sathan, the more earnestly he strives to overcome us: and therefore wee must either contend with him, with manfull wraslings, or wee can never prevaile against him: yea wee must labour wholly to expell sinne and Sathan: Perfecti vincitur, cum mens neque trahitur ad consensum, neque delectationem tentationum. Gregor. Sathan is then perfectly foiled, when the mind is neither drawn to consent to sinne, nor to delight in the temptations unto evill. This is a hard worke, but it is a necessary worke, and therfore the more earnestly, and industriously to be undertaken.

[k] Greg. moral. 19.

III. He must be cast out, Cum velocitate, speedily, while it is said, to day (Psalme 95. 8.) not sleeping in sinne, nor with Sathan, Proverb. 6. 4 Psal. 132. De manu Sathanæ non evaditur, nisi ocyus per pœnitentiam recurratur, Gregor. There is no way to make an escape out of Sathans clutches, but by serious, and speedy repentance. And therefore all those, who desire to be dispossessed of Sathan, and to possesse, and enjoy God by a true, and lively faith in the soule, they must labour to be ashamed of their by-past sins; to fight couragiously, and constantly against sin, for the time to come; and while it is said to day, turne from all sinne, and turne wholly unto God, both with body, soule, and spirit, 1 Thessal. 5.23.

Quest. 5. What is the sense, and meaning of these words; They were exceeding fierce?

Answ. 1. First, some understand them particularly of Cruelty; the Devill being cruell, himself makes his servants cruell also: From whence wee may learn:

Observ. 2 That the Devil makes men cruell, but the Lord leads men unto meeknesse, and gentleness, Esay 11.6,7. and 35 9. and 65.25.

Quest. 6. Why doth the Devill make men cruell?

Answ. 1. First, because he hates mankind; and therfore he instigates, and incites, men to bite, and devour one another, and to be cruell among themselves.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because the Devill knows, that cruell men shall be punished by God; therfore hee provokes, and leads men unto cruelty: Hee shall have judgement without mercy, that sheweth no mercy, Iames 2,13.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Devill leads men unto cruelty, because he hates love, and charity; that being

I. The seamlesse coat of Christ; and therefore it is defaced by rents, and ruptures: yea

II. The bond which tieth both { First, us amongst our selves And Secondly, us with Christ. } Now this christian bond of charity, Sathan earnestly desires to separate and dissolve.

Quest. 7. What may wee (without breaking this bond of love) thinke of fierce, and cruell men?

Answ. We may thinke that { First, they are of Sathan, not of God: see before, Observation II. Secondly, they are no Christians; for the Holy Ghost never appeared, (that we read of) in the shape of a Tyger, or Bear, but of a Dove, Gualt. Matth. 2. Thirdly, they are odious unto God, and such as he: will not spare in judgement.

Quest. In what things hath Cruelty place?

First

480

Answ. In divers things; namely,

First, in oppression, Esa. 47. 6. Zachary 1. 15.

Secondly, in revenge.

Thirdly, in pride, Prov. 16. 5.

Fourthly, in debts; as we see in him who cruelly handled his fellow servant for the hundred pence.

Fifthly, in punishments; therefore offenders must be beaten with stripes by a certain number, lest through cruelty they should have been excessive; like the Turks, who sometimes give two hundred lashes for one offence.

Sixthly, in household affairs; therefore we are advised not to be like Lyons in our houses, nor frantick amongst our servants, Eccles. 4. 30.

Seventhly, over brute beasts; a righteous man regardeth the life of his beast, but the tender mercies of the wicked are cruell, Proverb. 12. 10.

Thus much for the first generall Answer to the fift Question.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand this of a generall fierceneſſe, and violence after sin; as though these two possessed men were Images of a naturall man in sin, who is furiously carried after it.

Observ. 3 We may learn, That sinners are swiftly and vehemently carried by satan whither he pleaseth, as though they were possessed by him: He saith unto one man, come, and he commeth; unto another, go, and he goeth; unto a third, do this, and he doth it. Reade 2 Tim. 2. 26. and 1 John 3. 8, 18. Ephes. 4. 27.

Quest. 9. How doth it appear that the Devill hath this Lord-like power over sinners?

Answ. Because sin is the Devils seed, issue, and offspring, John 8. 44. And therefore sinners cannot but obey him in what he commands?

Quest. 10 How is sin the Devils seed?

Answ. Three manner of waies; namely,

First, Inchoatione, by inchoation, because it was he that brought sin first into the world, by sinning himself, and tempting Adam unto disobedience.

Secondly, Tentatione, by temptation, because it is he that yet allures the sons of Adam.

Thirdly, Punitione, by correction, because it is he that obligeth the sinner unto his service, and that in eternall pains.

Quest. 11 What analogy or resemblance is there between sinners, and those who are possessed by Satan.

Answ. 1. First, the possessed were naked, having torn off their garments, and cast them away: so sinners

I. Do cast off the garments of Innocencie. Gualt. f. And

II. Of Decencie and Christian glory. Chrys. f. And

III. Of Modesty and Shamefastneſſe, sinning without shame.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the possessed dwelled not in houses, but among the Sepulchers, Luke 8. 27. So sinners do not dwell with the Saints and righteous. But

I. Are conversant with dead works. Gualt. f. And

II. With the works of darkneſſe, as theft, murther, treason, fraud, and the like, Ephes. 5. 11.

Thirdly, the possessed were never quiet, but cryed continually, Mark 5. 5. So sinners Answ. 3.

I. Are furious in the pursuit of sin, night and day. Gualt. f. And

II. Are still blaspheming and dishonouring of God. Gualt. f. And

III. Perhaps cry by reason of some internall horrour of conscience; as follows.

Fourthly, the possessed cut themselves with stones, Mark 5. 5. so sinners Answ. 4.

I. Wound themselves with sins. Chrys. f. And

II. Waste and consume their estates with following after their sins. And

III. Bring infirmities, and sicknesses upon their bodies by sin. And

IV. Bring infamy upon themselves amongst men. And

V. Wound and pierce through their consciences with sin, 1 Tim. 6. 10. And

VI. Stab, and kill out-right their poor souls.

Fifthly, the possessed could not be held, but brake their chains, Mark 5. 4. So sinners Answ. 5.

I. Will not be compelled to abstain from sin, by the fear of God. Nor

II. Will be curbed by the sword of the Magistrate. Nor

III. Will be made orderly, by Ecclesiasticall Discipline. Nor

IV. Wil be restrained by the shame of men. Nor

V. Will be kept back from sin, by the respect of their own profit, or danger, or the good of their children or families.

Sixthly, the possessed are troublesome and hurtfull unto others; as in this verse, None durst come neer that way wherein they were. So sinners are obnoxious unto others, and that Answ. 6.

I. By their lewd and wicked examples, which are hurtfull in a double regard, namely,

First, because the good are offended thereby, through a zeal unto Gods glory. And Secondly, because the bad are encouraged and emboldened thereby to do the like.

II. Some are hurtfull unto others, by their perswasion unto sin. Thus many intice and perswade others unto drunkenneſſe, adultery, theft, perjury, lying, and the like.

III. Some are obnoxious unto others by their scoffs and taunts, whereby they deride the professours, and profession of Religion. And thus we see what resemblance there is between sinners, who are possessed by Satan in their hearts, and those who were corporally possessed.

Unto what sin may this fierceneſſe and cruelty (which was in these two possessed persons) be most aptly resembled or applied? Quest. 12

First, Chrysostom applieth it unto luxury and uncleanneſſe, because that is of unbridled rage, and leads men unto Tombs, that is, Stews, and all manner of wickednesse and impudencie. Answ. 1.

Secondly, but this corporall possession may Answ. 2.

most

most pregnantly be applied unto Covetousnesse, which is like a Cage of unclean birds, and a very sink of wickedn sse: Chrysostom s. gives us a character of a Covetous man, thus elegantly painting him out unto us.

We must suppose we saw a man,

I. Whose face is like the face of a greedy dog, or ravening Wolf. And

II. Who had fiery eyes, sparkling through rage. And

III. Who had teeth as sharp as a swords edge. And

IV. Whose mouth is a deep devouring gulf. And

V. Whose tongue is a venemous sloud, that sendeth forth streams of deadly poison. And

VI. Whose voice is some horrid and dismall note. And

VII. Whose arms are two deadly dragons. And

VIII. In whose hands are burning faggots. And

IX. Whose belly is like a burning furnace. And

X. Whose feet have wings upon them. Now the Father having made this man or monster, doth further fain or suppose, that

First, he kils, tears, and devoures all that ever he meets withall. And Secondly, that the fear of no Law will restrain him, but fearlesly he assails all. Yea

Thirdly, we may truly conceive the truly Covetous man, to be more horrible than Chrysostom can paint or imprint (by any description) in our mindes: And therefore beware of Covetousnesse, which is the root of all evill; for some seeking after riches, have fallen into temptations and snares, and pierced their hearts thorow with many sorrows.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And no man durst passe that way.

Observ. We may learn from hence, That it is a dangerous thing to associate, or keep company with those who are possessed with Sathan: for none durst come neer unto these two men, for fear of being harmed.

Quest. How many sorts of perillous societies are there?

Answ. Three; namely,

First, society with Sathan; as Witches, Magicians, Sorcerers, and the like have: this is desperate. And

Secondly, society with sinners, in sinning: This is sinfull, and prohibited, Psal. 1. 1. Diabolus tentat non solum per se, sed per eos qui nobiscum [Greg.] The Devill doth not onely tempt us by himself, but also by those who inhabit amongst us. And

Thirdly, society with wicked men, in regard of our habitation; that is, when we live amongst sinners: this is dangerous, because evill examples corrupt good manners.

Vers. 29. VER. 29. And behold they cryed out, saying, What have we to do with thee, Iesus, thou Son of God? art thou come hither to torment us before our time?

Sect. 1. §. 1. Art thou come hither to torment us?

What torments did the Devils fear? 481

Quest. 1. First, some say they feared to be cast out of that Region: certainly Saint Mark saith, They besought him, not to send them out of that Country, Mark 5. 10. And they desire not to be hindred from doing mischief.

Answ. 1. Secondly, some say they feared that Christ would send them into hell: indeed Saint Luke saith, that They besought him, that he would not command them to go out into the deep, Luke 8. 31. And without doubt they would not be captivated and incarcerated in Hell, if they could help it: for although they carry fire about them, yet in Hell it is much worse with them.

Answ. 2. Thirdly, some say that they feared eternall torments; and this undoubtedly is true, because they say, Why art thou come to torment us before our time? As though they would say, We know that at the last day we shall be bound over to eternall and perpetuall torments, but why commest thou to torment us before that time?

Answ. 3.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, some say they feared some extraordinary torment to be inflicted upon them in the presence of Christ. Indeed (in my judgment) we may conceive all these, for they fear, and tremble, and are struck with terrour and horrour, and expect torments as soon as ever they behold Christ. Hence then we may learn,

Observ. That the wicked have no other hope or expectation, but of punishment and torment, at the comming of Christ, Heb. 10. 27.

Quest. 2. What torments do wicked men expect or fear? or what torments are prepared for wicked men?

Answ. 1. First, for the wicked are prepared Corporall pains, and punishment; because they have sinned with the body. Now this Corporall punishment is called by Saint Iude, (verse 7.) Eternall fire. It is much disputed and controverted among the Schoolmen, how the Devils can be tormented with this Corporeal fire, seeing they are Spirits; and it is well concluded of them thus:

I. That in Hell there is a Corporeall fire, as appears thus:

First, because the Scriptures affirm it, Mat. 3. 10. and 5. 22. and 25. 41.

Secondly, because the bodies sinning against God, are to be vexed and tormented by God, with corporall pains.

II. They conclude, that the Devils are tormented in that fire, because Christ saith so: Go ye wicked into eternall fire, prepared for the Devill and his Angels, Mat. 25. 41.

III. It being demanded how the Devils are tormented in that fire? they answer, They are tormented, not onely

First, with the sight thereof. Or

Secondly, with an imaginary apprehension thereof. But Thirdly, as an instrument ordained of God, for that end. And Fourthly, ut locus, locatum continens, & cogens. Tho. supplem. 70. 3. corp. Hell is a fiery Region, or a Region of fire; and therefore the Devils being contained and included therein, must needs be tormented thereby. Cum Dives ab igne patiatur, quis negat, animas ignibus puniri? Greg. dial. 4. cap. 28. 29.

None

482 None must question this truth, that soules and spirits are punished by fire, seeing our Saviour himselfe telleth us, that Dives (who was in hell but in soule) was tormented in the flame.

Answ. 2. Secondly, for the wicked are prepared spirituall torments, or vexations in mind: for in hel there is anger, fury, madnesse, sorrow, feare, clamour, out-cries, and the like: As vertues and graces are most perfect in heaven; so are perturbations most perfect in hell. There shall be,

I. The conscience of sinne: here wicked men perswade themselves, that their sins are small, but there they shall flatter themselves no longer, but be horribly sensible, both of the quantity, and quality of their offences, committed on earth against the King of heaven.

II. In hell the wicked shall be sensible of the felicity, and happinesse they have lost; for there they are deprived,

First, of the society of the Saints (Heb. 12.22.) And,

Secondly, of light, and the sight of heaven. And,

Thirdly, of God himselfe, which by much is the greatest losse, Chrysost. s. And therefore herein the Devill, and reprobate Angels are worse (I conceive) then men are; because they have more knowledge of the sweetnesse of God, and his gracious, and blessed presence, then men have; they being once partakers thereof in heaven, which man was never. Indeed, if any should say, that at the day of judgement it shall bee revealed unto the wicked, how glorious the Lord is, and how unspeakably happy all they are, who enjoy that beatificall vision of his face in heaven; that the remembrance of that losse, may adde to their spirituall torment: I could not tell how to gain-say it, but should be forced to subscribe unto it; both because the evill Angels enjoyment of heaven was but short; and also because there shall be nothing wanting, to make wicked men perfectly miserable. Hence

III. In hell ariseth an envying of the happinesse of the Saints in heaven: And here I conceive, that the Devill doth exceed, and excell all reprobate soules in envie, because the righteous are perfectly, and perpetually happy, and can be harmed, and molested by him no more [m].

m Ioh. 16. 11.

IV. In hell there is a desperation of helpe, and mercy: for all hope of favour, or compassion from God there failes them. Hence

V. The mind is dejected, and cast down, being destitute of all courage to support it, under so insupportable a burthen. And thus wee may conceive what the torments are, which are prepared in hell for the disobedient, both in body, and soule.

Quest. 3. What things hinder us from preventing these torments by repentance?

Answ. We are prevented principally by foure things, namely

First, by insensibility; as a man asleepe, not being sensible of the danger wherein he is, cannot be so carefull, as he ought, to avoid it: So those, who sleepe in sin, and are neither sensible of the evill of sin, or of punishment, cannot be carefull to break off their sins, or to avert these torments by repentance.

Secondly, by presumption: as they who are fully perswaded that they go right, are careless to inquire after the right way; so those who presume they are good enough, are negligent in the preventing of this insufferable evill, Iohn 9.40.

Thirdly, by Procrastination, and delay: Modò, Modò non habet modum (August.) many cry by and by, and put off God with delays, untill he cuts them off with death: Many promise to repent to morrow, and the next day to become new men; but the new day brings new delayes, and they still remaine the old men.

Fourthly, by coldnesse in the perfecting of the worke: many are content to repent, and to turn from their sins, and to turn unto God, but they are too luke-warme, remisse, and negligent in the performance thereof; not striving against sin, even unto blood. Heb. 12.4

And therefore if we desire to be free from these insufferable torments, let us labour

I. To be sensible of our sins, and the miserable condition we are brought into, and the punishments we are liable unto, for our sins. And

II. Let us not presume of mercy, and remission, without faith, and true conversion: Yea,

III. Let us not delay our conversion, but go about it out of hand, Esay 55.6. And

IV. Let us not undertake this difficult worke of repentance, negligently, remissly, or sleightly, but diligently, and industriously; remembring that the curse is not taken off, but more surely set on upon such: For cursed are they that doe this worke of the Lord negligently [n]. And n Ier. 48. 10.

V. Let us seeke unto the Lord by praier, and powerfull supplication (Ioel. 1. 15. and 2.17.) that he who alone is able, would be graciously pleased to pluck us as brands out of the fire, to convert us unto himselfe, to avert from us those temporall judgements, that we have deserved, and to preserve us from those eternall torments, which wee have just cause to feare.

Quest. 4. How may we know, whether wee shall be free from these torments, or not?

Answ. For answer hereunto observe, that there are foure sorts of men; to wit,

First, some are affected with horrours, and desperate fears; as was Cain, and Iudas, Matth. 27.5. These are infinitely miserable.

Secondly, some are insensible, sottish, and blockish; fearing nothing, though they run on in their sins: these are equally, and alike miserable with the former.

Thirdly, some presume with their mouths, but they lye with their lips; they say they feare not the flames of hell, they being assured of a part and interest in heaven: but the Spirit of God doth not witnesse this unto their spirits it being being only the suggestion of Sathan, and a false perswasion; And therefore these also are miserable, because although they deceive themselves, yet they cannot deceive God, Gal.6.7.

Fourthly, some have a true, and living hope to be freed from painfull misery, and to bee filled with perpetuall mercies, 2 Tim. 4. 8. And these are truly, and of all these sorts only blessed, and happy; wherefore betwixt God and our owne consciencs, wee should seriously examine, of which of these sorts we are.

Sect.2. §. 2. Before our time.

The Devill seemes here most falsely to taxe Christ of injustice, in these two phrases, viz.

First, What have we to doe with thee, Iesus thou Son of God? As though

I. Christ had had no power over Satan. Or, as though,

II. Christ had divided his Empire with Sathan. Divisum imperium cum Iove Cæsar habet. Or

III. Because Sathan had not invaded the parts of Christ, but only the Gergasenes, who were strangers from him; and therefore hee saith, Quid mihi tecum, what have I to doe with thee? as if hee would say, I harme none of thine.

Secondly, why art thou come to torment us before our time? As though

I. There were a time of punishing prescribed unto God; and that hee could not justly punish when he would. Or as though,

II. It were not now time to subdue, and bring under Sathan, Luke 10. 18. or to cast him out, either of the bodies of those, who were corporally possessed: or out of the mind of those, who were spiritually possessed, Act. 26. 18. or out of the Kingdome of the Gentiles.

Quest. How did the devils know, that the time of their punishment was not yet come?

Answ.1. First, negatively, it was not revealed unto them: for our Saviour saith, that of that day and houre, knoweth no man, no not the Angels of heaven; and therefore much lesse the Angels of the bottomlesse Pit, *Mat.*24.

Answ.2. Secondly, they say their time of torment was not yet come, because they did not expect it, nor looke for it, nor thinke of it. Whence we might learne;

Observ. That unexpected evils aggravate the punishment; or a great aggravation of torment, is for it to come unlooked for, Matth. 24. 50. and Iob 21.13. and Psalme 73. 18. and Iob 34. 20. and Proverb. 6. 15. Esay 30. 13, and 47. 9. Ier. 51.8. and 1 *Thess.*5.3.

Answ.3. Thirdly, they say their time of torment was not yet come, because they would not yet be punished, Nondum maturum tempus ad pœnam, Calvin. They desire that they may be suffered yet a little longer to tempt the wicked, and to try to hurt the righteous, and not so quickly to be hurried unto judgement, and eternall punishment.

Vers.30. Vers. 30. And there was a good way off from them, an herd of many Swine feeding.

Gordonus objects this verse, to prove that the vulgar translation (vulgarly called Hieromes) is Authenticall, and only to be adhered unto; and not the Greeke Text: In the Greeke it is said, And a good way off from them, there was a herd of Swine; but in the Latine more truly (saith Gordonus) it is said, Non longè, and not farre off from them, &c. Nec dubito latinum lectionem incorruptiorem esse. Neither doe I make question (saith Maldonat) but the Latine Text is most true; because both Saint Marke, and S^t. Luke saith, Erant autem ibi, And there were there: that is, in that place: and Saint Luke saith, ἐν τῷ ὄρει, on the Mountaine, Luke 8. 32. and Saint Marke saith, πρὸς τὸ ὄρος, nigh unto the Mountaine, Marke 5. 11. which was certainely neer unto the Sea, because the Swine run into it presently upon their possession, as also because Christ permitted, and consented, that the devils should go into the Swine; for this end, that those who were present with him, by the destruction of the hogs, might know how many, and how cruell the devils were; which they could neither have knowne, if the Swine had not beene there, nor have seene, if they had not beene neer: And therefore the Latine Bible, which saith; And not farre off from them there was a Herd of Swine feeding, is to bee preferred before the Greeke Testament, which here saith: And a good way off from them, &c.

Answ.1. First, all Greek Copies, (saith Beza) run thus; and therfore one latine translation from a lame, and uncertaine Translator, is not to be preferred before them all.

Answ.2. Secondly, there is no incongruity, or absurdity, or inconvenience in the Greeke text, and reading; and therfore no necessity of changing it. If the Swine (saith Maldonat) had been farre off, then those who were present with Christ could not have seene what was done: let him here define μακρὰν, longè, and see what space of ground it containes, whether one mile, or twenty? for untill this be determined, nothing can be concluded. Are nothing longè, a good way off, but only those who are further then can be perceived by the eye? I thinke the contrary; and that that may be said to be longè, which is within sight: It is said, Luke 15. ἔτι δὲ αὐτοῦ μακρὰν ἀπέχοντος, εἶδεν αὐτὸν ὁ πατὴρ. And when he was yet a farre off, his Father saw him. So Mat 26. Peter also followed Christ, ἀπὸ μακρόθεν, Procul, a farre off, but (I hope) the Papists will not say, out of sight. And therefore I hold the Greeke text to be most authenticall, and sincere.

Answ.3. Thirdly, the severall words used by these three Evangelists signifie one, and the same thing; namely, μακρὰν, which Saint Matthew useth, and ἐν τῷ ὄρει, which Saint Luke useth, and πρὸς τὸ ὄρος, which Saint Marke hath; for it is not likely, that the hogs were mixed amongst the men; that is, that the Swine were feeding in the same place, where Christ, and the rest were; but some space distant from them; to wit, not feeding in the very shore, where Christ was, or at least neer unto the Tombes, but in the skirts of the mountaines.

484 Vers. 31. 32.

VERS. 31, 32. So the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, suffer us to go into the Herd of Swine: and he said unto them, go.

We have here the Devils petition, and Christs concession; omitting the former, I will propound only two questions briefly of the latter.

Quest. 1. Is Sathans prayer heard? doth not the blind man say, God hears not sinners? Iohn 9.31.

Answ. 1. First, the Lord may doe what he please, and render no reason of his actions unto us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ doth this, to teach us, that many things are given to many men not in love; thus God in anger gave the Israelites Quailes in the wilderneſſe, and the Benjamites victory.

Quest. 2. How could it ſtand, or ſute with the mercy of Christ, to grant this request of the devils? or why doth he it? ſeeing it tended to the deſtruction of ſo many creatures, and to the loſſe, and hindrance of ſo many men, as had intereſt in the Swine?

Answ. Christ did it for three reaſons; namely

First, becauſe it was juſt, and that both, in regard of

The Gergeſenes, and that in a double regard, viz.

I. For their trial, whether they would patiently endure temporall loſſes, for the gaining of Christ. And

II. For the juſtifying of their rejection, who preferred their hogs before Christ.

Christ, who deſtroyed nothing but his owne; for the Father had given all things into his hands, Pſal. 8.6. And therefore he may do what he will with his owne, Mat. 20.15.

Secondly, becauſe it was honourable unto Christ (or tended unto his honour) and that in theſe three regards, viz.

First, becauſe hereby his power was ſhewed forth: he being able to rule, overſway, and command ſuch cruell, and fierce devils, and ſo ſuddenly deſtroy ſo many Swine.

Secondly, to prove the truth of the Miracle; for the departure of the devils ſhew, that the men were truly poſſeſſed.

Thirdly, becauſe hereby the Miracle was more divulged, and made known: For if the devils being diſpoſſeſſed, had not thus entred into the Swine, there had but a few known of it; but now the Swine-herds run into the Citie, & the Citizens come forth unto Christ; and the greatneſſe of the loſſe makes it take the deeper impreſſion in their minds.

Thirdly, becauſe it was profitable unto the Gergeſenes; for they hereby might learn the malice of Sathan, who next unto man hates the creatures, and by the deſtruction of theſe bruit beaſts, ſhews his malice unto mankind: and knowing this they might learn to run unto Christ (who had this commanding power over Sathan) for helpe & ſuccour againſt him hereafter, both in regard of their temporall, and ſpirituall eſtates.

Fifthly, becauſe it was profitable unto the Demoniacks, or men who were now diſpoſſeſſed; for they hereby might ſee what would have hapned unto them at the laſt, if they had not been helped by Christ: yea, hereby learn to fear Sathans power, to rejoyce, and be thankfull for their deliverance from him, and to ſerve Christ faithfully, who had freed them, all the dayes of their life.

Sixthly, becauſe it was profitable for us, and all that ſhall heare, or reade of it, in the Allegoricall ſcope; for two things in the Allegory may be obſerved; to wit,

I. That the end of hogs (that is, brutiſh, and wicked men) is at length to be deſtroyed by Sathan.

II. That two men are more deare unto God, then two thouſand hogs.

VERS. 33. And they that kept them, fled, and went their waies into the Citie, and told every thing, and what was befallen to the poſſeſſed of the devils. Vers. 33

§. 1. And told every thing. Sect. 1.

That which includes all things, excludes nothing: now our Evangeliſt by ſaying; They told every thing; meant, they related and declared the whole Hiſtorie to the Gergeſenes, both of the drowning of the Swine, and of the caſting of the devils out of the two men: This certainly Sathan had rather ſhould have beene concealed, then divulged; whence we learne,

That God directs the actions, and endeavours of the wicked unto his ends, Eſay 46. 10. Prov. 19.21. Eſa. 48.14. & 14.24. &c. Daniel 4.32. Obſerv.

How doth it appear, that God directs the endeavours, and actions of the wicked, unto the fulfilling of his owne will, and accompliſhing of his owne decree? Quest. 1.

First, it appears thus, becauſe nothing falls out without the providence of God. Answ. 1.

Secondly, it is plaine, becauſe God is wiſer then men, or Sathan; as appears thus. Answ. 2.

I. God doth not only conſider the meanes, but alſo the end; and thus alſo doth Sathan, and wicked men.

II. But God alſo can fit, and make able the meanes unto the end; hee ordaines phyſick for the recovering of health, and he can give power unto phyſick to work this effect: This neither Sathan, nor man can doe. For God only is Omnipotent.

III. And hee knowes what will come to paſſe hereafter. This neither man, nor Sathan knows:

And

And therefore he suffers Satan, and wicked men to doe much, but converts, and turnes it to his owne ends.

Quest. 2. Who are here blame-worthy?

Answ. All those who seeme to strive against God, as though they could resist his will, or make void his Decree.

Whether it be,

First, for the helping of themselves; as Pharaoh thought to work wisely for the preventing of a mischiefe, Exod. 1.10. Certainly, this is a reluctancie, & struggling against God, who will never suffer himself to be over-reached by the wisedome of men, Rom. 1.21. But such as thus strive against him, or his will, shall either

I. Be overcome by their enemies, Ier. 19. 7. Or,

II. Undone, and weakned by domesticall, or intestine broiles, and jars, Esay 19.3.

Secondly, for the ruine and destruction of others: These that thus strive against God, shall not prevaile, but their plots shall either,

I. Bee turned unto the destruction of themselves; as Pope Alexander 6. was poisoned with that same draught which he intended for others. Or,

II. Their plots shall be revealed, as was the treason of the Aquilij and Vitellij against the Consuls [u], and of those who were suborned to slay Timoleon. Theatr. hum. vitæ, 3465. b. Or,

[u] Theatr. 2411. a

III. It shall bee hindred by some other way, or means. Or,

IV. It shall be punished by their enemies: Thus Alexander the Great punished Bessus for his treason: and Soliman layed Nadastus alive, for betraying the Citie unto him, upon promise of one of his daughters. Or,

V. Their plots, and treasons shall be punished by God; as wee see in Rodulphus.

CHAPTER IX.

Vers. 1. And hee entred into a Ship, and passed over, and came into his owne Citie.

Vers. 1.

S. 1. And he entred into a Ship.

Sect. 1.

WEe may see here how mildly Christ bears himselfe: the Gergesenes desire him to depart out of their coasts; and what doth he? not call for fire and brimstone from heaven upon them for it [a]; but quietly enters into a Ship, and departs: to teach us,

[a] Luke 9. 54.

Observ. That we ought to be meeke, and gentle in suffering of injuries. Reade for the proofe hereof these places, Mat. 11.29. Rom. 12.12. Mat. 5.39. and 1 Thessal. 5.14. and consider how patient God is towards us, though wee provoke him daily, Amos 2.13. Ier. 3.1. yea, how meeke, and patient Christ was, Luke 23.34. that prayed for his Murtherers [b], as did also his first Martyr, Saint Stephen, Act. 7. and his holy Apostles, 1 Cor. 4.12.

[b] 1 Pet. 3. 23.

Quest. 1. Why must wee be meeke, and patient in suffering of injuries, and wrongs?

Answ. 1. First, because revenge belongs unto God, not unto us, Rom. 12.19. And therefore he who goes about to revenge himselfe, is

I. Injurious unto God, taking the Sword out of his hands, to whom properly it belongs. And

II. Shall not be revenged of him, by whom hee hath beene injured; for by meekenesse and patience only, we heap coales of fire upon our enemies heads, Rom. 12. and are sure that God will take our cause in hand, and revenge us, Luke 18.7. yea, free us from their rage [c].

[c] Revel. 3. 10.

Secondly, we must be meek and patient in suffering of injuries, because this is the nature of charity, to suffer all things, 1 Cor. 13.4. And

Answ. 2.

Thirdly, because God hath promised a reward unto such: thus meek Moses endured patiently his tribulations, and wrongs, having an eye to the recompense of reward [d]: and so also did our meek, and Lambe-like Saviour, Heb. 12.2. Rom. 15.3. &c. and 2 Cor. 4.16.

Answ. 3.

[d] Heb. 11. 26.

Quest. 2. How many sorts of patience are there in the bearing of injuries, and wrongs?

Patience is five-fold: namely, either

Answ. First, Coacta, constrained, which is called patientiæ perforce: Vana sine viribus ira, many not being able to revenge injuries, do patiently brook injuries: This is not Christian patience.

Secondly, Vulpina, Fox-like, when a man seems patient, that so he may the more subtilly, and suddenly be revenged.

Thirdly, Asinina, Asse-like, when a man is so timerous, fearfull, and cowardly, that he dare not so much as mutter against those that have injured him.

Fourthly, Columbina, Dove-like, when a man brooks all injuries, and wrongs with a chearfull mind: This a morall man may doe.

Fifthly, a Christian ascends a little higher, that is, rejoyceth in injuries, wrongs, tribulation, bulation, and persecution, Acts 5. 41. Romans 5. 3. For

I. He acknowledgeth this to be his crown and glory, to be made partaker of the afflictions of Christ: And

II. He expects a reward from God, according to his gracious promises [e]. And

III. He seeth (by faith) Christ present, prepared to help and assist him in all things, as far as may stand with Gods glory and his good, Philip. 4. 10.

[e] Luke 21 19. and Iam. 5. 7.

Sect. 2. §. 2. And passed over.

Quest. 1. Why doth Christ passe here by water, seeing he was lately in so great danger upon the sea, chap. 8. 23, 24?

Answ. 1. First, because experience worketh confidence; the experience that he had of Gods gracious protection and preservation then, makes him not fear perill now.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because the danger was not in the sea, but in the weaknesse of faith, chap. 8. 26. And therefore his faith not being weak, he fears not the dangers of the sea. Whence we learn,

Observ. That dangers are not to be feared, in the discharging and executing of our callings: or we must not give over our lawfull callings, for fear of any danger that is like to accrue. Although the Jews went about to stone Christ [f], and the Nazarens to cast him down a high rock; yet he doth not give over preaching: They of Lystra stone Paul, and yet he returns again.

[f] Ioh. 11. 8

Quest. 2. Why must no fear of danger deterre us from our Vocations?

Answ. 1. First, because Functions are commanded, and enjoyned by God: and therefore it is a sin for a man to give over his Vocation.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because protection is promised in our lawfull callings: and therefore we may boldly hope for, and expect it: yea to leave that place wherein God hath put us, for fear of danger likely to ensue, is direct diffidencie, and distrust.

Quest. 3. Is it lawfull then to tempt the providence of God? for this seems no other, than to foresee danger, and not to prevent it.

Answ. We must distinguish of tempting the providence of God, thus:

Into the { Greatest dangers we may boldly intrude our selves, if we have a calling thereunto from God. / Least dangers we may not intrude our selves, without a calling.

For { First, some sin by too much boldnesse and presumption, without a calling. And / Secondly, others offend by too much fear in their calling, as Moses did, Exo. 4.

Quest. 4. What need had Christ of a ship to passe over? he brought Israel through the red Sea, Exod. 14. and made Peter walk upon the water, Matth. 14. and therefore could he not have done so now himself?

Answ. Christ hereby shews, that he undertook both our infirmities, and the remedies against them; that so he might be united unto us every way. Non egebat navi, sed navis illo (Chrys. hom. 12. de variis locis) The ship stood in need of him, and not he of the ship.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And came into his own City.

Quest. 1. What City was this whereunto Christ came?

Answ. 1. First, some say it was Nazareth, (Hier. ſ.) but S. Mark contradicts this, chap. 2. 1.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say it was Capernaum, (Calvin, Beza) and this is the truth, as appears Matt. 4. 13.

Quest. 2. Why is it called his City?

Answ. 1. First, some think, because he was born there: but this is false.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some think, because he was free of this City, and was not herein as a stranger. But as the former is certainly false, so this is uncertainly true.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the reason of the phrase is, because he dwelt there, Mat. 4. 13. Christum Bethlehem tulit, Nazareth educavit, Capernaum erat perpetuum habitaculum (Chrys. ſ.) Christ was born in Bethlehem, brought up in Nazareth, and dwelt in Capernaum.

Quest. 3. Why did Christ make choice of Capernaum to dwell in; or now to come unto?

Answ. 1. First, because the Nazarites had cast him out from amongst them, Luke 4. 29. Muscul. ſ.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because many of his Disciples dwelt there; Peter and Andrew, Matth. 4. 18. James and John, verse 21. to teach us, That Christ will dwell with those who are his, (Ioh. 17. 21, 26. and 14. 23. Rev. 3. 20. and 1 Ioh. 1. 3, &c. and 2 Cor. 6. 16. Ioh. 12. 26. and 14. 3. Rev. 14. 14.) And by his communion and fellowship, make them happy and blessed.

Quest. 4. Wherein doth the happinesse of the Saints (with whom Christ dwels) consist?

Answ. 1. First, If Christ be with them, he will enlighten their understandings. And Answ. 2. Secondly, restrain and keep them from sin. And Answ. 3. Thirdly, reduce them from sin by Repentance. And Answ. 4. Fourthly, excite them unto cheerfulnesse, in the performance of that which is good. And Answ. 5. Fifthly, corroborate and strengthen them, both unto the perfecting of, and persevering in good works. And Answ. 6. Sixthly, will fill them with ineffable joy and comfort, 1 Pet. 1. 8.

VERS. 2. And behold they brought unto him a man sick of the Palsie, lying on a bed: And Iesus seeing their faith, saith unto the sick of the Palsie, Son, be of good cheer, thy sins be forgiven thee. Vers. 2.

In our Saviours speech unto this sick man, are expressed three great and singular benefits and prerogatives of the Faithfull; namely,

First, their filiation, expreſt in this word, Son, §. 1. And Secondly, their joy, implyed in these words, be of good cheer, §. 2. And Thirdly, their remission and reconciliation, laid laid down in these words, Thy sins be forgiven thee, §. 3.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Son.

Quest. 1. Is God, or Christ the father of sinners? is he not rather their enemy and judge? yea doth not Christ himself say that he is the father onely of the Faithfull and righteous? Luke 12. 30.

Answ. 1. First, we must distinguish between sinners; for of them there be two sorts; to wit,

I. Averse and obstinate sinners, which will not repent, Ier. 3.12. And

II. Penitent sinners, who turn from their sins, Zach. 1.3. Those are not sons, but These are: as 2 *Cor.*3,17,18. Thus a Physitian is the Father of those sick persons whom he takes care of. Now we see that this sick man comes by faith unto Christ; the Text saying plainly, Iesus seeing their faith, that is, both of the persons bringing, and of the person brought.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this sick man was not now a sinner, because he was cured and healed. For

I. He had Faith, as aforesaid. And

II. Christ had pardoned and forgiven his sins, as here.

Quest. 2. How are the Faithfull and true penitent sinners, the children of Christ; for he is their Brother, not Father, Psalm. 22. 22. Matthew 25. 40. and 28. 10. Romans 8. 29. and Hebrews 2. 11?

Answ. Christ is our Brother, as he is Man; and our Father, as he is God: for although there be three persons, yet there is but one Deity: whence the Son is said to adopt sons; Thom. 3. 23.4. yea we pray unto Christ and the holy Ghost, Our Father. Thom. ibid. for whatsoever God the Father doth unto us, God the Son doth also, that is, in all things co-operates, and co-works with the Son. Besides, Christ himself saith, Behold me, and the children which thou hast given me: where implicitly he calleth himself a childe, or Son, and that for a double cause; namely,

First, to shew that he is God with the Father, My Father and I are one. And Secondly, to shew the prerogative of all those who come unto Christ by Faith; namely, that they shall be made his sons, as Iob. 1.12. Observ.

Are those that come unto Christ onely then made his sons after they come? are they not already his sons when they come? Quest. 3.

This phrase, or title of Son, is used diversly; namely, Answ.

First, sometimes Son signifies, the son of God, by nature and generation: and thus Christ is the alone and onely begotten Son of God.

Secondly, Son signifies sometimes those who are the sons of God by a particular ordination, and thus Magistrates, Judges, Rulers, and Princes are called sons, I have said ye are the children of the most high, Psal. 82.6.

Thirdly, sometimes by this title Son, are meant those who are the children of God by Grace.

- Creation; and thus — First, all men, Deuteronomy 32. 6. And Secondly, the Angels, Iob 1. 6[e]. And Thirdly, all creatures, Iob 38. 28. — Are the children of GOD.
- And that either by the grace of Covenant; and that either —
  - First, externall; and thus the children, and members of the visible Church (although they be rebellious and disobedient) are called the Sons of God[f]. Or
  - Secondly, internall; when by the grace of adoption we are brought unto God; as Esa. 43.6. *Psal.*73.15. and Hos. 1.10. Or
  - Thirdly, eternall; when we are received into everlasting glory[g]. Thus thinks Thom. 1. 33. 3.
- Sanctification; by a particular imitation of God and Christ, Matthew 5. 9, 45. Hebrews 12. and 1 Peter 1. 14, 17.

e Iob 38.7 and Psal. 89 6.

f Gen.6.2. and Esa.1. 2. & Mal. 1. 6.

g Rom. 8. 19, 21.

Now the faithfull and penitent sinners, are called children by the grace of the Internall Covenant, that is, by Adoption, Rom. 8. 14,17. Gal. 3. 26. and 4. 6. and 1 Peter 1.17. and 1 Iohn 3. 1, 2, 9, 10.

Quest. 4. How doth it appear, that those who come by faith unto Christ, are made his sons?

Answ. 1. First, because such are adopted into the inheritance of sons, (Rom. 8. 17.) and admitted into a fraternity with Christ.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because they are begotten by God, Titus 3. 5. Iames 1. 8. and 1 Iohn 3. 9. And hence are said to be regenerated according to the Image of God, Ephes. 4. 24.

Quest. 5. What are the prerogatives of the faithfull, and truly penitent sinners?

Answ. 1. First, in generall, they are great.

Answ. 2. Secondly, more particularly, they are many; to wit,

I. They are brought from darknesse into light, Acts 26. 18.

II. They are brought from Sathan unto God, Acts 26.18.

III. From strangers unto God, they are made acquainted, familiar, and his houshold servants, Ephes. 2. 12. Hence

IV. They may have accesse unto God by prayer in all their necessities. And

V. They shall be protected by God, from all evill; for the faithfull are as the apple of his eye.

VI. They shall be provided for; God will not see nor suffer his servants and children to want any thing, which they stand truly in need of, and which he sees is good for them[h].

h Esa. 65. 13. and Luke 12. 30.

VII. They shall have fraternity with Christ: whence proceeds the communion of love, good things, yea all things; All things are yours, because ye are Christs, 1 *Cor.*3.21.

VIII. They shall be made partakers of that eternall inheritance in the heavens, when others are sent to hell; they shall be received, when the rest 488 reft shall be rejected, Matth. 25. Revelat. 21. 8. and 22. 15.

Quest. 6. How may we know, whether wee be adopted into the fellowship of Sons, or not?

Answ. 1. First, there are five things required, to the adopting of a Sonne; to wit,

I. The Person adopted must be a stranger: for a naturall sonne cannot be adopted, Ephes. 2. 13.

II. There must be love and favour in the person adopting: for none will adopt a stranger to be his heire, except he love, like, and respect him.

III. There must be an inheritance, unto which the person is adopted, and which he is to enjoy.

IV. This inheritance must be confirmed, and made sure unto the party adopted by some writ, and seale, from the person adopting.

V. There must be a change of the name of the adopted person, into the name of him that adopts him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must try our selves by these particulars: namely, examine

I. Whether doe we conceive our selves naturally to be strangers unto God, or not? do wee labour to go out of our selves, confessing that by nature we have no right unto any of the good blessings of God? Many are not sensible of this, and those who are not, have small hope of their filiation, and adoption.

II. Whether doe we before all things seek the love of God, and grace and favour of Christ? Many care not much for this, and those who preferre other things before it, cannot be sure of their filiation, and adoption.

III. Whether do wee rejoyce in this inheritance, whereunto by the love, and grace of God wee are adopted? and daily long, desire, and wish for the fruition, and possession of it? i.

i Rom. 12. 12. and 2 Cor. 5. 2. &c. IV. Whether is our adoption sealed unto us, or not? doth the Spirit of God witnesse unto our spirits, that we are the sons of God? Rom 8. 15. If we be not assured of this seale, then let us seeke it, expect it, and implore it instantly, and unceasantly at Gods hands.

V. Whether do we now live as domesticks of the Lords, or not? do we change our names, and natures? do wee forget our former kindred, and our Fathers house? doe we labour to bee made Partakers of that divine nature, and live as becomes new men? doe wee associate our selves with the Lord, and depend wholly upon him? for thus it becomes the Lords adopted sonnes, 1 Pet. 1. 17.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Be of good cheer:

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of these words?

Answ. Musculus renders the text, Bono animo esto. Gualt. Confide. Hilary. Constans esto: Now I conceive that the text bears both, first and second; as if our Saviour would say, be confident, and cheerfull; For hee hath a double scope in these words: to wit,

First, to require confidence, and a sure hope, in the parrie to be cured. And,

Secondly, to afford joy, and comfort unto this sick man: Whence we may learn two things, viz.

I. In generall; That Christ is not onely a profitable Physician, but a pleasant: Hippocrates gives three short notes of a good Physician, hee must cure Citò, Tutò, Suaviter. Observ. 1

First, hee must cure quickly, and not let the party long languish under his hands; thus Christ here, doth speedily recover this sick man.

Secondly, he must cure safely, and thorowly, because relapses are dangerous; he must not skin a sore quickly over, and leave it unhealed at the bottom, for so the party is made worse then at first: Thus Christ he heales thorowly, and perfectly, where he takes the cure in hand.

Thirdly, hee must cure with the most gentle plaisters, and pleasing physick that may be; and be cheerfull himselfe, comforting his Patient, as much as he can. Thus Christ cures not by cutting, or lancing, or the like; but with a word, and by that word affords both health unto the body, and comfort unto the soule.

II. Particularly, we may learn hence, Observ. 2

That great is the joy, and comfort, which they feele, which are brought unto Christ, and made Partakers of him, Rom. 5. 1, 2. and 14, 17. and 1 Pet. 1. 8. and Esay 30. 26. and 61. 7.

What joy do they feele, that are brought unto Christ? Quest. 2.

They are made Partakers of a three-fold joy; to wit, Answ.

First, Initiall; this is a hope of obtaining helpe, and succour from him: So when the babes of Christ do not as yet see him within, yet they have some hope, expecting, praying, and preparing themselves to meet the Lord, that they shall enjoy him, and see him at the last, which hope begets joy within.

Secondly, those who are brought unto Christ, are made Partakers of a finall joy, which is a hope of glory, Rom. 12. 12.

Thirdly, those who are brought unto Christ, are made Partakers of a spirituall, and mysticall joy; that is, internall peace of conscience, (Phil. 4. 7. and Ephes. 3. 19. and 1 Cor. 2. 11.) and joy of the Holy Ghost: and this indeed is that Manna, and white stone, which is promised to al those that overcome sin, Sathan, and their owne corruptions. Revel. 2. 17.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Thy sins be forgiven thee.

Quest. 1. Why doth Christ here answer to that which they doe not desire? they bring a sick man, and pray that Christ would cure him; and hee answers, Thy sins be forgiven thee.

Answ. 1. First, Gualter answers, that this sick man was troubled within in his conscience, as well as without with sicknesse; but this appears not by any particle of the History.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Chrysostom answers, that Christ thus replies, because hereby he shews that he is God, and not a meere man; and this is probable.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, I conceive that Christ thus answers, for this cause, that hereby he might shew himselfe to be the Physician of soules, as well as bodies. Whence we learne,

That

Observ. 1. That Christ in the curing, and healing of bodies, hath an eye, and aime unto soules.

Quest. 2. How doth it appear that Christ hath an aim at spirituall cures in corporall?

Answ. It appeare thus: namely,

First, by the conversion of those whom he healed: Thus hee commands the man, whom he had dispossesse. to follow him. And,

Secondly, by blaming those who being corporally cured, were negligent of their spirituall duties; where (saith he) are those nine Lepers?

Thirdly, because the cure of the soule is Christs principall end, and last scope, and the cure of the body is but a meanes hereunto. Reade Mat. 4. 16. Luke 1. 79. John 9. 39. Esay 9. 2. and 29. 18. and 42. 7. 16.

Thy sins be forgiven thee: we see here that Christ doth not reproach him for his sins, neither altogether silence them: whence I might observe;

Observ. 2 That sinners are to be admonished of their sins in love. Reade 1 Sam. 12. 24. and Esay 59. 1. and Ezech. 3. 17. and 33. 7.

Quest. 3. Who is the faithfull Minister of the word of God?

Answ. 1. First, not hee who bitterly reproves, and reproacheth his people out of some private hatred, or jarre. Nor,

Answ. 2. Secondly, he who is silent, and although he see much amisse, yet will reprove nothing, for feare of offending; these are guilty of the destruction and condemnation of their people, Heb. 13. 17.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but he who reproves in love, and after a loving manner; that is, who

I. Observes the errours, and straying of their flocks, with sighes, tears, and heavinesse. And

II. Admonisheth them of their errours, and sinnes with gentlenesse, and in the Spirit of meeknesse.

Observ. 3. Thy sins be forgiven thee: Our blessed Saviour shewes here the root of this, and all evill; thereby teaching us: That the cause of all affliction, and sicknesse, is sin, Esay 59. 2. Jer. 5. 25.

Object. Against this it may bee objected, that Christ himselfe denies this; for being asked, whether the Blind-mans sin, or his Parents iniquity, were the occasion of his blindnesse? he answers, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his Parents, but that the workes of God should be made manifest in him. Joh. 9. 3. yea, experience shewes, that the best, and most holy are often under the scourge; as wee see in Abel, Joseph, David, Job, Paul, and the rest, Heb. 12. 8. and 2 Tim. 3. 12. And therefore sin is not alwayes the cause of affliction, but sometimes wee are afflicted for our triall, and sometimes for the terrour, and example of others: Non peccavit hic paralyticus (Hilar. s.) sinne was not the cause of this mans Palsie.

Answ. 1. First, our Saviour doth no where deny, that those who are afflicted are sinners; but that they are not greater sinners then the rest (Luke 13. 2. 3. &c.) Neither that God doth inflict some remarkeable, or extraordinary, or particular punishment alwayes, for some hainous, or particular offence.

Secondly, there may be, and are, other causes of affliction besides this; but this is alwayes one: yea, Causa sine qua non: sin is one cause, though not the alone cause of all affliction; and if there had been no sinne, there had been no affliction; For this comes from God, who doth nothing casually, nor unjustly; now to punish the innocent, were a point of injustice. 489

Answ. 2.

Who are blame-worthy here? Quest. 4.

They who do not in every evill repaire unto God, reconciling themselves unto him, and acknowledging their punishment, and affliction to be just, by reason of their sins; as for example. Answ.

First, some being injured, are enraged against their brethren, who doe them wrong; like the Dog, who bites at the stone, which is throwne at him.

Secondly, some fly in the face of those who reprove them, although for the sins reproved, Gods hand be upon them.

Thirdly, some repaire unto wicked, and unlawfull means; as poor men do to stealing, and sick men often to charming, enchanting, and the like.

Fourthly, some have accesse to lawful means, but without God; as Asah sought to the Physicians, but not unto God for a blessing, upon those lawfull means, which were administred unto him by them, 2 Chron. 16.

What is required here of us? Quest. 5.

We must in all afflictions generally, but particularly, in our sicknesses, see our sinnes to be the causes of them, 1 King. 8. 38. Deuter. 28. 22. John 5. 14. and 1 Cor. 11. 30. Answ.

What are the fruits, and effects of sin? Qu. 6.

First, sin separates us from God, Ier. 5. 25. Answ. 1.

Secondly, sinne subjects us unto Sathan, Romans 6. 16. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, sinne subjects us unto punishment, and sorrow. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, sinne wounds the conscience, and hinders us from comfort, and peace, which is of all burthens the heaviest to a circumcised heart. Answ. 4.

What doth Christ require of us, to the pardon of our sins? Quest. 7.

These things, viz. Answ.

First, that wee should heare his word, Esa. 55. 3.

Secondly, that wee should goe out of our sins, Esay 52. 11. and leave them, Ezech. 18. 21.

Thirdly, that wee should goe unto God; that is, repent, Act. 2. 38. and 3. 19. Marke 1. 4.

Fourthly, that we should beleeve in him, who justifieth the ungodly, Rom. 4. 3. &c.

Although our Saviour did not require of this sick man a confession of his sins, before he absolved him, yet is not auricular confession lawfull? Quest. 8.

First, certainly confession is very excellent, and profitable, when it is aright performed, but this word Confession is an equivocall word: For, Answ. 1.

I. Sometimes it signifies a praysing of God, as Psalme 44. 8. and 99. 3. and 107. 8. 15. 21. &c.

II. Some

II. Sometimes it signifies a profession of Christ, or Religion: and that either,

First, religious, as Rom. 10. 10. Or,

Secondly, hypocriticall, Tit 1. 16. Or,

Thirdly, a bare protestation: Thus it is said of Iohn, He confessed, and denied not, that hee was not the Christ [a]: Now none of these belong any thing to the confession of sins.

[a] 1 Ioh. 1. 20.

Answ. 2. Secondly, these words, Confession of sinne, are ambiguous, and equivocall also. For

I. Sometimes they signifie the confession of our sins unto God alone, Psal. 32. 5. &c. And

II. Sometimes they signifie the confession of our sins unto our brethren; and that either

First, who are offended with us, that so wee may be reconciled unto them, and forgiven by them: As Num. 5, 6. Mat. 5. 24. and 18. 18. Or,

Secondly, unto our brethren in mutuall, friendly, and private conference, Iames 5. 16. But these belong not unto the Priest-hood.

III. Sometimes they signifie the confession of our sins unto the Church, and Ministers therof: and this is either,

First, generall, namely, when men confesse themselves to be sinners in generall, but name no sins in particular; as Levit. 16. 21. and 1 Samuel 7. 6. Or,

Secondly, particular; which is either,

I. Publike, in the Assembly, and Congregation; and is called Omologesis; and belongs not to the present question. Or is

II. Private, in the eares of the Priest, and of this is the question in hand.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, of this auricular confession of sinne unto the Ministers, there may be a good, and holy use; and therefore it is enjoyned in our Church, upon some occasions, as was shewed before, Chap. 3. 6.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Popish auricular Confession, wee justly taxe, and reject for two things: namely,

I. Ob Coactionem; because they compel men to confesse their sins: whereas it should be left free unto the will, and conscience of the Confitent, or person confessing.

II. Ob Enumerationem; because they enjoyn a particular enumeration of all sins, affirming that it is sin to omit any; wheras the Confitent should only confesse those sins, which trouble and burden the conscience.

Here observe diligently; that our Church enjoyns, or rather perswades the confession of sinne unto the Minister,

I. When the conscience is troubled in, or with any thing. And,

II. That their solicitude, fear, and doubting might be established in faith, and they better assured of their spiritual estate, and condition. Or

III. That those who confesse, may be the better directed in the worke of repentance: For a knowing Minister seeing their sin, can better particularly direct them how to come out of it.

Quest. 9. Although Christ neither reserve, nor require any satisfaction at this sick mans hand, yet is it not lawfull for us by some penall satisfactions to satisfie the justice of God?

Answ. 1. First, certainly wee must satisfie our brethren, whom wee have offended, and wronged.

Answ. 2. Secondly, and wee ought by some penance to satisfie the Congregation, and Church of God, when wee have by some publike scandall offended it.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, wee must cut off our sins by repentance.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, but no satisfaction that wee make, either to our brethren, or the Church, or unto God, by abstaining from sinne for the time to come, can merit either any remission of the guilt, or punishment at Gods hands.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, neither doth God reserve any satisfactory punishment, in regard of the by-past sin, as is proved by Saint Augustine (s. Psal. 32.) and Saint Chrysostome (s. Philem. hom. 1.) and Chemnit. 4. 63. b.

VERS. 3. And behold, certaine of the Scribes said within themselves; This man blasphemeth. Vers. 3.

Some observe this distinction betwixt the Scribes, & Pharisees; the Pharisees in their preaching pressed Traditions; but the Scribes clave to the written word, whence they were termed Text-men, or Masters of the Text [b]: To this purpose it is worth our observing; that wheras both the Scribes, and the Pharisees sought to fasten accusations upon Christ in this Chapter, yet they did not both accuse him for one, and the same thing, but for divers: for the Scribes accused him of Blasphemy in this verse, and this accusation was a breach of the Law; the Pharisees accused him of eating with Publicans, and sinners, vers. 11. and this accusation was a breach of traditions.

VERS. 4. And Iesus knowing their thoughts, said, wherefore thinke ye evill in your hearts? Vers. 4.

Wherefore thinke ye evill?

Observ. Wee may observe hence, that the evill of our thoughts separate us from God.

Quest. 1. How doth this appear, for the Proverbe is, Thought is free?

Answ. 1. First, it appears by these places, Proverb. 15. 26. and 24. 9. and Esay 59. 7.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is evident from this, God requires the heart, and that principally; yea where hee hath not that, he will have nothing, Prov. 23. 26. Psalme 51. 6. And therefore he abients himselfe, and departs from those, who pollute their hearts with wicked thoughts.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the heart is the root of all things: and therefore,

I. All other things are nothing without the heart; as that tree is but dead, that hath no roots. And,

II. All things wee doe are infected and tainted; for an evill heart poisoneth all things: Wherefore it is cleare, that evill thoughts separate us from God.

Fourthly,

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it appears that evill thoughts cause the Lord to depart from us; thus Sin separates betwixt us and God (Ierem. 5.25.) but an evill thought is a sinne, Ier. 4. 14. Therefore an evill thought separates betwixt us and God.

Quest. 2. How must our hearts be so ordered, and regarded, that wee may be sure the Lord will not depart from us?

Answ. 1. First, let us separate all evill thoughts from our hearts: Oh Ierusalem, wash thy heart, that thou maist be saved; how long shall thy vaine thoughts lodge within thee? Ier. 4. 14 Hic labor hoc opus est, this is no easie matter, but except wee doe this, wee doe nothing to purpose; for if wee do not cure the heart, wee are but bad Physicians, all the temptations unto sin proceeding from thence. Cogitation kindles Delectation; this inflames Desire, and Desire urgeth unto sin: And therefore let us keepe, and preserve our hearts from evill thoughts.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee must fill our hearts with good thoughts; with David, meditating upon the law of God, Psalme 119.48.148. verses, and 1.2. and 19.14. & 63.6.77.6. A full vessell will receive no more; and therefore let good thoughts fill our hearts, and there will be no place left for evill.

Quest. 3. Why doth our Saviour here say, why thinke yee evill? were not their thoughts true? was it not blasphemy for any meer man (and such they conceived Christ to be) to forgive sins? And if their thoughts were true, then how were they evill?

Answ. 1. First, certainly there was some truth in their thoughts; namely,

I. They thought (and that aright) that it was the Lords prerogative to pardon, and forgive sins.

II. It is a most strong argument, whosoever arrogates that power unto himselfe, which is the peculiar privilege of God, is a Blasphemer.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but notwithstanding this, the Scribes sin in thus thinking, and that two manner of wayes; to wit:

I. Extrà, in the thing it selfe, and the manner of their arguing, for they collect, and conclude falsely: They argue thus: Only God forgives sins; this man forgives sins, therfore he is a Blasphemer: whereas they should have argued thus, Only God forgives sins; this man forgives sins; therefore he is God.

II. Intus, in their intention; because this cogitation sprung from an evill root, and original, viz.,

First, from Sathan (Gualt. fe.) that thus hee might fasten some disgrace upon Christ. And Secondly, from envie; the Scribes consenting herein unto Sathan. And Thirdly, from covetousnesse; because hee remitted sins without the sacrifices of the Law, Gualt. fe.

Quest. 4. Wherein did the envie of the Scribes appeare in thus thinking?

Answ. 1. First, thus: the sick man neither said, nor thought any thing against our Saviours words; And it did not belong unto, or concern them: And therfore their envie showes it selfe in meddling with that, which concernes them not. 491

Answ. 2. Secondly, they ought first to have asked Christ the reason of his so speaking, before they had condemned him for so speaking: And therefore it was enviously done to thinke evill of Christ, before they knew whether there were any just cause for it, or not.

VERS. 5, 6. For whether is it easier to say, thy sins be forgiven thee? or to say, arise, and walke? But that yee may know, that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins; (then saith hee to the sick of the Palsie) arise, take up thy bed, and goe to thine house. Vers. 5.6.

§. 1. That yee may know. Sect. 1.

Wee see here how maliciously the Scribes go about to detract, and deprave Christ; and on the contrary, how mildly, and gently he answers them: This was done that yee might know: from whence we may learne,

That the scope of Ministers should be, that their people might be taught, 2 Tim. 2. 25. and Psalme 45.10. and Colos. 1.9. Observ.

Why must Ministers bee so carefull to teach their flocks? Quest. 1.

First, because preaching (the ordinary meanes to beget, and increase knowledge) is the great mercy of God, to call men unto salvation, 1 Timothy 2.4. And therefore woe be unto those to whom are committed these rich treasures of wisedome, grace, and knowledge, if they bee careless in the distributing of them to their peoples edification. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because the preaching of the word, is the justice of God; that those who heare the word, and know the will of God, may bee condemned of their own consciences, if they will not obey. And therefore Teachers should bee carefull to teach, lest the people perish for lack of knowledge, and their blood be required at their hands. Answ. 2.

Our Saviour here mildly teaching, and not satyrically talming, the Scribes may move this question, who are to be reproached, and menaced, in the preaching of the word? Quest. 2.

First, tart threatnings doe not belong unto the simple, and ignorant. But Answ. 1.

Secondly, unto the perverse, and obstinate, who either, Answ. 2.

I. Will not know their dutie: or are ignorant, because they will not learn, being proud, and unbridled in sin, as Ier. 43.2. and 44.16. Or

II. Who will not understand; as the obstinate Recusants, Psal. 82.5. and 2. Pet. 3.5. Or,

III. Who neglect to remember those things which they heare, and understand, as 2 Pet. 1.9.

§. 2. He said unto the sicke of the Palsie. Sect. 2.

Wee see here that our blessed Saviour hath one salve for all sores, one remedy for all things, and that is, Dicit, his word: thus we reade, hee said unto the Pharisees, and hee said unto the Feaver, 492 and he said unto the wind, and he said unto Sathan, Matth. 4. 3,&c. this word Dixit, he said, is sufficient for all things, Matth. 8. 8. Ioh. 18. 6. Whence we learn, Observ. That Christ can do all things by his voice and word.

Quest. 1. How doth this appear?

Answ. It appears by these particulars; viz.

First, by these Scriptures, Exod. 20. 19. and 1 King. 17 4,9. Psalm 33.6,9. Esa. 40.8. *Mat.*24 35. *Heb.*1 3.

Secondly, because all the power of Christ (as of God) is within in himself: And therfore it is sufficient for him to expresse his will by his word. Now there is a two-fold word; to wit,

I. Externall, uttered with the voice. And
II. Internall, conceived in the mind.

} Now neither of these can be falsified, but either

First, by the mutability, and change of the minde of him that speaks or thinks: but with Christ there is no mutability, nor shadow of change, Iames 1. 17. Or

Secondly, by reason of the debility, and weaknesse of him that speaks or thinks, he not being able to do what he hath promised or intended: but unto Christ all power is given, both in heaven and earth, Matth. 28. 20[c]. And therefore he is able to do whatsoever he saith.

Thirdly, because the word of Christ is accompanied with the holy Ghost, (*Ioh.*6.63) and therefore it is sufficient unto all things, and effectuall in every thing it speaks, Esa. 55. 11.

[c] Luke 1. 37. Psal. 148 8.

Quest. 2. When, or wherein doth Christ speak unto us?

Answ. 1. First, he speaks unto us in his word, converting us therby: thus he spake to the Eunuch, Acts 8. and to Lydia, Acts 16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, he speaks unto us in Meditation, and holy thoughts, infusing his Spirit into us.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, he speaks vnto us in Prayer, answering our requests: thus he spake unto Paul, 2 Corinth. 12.9.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, he speaks unto us in Faith, assuring us of our justification, *Heb.*12.24. and adoption, Rom. 8. 15. 16.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, he speaks unto us in our striving, struggling, and wrastling against sin; by strengthning us with might in the inward man, and enabling us to trample Sathan under our feet.

Vers. 8. VERS. 8. But when the multitudes saw it, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men.

Observ. Unto Men This must necessarily be understood of the Ministery of Absolution, or remitting of sins: whence we might observe, That God hath given to the Church power to forgive sin. Reade Mat. 16. 19. and 18.18. *Ioh.*20. 23. And besides, remember briefly this, That God and Christ, have given the Gospel for our comfort: now to be assured of the pardon and forgiveneſse of our sins, is a main and principall comfort (yea we can have no true joy in our hearts, untill we be assured hereof) and therefore without doubt, Christ would not leave his Church under the Gospel, without this power to afford such comfort unto his people.

Quest. How is this remission, or absolution wrought by the Church?

Answ. Three manner of waies; namely,

First, by the preaching of the word, Mat. 16.19. and 2 *Cor.*5.19,&c. and that either

I. Generally; when remission is preached by Christ, to every truly penitent sinner. Or

II. Particularly; when remission is applied to any particular person, upon the conditions of faith, repentance and obedience. And certainly whomsoever the word looseth, they are truly loosed; for all the promises of the word are true.

Secondly, by Absolution: for the Church

I. Excommunicates obstinate, and perverse sinners, 1 *Cor.*5.5. and 1 *Tim.*1.20 And

II. Absolves sorrowfull and penitent sinners, 2 *Cor.*2.7,8.

Thirdly, by Indulgences and pardons: And this comes from the Church of Rome, and it came in by steps and degrees. For

I. These Indulgences were onely for the remitting of the penance, and punishment enjoyned.

II. Afterwards they were given (or rather sold) for the remitting both of the sin, and punishment in this life. And

III. At length these pardons were not given to some who seemed penitent, but to all that would buy them; yea not only as profitable for this life, but as helpfull for those who are in Purgatory.

VERS. 9. And as Iesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man named Matthew, sitting at the receit of Custome; and he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose, and followed him. Vers. 9.

§. 1. And Iesus passed forth from thence. Sect. 1.

Observ. As Iacobs hand holds Esaus heel, so doth our Saviours cares and labours: for as soon as the miracle is wrought and ended, another work begins, without any intermission, and that for our example and instruction: that from thence we might learn, That a Christians life is a constant labour, Gal. 6. 10. and 2 Thess. 3. 13. Gal. 5. 7.

Quest. 1. How doth it appear, that our life is thus laborious?

Answ. 1. First, because we have Enemies alwaies, so long as we live, the Devill will tempt us, the world allure us, and our own hearts suggest wicked things unto us: And therefore we must perpetually labour to be free from these, Deut. 6. 11, 12. *Gal.*5.17. *Rom.*13.12. and 1 *Pet.*5.8. and 5.8.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it appears that our life is full of labour, because that is the end of our vocation, or therethereunto are we called, as is evident from these phrases following; namely,

I. Our life is called a warfare, Iob 7. 1. and 1 Tim. 6. 12. and 2 Tim. 2. 3, &c. Yea

[d] Iob 14. 14. and 1 Pet. 5. 8. II. Our life is called a Watch, and we are commanded to watch so long as we live [d]. And [e] Psal. 119 32. and Cant. 1. 4. & 1 Cor. 9. 24. III. It is called a Race or course, the end whereof is death; and therefore we must not stand still, or sit down, but run swiftly and cheerfully, untill we come to our journeys end [e].

Quest. 2. Why doth the Lord allot so much, and so great labour for us in this life?

Answ. 1. First, because great is the reward, and notable is the price, which is prepared for all true Christians. The Crown which they fight, strive, and run for, is immortall, heavenly and glorious; and therefore the Lord will have some proportion (though far from adequate) to be betwixt the labour and the reward Reade Gal. 6. 10. and Rev. 2. 10. and 3. 13. and 14. 13.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because the Lord girds and indues his servants with a great measure of strength, and affords unto them strong help and assistance; therefore he appoints unto them a great and long labour: God arms his children with grace, which is stronger than sin; and aids them by his Spirit, which is stronger than Sathan: wherefore they are able to undergo a great labour, and fight of temptations, Gen. 32. 24. and 2 Cor. 12. 9. Heb. 6. 10.

Quest. 3. May we not cast all our labour and care upon God?

Answ. 1. First, certainly this is a most dangerous perswasion, that we need neither care, nor endeavour, nor sweat, nor fight, but refer, and leave the care and labour of all things wholly unto God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, why hath God given us power to walk, run, fight, and strive? but onely that we might reduce this our power into act: the lame man was not cured to sit still, but that being healed, he might arise, walk, work, and praise God.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if we might let the Lord alone with all the care, and labour, and our selves do nothing: then why are those many exhortations in the holy Scriptures? Certainly they are not

I. That we might merit our salvation, as the Papists would have it. Nor

II. That they might be as idle appearances, or skar-crows; as some unjustly calumniate us to hold. But

III. That they might excite us unto labour, giving us hope of help, and assistance from God: we are commanded to labour, to work out our salvation with fear and trembling, Philip. 2. 12. and then we shall be aided by God, who works in us both the will and the deed, verse 13.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, I briefly distinguish thus, viz.

The event is { To be expected from God, if we labour and endeavour: for Conanti aderit Deus. / Not to be cast upon, or left unto God, if we neglect our duty, and sleep. That is,

Let us do our endeavour, and as God hath commanded: and then we may leave the successe and event unto him. But to leave the issue to him, and to be negligent in the use of the means, is to tempt his providence, and (as a thing altogether unwarrantable) is without all hope of good successe. 493

Wherein must we labour? Quest. 4.

Labour is twofold; viz. { First, internall of the heart, whereby we endeavour to subdue those corruptions which war against our souls. And / Secondly, externall of the life, wherby we labour both to abstain from all evil, to be rich in good works, and to be industrious in the outward duties of Religion. } Answ.

§. 2. He saw a man named Matthew. Sect. 2.

Faustus from this verse objects, that this Gospel was not written by Saint Matthew, but by some other; because of Matthew it is written in the third person; he seeth a man named Matthew, sitting at the receit of Custome. Object.

To this Augustine answers, that by the same Argument, Faustus may as well conclude, that Saint John writ not his Gospel; for he thus speaketh of himself, Peter turning about, seeth the Disciple whom Iesus loved (that is, John himself) following; and he said unto Iesus, Master, what shall this man do? [e] August. contr. Faust. lib. 19. cap. 7. Answ. [e] Ioh. 21. 20, 21.

Here in Matthew observe two things, namely,

First, that he had two names; for here he is called Matthew, and Mark 2. 14. and Luke 5. 27. he is called Levi. Musculus thinks that he was a Jew, and from the first was named Levi, and afterwards took unto himself the name of Matthew, which was a heathenish name, and now was better known by Matthew than by Levi.

Secondly, Matthew writes these things, and yet neither omits nor mitigates his own blots and blemishes. Whence we might learn two things, namely,

First, that the failings and errours of the Saints, do not a whit obscure the fidelity of the sacred Scriptures: that is, neither Noahs drunkennesse, nor Davids adultery, nor Abrahams dissimulation, nor Lots incest, nor Peters deniall, nor Pauls contention with Barnabas, nor Matthews being a Publican, can detract, or derogate any thing from the truth of the word of God. Observ. 1.

Secondly, from S. Matthews humility, we may observe, That those who are truly humbled, will not be ashamed to reveal, and acknowledge their sins and offences, 2 Cor. 11. 30 Observ. 2

Why do the truly humble and humbled, confesse and acknowledge their sins? Quest.

First, because they rejoyce to have escaped from sin, and the snares of Sathan (olim hæc meminisse juvabit) as we see in Saint Paul, I was a reviler, and I was a persecuter, but (blessed be God) I found mercie, 2 Tim. 1. 13. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because the light which is in them, doth reprove and make manifest their sins, Ephes. 5. 13. which before they neither saw nor knew. Answ. 2.

§. 3. Sitting at the receit of Custome. Sect. 3.

What is meant by Matthews sitting at the receit of Custome? Quest. 1.

494 The holy Ghost would hereby have us know, that he was a Publican, as Mat. 10.3. Luke 5.27.

Answ. What is observable in these Publicanes?

Quest. 2. First, the word Publicanus, a Publican, is de-

Answ. 1. rived, a Publicis, quia publicis utuntur-- publica vectigalia, &c. (Perott. Calep. ex Ulp.) because they gathered up the common Tolls, Customes and Tributes.

Answ. 2. Secondly their condition, estate, and rank, was two-fold; viz. either

I. Among the Gentiles: and thus the calling of a Publican, was a very honorable and high calling: for in time past, among them, Publicans were of the highest, and chiefest orders of Knights[f] So Cicero (pro Planco) saith, Flos equitum Romanorum, ornamentum civitatis, firmamentum Reipublicæ, Publicanorũ ordine continetur: The Publicani were the prime of the Roman Knights, the ornament of the City, and the chiefest stay, and supporters of the Common-wealth. If we reade Iosephus 12 4. fol 324. he will tell us, how all the chief men of all the Cities, both of Syria and Phœnice, came to Ptolomy to buy the Customes and Tolls. Or [f] Alex ab Alex. pag. 107. & Calep.

II. Among the Iews: and thus the calling of a Publican, was most base, despicable, and contemptible: and in this consideration our Saviour doth oppose them so often to the Pharisees, Mat. 5.46. and 21.32. and 18.17. and Luke 18.13. For

First, it was an unworthy thing for the Jews to pay Tribute to the Romans, who were Gentiles, Mat. 22.17. for they (as they said to Christ) were never servants, or in bondage to any man, Ioh 8.33.

Secondly, it was a more unworthy thing for the Jews to serve the Gentiles, in so base and vile an employment as this, yea in a calling which was injurious unto them: And yet many of these Publicans who gathered up the Taxes, and Tributes for the Gentiles, were Jews, as we may see in Matthew, who was a Publican, although a Jew.

Thirdly, none usuall, undertook this employment, except onely, either

I. Those who were of the lowest, and basest sort of the common people. Or

II. Those who were of a corrupt life, and of unbridled liberty: wherefore they are called Publicans, and harlots, in the next verse, as also chap. 11.19. and Luke 18.13.

Fourthly, these Publicans carried themselves covetously, and greedily in their places, yea unjustly and cruelly, Luke 3.13. and 19.8. And therefore, for these regards they were justly contemned, hated, and despised of the Jews.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it seems that there were two sorts and kindes of Publicani; to wit,

I. Redemptores; those who farmed the Customes, Tolls, Taxes, and Tribute of the Romans: now these were more noble, or of a higher rank and quality, and such a Publican I conceive Zacheus to have been, because he is called Princeps Publicanorum, the chief of the Publicans, Luke 19.2.

II. Collectores, Exactores; those who gathered this Toll, or Tribute, either up and down in Markets, or at Bridges, or the like: now these were of the lowest sort of the people, and for the most part, were greedy and unjust: and of this sort of Publicans I conceive this our Evangelist to have been.

§. 4. And he saith unto him, follow me. And he Sect. 4. arose and followed him.

We may from hence observe two things; to wit, { First, whom Christ cals. Secondly, what sort of people the Apostles were.

First, we may observe what manner of persons Christ cals, and converts: not Pharisees, but Publicans; to teach us, that the lowest among men, are sooner called and converted unto God, than the highest: or the poor and abject, before the rich and great ones of the world, 1 Cor. 1.26. Mat. 21.31. Acts 9.1. Observ. 1

Why are the inferiour sort of people, sooner called home unto God, than are the superiour? Quest. 1.

First, not onely because the judgment of man is corrupted; and therefore without cause contemns and despises Christ and Religion, as John 7.48. The Rulers and the Pharisees would not beleeve on Christ. Answ. 1.

Secondly, but rather, because the conscience being depressed, is the better prepared unto Repentance and conversion, Luke 18, 13. when men see nothing but their sins, and themselves to be miserable, then they are sooner perswaded to confesse their sins, and to leave them, and to repent of them, as 2 Sam. 12.14. On the contrary, a good opinion of our own wisdom, knowledge, and goodnesse, doth hinder us from confession, contrition, and conversion, as Luke 18.11. Iohn 9.41. Because the whole need not the Physitian, but the sick onely. Answ. 2.

How must we truly deject, debase, and humble our selves; that so Christ may please to call and convert us? Quest. 2.

First, let us confesse and acknowledge, that hitherto we have been asleep, dreaming onely of grace and goodnesse; there being indeed no such thing in us as yet, Esa. 29.8. The frantick man thinks not himself sick; and therfore it is a good sign, when a man feeleth and acknowledgeth his sickneſſe. Answ. 1.

Secondly, let us confesse, that hitherto we are full of sin, and that we cannot cease to sin, so long as we are naturall, (2 Pet. 2.14.) for miserable are those blinde souls who do not see their sins. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, let us acknowledge, how we are wholly taken up with the world; all our care being about, and all our labour for worldly things (Psal. 127.1, &c.) spirituall things being wholly neglected by us. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, let us confesse, that without in our lives, there is no good thing; the best works we do, being but like airy smoke, or idle dreams, or performed for some private ends. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, let us acknowledge, that within in our hearts, all is amisse: for Answ. 5.

I. Neither is our Repentance solid; but either

First, intentionall; vult & non vult piger: we resolve to repent, but resolve not when: and therefore it is procrastinated, and delaid from day to day. Or our Repentance is

Secondly,

Secondly, temporary, during for a time, and afterwards returning with the dog to his vomit, and with the ſwine to his wallow, 2 Pet. 2. 20. 21.

II. Neither is our faith lively; for carnal perſwaſions will not cauſe us to rejoyce, with that joy unſpeakable, and glorious; nor give us that peace of conſcience, which paſſeth all underſtanding.

III. Neither can we ſolidly deſire, and hunger after Chriſt: a naturall man may with Balaam, deſire to die the death of the righteous, and deſire that Chriſt may be his Saviour, but not hunger after him as his Lord, and Maſter, whom he deſires to ſerve.

Thus wee ſhould labour to confeſſe, and contemplate the deformity of our natures, and lives; and labour to goe out of our ſelves; acknowledging our ſelves to be wicked, and miſerable: And then hope that Chriſt in his due time, will mercifully raiſe us up unto joy, and comfort.

Secondly, wee may obſerve hence, what manner of perſons thoſe were, whom our Saviour
Obſerv. 2. made choiſe of, to be his Apoſtles? they were not Phariſees, nor High-prieſts, nor great Schollers; but ſimple, ignorant, and unlearned men; yea, fiſhers, and ſuch as were of no eſteem in the world, 1 Cor. 4. 9. &c. None of all the Apoſtles were learned, except only Paul, neither was hee made choiſe of, that hee might boaſt of his learning, but that Chriſt might bee glorified by the converſion of one, who was ſo learned, zealous, and obſtinate in a falſe way.

Queſt. 3. Why doth Chriſt make choiſe of ſuch, as theſe to be his Apoſtles?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, certainly this was done for our comfort, leſt otherwiſe we ſhould have deſpaired ever to have beene made partakers of their ſociety, and fellowſhip; yea hence the Holy Ghoſt hath recorded the Saints ſins, that we might ſee, and hope, that God hath mercy in ſtore for us, whatſoever our ſins bee, if wee will but repent. If Chriſt had choſen only wiſe, great, and learned men; then poore, ſimple, and ignorant ones, might have feared, that he would never have accepted them; but when Chriſt graciouſly accepts ſuch, to be his Apoſtles, then ſuch as they were, may hope that hee will accept of them to be his ſervants.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, this was done for the greater glory of Chriſt: For certainly the Church of Chriſt, which was built upon the Apoſtles, could never have ſtood ſo long upon ſuch weake props, and foundations, except the edification, and fabrick had been divine, yea ſupported, and upheld by a divine power. For

I. Men chooſe thoſe who are ſtrong, able, and every way fit for the worke they have to doe for them: Becauſe they ſtand in need of their ſtrength, and ability. But,

II. Chriſt chooſeth thoſe who are weak; and then gives ſtrength unto them, making them able [g] 2 Cor. 3. 6. Miniſters [g], that ſo all the glory, and honour of the worke may be given unto him, unto whom al belongs.

VERS. 10. And it came to paſſe, as Ieſus ſate at meat in the houſe, behold many Publicans and ſinners, came and ſate down with him, and his Diſciples. 495 Verſ. 10.

Came and ſate downe with him.

Although undoubtedly many came unto Chriſt, who were not truly converted unto Chriſt, yet we ſee he receives all that come, without any ſtrict examination of them: Teaching us,

That Chriſt receives, and entertaines all that come unto him, Eſay 55. 1. Iohn 7. 37. For the better underſtanding hereof, obſerve three things: namely, Obſerv.

Firſt, there is a double Church; to wit, externall, and viſible; internall, & ſpirituall: Now Multi intus, non de; many are of the former, which are not of the latter: As here was a traitor, & Devil amongſt the Twelve; ſo many were received in outward ſociety by Chriſt, who inwardly were rejected.

Secondly, there is a double reward for thoſe, who are in the Church of Chriſt; namely, a reward of hypocrites, which is given to formall Profeſſors; and a reward of children, which is given to thoſe, who are ſincere.

Thirdly, theſe hypocrites which are not of the ſpirituall Church, neither ſhall be made partakers of the reward of children, are yet notwithſtanding ſuffered, and permitted to be in the viſible Church, becauſe they are profitable unto the faithfull, and members of the inviſible; although the ſtalke of the corne be hollow, yet it is ſtrong, and ſupports the corne; and although the chaffe be light, yet it keeps the corn warme, and nouriſheth, and preſerveth it. So there are many in the Church, no better then chaffe and ſtraw, and yet are profitable, and helpfull, and beneficiall, unto the children of God.

Who are here to be reproved? Queſt.

They who are too rigid, and auſtere, that is, Anſw.

Firſt, the Anabaptiſts, and Brownſts, who ſeparate themſelves from our Communion, and Church, for ſome blemiſhes (as they ſay) which are amongſt us, and in our Church.

Secondly, the Novations, who deny repentance unto thoſe, who ſin after Baptiſme.

Thirdly, thoſe who exclaime againſt other mens ſins, and reproach the ſinners: Indeed Miniſters are enjoyned to inſtruct, and that with meekneſſe, thoſe who oppoſe themſelves [h]: And people have [h] 2 Tim. 2. 25. this charge given unto them by the ſame Apoſtle: To beare one anothers burdens; and to reſtore in the ſpirit of meekneſſe, thoſe who are overtaken in a fault, conſidering that the beſt may be ſo tempted, as that they may be overcome [i].
[i] Gal. 6. 1. 2

Fourthly, they are faulty here, who exclude from the Sacrament of the Lords Supper all ſinners; wheras onely notorious ſinners (that is, either thoſe who are hardned in ſin, or thoſe who often apoſtatize, and relapſe into ſin) are to be kept back, and debarred.

Fifthly, they alſo are to blame, who deny all communication, converſation, aſſociation, or fellowſhip with wicked men; whereas it is not unlawfull to aſſociate the wicked, with this deſire 496 fire and endeavour; that we may reclaime them from their wickednesse, and be as Physicians unto them.

Object. 1. Here it will be objected, Saint Paul hath forbidden us to keep company with wicked men, 1 Cor. 5. 11.

Answ. Hee forbids brethren to accompany sinners, but he forbids not Physicians.

Object. 2. But it may be objected againe, a Physician doth teach those who are sick, but he doth not eate with those who are sick: And this is the very thing, which Saint Paul in the place objected prohibits, If a man be wicked, eat not with him.

Answ. 1. First, Saint Paul in that place, speaks not of all sinners, but of those only who are excommunicated.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Saint Paul in that place doth not forbid them to keep company with Heathens, but only with Professors who were wicked: If any man which is called a brother be a Fornicator, or covetous, or an Idolater, &c. keepe him not company, eat not with him.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is certainly prohibited to associate with those, who are notorious sinners, and who remaine hardned in sin: Now all sinners are not such as these. I conclude therefore this Question, let all these five sorts of persons, whom we have here taxed, remember, that Christ received all that came unto him, he ate with Publicans, and Harlots, hee dismissed the woman taken in adultery, he reproved the cruell zeale of his Apostles, when they would have called for fire from heaven, telling them, they knew not what spirit they were of, and therfore let them not be so rigid, and severe against all sinners, as they are, condemning all, and despising all for some faults, or failings.

Vers. 11. VERS. 11. And when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto his Disciples, why eateth your Master with Publicans, and sinners?

Why doth your Master eat with sinners?

Wee may observe hence two things; namely, First, that Christ is blamed for an Adiaphorall thing. Secondly, that hee is taxed for a good thing.

First, the Pharisees blame Christ for an indifferent thing; to wit, for eating with sinners; whence we may observe,

Observ. 1 That wee must not rashly condemne our brethren for Adiaphorall things, Rom. 14. 3.

Quest. 1. Why may we not condemne our brethren for indifferent things, seeing they need not use them?

Answ. 1. First, an indifferent thing is not an unlawfull thing (for all things are lawfull, 1 Cor. 6. 12. and 10. 23.) and therfore wee must not rashly judge our brethren for the use of such.

Answ. 2. Secondly, God only is the Iudge of the heart, (Ier. 17. 10.) and such stand or fall to their owne Masters, Rom. 14. 4 And therefore wee must not judge the conscience.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, although they be indifferent in their owne nature, & may be omitted by a man, when it is left unto himselfe; yet when the lawfull Magistrate commands, they cease to be indifferent, and are to bee done by vertue of the fift Commandement.

What liberty is warranted, or allowed in adiaphorall things? or in the judging, and censuring of them? Quest. 2.

There is a double liberty; to wit. Answ.

First, from the judgement of God: this liberty I dare not proclaime; that is, free any from the judgement of God, in indifferent things; because often sin lurkes in, and under them: And therefore Caveat quisque, let every one take heed, with what mind and affection, or for what end he doth those things, which may be evilly interpreted, or give offence to the weake.

Secondly, there is a liberty from the judgement of men; and this I wish, and desire, that no man would be rash to judge, or censure his brother for adiaphorall things; because they are to be judged according to the intention of the heart, which man is not to meddle withall, but must leave unto God.

How many kinds of judgements are there, in indifferent things? Quest. 3.

In adiaphorall things there are divers sorts of judgements: namely,

Answ. First, when there outwardly appears some signes of a good intention; now to judge, and censure, here is a diabolicall practise: and yet is frequent and ordinary with too many. who will censure men for indifferent things, although it appears that they have a good intention therein: This was the fault of the Pharisees in this place, they censure Christ for eating with Publicans, and sinners, although they could not but see, that he did it, as a Physician, and that therby hee might take occasion to reprove, and instruct them.

Secondly, when outwardly appeare no signes of an ill intention: Now for a man to judge and censure his brother here, is a malicious practise, and contrary to Christian charity.

Thirdly, when outwardly appear signes of an evill intention; and here there is a double judgement, viz.

I. Of censure, which is true: for a man may censure his brother, for doing that which is of this nature; that is, for doing that which is indifferent for an evill intent.

II. There is a judgement of excuse; when a man goeth about to excuse his brother, although palpably there appear an evill intention in the action done: Now this judgement is both foolish, and false: But yet these foure things are further cautelously to be marked: to wit.

First, except the signes be very evident of a bad intention, in indifferent actions; it is a laudable folly to excuse those actions.

Secondly, if the signes be very evident, and apparent, that the intention is evill; yet before we judge, and censure, wee must consider our calling: for except wee have a para particular calling therunto; we sin against that rule, Iudge not another mans seruant[k].

k Rom 14 3. and Mat. 7.1.

Thirdly though the signes be so evident, of an ill intention in the performance of an indifferent action, that it be false and foolish to excuse it; yet it is agreeable to Christian charity to cover it, or silence it, and not by judging, and censuring to blaze it abroad[l].

l 1 Pet. 4.

Fourthly, we must observe, and remember this generall rule, that our own actions are to be judged with the judgement of faith and certainty, but our brothers, with the judgement of hope, and charity; for we seldome sin by our backwardnesse in judgeing of those who are not under our care, and charge, or for whom wee must not give account: but wee soone sin by our proneness, and readinesse in judging, and censuring our brethrens actions; as the Pharisees here did.

Thus we have heard how our blessed Saviour was judged, and censured for an indifferent action: It remaines now in the next place to shew, that he was taxed for a good thing; because hee eat with Publicans and sinners for a good, yea, an excellent end; namely (as was said before) that he might take occasion to teach, convert, and heale them: whence we may learn,

Observ. 2. That wicked men will taxe the best things, or blame the righteous for good actions: Thus Daniel was taxed for praying unto the true God; and the three Children, because they would not worship a false God: Thus Christ himselfe was taxed for a Sabbath-breaker, and sometimes judged to be a Glutton, and a Samaritane, and a companion of sinners, as though he had been a Patron of sin.

Quest. 4. Why doe the wicked so frequently taxe, and blame the righteous, for doing that which is good?

Answ. 1. First, because the righteous are separated from the world, and wickednesse, (Iohn 14.) therfore the wicked are transported with hatred, and malice against them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wicked men study to justifie themselves, which they cannot do, for the bright and shining splendor of the righteous: And therefore they strive, and study by all means to darken and eclipse their light; Contraria iuxta se posita clarius eluceſcunt, the righteousnesse of the righteous makes the wickednesse of the wicked so much the more apparent; and therfore the wicked by all means labour to deprave, and detract the righteous.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, wicked men blame the righteous for that which is good, because their blindnesse will not suffer them to discerne good from evill, Bulling. s.

Vers. 12. Vers. 12. But when Iesus heard that, he said unto them, they that be whole need not a Physician, but they that are sick.

§. 1. He said unto them. 497

Why doth Christ answer when he is not asked? for none here spake unto him. Sect. 1. Quest.

First, Christ answers, because these were weak and sick, with whom he did eat: and therfore needed a Physician. Answ. 1.

Secondly, he answers, to shew that hee is alwayes prepared to defend, both his children, and the truth, as is manifest also from these places, Mat. 9.15. and 12.3. & 15.3. and Iob. 14.18. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, Christ answers, because the truth was scandalized; that hee might thereby be an example unto us, not to hold our peace, when the truth is perverted, or evill spoken of. Answ. 3.

§. 2. They that be whole need not a Physician. Sect. 2.

The Pharisees were here faulty in a double regard, to wit,

First, being proud in themselves, they contemned, and despised others. And,

Secondly, they did not consider our Saviours office, who was sent to call sinners unto repentance. Now our Saviour answers to both these, (Calvin. s.) to the first in this section; to the second in the next.

Were the Pharisees so whole, and righteous, that they needed not Christ at all? that our Saviour saith here of them: The whole need not the Physician? Quest. 1.

Christ here speaks ironically; not that they were so indeed, but that they thought themselves so, and being puffed up, and carried away with this perswasion, thought themselves to have no need of Christ at all. From whence wee may learn, Answ.

That the opinion of our own righteousnesse drives us, and keeps us from Christ, Luke 18.11. Iohn 7.47. and 9.41. Observ.

Why doth the perswasion of our own righteousnesse hinder us from Christ? Quest. 2.

First, because such an opinion makes us swel, and grow proud (as we see in the Pharisee, Luke 18.11.) Now wee should come humbly unto Christ, as the Publican did, Luke 18.13. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because such an opinion hinders us from praying for pardon of our sins, or from begging helpe and strength against sin: as we see in the Pharisee, who puts up no petition unto God, but only in his prayer proclaimes his own negative, and affirmative righteousnesse, Luke 18.11. whereas we should come unto the Lord that we might become humble suters unto him for mercy, pardon, favour, and grace, as the Publican did. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, because such a perswasion will hinder us from taking the physick, which is prescribed by Christ: namely, Repentance, and godly contrition and compunction: For those who come unto Christ, must come with a sense of their sins, Matt. 11.28. But those who are opinionated of their owne righteousnesse, can find no such cause of sorrow, or need of Repentance. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, the last cause, why an opinion of our owne righteousnesse hinders us from coming Answ. 4.

498 ming unto Christ, is taken from Christs omming into the world. For,

I. Christ came not into the world to approve the righteous by his first comming; for this is the worke of his second comming, and belongs thereunto. But,

II. He came first for this end, to helpe the dead, and those who were miserable; this being the proper end of his first comming; And therfore those who desire to come unto Christ, must labour to find themselves to be sick, wounded, and miserable, or else they come not aright unto him.

Sect. 3. §. 3. But those who are sick.

In the literall sense wee see here, that those who are sick stand in need of physick, and the helpe, and advice of the Physician: From whence we may observe,

Observ. 1. That medicines and physick, are ordained by God against sicknesses, and diseases, Eccles. 38. 1, 16.

Object. 1. Against this it will be objected: 1. Physick, and going to Physicians are blamed, 2 Chron. 16. 12. And 2. God hinders their effect, and often will not give a blessing to the use thereof, Ier. 46. 11. And therfore physick is not to be used.

Answ. 1. First, Asa is blamed, not because he used physick, but because he trusted in it.

Answ. 2. Secondly, God sometimes indeed hinders the wished effect of physick for sin: but it follows not hence, that therfore none must use it: Good meat doth not nourish some corrupt bodies, but rather cause them more to abound with obnoxious humours; shall therfore all refuse to eat good meat?

Answ. 3. Thirdly, God no where in his word prohibits the lawfull use of physick, but commands it rather; And therfore it is arrogant, and insolent to condemne it as unlawfull; yea to neglect the ordinance of God, is to tempt his providence.

Object. 2. But it will be objected again, physick cannot of it selfe produce that good effect of health which is desired; and therfore it is to no purpose to use it.

Answ. Certainly, it is most true, that physick of it selfe cannot cure, or recover unto health, no more can bread nourish without the good blessing of God, Deut. 8. 3. And therfore in taking physick, these three rules must be observed, viz.

First, turn from thy sins, which are the cause of thy sicknesse, Eccles. 38. 10. Then Secondly, use physick, the ordinary meanes which God hath appointed, for the procuring of health m.

m Eccles. 38. 12.

Thirdly, then pray unto God for a blessing upon the means; and that he would be pleased, to make them good means for the effecting of health, Eccles. 38. 9. Numb. 12. 13. Psalme 6. 3.

Quest. 1. How doth it appear, that it is lawfull to use physick and the Physicians aid in sicknesse?

Answ. by these particulars, viz.

Secondly, because God hath ordained all these for our use: As the Lord made man the Lord of all the creatures; so whatsoever good thing was created, was made for mans use; either that it might be good for mans food, or for apparell, or for houses, and habitations for him, or for medicines to cure, and recover him, Psalme 104. 14, 15.

Thirdly, because God hath given unto man the knowledge of herbs, trees, roots, plants, and the like, and all for this end, that man might use them for his good, and admire, and glorifie the great workeman of them, 1 King. 4. 33. Ecclesiastes 38. 6.

Fourthly, because the Lord himself hath used meanes: Thus the Prophet from the Lord useth meale for the healing of the deadly pottage n, and salt for the healing of the waters o, and a bunch of figs, for the breaking of Hezekiahs plague sore, Esay 38. 21. and Moses from God cast a tree into the waters at Marah, whereby they became sweet p.

n 2 King. 4. 41.
o 2 King. 2. 20.
p Numb. 15. 25.

But those who are sick: In the figurative sense of these words we may learne two things: to wit,

First, that by nature we are sick.

Secondly, that except Christ heale us, we cannot be healed.

First, by these words: [Those who are sick stand in need of the Physician] our Saviour would teach us,

That the naturall man is sick in soule by nature; we were infected by Adam, Rom. 5. 12. and by him wholly corrupted, both in soule and body. Observ. 2

Quest. 2. What Analogy is there between sick men, and naturall men?

Answ. 1. First, sick men have the cause of their sicknesse within in their humours; so wee in our inward bowels: for corrupt, and evill concupiscence lodgeth within.

Answ. 2. Secondly, sick men have but bad, or no stomacks to good meat: so we so long as wee are naturall, have no appetite at all unto holy duties, meanes, or exercises, which are the food of our soules.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the longer a man is sick, the weaker he growes, and the stronger growes his infirmity within him. So the longer we continue in our naturall condition, the more habituall, naturall, and customary sin is unto us, & the more strong, powerfull, and prevalent in us.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, so long as a man is not cured, the fit will return again, although he may have a little ease for a time: and the return of his fit, or his relapse into sicknesse, is much more perillous then the first fit of sicknesse was: So with us, as long as wee are naturall, we are prone to relapse, and fall again into sin, by which apostasie we become seven-fold more the servants of Sathan, then formerly we were.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, except those who are sick, have help 1 from without, and 2 in time, they dye for it: so except naturely we be healed by Christ the Physician of the soul (as follows by and by) we must of necessity perish; for we are not able to cure, recover or heal our selves.

of

Quest. 3. What maladies, infirmities and evils must we confesse and acknowledge to be in us by nature?

Answ. First, that our hearts are void, and empty of grace, and dark, and destitute of knowledge, without Christ.

Secondly, that a most profound, deep and deadly corruption, doth occupy and possesse our whole hearts.

Thirdly, that our best works are but like a menstruous cloath, being performed in love unto our selves, and for some end of our own.

Fourthly, that our sighs and tears for sin are but adulterous, and our repentance hypocriticall.

Fifthly, that our hearts are not truly subject, or subjugated unto God, for so long as we are naturall we are free from God, Rom. 6. 20.

Sixthly, that we have made a false Covenant with death, and are at a wicked agreement with Hell [q].

We must confesse these 6. sorts of evils.

[q] Esa. 28. 14.

Secondly, our Saviour by these words (The sick have need of the Physician) would have us learn,

Observ. 3 That neither our spirituall sicknesse (that is, our sinfulnes and corruption) is healed by Christ, or not at all: or that he is the onely true Physician of the soul. Reade Deut. 32. 39. Psal. 30. 2. and 103. 2. and 107. 20. Mat. 11. 28. Esa. 6. 10. and 57. 18, 19. Ier. 3. 22. Our sins are the sicknesses and sores of our souls, and these are healed onely by Christs stripes, Esa. 53. 5.

Quest. 4. What things are required in a good Physician?

Answ. First, he ought to be able to know our sicknesses; for that Physician that is ignorant of the grief, can never (except casually, which is no mark of a good Physician) applie fit remedies unto the grieved, for the removall of the grief. Now herein Christ is the best Physician of the soul of all, for he is Cardiognostes, the searcher of the heart; he seeth the very intentions, thoughts, purposes, and maladies of the heart, as well as the actions of the life, or words of the mouth.

Secondly, a good Physician ought to be able to cure the sicknesse, as well as know it, and to remove the cause of the distemper, as well as discern it. Herein also Christ is the best Physician of the soul; for none is so able to cure us, as he is, we having no other means under heaven to heal and recover us, but onely him [r].

Thirdly, a good Physician must not only be able to finde out what the sicknesse is, wherewith his patient is afflicted, and to know how to apply fit physick for his recovery: but he must also be carefull, and diligent, in visiting and attending upon him, that so no good means may be neglected, and that all things which might be hurtfull for him, may be prevented, and kept from him: oftentimes the patient is endangered, yea dies through the negligence of the Physician; and therefore it is required in a good Physician, to be carefull and diligent. In this particular also Christ is our best Physician, for he riseth early, & sendeth unto us; yea all the day long doth he stretch forth his hand unto us; desiring that men would feel themselves sick, and come unto him that he might cure them, Rom. 10. 21. And therefore let us go unto Christ, as David did unto God, and say, Lord, be mercifull unto me, and heal my soul, for I have sinned against thee, Psal. 41. 4. And he will certainly cure us.

Three, all which are clearly to be seen in Christ.

[s] 2 Chro. 36. 16.

How may we know whether we be cured by Christ or not? Quest. 5.

Answ. 1. First, examine, whether ever didst thou feel thy self sick or not? none go unto the Physician, but those who stand in need of his help, and are sensible of their necessity: so the first sign whereby we may know, whether we have been healed by Christ, is this, if we have been sensible of our sins, feeling them to be painfull, and grievous unto us; for so long as we feel not the burden of sin lye heavie upon us, we will not haste to this Physician of our souls, and consequently cannot be cured.

Answ. 2. Secondly, examine, whether ever didst thou desire the counsell, advice, direction, and assistance of the Physician? for it is not enough for a man to feel himself sick, but he must also go unto the Physician: that is, examine whether ever didst thou go unto Christ, and say, Heal me, O Lord, for my soul is wounded, and my bones be sore troubled within me: we must not onely be sensible of our sins, and sorrowfull for them, but we must also desire Christ to remit and cure them; and remember, that he hath promised to heal those who are contrite, and humbled in spirit, Psalm. 147. 3.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, examine, whether dost thou attend to the counsell and direction of thy Physician? it is not enough for a man to feel himself sick, and to desire his Doctor to advise him the best he can for his health; but he must also attend to the Doctors counsell, so marking and observing all that is said, that he may remember and carry away both what he must take, and do, and in what manner and method: Thus we must examine, whether we listen to the counsell and advice of Christ, or not, in his word? and labour so to hear, that we may learn the method, and manner of repentance, and what we must do for the obtaining of mercie, grace, favour, and pardon.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, examine, whether thou followest thy Physicians counsell, or not? taking the physick which he prescribes, and observing the rules which he directs? for it is not enough for a man to feel himself sick, and to desire the Physicians advice; and to mark diligently what he prescribes; for all this is nothing except he take what is given, and observe the method and rules directed. Thus we must examine, whether we labour to know the will of Christ, that we may 500 do it? whether we attend carefully unto the word of God that we may obey it? whether we deſire earneſtly to know the means which Chriſt hath appointed for the healing of us, for this end, that we may ſubmit to a willing, and conſtant, and religious practiſe thereof? we muſt examine whether we have taken Chriſts Phyſicke, and digeſted it well in our hearts or not? whether we have received ſome new internall ſtrength from the holy Spirit, which workes a change in our lives, and by which we are enabled in ſome meaſure to obey and ſerve God.

Anſw. 5. Fiftly, examine whether thy health returne by little and little or not? A ſick man knows that he begins to amend by theſe tokens, namely,

I. If his pains abate, and are weakned.

II. If his ſtrength of body increaſe; and that he can now ſtand, or go.

III. If he have a better ſtomacke and appetite to his meat, then formerly.

IV. If his meat digeſt well with him. And

V. If he can be more jocund, and cheerefull than formerly. By theſe then let us examine our ſelves, viz.

Firſt, are the aſſaults of ſin and ſathan, fewer and weaker than formerly they were? doth not ſin raign in thy mortall body? this is a good ſign of ſaving health.

Secondly, doth thy ſtrength of Grace encreaſe? art thou able to walk in the waies of God, yea to run the race of his Commandments, and to work out the work of thy ſalvation with fear and trembling? this is a ſecond good ſign of health.

Thirdly, haſt thou a greater deſire, and more hungring affection after ſpirituall duties, than formerly? doth thy heart long after Chriſt, and thy ſoul delight in hearing, reading, meditating, praying, and the like? certainly this is another good ſign of ſpirituall recovery.

Fourthly, doſt thou ſuck ſome good juyce, and nouriſhment out of all the food thou takeſt? is thy faith ſtill more increaſed by the receiving of the bleſſed Sacrament of the Lords Supper; is thy joy increaſed, by thy prayers unto God; is thy ſoul daily bettered, and more inſtructed by all thy hearing and reading? undoubtedly this is an undoubted ſign of health.

Fiftly, doſt thou daily increaſe in ſpirituall peace of conſcience, and in internall joy of the holy Ghoſt, Rom. 14.17. then thou maiſt be certainly aſſured that Chriſt hath cured and healed thee: for fleſh and blood cannot work theſe things in thee.

Verſ. 13. VERS. 13. But go ye, and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not ſacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Go and learn quid ſit, what this is.

The words alleaged here by our Saviour, are the words of the Prophet; whereby our Saviour would teach us,

That all doubts are to be ſolved by, and from the holy Scriptures, Iob, 5.39. Eſa. 8.20. Mic. 6.8. Ier. 23.28. Obſerv.

Why muſt all the knots of Religion be ſolved by holy writ? Queſt. 1.

Firſt, becauſe of all other writings, onely theſe are not ſubject to corruption; as the Papiſts themſelves with us confeſſe: Anſw. 1.

Secondly, becauſe theſe are given unto us for this end, that we might be taught by them, 2 Tim. 3.16. Anſw. 2.

It is uſually queſtioned, whether the breaches of the firſt Table, or of the ſecond be greateſt? Queſt. 2.

To this we anſwer, that if there be an equall compariſon, that is, if the greateſt breach of the firſt, be compared with the greateſt breach of the ſecond Table; then the breaches of the firſt will be greater than the breaches of the ſecond: but if we make not an equall compariſon, then the breaches of ſome of the ſecond Table, are greater than ſome of the firſt, as in this verſe, the Lord ſaith, I will have mercie, and not ſacrifice: where the Lord doth not prefer the duties of the ſecond Table, to the Morall worſhip of the firſt Table ſimply, for ſpirituall duties are more excellent than corporall duties; as the ſpirit is more excellent than the body: if a man be like to ſtarve for hunger, then it is better to feed him than to teach him, but ſimply it is better to teach him, than to feed him. Anſw.

§. 2. I came not. Sect. 2.

Chriſt by ſaying here Veni, I came, doth intimate, that he was not ſent for by men, but came freely of his own accord, as Iohn 3.19. and 10.18.

Wherefore did Chriſt come into the world? Queſt.

Firſt, he came to be a Phyſician, and to cure our ſouls, as in the former verſe. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, he came to give ſpirituall and living bread unto us, that thereby our ſouls might be nouriſhed, Iohn 6.51. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, he came to redeem us from ſin and ſathan, Luke 1.74. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, he came to bring us out of darkneſſe, and to give the ſpirituall light of ſaving knowledge unto us: that thereby we might ſee the way wherein we ought to walk, Mat. 4.16. Iob. 9.39. and 12.46. Anſw. 5.

Fiftly, he came to be a Mediatour unto us, and to reconcile us unto his Father whom we had offended, 1 Iohn 2.1. Anſw. 5.

Sixthly, he came to give life unto us, Iohn 10.10. And all theſe of his own free grace, love, and mercie, without any merit, yea ſeeking of ours. Anſw. 6.

§. 3. To call. Sect. 3.

Chriſt in ſaying here, that he came not to call, &c. would have us to learn, That none can be ſaved without his call, Rom. 8.29. Obſerv.

How doth it appear, that except Chriſt call us, we cannot be ſaved? Queſt. 1.

It ap-

Answ. First, all men naturally are under sin; and therfore they must be freed before they can be saved.

Secondly, and faith is to be given, before we can be saved; for

I. There can bee no salvation without faith. And

II. There can be no faith except it be given from above; for it is not to be acquired by any power, or strength of nature; but is the gift of God.

It appears thus, viz.

Thirdly, we are called unto faith, Act. 15. 9. And therefore except Christ vouchsafe to call us; wee cannot be saved.

Quest. 2. Whereunto doth Christ call us?

Answ. 1. First, we are called by Christ unto his society, and fellowship, 1 Cor. 1. 9.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ cals us unto glory, 1 Pet. 5. 10. whence (elsewhere) it is called a glorious calling.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we are called unto security, safety, and peace, Ier. 13. 11. and 1 Cor. 1. 8. And hence wee are commanded to make our calling sure, because if that be certain, then have we cause of exceeding joy.

Quest. 3. How may we know, whether wee be called, or not?

Answ. 1. First, only those are effectually called, who are taught of God, Esay 54. Iohn 6. 45.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who are called, have their hearts opened, & sanctified, Act. 15. 9. & 16. 14.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who are called are humbled, with a true sight, and sense of their sins, Act. 2. 38.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, they who are effectually called, are also changed, both in heart and life, 1 Tim. 1. 13. And therfore we must examine our selves, whether,

I. We be enlightned, and taught by God, those things that concern his glory, & our good. And

II. Whether God have opened our hearts, and sanctified our affections. And

III. Whether we be truely contrite, and broken hearted for our sins. And

IV. Whether we be truely, and totally changed, both in our affections, and actions; for these are sure signes of an effectuall vocation.

Sect. 4. §. 4. The Righteous.

Quest. 1. Whom did not Christ come into the world to call?

Answ. The righteous.

Quest. 2. Is righteousnesse displeasing unto Christ, that he saith, he came not to call the righteous?

Answ. True, and reall righteousnesse; that is, the righteousnesse of faith, by or in Christ, is not displeasing unto him, 1 Cor. 1. 30. Philip. 3. 9. But our own, false, and painted righteousnesse is Quest. 3. odious unto him, Luke 18. 11. Do sinners please Christ, better then those who are righteous? or why doth he preferre them in his society? associating himselfe rather with Publicans, and sinners, then with Scribes and Pharisees? for by this it appears, that the Simonians and Gnosticks were in the right, and not erroneous.

Answ. 4. First, our Saviour no where commends any sinners, except only those who repent.

Secondly, there were many causes why Christ did rather associate himselfe with sinners, then with those who thought themselves to be righteous, namely,

Answ. 2. I. Because hereby he shewed his humility, and lowlinesse of mind.

II. Because hereby occasion was offered unto him of preaching the word, the work for which he was sent.

III. Because hereby hee shewed the power of his preaching; that it was able to convert the worst.

IV. Because sinners were more apt, and fit to hear the word, then those who were conceited of their own righteousnesse: for they were more humble in themselves, and more quickly brought to a sight, and acknowledgement of their sins.

Quest. 4. How did not Christ come to call the righteous? did not Christ call just Iames, and pure Peter, who never eat any unclean thing? did not Christ call good Andrew, and Iohn, and many other who were righteous? yea doth not the Apostle most truely say, that those whom he predestinated, them also hee called?

Why then doth hee here say, I came not to call the righteous?

Answ. 1. First, to this Saint Ambrose (saith) answers, that by the righteous, our Saviour means the Scribes and Pharisees, who presumed that they were righteous, whereas indeed they were not, but only vain, and proud: how Christ came not to call these, who were thus well conceited, and perswaded of themselves.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our Saviour here speaks of calling unto repentance; as appears plainly, both by Saint Luke, Chapt. 5. 32. and by Saint Matthew here: for in both places it is said, I came not to call the righteous, but sinners unto repentance: Now this Call belongs only unto sinners, not unto Saints, and those who are righteous, Secundum quid et ales sunt: Those who were sinners he called unto repentance, those who were truely righteous, hee called to follow him, that their grace might increase, and they attain unto a greater measure of perfection in a spirituall life: But the best stand in need of repentance, as followes by and by.

Sect. 5. §. 5. But sinners unto repentance.

It is controverted betwixt us, and the Papists, whether the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, were properly ordained for remission of sinnes? or for the assuring of us of remission of sins? and we affirm: that although that blessed Communion, and Sacrament have other uses, yet the especiall, and principall use thereof, is to strengthen, and assure our faith of the remission of our sins. And we prove this thus,

Argum. Christ here saith, I came not to call the righteous, but sinners unto repentance: But Christ in the Eucharist, calleth us unto him: Therfore he calleth sinners to come to the Eucharist that thereby they may be assured of pardon, and forgivenesse.

Answ. Bellarmine answereth, that Christ speaketh of his his first calling unto faith, and repentance, not of inviting unto the Eucharist, Bellarm. lib. 4. de sacram. Cap. 17. resp. ad arg. 1.

Reply 1. First, where Christ saith, I came not to call the righteous, but sinners unto repentance, wee must observe, that he calleth all, saye only such, as are so righteous, that they need no repentance; but such there are none in this life: therfore hee calleth all.

Reply 2. Secondly, Christ calleth all that thirst; If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink, Iohn 7. 37. But what man thirsteth more, then hee who desireth to be released of his sins? Neither doth Christ here speak of the first call unto faith, but even of such as did beleeve already; as followeth in the next verse; Hee that beleeveth in me, out of his belly shall flow Rivers of water of life.

Reply 3. Thirdly, our Saviour saith, Come unto me, all yee that are weary, and laden, and I will ease you, Mat. 11. 28. But these are they, which labour under the burthen of their sins: And therfore such are admitted to come to the Sacrament, to find ease thereby, Willet. Synops. fol. 636. Argum. 2.

Vers. 15. VERS. 15. And Iesus said unto them, can the children of the Bride-chamber mourn, as long as the Bridegroome is with them? But the dayes will come, when the Bridegroom shall be taken from them, and then shall they fast.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Can the Children of the Bride-chamber mourn?

Our Saviour in these words alludes to the custome of the Iewes in their marriages; the rites and Ceremonies whereof were performed in the assembly of ten men at the least, with blessings, and thanksgivings unto God, whence the house it selfe was called (Beth-hillula) the house of praise; and their mariage Song (Hillulim) prayses, and the Bride-groomes intimate friends which accompanied him, and sung the Epithalamium, or mariage song, were termed υἱοὶ τοῦ νυμφῶνος, Children of the Bride-chamber: as in this verse; The forme of the marriage Song in effect was this: The chiefe of the Bridegroomes friends takes a Cup, and blesseth it, saying; Blessed art thou oh Lord our God, the King of the world, which createst the fruit of the vine: After ward then he saith, Blessed be the Lord our God, the King of the world, who hath created man after his own Image, according to the Image of his own likenesse, and hath thereby prepared unto himselfe an everlasting building, blessed bee thou oh Lord, who hast created him. Then followeth again; Blessed art thou oh Lord our God, who hast created joy and gladnesse, the Bride-groome, and the Bride, Charity, and brotherly love, rejoycing and pleasure, peace and society: I beseech thee, oh Lord, let there suddenly be heard in the Cities of Iudah, and the streets of Ierusalem, the voice of joy, and gladnesse, the voice of the Bridegroome and the Bride; the voice of exultation in the Bride-chambers, to sweeter then any feast, and children sweeter then the sweetnesse of a song: And this being ended, hee drinketh to the married couple.

Obiect: It is controverted, betwixt us and the Papists; whether the institution of Lent, be an Apostolike tradition, or not? they affirming that it is: and Bellarmine (lib. 2. de bon. operib. Cap. 14.) sheweth seven causes of the institution thereof; the third whereof is this; Lent by the Apostles was ordained, and instituted to be observed, to fulfill this saying of Christs: When the Bridegroome shall be taken away, then shall they fast.

Answ. 1. First, this saying of our Saviours, was spoken only to his Apostles, that enjoyed his carnall presence.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if the words be largely taken, then the Montanists did come neerer to the sense, then the Papists, that observed the Lenton fast straight after Christs ascension.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if the Papists will expound the taking away of the Bridegroom, of Christs death, then by this reason they should not fast before the celebration of the Passion, but after.

Observ. Our Saviour in this place doth expresly teach us, That there shall be a time, when the children of God shall weepe, and mourn for the absence of Christ, Iohn 13. 33. and 16. 16. &c. and 14. 3, 16. 19. 27.

Quest. 1. Which is the fittest time for fasting, because our Saviour saith here, there shall be a time when we must fast?

Answ. The true time of fasting & mourning, is when Christ is absent, so saith our Saviour in this place; that is,

First, when wee are under some temporall scourge, and chastisement.

Secondly, when the peace is broken betweene us, and our God; when wee have offended him, and set him against us, by our sins, (Psal. 51. 8.) and are not sure of reconciliation.

Thirdly, when some lust, or strong temptation doth assault us, and wee are not sensible of the presence, and grace of Christ within us, sustaining us.

Fourthly, when our former light is eclipsed; that is, when the assurance we had in God, and joy in the enjoyment of Christ is departed, and gone from us: for as the clearest day hath his clouds, so the best sometimes hath his doubtings: the day hath his night, and clearest faith his eclipses: And this is the fittest time for fasting and mourning, because now the Bridegroom is taken away from us.

Quest. 2. How can Christ be taken away from us, or wee mourn for his absence, seeing he hath otherwise promised, Mat. 28. 20. Behold I am with you unto the end of the world.

Answ. 1. First, Augustine distinguisheth generally of the presence of Christ, that there is presentia Deitatis, & Humanitatis, a presence of his humanity, and this they were deprived of, and a presence of his deitie, and thus Christ was alwayes with them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, there is a presence of Christs Deitie, in a generall providence, and presence of sight: thus Christ is never absent, either from good, or bad, but alwayes, and every where present with all.

Third-

Answ. 3. Thirdly, there is a presence of Christs Deitie, in a particular providence; and this is two-fold, viz. either,

I. Spirituall; and thus Christ

First, directs, and disposes of the Ministery of the word. And Secondly, annoints with the Spirit, and fits with gifts, those whom hee cals to the works of the Ministery. And Thirdly, wounds, and weakens Sathans power in that manner that hee cannot prevaile against his Church, Mat. 18. Or,

II. Temporall, and thus Christ

First, sometimes hides, and preserves his children from evill, and danger, Psal. 31.20. and 91. And

Secondly, sometimes lets them fall into danger, and then freeth and delivereth them. And Thirdly, sometimes neither preserveth them from evils, nor delivereth them out of evils, but only comforteth them in, and under evils; and so as that the evill of the evill is taken away, Psal. 30.7.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, there is a presence of Christs flesh, or humanity; Sic absens, cum passionis tempus advenerit, Hieron. ſ. And this the Apostles were deprived of after Christs suffering: for now the heavens containe him, Act. 3.21. and 1.11. and 2 Cor. 5.16.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, there is a presence of temporal prosperity; and this our Saviour speaks of here according to the letter: For as the Nurse leadeth, and carefully cherisheth the Infant while it is young and weak, so doth Christ, who will not suffer his Apostles to weep, and mourn, and be afflicted as yet, because they were not able to endure it.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, there is a spirituall absence of Christ in the heart; and that in a double regard; to wit,

I. In respect of internall strength, when the children of God are assaulted, and tempted by Sathan, and overcome by sin; as was David, 2 Sam. 11. and Peter, Mat. 27. For

First, wee grieve the Spirit of God, Ephes. 4. 30. and quench the good motions of the Spirit: And

1 Thes. 5.19. Secondly, then God leaves us unto our selves, and takes away his hand, and we fall unto the ground [b].

b Psal. 104.29. 2 Chron. 32.31. II. In respect of peace of conscience, and joy of the Holy Ghost: For

First, sometimes there is a veile over the heart, and an insensibility of joy, and comfort; we not feeling the presence of the blessed Spirit in our hearts, nor sensible of the fruits, and effects of his presence.

Secondly, sometimes the children of God are sensible of his wrath, and ire, Psalm. 27.9. Deut. 32.20. Esay 57.17. Now the cause of this is sin, and that either,

I. Some sin committed already, which is indeed haynous; as was Davids, Psal. 51.2. 7. 9. 14. Or,

II. Some inherent corruption, or lust, which is not subdued; and this certainly is the most grievous condition, Psal. 120.5. Rom. 7.23. when internall corruptions violently prevaile against us, and lead us captive to the law of sinne. And thus we may learn, when and how, Christ is absent from, and present with his children on earth. 503

Vers. 16, 17. No man putteth a piece of new cloath unto an old garment; for that which is put in to fill it up, taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse. Neither do men put new wine into old vessels; else the bottles breake, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish; but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved. Vers. 16. 17.

S. 1. No man putteth new wine into old bottles. Sect. 1.

What is the nature of wine? or what is observeable in wine? Quest. 1.

Many observe many things, which I onely name, and passe by, viz. Answ.

First, some say, that if wine be degenerated, and sowre, it is unwholsome, and of corrupt spirits.

Secondly, if wine be removed, or shaken, then it is unwholsome, by reason of its mixture with the lees therof.

Thirdly, some say, that Rhenish wine quickly passeth thorow a man, and affords no nourishment at all unto him.

Fourthly, some say, that white wine is an enemy unto the head. And,

Fifthly, that red wine doth enflame the blood. And Sixthly, that wine in generall makes men oftentimes drunk, Ephes. 5.18.

How manifold is wine? Quest. 2.

There is a double wine, namely, Answ.

First, old wine; this men love, Luke 5.39. So naturally men love that best, which savours most of the old man: but the Lord knows, that the old man is corrupted, and therfore he would have us to put it off, and to lay it aside.

Secondly, there is new wine; and this is that which the text in hand speaks of, and it hath a double propertie: namely,

I. It revives, quickens, and refreshes the spirits. And

II. Nourisheth, and makes men able for labour: So the children of God by his grace are enabled to worke his worke, or to performe good workes.

What workes are required of those vessels, into whom the wine of grace is powred? Quest. 3.

First, in generall, they must labour to abound in three sorts of works: namely, Answ. 1.

I. In the workes of the heart; as in zeal, patience, humility, love, frequent meditation, and the like.

II. In the workes of the mouth; as in profession, lauding of God, and words fit for edification, Coloss. 4.6.

III. In the works of the life, and in these we must be rich, 1 Tim. 6.18.

Secondly, more particularly, what are the works which God requires of those, whose hearts he hath sanctified with grace; as for example, Answ. 2.

ample, to instance upon some of the most ordinary, and usuall.

I. They must give themselves wholly up into God, confessing, & acknowledging themselves to be his Servants, (Rom. 6. 19. & 1 Cor. 6. 19.) offering up themselves, and theirs, wholly unto his service; and learning in humility of soule, to deny their own wils. And,

II. They must labour to hate, and deny all things which would draw them from Christ, Luke 14. 26. They must cleave so close unto the Lord, that neither pleasures, profit, the world, nor any thing else may separate them. And

III. They must depend wholly upon God, adhering unto him, and relying upon him in all their necessities, and upon all their occasions, Psalme 73. 28. Iob 13. 15. This is hard, but needfull, Iohn 6. 29. And

IV. They must wraßle, and fight, against all carnall lusts, and inbred corruptions, Gal. 5. 17. and 1 Pet. 2. 11. And,

V. They must labour to walke in love, towards all the faithfull; loving the brethren, and servants of Christ, Iohn 13. 35. Rom. 12. 18. &c. Ephes. 5. 2. And

VI. They must walke in sanctity, humility, and simplicity, Iohn 1. 45. And

VII. They must be liberall, & charitable, ready to doe good unto all, Gal. 5. 22. And

VIII. They must delight themselves in the law of the Lord, Rom. 7. 22. that is,

First, delight to meditate therein, as David did, Psal. 119. And Secondly, delight in the observance, and practice therof. And

IX. They must undauntedly confesse, and acknowledg Christ to be their Lord, and boldly professe his name before men, 1 Tim. 6. 12. This is Vinum odorum: I beleeved, therefore I spake, 2 Cor. 4. 13.

X. They must remain, and persevere in all these unto the end, Matt. 24. 13. Iohn 8. 31.

Observ. Our Saviour by these words, Men put new wine into new bottles, would teach us,

That the grace of the Holy Spirit is unto the heart, as wine is unto the body, Esay 55. 1. Prov. 9. 2. Ephes. 5. 18.

Quest. 3. What Analogy, or resemblance is there, between Wine and Grace? or wherein is Wine like unto Grace?

Answ. 1. First, Wine is reputed one of the best creatures, ordained for the comfort of man; hence Abraham offers it to Melchisedech, Gen. 14. 18. and Isaac thus blesseth Iacob; The Lord cause thee to abound with plenty of corne, and wine, Gen. 27. 28. yea, hence Wine is reckoned amongst the chiefest delicates, Cantic. 5. 1. and Psalme 4. 7. Thus Grace is the principall thing which belongs unto the soule, and which is most necessary, and of most use, and benefit, and comfort unto it.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in time the Vine growes to bee a Tree, of which hath beene made columns, and statues, Boubolenens from Pliny tels us, that in Populonia (a Citie of Hetruria, neer Pisa, that is now called Plumbinum) there was a statue of Iupiter, made of a vine stocke: and almost all Writers agree, that of all Trees, the wood of a Vine is most durable: Durat in perpetuum. We need not doubt (however Vines are with us) but that they come sometimes to be great Trees, if we do but consider, how Sir Walter Raleigh (and he hath it from Strabo) tels us, that there have been Clusters of Grapes, two cubits long: and that we may credit this the better, let us remember that bunch which was brought by the two Spies, Numb. 13. 24. Thus, as the wood of the Vine dures long, so doth the Grace of God: for, whom God loves, he loves unto the end, Iohn 13. 1. And his gifts and graces are without repentance. A man cannot loose Grace, except God take it from him: now he hath promised, that he will never repent him of giving Grace unto any, Rom. 11. 29

Thirdly, Wine taken inwardly, that is, drunk, is wonderfull profitable, and that in many regards. Answ. 3.

I. It is profitable for the stomack, and that in these respects, viz.

First, it helps to digest other meat; so the Spirit of Grace, doth digest and concoct all our cogitations and actions, and like salt seasoneth both prosperity and adversity unto us.

Secondly, wine quencheth and allayeth the thirst, so Grace restraineth the heat of carnall appetites, and desires, and subdueth the affections.

Thirdly, Wine helpeth, and strengthneth the appetite, and whetteth the stomack: so Grace increaseth our desires after Grace, and strengthneth our appetites after a greater measure of sanctification; for he in whom Grace is, will desire and endeavour to be more and more holy.

Fourthly, wine breeds the best blood, and gives the best nourishment to the body: so Grace affords the best nourishment unto the soul, and thereby onely do we grow up, and become strong men in Christ.

II. Wine is profitable for man in the veins, as well as in the stomack: for

First, it opens stopped veins, and is good for obstructions: so Grace doth facilitate the way unto spirituall duties, and takes away the obstacles. We are naturally backward unto every good work, but by Grace we rejoyce in that which is good.

Secondly, wine doth dry up crudid humours in the veins, and qualifies them: so Grace doth ripen, corroborate, and perfect all weak and infirm cogitations: at first we are not able to do what we desire, but with Saint Paul complain, The good which I would do, I cannot, Rom. 7. 14. but by Grace, at length we are enabled in some measure, to perform the will of our heavenly Father.

Thirdly, wine doth expell evill humours out of the veins, because it strengthens the expulsive faculty: so Grace doth expell all evill desires, thoughts, and lusts, out of the heart.

Fourthly, wine doth fill the veins with good humours, yea the best moisture: so by Grace we are filled with the Spirit of God, (Ephes. 5. 19.) and all holy desires.

III. Wine is good for the body, and that in a double regard, namely,

First,

First, it cures some diseases, and inward griefs: so by Grace all our wounds are cured, and diseases healed, Psal. 103. 2.

Secondly, wine increaseth the strength of the body, Psal. 78. 65. so by Grace we grow up from children to men, and increase daily in spirituall strength.

IV. Wine is profitable for the spirits, and that in many respects: to wit,

First, it penetrates into the most inward parts of a man: so the word of Grace, Heb. 4. 12, 13. pierceth to the heart; and the God of Grace searcheth the heart, and trieth the reins, Psal. 7. 9. And Grace it self diveth, and taketh root in the inward man.

Secondly, wine expels sorrow and pensiveness; whence the kingly Preacher exhorts us, to give wine to those who are of heavie hearts, Prov. 31. 6. So the comforts we have by the Grace of God, doth refresh our hearts in our greatest sorrows, whether temporall or spirituall: for if outward afflictions presse us, we are assured that they shall be rewarded, and changed into an eternall weight of glory, Rom. 8. 18. And if we be dejected for our sins, the spirit of Grace will assure us of pardon, and reconciliation through Christ, 1 John 2. 1, 2.

Thirdly, wine expels fears, and makes men bold: so Grace overcomes all legall, and desperate fears and terrours, and passions of the heart, and makes us confidently to relye upon the mercie, love, power, and promises of Christ, 1 John 4. 18.

Fourthly, wine cheers, and makes glad the heart [f], both of God and men [g]; vitis dicitur quasi vita, vel quia vivificat. Isidor. So by Grace we have that peace of conscience, which passeth all understanding, yea that joy of the holy Ghost, which is unspeakable and glorious, Zach. 9. 17. and 10. 7. Philip. 4. 7. Rom. 14. 17. and 1 Pet. 1. 8.

[g] Iudg. 9. 13.

Fifthly, wine begets good spirits, and increaseth the radicall heat: so by Grace our zeal unto Gods glory, and good works, is daily increased, Ephes. 5. 19.

V. Wine is profitable also for the minde; and that in these two regards, viz.

First, it sharpens the understanding, Psal. 73. 18. Vinum moderatè sumptum acuit ingenium: so by Grace our intellectuals are bettered, and we thereby enabled to understand those things which concern our peace, and the welfare of our souls [h].

[h] 1 Cor. 10 2. and 13. 11.

Secondly, wine betters the minde, and makes the coward strong, and bold, and resolute, and the covetous man bountifull. Barthol. & Alex. ab Al. 5. 21. so Grace works a true change in our natures, and makes us unlike our selves, Ephes. 4. 23, 24.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, wine is good, outwardly used: for

I. Inwardly taken, it warms, but outwardly apposed, it cools: so Grace doth increase all inward spirituall gifts, but doth diminish all carnall desires.

II. Wine cures wounds: whence the Samaritan powres wine and oyl; because as oyl doth purge, cleanse, and close up a wound, so wine doth assuage the pain, and comforts the wound. Here we must observe these two things; namely,

First, that there are three sorts of wounds: to wit,

I. Painfull and smarting wounds: these are the accusations, and worm of conscience.

II. Itching wounds, which allure men to scratch, although scratching causeth smarting: these are temptations, and allurements unto sin, the end whereof (if we give way unto them) will be the gauls and accusations of our consciences.

III. Insensible wounds, in which are much mortified, and dead flesh: these are blinde and hard hearts. Now Grace cures all these wounds; for thereby we are assured of the pardon of our sins which are past, and of preservation against sin, and of knowledge, and mollified, and softned hearts, Ezech. 36. 26, 27.

Secondly, there are three sorts of Ulcers; namely,

I. Swelling, these must be broken, although it be painfull: this is internall concupiscence, which makes men often break forth first into sin, as in David, 2 Sam. 11. and 12. and afterwards into bitter sighs, tears, and groans, as the same kingly Prophet did.

II. Matterish, and running Ulcers, which must be dried up: this is the custome of sin, which is very hardly left.

III. Cacoethes, a Bile ill to be cured, by reason of the long continuance thereof, and the dead flesh therein: and here there is need of Corrosives; by this is meant such a trade, and hardnesse in evill, that a man cannot cease to sin, 2 Pet. 2. 14. Rom. 7. 14, 19. And this is most frequently cured by sharp afflictions, as we see in Manasses. Thus by the Grace of the Spirit, we are brought unto the confession of sin, and unto contrition for sin, yea to the leaving of sin, though it have been customary unto us, and we long continued therein.

Fifthly, wine was used in sacrifices, and divine things, Exod. 29. 40. so the sacrifices, and oblations of our prayers must be mixed, and offered up with the grace of Faith, or otherwise they will not be pleasing and acceptable unto God, Ephes. 6. 18. Iude 20. Answ. 5.

And thus we have seen how in some things the Grace of Gods Spirit resembles wine, and that as wine is unto the body, so Grace is unto the soul.

Our Saviour saying here, that men put new wine into new Bottles, may occasion this question,

Whether the W[illegible] the Bottles be all one, or not? Quæst. 4

Some think they [illegible] me thinks without truth or reason; for [illegible]ation differs from the agent, and the conta[illegible]om the contained, so doth the wine from the vessell: for the better understanding of this, observe a three-fold difference, namely, Answ.

First, some say the wine and the vessell differ in degree; because the new man is perfected simul & semel, at once, by the revelation of Faith: but the new wine (which is the strength of Grace) doth grow and increase daily, we not being perfect in grace so long as we live, Philippians 3. 10, &c.

506 3.10, &c. I dare not subscribe to this difference, because as Grace, so also Faith groweth, and increaseth daily, 2 Cor. 4. 16. and 3. 18. and 2 Peter 3. 18.

Secondly, some say the wine and the vessell differ in Re, even in the very things themselves, because the one Grace is a quality in God, and is onely revealed, and by illumination communicated unto us: but the other Grace is a quality imprinted in us, whereby we are sanctified, I dare not subscribe to this difference neither, because the communication of divine Grace, doth remain and abide imprinted in us, as well as the other.

Thirdly, the wine and the vessell differ in nature, in regard of the action: for the one is once onely imprinted, the other daily augmented. Now these two, to beget and nourish, to live, and to execute the actions and functions of life, differ cleerly enough. And these were foreshewed in the Types, namely, in Circumcision, and the Passeover, in Baptisme, and the Lords Supper; the one prefiguring our new Birth, the other our growth and increase. And therefore as the Tree differs from the fruit, so doth the vessell from the Wine. Unto the work of God there is required a preparation and a disposition; as the Priests did first wash, and then sacrifice. And we are

I. Planted, and admitted into Gods house. And then

II. We work his work; for, if we live in the Spirit, we must walk in the Spirit [i]. And thus, as the Lord first makes us good Trees, and then enables us to bring forth good fruit; so we are first made good Bottles, and then enabled to hold and shew forth good Wine; for, new Wine is put into new Bottles.

i Gal. 5. 25

Observ. Whence we may learn, That those who are born anew by Grace, ought in their lives to bring forth new works, Colos. 2. 6. Rom. 6. 4. and 7. 6. and 1 Pet 4. 2.

Quest. 5. Whether were those who relapse, and bring forth evill fruits, ever truly born anew, and made new bottles?

Answ. No, for it is impossible that those who have been once truly dead unto sin, should ever live therein, Rom. 6. 2. and 8, 10, 11.

Quest. 6. Do not new bottles, those who are born again, sin at all?

Answ. 1. First, certainly the best sin, and that often, Rom. 7. 23. and 1 John 1. 8. from whence we are taught daily to pray, Forgive us our Trespasses, Mat. 6. 12.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but they do not walk in sin, neither make that their trade of life, nor yeeld unto sin, but strive, and struggle, and wrastle against it, Gal. 5. 17.

Quest. 7. Cannot those who are illuminated, and renewed, relapse, and fall away?

Answ. 1. First, those who are truly regenerated, cannot finally relapse, John 13. 1. and 10. 28. Rom. 14. 4. 1 Cor. 1. 8. Phil. 1. 6.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but there is a degree of illumination and common Grace, from which a man may finally fully, and totally fall, Heb. 6. 4. and 10. 26 and 2 Pet. 1. 9. and 2. 20.

VERS. 20. And behold a woman which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years, came behind him, and touched the hemme of his garment. Vers. 20.

Quest. 1. Whether was this woman the same, which Saint Marke, and Saint Luke make mention of? Marke 5. 26. Luke 8. 43.

Answ. The woman whom Saint Marke, and Saint Luke make mention of, was not divers from this woman, spoken of by Saint Matthew in this place (as some thinke) but is all one, and the same: for they all set downe the same terme of the continuance of her disease; namely, twelve years, and the manner of her healing, by touching the hemme of Christs garment: onely the other two make mention of some other circumstances, as that she had spent all among the Physicians, and was nothing the better.

Quest. 2. What woman was this which was healed?

Answ. This woman was not Martha, the sister of Mary Magdalene, as Ambrose seemeth to think (de Sacram. Cap. 5.) nor healed in Jerusalem (as Tostatus, qu. 9. in Mat. 4. 85.) for Christ was then in Galilee, whither hee was returned from the countrey of the Gadarenes, and shee seemeth to have been a stranger, because Christ sendeth her not to the Priest, to present the offering prescribed, Levit. 15. 26. &c. as he did the Lepers. Some thinke that this womans name should bee Veronica, in whose vail Christ left an impression of his Image: or Bernice, who by Herods license set up a brazen Image of Christ at Paveas, in memory of this fact, under the which grew an herbe, which as soone as it touched the skirts of the Image, had a vertue to cure all diseases, but these I leave as uncertainly true, or rather as certainly false, though confidently reported by divers Authors, cited by Lorinus. Indeed Eusebius writeth, that this woman was of Cæsarea, called before Paveas, and placed in memory of this her deliverance, two brazen Images at her door, one representing Christ, the other a woman touching his garments, but without any adoration of them: for the same Eusebius, Bishop of Cæsarea, surnamed Pamphilus, being written unto by Constantia the Empresse, to send her the Image of Christ, returned this answer; Quis gloriæ, & dignitatis humanis splendores, & fulgorantes effigiare mortuis & inanimatis coloribus posset? (Nicen. 2. Action. 6. tom 4.) who can with dead, and unlively colours, set forth the bright, and shining splendor of his glory, and dignity? And so he refused therein to satisfie her demand. But to thinke that the touching of an Image did give such vertue to an herbe, to heale all diseases, is an idle conceit, for when this woman was healed by the touching of the hemme of Christs garment, the Text saith, Vertue went out of him: whereby it is evident, that the presence of his blessed body gave vertue to the garment, and that it had it not of it selfe; much lesse then must wee think, that an Image, which never touched Christs body, should have any such miraculous power, and vertue in it.

Quest. 3. Was not Christ polluted by the touch of this woman?

All

Answ. All other persons by the Law, were judged unclean by touching of such as had these issues of blood; but our blessed Saviour, as hee was without sin in his soule, so hee was free from all uncleanesse, and contagion in his body: hee came to take away all uncleanesse, and therfore could not himselfe be defiled therwith: for hee was undefiled, and separated from sinners.

Vers. 22. VERS. 22. But Iesus turned him about, and when hee saw her, he said, Daughter be of good comfort, thy faith hath made thee whole: And the woman was made whole from that houre.

Sect. 1. §. 1. But Iesus turned him about, &c.

Quest. Why will not our Saviour have this miracle kept secret, as well as divers others? he forbids the blind man afterwards, vers. 30. to tell none what he had done unto them; and here by his turning him about, and speaking unto the woman, he would have all to take notice, how miraculously she was cured?

Answ. 1. First, negatively, Christ did not this through ambition, or desire of vaine glory. But Answ. 2. Secondly, that he might free, and deliver the woman from all fear, who might afterwards otherwise have beene troubled in conscience, as though she had stolne health from Christ:

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ did this, that hee might correct her faith, who thought, that if shee could but touch him, she should be whole, and yet that she could touch him, and not be perceived by him; therefore hereby our Saviour would have her know, that he knowes all things.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Christ would have this miracle knowne, that her faith might be thereby more manifested, and that for the imitation of others.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, Christ did this, that the Ruler of the Synagogue (who is mentioned before vers. 18.) might be the better confirmed, and strengthned in this faith, that Christ was able by his word to cure his daughter.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, Christ did this, that the true cause and Author of the miracle might bee made known: to wit, that it was not by any vertue inherent in the garment, but that it was wrought willingly, and wittingly by himselfe; and therfore he doth not say, Vertue is gone out of my garment, but vertue is gone out of me; that is, by my divine power, and vertue, this woman is healed, not because with her hand she touched my garment, but with her faith my selfe.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Woman be of good cheer, thy faith hath made thee whole.

Argum. It is controverted, between us and the Papists; whether there be any certainty of faith here on earth, or not? Amongst other Arguments whereby the affirmative part may be proved, wee may produce this: That certainty of faith is praised, and commended in Scripture, and weakenesse, and doubting reprehended. Now this certainty of faith, which we say is praised, doth consist in a particular application, whereby a man promiseth unto himselfe, that that thing which he hopes for, shall certainly be fulfilled unto him: Many are the examples which may be brought to prove this Argument, that certainty of faith is commended.

First of all, this woman with the bloody issue, unto whom Christ here saith, Be of good cheer, (or Confide, be confident) thy faith hath made thee whole. Now what manner of faith was this? Saint Matthew here tels us, The woman said within her selfe, if I may but touch the hemme of his garment, Servabor, I shall be whole: And this certain confidence of hers we see Christ commends, and praises.

Secondly, it is said of Abraham, that he beleeved God, and it was counted unto him for righteousnesse, Rom. 4.3. Now what manner of beleeving was this? Saint Paul afterwards most clearly explicates thus (vers. 18, 19, 20, 21.) For Abraham against hope beleeved in hope, that he might become the Father of many nations: according to that which was spoken, so shall thy seed be. And being not weak in faith, he considered not his owne body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadnesse of Sarahs wombe. He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God: And being fully perswaded, that what he had promised, he was able also to performe. In these words is described an extraordinary confidence in the divine promises of God, which Abraham beleeved should altogether be fulfilled; yea fulfilled in him, although (if hee had consulted with flesh and blood) he might have opposed, & objected many things; and therfore there was not onely Confidentia objecti, but also subjecti propter veritatem divinam.

Thirdly, of Saint Paul, who writing unto Timothy saith: For the which cause I also suffer these things: nevertheless I am not ashamed: for I know whom I have beleeved, and I am perswaded that he is able to keepe that which I have committed unto him against that day k; the meaning of the words is plaine; for the Apostle herein doth describe the hope that he hath for the time to come, by which hope he is sustained, and upheld in the midst of so many, and so great afflictions, and calamities as lye upon him: Here he saith, he is not ashamed, and Rom. 5.4. he saith, Hope maketh not ashamed; and therefore hee is certaine of the event. Whence comes this certainty? I know (saith he) whom I have beleeved, and that he is able to keepe that which I have committed unto him; that is, I am certain, that at the last day he will render, and restore unto me what I have committed unto him to keepe. And thus from these examples we may (according to the truth) hold and maintain a certainty of faith, and a particular application of the divine promises unto our selves.

k 2 Tim. 1.12.

Vers. 23, 24. VERS. 23, 24. And when Iesus came into the Rulers house, and saw the Minstrels, and the people making a noise, hee said unto them give place, for the Maid is not dead, but sleepeth: And they laughed him to scorne.

508

v. 1. And when Iesus saw the Minstrels.

Sect. 1. How manifold is the use of musick?

Quest. 1. Two-fold: namely, lawfull, and heathnish.

Answ. Wherein is, or hath Musicke been lawfully

Quest. 2. used?

Answ. 1. First, it hath been used by the godly, sometimes in their joy, and mirth; as David ever and anone testifieth in the Psalmes, and as our Saviour intimates, when he saith, we have piped unto you, but you have not danced, Matt. 11. 17.

Answ 2. Secondly, Musick hath been used lawfully, in sacris, in holy duties, and divine worship; as appears plainly by these places, 2 Sam. 6. 5. and 1 Chron. 5. 12. and Psalme 71. 22.

Quest. 3. Whether was the use of Musick at funerals a Jewish, or Heathenish custome?

Answ. Although it was sometimes used by the Jewes, yet they borrowed it from the Gentiles: for the understanding whereof observe, that the Jewes at the burials of their friends used two sorts of Ceremonies; namely,

First, some to testifie their sorrow; of which in another place, because the present text speaks not of these. And

Secondly, some to augment their grief; these were

I. Minstrels, who with their sad tunes inclined the affections of the people to mourning. Now of these there were two sorts; namely,

First, some playing on pipes. And Secondly, others sounding Trumpets.

At the Funerall of Noble-men, or old men, they used a Trumpet, at the Funerall of the common people, or children, they used a Pipe: In this respect it is said here, that Iesus when he raised Iairus daughter, cast out the Minstrels.

II. Women there were which were hired at burials, to sing for the same purpose, viz. to augment their mourning, and to incline the affections of the people to sorrow: Now these women besides singing, did likewise use some outward significations, and expressions of sorrow, to move the company, and more strongly to affect them: Call (saith the Prophet) for the mourning women, and send for the skilfull women, Ier. 9. 17. These women the Romans called Praefiae, quasi in hoc ipsum praefectae; Chiefe, or skilfull Mourners. Now these customes we reade no where commanded by God unto his people; but were only borrowed from the practises of others.

Quest. 4. How manifold was the use of Musick at funerals, amongst the Gentiles?

Answ. The Heathens had a four-fold use of Musick in their burials: namely,

First, Civill, to honour and adorne Funerals; whence also they used sometimes great pomp, and did sing songs of the praises of the deceased persons, as wee see in Tabitha, Act. 9. 39. Now this Canus in generall, was two-fold: namely, Encomiasticus, and Threneticus, Rhod. 27. 26.

Secondly, Philosophicall, to shew that when any is taken out of this miserable world, there is cause of joy. Let the Reader reade Alex. ab Alex. 1. 28. 129. where hee shall see this confirmed by the example, both of the Grecians, and Thracians. Whence we may learn,

That in the death of those who are good, we must rejoyce rather then mourn. Observ.

Quest. 5. Why must we rejoyce in the death of our good friends, or allies?

Answ. First, because death is better to such, then life, Eccles. 4. 2. &c.

Secondly, because death is best of all unto such; as appears thus;

I. This world is an evill world in it selfe, Gal. 1. 4. and evill unto the righteous, 1 Cor. 15. 19.

II. So long as wee are here wee are strangers from the Lord; that is, absent from him, 2 Cor. 5. 2. &c. but when by death wee are dissolved, we shall possesse, and enjoy him, Philip. 1. 23.

Thirdly, Solaminis, their next use of musick was, that thereby the minds of those who mourned, might be lightned, and comforted; because we are prone to exceed our bounds in all things, whether in joy, or sorrow.

Fourthly, Idolatricus, they had an Idolatrous use of Musick at their funerals; and this was either,

I. Cruell, and bloody, that the sound or yels of those whom they sacrificed might not bee heard; and for this end the Jewes had all sorts of lowd instruments (in a manner) which sounded when they offered up their children unto Moloch; that so the cries of the babes might not pierce the Parents eares. Or

II. Their custome was superstitious, viz. for the pacifying, and appeasing of their gods; this was most usuall with the Gentiles, and is most dangerous to be imitated by Christians.

v. 2. And the people making a noise. Sect. 2.

Quest. 1. Whether was this action of these in making clamours and out-cries, lawfull or not?

Answ. 1. First, in generall it is lawfull to mourn for the dead; As might be proved,

I. From the practise of the Fathers, Zach. 12. 11. Gen. 23. 2. and 1 Sam. 25. 1. and 2 Sam. 1. 24. and 11. 26.

II. From the approbation of our heavenly Father, 1 Kings 14. 13.

III. From the Apostles warrant, 1 Thess. 4. 13. &c. Philip 2. 27.

IV. From the making of the booke of Lamentations, 2 Chron. 35. 25.

V. From our blessed Saviours example, who wept for Lazarus, John 11. 35.

Answ. 2. Secondly, these here transgressed, and sinned in what they did, as also did divers others in their mourning, and that in a three-fold regard; namely,

I. Because they did not observe a mean, or moderation in their mourning; but mourned as they do who are without hope: from whence we may learn,

That we must not mourne immoderately for the dead, 1 Thess. 4. 13.

Quest. 2. Why may we not exceed in our lamentations for the losse of dear friends,

Answ. 1. First, because they and we at the last shall rise againe: David weeps not when the child is dead, dead, because he shall goe to him, 2 Sam. 12.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee must not mourn immoderately for the dead, because death to the godly is happy, and therfore excessive teares bewrayes onely selfe-love, and not true love at all, Revel. 14. 13. Jer. 22. 10. Non deflentur pueri, nec senes quinquagenarij. Alex. ab Al. 132. b.

II. This sort of mourning was evill, because a multitude, or great many wept and mourned, Multitudo tumultuans: Now it is good to weepe with those who weep, &c. Rom. 12. 14. if it bee cordiall; but if (as here) only for a forme, or fashion sake, without any true sense of sorrow, then it is blame-worthy.

III. There was another fault in this mourning; namely, that they hired, procured, and brought together others to mourne for those who were dead. Alexandriæ conducti Threnodes. Rhod. 17. 21.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And hee said unto them, give place, or depart.

Quest. Why doth Christ drive away, and cause to depart these Minstrels, and Mourners?

Answ. 1. First, because they made a foolish, and tumultuous noise.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because hee will not have the mysterie he is about, communicated to such as these: where we may observe two things; namely,

I: That Christ separates, and cals whom hee pleases: And,

II. That these were unworthy to stay with him, because they were only led with sense; and that either,

First, externall, regarding only their vanities, and accustomed superstitious solemnities: Or

Secondly, internall; being carried away, and transported through sorrow, for the death of the Damosell: Now the way unto Christ is to estrange the eyes from the world, and to lift them up unto heaven.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, our Saviour causeth these to depart, because the Maid was not finally dead; and therfore although mourning be lawfull in measure, yet now there was no need of it.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, our Saviour dismisseth these, because they were Mockers; as followeth §. 5.

Sect. 4. §. 4. The Maid is not dead, but sleepeth.

Object. The Papists object this place for the proofe of their equivocation, and mentall reservation; our Saviour saith here; The Maid is not dead, but sleepeth: now the Damosel was naturally dead, and therfore the words must be understood with this mentall reservation; In respect of my power and will.

Parsons. Mitig. Pag. 365

Answ. 1. First, in this example, there can neither bee shewed any secret confession, or any interrogation put against, or besides equity, and truth, nor any injury offered unto Christ; nor any cause compelling Christ to use any equivocation, by a mentall reservation; but his speech was such as he usually used in his conversation with men. And therefore this example is unfitly brought for the confirming of the doctrine of equivocation [m].

[m] Amesius, lib. 5. Conscid., pag. 832.

Secondly, the sense of our Saviours words is clear, and manifest enough by the circumstances thereof, without any mentall reservation at all; for he spake this to those, who with mourning and weeping, prepared to celebrate the exequies of the dead Damosell; and by these words would have them know, that presently hee will raise her up, as though shee were but awakened out of a sleepe: Now how could our Saviour expresse this unto them in more fit, and pregnant words, then he here useth [n]?

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Papists exposition is true, that in respect of Christs divine power, they that are dead, are said to be but asleep; which is a most frequent, and ordinary phrase of Scripture, (Reade Tolet in hunc locum.) So that this speech is not equivocall, but Metaphoricall; and the Metaphor of calling Death a Sleep, was most familiar with the Hebrewes, and is most aptly used by our Saviour, in this verse, seeing that the raising of a dead woman to life, was no more difficult unto him, then the awakening her out of sleepe, which he intended presently to do: And therfore, both his denying her to be dead, and his affirming that she was but asleepe, were but verball Amphibologies, which all they might have understood, who were not scornfull, and incredulous contemners of his sayings.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the Popish Priests equivocation, as this; I am no Priest, meaning, as ordained to kill a Calfe, or such like, is so farre beyond the horizon, and sight of any mans capacity, that he may sooner claspe hold of the man in the Moon, then by any intimation of words, or circumstance of speech, reach unto such a reserved conceit [o].

[o] Mort. encount. l. 2. cap. 10. p. 144

Quest. 1. For the further clearing of this Objection, I propound this question,

What is the true sense, and meaning of these words; The Maid is not dead, but sleepeth?

Answ. 1. First, some understand them literally, as though she were not dead indeed naturally, by a separation of the soule from the body; but only shee seemed to them, as though she were dead: Here observe, that many times sick persons appear to the living to bee dead, and that one of these wayes; to wit, either,

I. By swounding, and fainting. Lipothymia Or,

II. By some deep, and dead sleep, wherby all the senses are bound; arising either from drunkennesse, or much watching, or extraordinary labour, and wearinesse. Or,

III. By some invincible Lethargy. Or,

IV. By the suffocation of the Matrix. Or

V. By some beginning Apoplexie. But none of these had place in this Maid, she being truly dead.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand these words Miraculously: as if our Saviour would say; As yet after the course of nature she is dead; but I will restore her unto life: Thus the Prophet from the Lord saith, Morieris, to Hezekiah, thou shalt die, Esay 38. 1. and afterwards vives, thou shalt live, 2 King. 8. 10. But these words imply something more; for they doe not belong only to this Damosell, but also unto us, Miscel. f. Offendit natura mortis piorum, Gualt. f.

510 Thirdly, some understand these words Philosophically, in regard of the soul which dieth not, & therfore neither the Maid, because Mens cujusq; est quisq;. And therfore death is called a dissolution, because the soul dieth not, but returneth unto God that gave it, Eccles. 12 7. And therfore David commends his soul unto God, Psal 31.5. as doth also Christ, Luke 23. 46. and Stephen, Acts 7.59. But these words imply something more than this, because this opinion neither affirmeth, nor proveth any thing concerning the Resurrection, and therefore may be maintained by a Sadduce.

Answ. 3.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, these words, The Maid is not dead, but sleepeth, may be expounded Theologically, because the whole man shall live again hereafter in the Resurrection: and that either

I. Generally; because at the last day, the body of every one shall be raised, and united again to the soul. Or

II. κατ' ἐξοχήν. Because onely the godly shall live for ever a life of felicity and glory. Ergo docet quæ conditio mortis-- & spem resuscitationis. Gualt. f. In these words our Saviour teacheth us the condition of death; namely,

Observ. That death is not a finall dissolution, but only as it were a sleep for a time.

Quest. 2. How doth the truth of this appear?

Answ. The truth hereof appears by these particulars, viz.

First, because death is common unto all, and hath ceazed upon all; and therefore is not a finall dissolution, nor totall destruction of soul and body.

Secondly, because those who dye are said to sleep; as appears

I. By the godly, before the Law, Gen. 47. 30. And

II. By the godly, under the Law, as 2 *Sam.*7 12. and 1 *King.*2.10. and 11.43. And

III. By the wicked, under the Law, as 1 King 14.20, &c. and verse 31. and 15. 8. *Esa.*14.18. And

IV. By the Saints under the Gospel, John 11. 11. Acts 7. 60. and 1 Cor. 11. 30. and 15. 18.

Thirdly, because sleep is like to death; for so it binds all the senses, that it makes the body seem to be liveleſſe; because in sleep the body moves not, perceives not, regards not, either wife, or children, or possessions, or employments, or affairs, or pleasure, or beauty, or health, Psal. 76. 5. And hence Sepulchers are called κοιμητήρια, Dormitories, or sleeping houses.

Fourthly, because death is like unto sleep; for we sleep for a time, and then awake and rise. So we shall all arise from the grave of death. Reade Iob 19.25. *Psal.*16.9.&c. Daniel 12.2. and *Mat.*25,32,&c. John 5. 28. and 2 *Cor.*5.10.

Quest. 3. What happinesse do they enjoy, that sleep in the Lord?

Answ. 1. First, now they enjoy the sight of God, that beatificall vision, *Mat.*5.8. and that in fulnesse, Beza, ex Psal 34.8.

Answ. 2. Secondly, now they are free from all mutation, change, danger, and fear.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, and their very bodies at the last day shall awake unto glory, 1 Cor. 15.

Quest. 4. What is required of us in regard of this sleep, death?

Answ. Let us prepare our hearts for a happy Resurrection, (Psal. 57.7.) doing as men do, who are ready to lay themselves down to sleep; namely,

First, before they sleep, they shut, bolt, and lock the doors for fear of Thieves: so let us bolt, and lock the doors of our hearts, that sathan do not enter; let us seek to be secure from him by Christ, that is, let us labour that we may be certainly assured, that Christ is our Mediatour, Intercessour, and Advocate, who will obtain for us at Gods hands, remission, and pardon of all our sins.

Secondly, before men sleep, they hide, lock up, or make sure their purses, and money; so we must be carefull to lay up our treasure in heaven, Matthew 6.

Thirdly, before men sleep, they provide and prepare something to cover them, lest they should take cold: so we must labour, that we may be cloathed with the covering of Christs righteousnesse, *Rom.*13. 12,13.

Fourthly, men, before they sleep, dispose, and lay ready in order their garments, that they may finde them, and cloath themselves with them when they awake, lest they be found naked: so we must labour, that we may have the garments of sanctity and sincerity, otherwise we shall be found naked, and like him without a wedding garment, cast into everlasting fire.

And thus, if we desire, that death may be a happy sleep, and our Resurrection a happy awakening, we must be watchfull against sathan, and carefull to adorn our selves with sanctity and piety, but principally carefull, that Christ may be our Mediatour, and we cloathed with his righteousnesse, and then death shall be but like a sweet sleep, and the last Trump like a joyfull sound, summoning us to our Coronation, and everlasting inheritance.

Sect. 5. v. 5. And they laughed him to scorn.

Christ we see here both speaks and does; promiseth and performeth, and yet is derided: for which they are justly excluded, and caused to depart; to teach us,

Observ. That deriders, mockers, and scoffers, shall be shut out from Christs presence, Gen. 21.9. *Gal.*4. 29, &c.

Quest. 1. Why shall these be put out from Christ?

Answ. 1. First, because on their part it argues pride, and insolencie, that they will not hear Christ, Prov. 13. 1.

Answ 2. Secondly, because this scoffing, and derision is terminated in God, whether it be

I. Against God himself, as *Gal.*6.7. Or

II. Against Christ, as Luke 22.63. and 23.11. Or

III. Against Gods word, as Act. 2. 13. and 2 *Pet.*3.3. Or

IV. Against his Messengers, as 2 Chron. 30.10. *Lam.*3.14,15. Or

V. Against the godly, or the true Church, as *Psal.*22.7. and 35.15. and 119.51. *Esa.*37.23. Or

VI. Against the poor and weak, who hath no helper, 1 Sam. 17. 42. Now against which soever of of these derision be directed, yet it is terminated in God: and therefore no scoffers shall come, or be suffered to abide in Christs presence.

Quest. 2. Who is here blame-worthy?

Answ. 1. First, those who deride the dejected: Here observe that there are two sorts of evils; namely, { Culpæ, Pœnæ.

Now wicked men sometimes deride their brethren for evils; either { First, Active, of sin: thus the Ammonites laughed, because the Sanctuary of the Lord was prophaned, Ezech. 25.3. Now Charity covers a multitude of sins [n], and therefore Christians should deride none for this kinde of evill.

Secondly, Passive, of punishment: thus Iob complains, that base persons disdained him, when Gods hand was upon him [o]. Now the difference between these two derisions, is this; the latter is Dog-like, but the former Devill-like.

[n] 1 Pet. 4.8.

[o] Iob 30. 1.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they are here to blame, who deride good men: Here four sorts are justly taxed; viz.

I. They who mock and scoffe at those who reprove them, Ier. 20.7,8. Heb. 13.22.

II. They who laugh at those who exhort, admonish, counsell, and advise them.

III. They who deride the professours of the Gospel, as Michol, 2 Sam. 6.16. And

IV. They who laugh at the faithfull, because they trust in the Lord, Mat. 27.43. Psal. 14.6.

Quest. 3. But why do these Minstrels, & Mourners laugh at Christ?

Answ. Men laugh at Christ, either from { Affection, because being glued unto sin, and not being able to cease from sin, they deride whatsoever is good, though spoken, or commanded by Christ. Or Understanding, because in their judgment, the things spoken by Christ, appear to be ἄτοπα & ἄδυνατα, fooliish, absurd, and impossible: and this was the cause of the derision here mentioned; they laughed at Christ, who said, she was but asleep; for they knew that she was dead, Luke 8. 53.

Vers. 25. Vers. 25. But when the people were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the Maid arose.

Sect. 1. 5. When the people were put forth.

Quest. 1. Who were permitted to abide, or admitted to enter into the room with Christ?

Answ. 1. First, some say all his Disciples went in with him, verse 19. But this is not so, for all his Disciples entred not into the house, much lesse into the Chamber where the Maid lay: yea all did not follow him to the house, Mark 5.37. And of those which did, onely three entred in with him [p].

Secondly, some say, onely the companions of Iairus, and himselfe, and wife entred in with Christ (Calvin. ſ.) The truth of this appeares not; because the Relative (with him) doth rather appertain to Christ, then unto Iairus; The words are these, as recorded by Saint Marke, Chap. 5.40. When he had put them all out, who laughed him to scorn: He taketh the Father, and the Mother of the Damosell, and them that were with him, and entreth in where the Damosell was lying. Erasmus, and the vulgar translation reads, Cum illo, id est, Patre Puellæ: Them that were with him; that is, with the Father of the Damosell; and thus Calvin seems to understand it: but I rather think, that by Him is meant Christ, and it seems to be plain from Mark 5.40. 511 Answ. 2.

Thirdly, it is most certain that these were permitted, and admitted to goe in with Christ. viz. to wit. 1. Three Apostles. 2. The Father, and the Mother of the Maid. And 3. Besides these none at all; as Saint Luke doth plainly expresse. And when he came into the house, he suffered no man to go in, save Peter, and Iames, and Iohn, and the Father, and the Mother of the Maiden, Luke 8.51. Answ. 3.

Quest. 2. Why did our Saviour permit the Maids Father, and Mother to enter in with him?

Answ. 1. First, that they might be eye-witnesses of the grace, and power of Christ. And Answ. 2. Secondly, that seeing what Christ did unto, and for their daughter, they might be more carefull to preserve her, and to tender her, in thankfulnesse unto Christ. For,

I. It was a joy unto them to see her restored from death unto life. And,

II. It was they who desired this of Christ. And,

III. It belongs unto Parents to take care of and for their children: And therfore they seeing that to be done by Christ, which they desired, were more obliged in thankfulnesse unto him, to have the greater care of her, to educate, and instruct her in the feare of God, and knowledge of Christ.

From this action of Iairus we may learn,

Observ. That it is the Parents part to bring their children unto Christ, and to procure that by him they may be raised, and restored from death unto life: for they are the Lords substitutes, and therfore al Magistrates (which else-where are called gods) in the fift Commandement are stiled by the name of Parents.

Quest. 3. What is the dutie of Parents towards their children?

Answ. 1. First, they must bring them unto Christ in Baptisme: The Canons forbid that Fathers should be God-fathers, or witnesses unto their own children; but none forbids Parents to be present at the baptizing of their children.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Parents must earnestly endeavour, that their children may be raised unto life: all men naturally are dead in sinnes and trespasses, Ephes. 2.1. And therfore Parents must labour as much as in them lies, that their children may be raised from the spirituall death of sin, unto the life of righteousnesse.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Parents must rejoyce, when their 512 children are revived by Christ, as undoubtedly the Father and Mother of this Maid did; that is, when Parents see good beginnings, and hopefull blooms, and religious fruits to shew themselves in their children, they should rejoyce, and be thankfull, and blesse God.

Because in the second answer it was said, that, Parents are bound in dutie to labour, and endeavour that their children may be raised up from the grave of sin, to the life of grace.

Quest. 4. It may be enquired, what they can, or ought to doe, for the obtaining hereof?

Answ. 1. First, they must pray daily unto God for them: and therfore Parents should here examine themselves, whether they pray daily for the regeneration, and sanctification of their little ones, or not? for if they be negligent herein, they are negligent in a main part, and branch of their dutie, and are left without excuse: this being a thing which every Father may doe for his child, namely, to sanctifie them daily by the sacrifice of prayer, Iob 1.5.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Parents must counsell, and advise their children, as well as pray for them; yea teach and instruct them, according to the precepts and presidents laid down in these places, Exod. 13.8. Deuter. 6.7. and 11.19. and 32.46. Psalme 78.6,7. Gen. 18.19. and 1 Chron. 28.9.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Parents must accustome their children to pious duties, and holy exercises; namely,

I. To the hearing, reading, meditating, and observing of the word of God.

II. To ordinary, and publike prayers; Parents must both teach their children reverently to pray in the house of God, with the holy Congregation, & also privately at home, as soone as they arise, and before they sleep. This is too much neglected by Parents, yea some with faire seeming reasons can dispute against it.

III. To the practise of vertue, Parents must accustome their children to the love of truth, both in word and deed, to the honouring of Religion, to the sanctifying of the Sabbath, to bee carefull to avoid all filthy, and blasphemous speeches; and to labour that their words may be gracious, and seasoned with salt.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Parents must give a good example unto their children, in their lives and conversations: they should be mirrours unto their children, because the President, and Pattern of a Father is very prevalent: And therefore they are more like fiends, then Fathers, that shew unto their children examples of drunkennesse, uncleannesse, swearing, prophaneness, lying, covetousnesse, and the like.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, Parents should nourish, cherish, and encourage those who are good, but bridle the rebellious, and stubborn children, with the rod of correction, and gentle chastisement. Now al these may be understood, both of Parents and Masters, and Magistrates; because they all belong unto them all.

Sect. 2 V. 2. And he took her by the hand.

Observe. The means wherby our Saviour raiseth this Damosell, are his word, and hand, (Marke 5.41. Luke 8.54.) to teach us therby the manner of the conversion of a sinner; or that the strength of our conversion doth consist in the voice, & hand of Christ; wherby only those who are spiritually dead, are restored to life.

Quest. 1. How doth it appear that wee are converted, and quickned only by his word, and hand?

Answ. It appears thus. First, because his word is strong, and powerfull, as thus appears.

I. It created the world, and all that therein is, Gen. 1. and Iohn 1.1.2.

II. The word shall raise us up at the last, Iohn 5.25.

III. The word overcomes Sathan, Mat. 4. and makes the Souldiers fall to the ground.

IV. The word converts us, Iohn 5.25. Rom. 1.16. Iames 1.18.

Secondly, because the hand of God signifies his power and providence.

Quest. 2. What method doth Christ use in the conversion of a sinner?

Answ. 1. First, wee are dead by nature, Ephes. 2.1. and can do nothing that is good, Rom. 7.14,18. and 2 Cor. 3.5.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ speaks unto us in his word; that is, by his word speaks unto our hearts, or with his words, gives his Spirit, whereby our hearts burne within us (Luke 24.) and our consciences are awakened, Act 2.37.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, then he takes us by the hand; and drawes us unto him by the coards of love (Cantic. 1.3.) bending, and enclining our wils to consent unto his;

Answ. 4. Fourthly, then we rise from sin to grace, and with this Damosell, from death to life.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And the Maid arose.

It is controverted between us, and the Church of Rome; whether the prayers of the living, or any other works of theirs doe profit the dead? And they hold, that the soules who are tormented in Purgatory, doe find great ease by the prayers of the living, and therfore wee ought to pray for them (Bellarm. lib. 2. de Purg. Cap. 15. 18.) Now they undertake to prove this (because wee deny it) from this verse, thus.

Object. Christ while he lived profited the dead, for he raised to life the Rulers daughter, in this verse, and the Widowes sonne, Luke 7. and Lazarus, which were dead: Therefore even so the members of Christ ought one to helpe another, the living the dead. Bellarm. ibid.

Answ. 1. First, they must prove these to have been in Purgatory, or they prove nothing to the purpose.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if they were able (which indeed is impossible for them) to prove this, yet it were but a fresh mans Argument; Christ raised Lazarus, and some others from death unto life; Therfore we ought to pray for the dead: Or thus, Christ by his divine power did recall the soule againe againe unto the body, either from heaven, or Purgatory: Therefore the prayers of the living will helpe the soules of the dead, which are in Purgatory torments, and afford them some ease. These are strong Arguments, and follow faire and farre off.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christs miraculous actions were not done for our imitation: And therfore it followeth not, that upon the miraculous works of Christ, wee should build the ordinary duties of Christians: yea, Saint Augustine telleth us, that Christ is not to bee imitated in such workes as these: Non hoc tibi dicis, non eris Discipulus meus, nisi ambulaveris supra mare, aut nisi suscitaveris quatriduanum mortuum, &c. He saith not unto thee, thou shalt not be my Disciple, unlesse thou canst walke upon the sea, and raise one unto life, who hath been dead foure dayes: But learne of me, for I am humble and meek.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, if prayer for the dead be unto us, as the raising of the dead was unto Christ; then as all the dead, who are in Purgatory should bee prayed for, so Christ should have raised againe all that went then to Purgatory: or else by the Iesuits conclusion, he failed in charity, as we doe now, if we pray not for the dead, as he bears us in hand.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, though the Saints departed, and the faithfull living are members of the same body, and so are bound in love one to the other; yet it followeth not, that one should pray for the other. They with us, and we with them, do wish, and long to see the redemption of the sons of God accomplished: But charity bindeth us not to pray one for another, because we know not one the particular needs of another.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, to pray for any deceased, is against the rule of charity; for love believeth all things, and hopeth all things (1 Cor. 13. 7.) And wee ought to hope the best of the dead; to wit, that they are at rest: but in praying for them, wee presuppose they are in misery, and so need our prayers: And therfore in so doing we hope not the best of them, as charitie willeth.

Vers. 26. VERS. 26. And the fame hereof went abroad into all that land.

Quest. Why did Christ prohibite this miracle to be divulged, as is plain he did? Marke 5.43. Luke 8.56.

Answ. 1. First he did it, lest he should seeme desirous of vaine glory, Musculus. s. Or,

Answ. 2. Secondly, he did it, lest it should either provoke the Pharisees, or excite the people to conferre some vaine worldly honours upon him, as elsewhere they did, when they would have made him a King, Musc. s.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this prohibition was but temporary, (Gualt. & Calvin. s.) that is, they were for a time enjoyned to conceale it, and afterwards to publish it. Or,

Answ. 4. Fourthly, this prohibition was given only to the Parents, lest they should be proud of their daughter, who was raised unto life, Gualt. s. Or, 513

Answ. 5. Fifthly, our Saviour did rather forbid them to divulge the manner of her raising, then the thing it selfe, Calvin. s. Or,

Answ. 6. Sixthly, some thought (teste Calv.) that our Saviour forbad them, that thereby they might be the more carefull in the publishing of it: because Nitimur in vetitum. But this I would have none to believe.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, Christ prohibits the publication hereof, that the power of God might the more appear in the spreading it abroad.

Vers. 27. VERS. 27. And when Iesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, Thou sonne of David, have mercy upon us.

§. 1. And when Iesus departed thence. Sect. 1.

Quest. Whether is this the same History which is mentioned by this same Evangelist, Chap. 20.30.

Answ. The time when this was done, doth shew that they are two severall Historie: Now it hinders not at all, that here are two, and there also are two blind men, who were healed; for there were many blind men healed by him; as for example.

First, these two mentioned in this place.

Secondly, many when Christ speaks of Iohn Baptist, Luke 7.18.

Thirdly, a possessed man, who was blind, and dumbe, Mat. 12.22. Luke 11.14.

Fourthly, many in the Mount of Galilee, Mat. 15.30.

Fifthly, one neer to Bethesda, Marke 8.22.

Sixthly, two neer to Iericho, Mat. 20.30. viz. Bartimeus, Marke 10.46. Luke 18.35.

Seventhly, many in the Temple, Mat. 21.14.

Eighthly, one that was born blind, Iohn 9.1. &c.

Ninthly, Saint Paul, Act. 9.17.

Tenthly, Elimas, who was restored to his sight, Act. 13.11.

§. 2. Two blind men cried. Sect. 2.

Wee see here the manner of their desiring mercy, Clamant, they cryed unto him; whence wee might learn,

Observ. That I. Prayer is necessary; and II. That Prayer ought to be fervent: but I conjoyn them thus; that vehemencie, and fervour of prayer is the best means for the obtaining of grace, and mercy. Reade Rom. 12.11. Iames 5.16. Iude 20. and 1 Cor. 14.15. Ephes. 6.18.

Quest. How doth it appear, that prayer is such a prevalent means to obtaine mercy?

Answ. It appears thus; First, vehemencie in prayer argues the power of the heart: and hence the Saints have beene said to poure forth their soules unto God, when they prayed fervently. See Psalme 42.4. and 1 Sam. 1.10. 16. & 2 King. 20.19. and 20.3. and 2 Sam. 12.23

Secondly, Prayer ought to arise from these three roots; namely,

I. From a sight of danger. And,

II. From feare of the danger which is seene. And,

III. From a vehement desire, and endeavour of praying. Reade Ezra 9. 5. unto 10. 1. & Neh. 1. 4. & Psal. 6. 6. & 55. 2. 17. Mark. 9. 24.

Thirdly, because prayer hath his fruit; that is, God will hear (Psalm. 6. 8. and 42. 3.) And will be bent, and mollified with prayers, Osc. 12. 4. And therefore he that poures forth his heart in hearty praiers unto God, out of a true sense of his sins, and a sincere desire of mercy, shall never be sent from the Lord empty away.

Sect. 2. Quest. 1. Answ.

§. 2. Have mercy upon us.

What is meant by mercy in this place?

This word Mercy doth intimate three things; namely,

I. Animum benevolum. II. Impertire cum effectu. III. Impertire liberè sine merito.

First, Mercy implies Animum benevolum, a willing mind, or a mind ready to doe good; as if these blind men would say, Oh Lord, we know that thou art mercifull, and gentle, willing, and ready to give, and therfore open the door of mercy, and be mercifull unto us: Hence wee might observe,

Observ. 1. That our prayers should be built upon the trust, and confidence of that (φιλανθρωπίαν) love of God, and Christ unto Mankind: that is, wee must remember that God and Christ are φιλάνθρωποι, lovers of man-kind; and therefore when wee pray unto them, wee must pray confidently, Ierem. 31. 20. Luke 1. 78.

Secondly, Mercy intimates Impertire cum effectu, the effects of mercy; as if these blind men would say; Oh Lord wee know thou art mercifull in thy owne nature; and therefore wee beseech thee shew the effects thereof unto us: Hence we might learn,

Observ. 2. That true mercy is never unprofitable; or, unto whomsoever God shewes mercy, unto them also he doth good. (Reade Matt. 14. 14. and 15. 32. and 18. 27. and 20. 34. Luke 7. 14. John 11. 36.) For the true nature of compassion, or mercy consisteth in these four things: to wit,

First, simul sentire, wee must remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them, Heb. 13. 3.

Secondly, simul dolere, as wee must bee touched with a sense of our brethrens miseries: so wee must also sorrow with them, and for them; weeping with those that weepe, Rom. 12. 15.

Thirdly, Malum ablatum cupere; as we must be sensible of our brethrens burdens, and sorrowful for them, so we must also desire, that their evill and griefe were removed from them.

Fourthly, pro virili conari, wee must not onely desire this, but endeavour it also with the utmost of our strength: And therefore this being the true nature of Mercy, we may boldly conclude, that upon whomsoever the Lord takes compassion, he will also helpe, and deliver them out of all their misery, and evill.

Thirdly, Mercy implies Impertire liberè, to bestow a thing freely, without any merit, or desert at all: This also these blind men acknowledge: for by their prayer they shew, that they are unworthy, that Christ should remove their blindnesse from them. Hence then we may learn,

Observ. 3. That the grace of Christ is given unto us, without any merit of ours at all. Author Christus, medium fides, status gratia: Grace is given unto us by faith, from Christ, Rom. 5. 2. 17. 20. Ephesians 2. 5. 8. Gal. 2. 16. 21. Rom. 3. 20. unto 28. and 4. 14. &c.

Quest. 2. How doth it appear, that grace is given undeservedly on our parts?

Answ. First, the creature cannot deserve any thing at the hand of the Creator, by reason of that great disproportion, which is betwixt them, both in regard of their essence, substance, nature, and power: yea every way.

Secondly, there is no proportion betwixt any work we do, yea all our workes, and the reward of eternall glory.

Thirdly, our workes are debts, and therfore cannot merit, Luke 17. 10. Now whereas the Papists say, that our works merit not, (Naturâ suâ, sed de compacto) of their owne nature, but in regard of the Covenant, and Contract which is betwixt us and God: we answer, that this very Covenant, and Contract is of meer grace, favour, and mercy.

Fourthly, our workes are imperfect, and therefore they can merit nothing at Gods hands. To this the Papists answer, that it is true, our workes merit not in themselves, but onely as they are sprinkled with the blood of Christ: But the vertue of Christs blood is to give life eternall unto us: yea, the blood of Christ, is Ipsum λυτρον, the price, and satisfaction it selfe: and therefore there is no projection therof (as they p Opera say r) which makes our works meritorious. mereantur

Fifthly, the good works we doe are not ours: and therefore thereby wee can merit nothing. The strength wherby wee are able to performe any good worke well, is given unto us from God, 1 Cor. 4. 7. And therfore what merit can there be in fraile, and weak man? quatenus fit projectio sanguinis Christi.

Sixthly, our good workes do not goe before, but follow after our Iustification: and therfore no work of ours doth merit grace, or is the cause, but only the effect thereof: For,

I. The Author Christ, gives grace unto us.

II. Then followes faith, and then wee are justified.

III. Lastly followes love, the fruit of faith, 1 Tim. 1. 14. Gal. 5. 6.

It appears most evidently by these Arguments, to wit,

Quest. 3. Answ. Who are here to be blamed?

In generall, all Merchants of Merit, or Meritmongers; whereof there are divers sorts, namely,

First, some who are grosly erroneous, and will tell God he owes them such and such things, because cause for his sake they forsook such things: these we spake something of in the fift Chapter, verse 7. and now as palpable, passe by.

Secondly, some weave a garment of Linsey-wolsey, and hope that God will approve of them, yea fall in love with them for it: these are they who tell us of a first Justification wrought by God, and of a second wrought by our selves. But these two Justifications are like the Ark and Dagon, who will not stand together; or the feet of Daniels Image, which were part of Iron, and part of Clay, and would not solder together, Dan. 2. 42. yea this distinction is directly denied by Saint Paul, (Rom. 11. 6.) and therfore must not be admitted by us.

Thirdly, some tell us that our good works merit, by the sprinkling of the blood of Christ upon them, or by some extending or stretching of his merits unto them. But (as was said before) the merit, and blood of Christ, is the τὸ λυτρον it self: for by his death and bloodshed, we are saved.

Fourthly, they have another merit, which frees from temporall punishment: whence comes Purgatorie and pardons; but God pardons all together, and reserves no anger when he remits, but forgives and forgets at once.

Certainly, all merit of man derogates from Christ: for if we could by our works have purchased salvation, then Christ died in vain, Romans 4. 13, 14.

Quest. 4. Must wee not then work, and labour at all?

Answ. We must, and that with our utmost endevour, (Reade Philippians 2. 12, 13. Hebrews 12. 4. Ephesians 5. 14. and 2 Peter 1. 5. &c. and 1 John 5. 18.) But of this, largely before, chapter 5.

Vers. 28. Vers. 28. And when he was come into the house, the blinde men came to him: And Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea Lord.

Object: The Papists produce this place for the proof of a generall faith, and for the overthrowing of a particular application of the promises unto our selves: Arguing thus,

That faith which Christ required, and confirmed by Miracles, was a justifying faith.

But that was no particular perswasion, or assurance of speciall mercie; but onely a generall belief in the power and omnipotencie of Christ.

Therefore a justifying faith requireth no such particular perswasion, or confidence of speciall mercie.

The Assumption Bellarmine proves from this place (lib. 1. de Justific. cap. 8.) where Christ saith to the blinde men, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They answer, Yea Lord: whereupon Christ addes, According to your Faith, so be it unto you.

First, I answer to the Major, that it is not universally true: for a temporary faith may suffice for the receiving of a temporall benefit. 515 Answ. 1.

Secondly, to the Minor, we say, that many things (in a justifying faith) are to be beleeved, besides speciall mercie: and that none can apprehend speciall mercie, except he beleeve God to be in Christ, reconciling the World unto himself. If the learned Reader desire to see this answer prosecuted, and how grosly the Cardinall sophisticates, not concluding according to the Rules of Art, let him reade Chamier. Tom. 3. f. 408, 409. lib. 13. de fide. cap 4. §. 1. ad. 8. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, to the receiving of a temporall benefit, in recovering of their sight, a temporary faith (which we call the faith of Miracles) might have sufficed these blinde men. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, these blinde men beleeved not onely that Christ was able to help them, but were also perswaded of his mercie, in saying, Oh Son of David, have mercie upon us. Answ. 4.

Vers. 29. Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith, be it unto you. Vers. 29.

§. 1. Then touched he their eyes. Sect. 1.

Why did Christ touch their eyes? Quest. 1.

First, certainly it was not by reason of any necessity; for he could have healed them without touching, if he had so pleased, having done many greater works onely by his word. Answ. 1.

Secondly, neither was this an idle action, or a thing done without any speciall end, for Christ did nothing, but that which was of speciall use, in one regard, or another. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, I conceive therefore, that he touched their eyes for these causes, namely, Answ. 3

I. Perhaps, that he might shew, that he himself was the Author and Actour of this Miracle: for

First, neither can man restore sight unto the blinde, John 9. 30, 31. Neither Secondly, can a Devill open the eyes of the blinde, John 10. 21.

II. Christ touched their eyes, to shew, that he stood not in need of second causes, or medicines, but that his touch was sufficient for the effecting of what he desired, or curing of what malady soever: As with his word, at other times hee stills the raging of the waves.

III. Christ touched their eyes, that by the use of a visible, or sensible means, he might help, and strengthen their faith; for certainly this was of great power, as we see in Naaman, I thought (saith he) the Prophet would have laid his hand upon the sore, and have stricken it over the place, and called upon his God, and so have cured my leprosie, 2 Kings 5. 11. As if he would have said, If he had thus touched me, I should have beleeved that he would have cured me, but now 516 now I have no hope of help from him. And thus I say, Christ teacheth these, that thereby their faith and confidence may bee the greater.

IV. Christ toucheth them, that he may teach both them and us the excellencie, and utility of the means: or, That the use of the means is not to be neglected: because that is a tempting of God, the means being ordained by God for the obtaining of such and such wished ends; As for example, Observ. 1.

God hath ordained
- First, meat and apparell for the preservation of life.
- Secondly, medicines, for the preventing of sickness, or procuring of health.
- Thirdly, repentance, sorrow, and hearty contrition, for the breaking of the power of sin.
- Fourthly, the preaching of the Word, for the illuminating of the heart, and the begetting of faith.
- Fiftly, prayer for the procuring of good things, or as a generall Antidote against all evils.

Quest. 2. Who are faulty in this particular?

Answ. 1. First, those who neglect the means in temporall things, undoing themselves and theirs, by idleness, gaming, prodigality, pride, drunkenesse, or the like.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who in sickness despise and sleight Physick, although Witchcraft and Enchantments are not altogether contemned by them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who hope for, and desire the pardon of their sins, but in the mean time neglect godly sorrow, and wave that spirituall and bloody combat against sinne and Sathan, Hebrews 12. 4.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, those who desire internall light, and reconciliation, and the new Covenant, but neglect the hearing, reading, and meditating of the Word of God.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, those who desire to be blessed by the enjoyment of good things, and freedome from evill, but sleight, and forget prayer, 1 Thessalonians 5. 17.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, those who desire that they were assured of Regeneration, Adoption, Justification, and sanctification; but are remisse, and carelesse in trying and examining themselves, 2 Corinthians 13. 5.

Quest. 3. How are these speciall means to be used?

Answ. 1. First, wee must use them wisely, as God himself prescribes, and directs, Ephesians 5. 15.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must use them diligently, and industriously, 2 Pet. 1. 5.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we must use them perpetually and constantly; because we alwaies have need both to increase in faith and grace, (2 Peter 3. 18.) striving to the measure of perfect men, Eph. 4. 13.

V. Christ touched their eyes, to teach us, That the touch of Christ opens the eyes of our hearts: or, That our hearts are enlightned by the touch of Christ. Reade for the proof hereof, these places; 1 Samuel 10. 26. and 1 Kings 19. 5. Esa. 6. 6. Ieremiah 1. 9. Daniel 8. 18. Acts 16. 14. And besides, consider these two things, namely, Observ. 2.

First, that Christ is the light of the world, Esa. 42. 6. and 49. 6. Psalm 146. 8. Iohn 1. 4. 5. 9. and 8. 12. and Iohn 9. 5. and Luke 1. 79.

Secondly, as Christ is the light of the world, so he gives light unto us by touching: And hence touching hath been alwaies of great consequence; to wit,

I. The very touch of a man; for, if he touch but any thing that is unclean, he is made unclean thereby: Reade Exod. 19. 13. and 29. 37. Numb. 19. 11. Agg. 2. 16.

II. Much more then is the touch of God of great respect, and worth, as appears by these places, Psalm 104. 32. and 144. 5. Iob 19. 21. Iudg. 6. 21. Hence it was, that the Lord ordained, that Aaron should have his ear, and thumb, and great Toe touched, Leviticus 8. 23. And hence our Saviour sometimes touched the ears, sometimes the tongue, sometimes Infants, sometimes the dead body, sometimes the eyes, as here: because there was great vertue therein.

How manifold is the touch of Christ now in the Ministery of the Word? Quest. 4.

Three-fold; viz.
- First, either improfitable, and ineffectuall; as Hebrews 6. 6. or profitable, and efficacious, Canticles 5. 5. Answ.
- Secondly, either weak, as the smoking flax; or strong, when we come to the measure of perfect men, Ephes. 4. 13.
- Thirdly, either unto humiliation, or consolation, Can. 4. 16. For, there is the spirit of bondage and Adoption.

We have heard why Christ Touched them: It may now be demanded, Why he touched their eyes, seeing they did not name their blindnesse unto him, neither desired the opening of their eyes, but onely that he would be mercifull unto them. Quest. 5.

Although they did not expresse particularly their desires, yet their present case and condition did sufficiently speak for them, and was well enough known unto Christ: and therefore they onely crave mercie of him in generall: to teach us, Answ.

That Christ needeth not much to be taught, because he is both infinite in knowledge, love, and mercie, Hebrews 2. 17. and 4. 15. and 5. 2. Observ. 3

If it be thus, that Christ knows all our wants before we name them, then what need we pray? Quest. 6

The

Anſw. The cauſe why we doe, and muſt pray unto God, is not,

First, to teach God, for hee knows what wee ſtand in need of, Luke 12. 30. Nor,

Secondly, to move, or change the mind, or decree of God; for he is unchangeable, Iames 1. 17. But,

I. Partly, in reſpect of God; we pray, leſt we ſhould tempt his providence, by neglecting the meanes, which himſelfe preſcribes; now hee hath ordained prayer, as a part of his worſhip, and as a meanes for the obtaining of whatſoever we want. And,

II. Partly, in regard of our ſelves, wee pray unto God in our neceſſities, and diſtreſſes:

First, to demonſtrate with a proſtrate mind, the ſenſe of that evill which lies upon us; and hence comes loud clamours, and bitter complaints: For if we ſhould not pray againſt evil, we ſhould ſeeme not to be ſenſible of any evill. And,

Secondly, we pray, to ſhew our earneſt deſire of deliverance and freedome; and hence comes zealous, and fervent requeſts: for if we did not pray againſt our evils, or for a removall of them, wee would ſeeme not to care to be freed from them.

Queſt. 7. If it be thus, that Chriſt knows our wants and neceſſities without naming, then why doth he not by and by in mercy remove them; that is, either helpe us, as ſoon as he takes notice of our miſeries, or as ſoone as wee make them knowne unto him by prayer?

Anſw. The cauſe hereof is in us: namely, either

First, becauſe our ſins, and impenitency, or hardneſſe of heart hinders him from doing us good. Or,

Secondly, becauſe we are either negligent in praying, or cold in our prayers: for ſacrifices were to be offered up with fire, and prayer is to be offered up with zeale, otherwiſe it is not acceptable unto God. Or,

Thirdly, becauſe faith is wanting; for want of faith hinders us from bleſſings, as followes in the next §. And therfore if we be in miſery, and are not preſently helped, or delivered, let us not thinke that the cauſe is in God, but that it is in us, either becauſe wee are not children; that is, are without juſtifying faith, or becauſe wee are wicked, and diſobedient, or becauſe the thing which we deſire is not good for us, or becauſe we are careleſſe, or cold in praying for it.

Queſt. 8. Who are happy in miſery and evill?

Anſw. They who know that the Lord,

First, knows their wants and neceſſities: And Secondly, that he is able to helpe, deliver, or relieve them. And,

Thirdly, that he is as willing to helpe them, as he is able. And,

Fourthly, that he is their Father; for he that knowes theſe, knowes enough to raiſe him up to comfort in the greateſt evills, and wants.

Sect. 2. §. 3. Saying, according to your faith, be it unto you.

In theſe words our Saviour ſhewes the reaſon, why theſe blind mens prayer was heard; namely, becauſe they beleaved; whence we may learne, 517

Obſerv. That the meaſure of bleſſings is according to the proportion of our faith: for God gives good things unto us, according to our faith, and confidence in him, Mat. 21. 21. Iames 1. 6.

Queſt. 1. Why doth God meaſure his mercy by our faith?

Anſw. 1. First, becauſe without faith we cannot pray: And therfore, as where there is no faith in God, there is no true invocation of him; ſo where there is no prayer, there is no aſſurance of any bleſſing, Rom. 10. 14.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe a weak faith is able to doe leſſe: for as the want of faith hinders us from prayer, ſo the weakneſſe of faith hinders us from the true performance of many duties. Reade Mat. 8. 26. and 14. 30. and 17. 20. And therefore if we be deſtitute of any bleſſings, let us remember that the reaſon hereof is, either want, or weakneſſe of faith. For,

I. To unbeleevers nothing is given, at leaſt in love; becauſe faith is the key of Gods treaſorie, and the veſſell of the Fountain, whereby water is conveyed unto us: And therfore if faith be cold, carnall, idle, empty, and ſleepy, no wonder then if the reward be ſuch. And,

II. To children, is given according to the proportion of their faith, more or leſſe.

Queſt. 2. How is it elſe-where then ſaid, that God gives abundantly to all his children?

Anſw. It is true, that God gives to them all abundantly, but yet it is according to their capacity: All that are invited to a rich banquet, or well furniſhed table, eate, but yet not all equally, but according to their owne proper appetites, or ſtrength: And ſo in heaven all veſſels are full, but yet all are not of the ſame capacity.

Queſt. 3 What is required of us about, or concerning faith?

Anſw. First, wee muſt labour that our faith be a true, living, and juſtifying faith: for it is a moſt perillous thing for a man here to be deceived.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, wee muſt labour that our faith may daily increaſe, and grow in ſtrength; becauſe a weake, and ſickly faith, affords but ſmall, or no comfort.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, we muſt labour that our faith may be an exerciſed faith; that is, that it may be employed, and extended unto all the actions, and occurrences of our life; that wee may live by faith, and walke in faith, 2 Cor. 5. 7. By faith we muſt expect Chriſt, and the Holy Ghoſt; and exerciſe our faith by a daily dependance upon God.

VERS. 30. And their eyes were opened; and Ieſus ſtraitly charged them, ſaying: See that no man know it. Vers. 30.

Sect. 1. And their eyes were opened. Sect. 1.

The blind men deſire mercy, & Chriſt touch-

eth

518 on their eyes, whereupon their requests were perfectly granted, & their eyes opened: whence we may learn,

Observ 1. That Christ cures none imperfectly, but all perfectly.

Quest. 1. How is this to be understood?

Answ. 1. First, it is true in the cure of the body: for no man can adde unto God, and therefore when he takes the cure in hand, he heals it thorowly.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this is true also in the cure of the soule; for he restores men spiritually blind unto their sight, opening the eyes of the mind, and taking the veil off from their hearts; 2 Cor. 3. 15. 16. Yea renewing them in knowledge more and more; Colos. 3. 10.

Quest. 2. What knowledge is this which wee have by Christ?

Answ. 1. First, some say that by Christ we have a manifold knowledge: to wit, the knowledge of our selves, the knowledge of the word, the knowledge of God, and Christ, the knowledge of hope, and the like: But there is no need of distinguishing these thus; For,

I. The word of God is rather the Booke which teacheth knowledge: All spiritual wisdome being contained therein. And,

II. Hope, and expectation (Ephes. 1. 8.) are included in the knowledge of God. And therefore there remains only the knowledge of God, and of our selves.

III. But we must acknowledge a difference, betwixt the seeing scene, & the power of seeing, between knowledge, and the things known; and therfore we must yet go further.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some distinguish this knowledge which we have by Christ, according to the manner of knowing. Here,

I. I passe by the distinction of a spirituall, and naturall knowledge: because we speak only of the spirituall.

II. There are two parts of knowledge: namely,

To apprehend.
To judge betweene things that differ.

First, to approve things which are more excellent (Philip. 1. 10.) I here take rather to be an effect following knowledge, then a part of it; and therfore I here passe this by.

Secondly, concerning Apprehension, it is demanded, whether wee can apprehend, and know God, and Christ? And we answer, that certainly there is a double knowledge, viz.

I. Quod est, τὸ ὅτι, that there is a God: This is approved, and given, Rom. 1. That is,

First, God hath so revealed himselfe, that hee may be known.

Secondly, the light of nature is not so darkened, but it hath the faculties of seeing, and understanding. But

Thirdly, although a man have the faculty of seeing, yet he cannot see in the darke, but it is necessary first, that the aire should be enlightned, and that there should be light, before he can take up an obj & t: So besides our naturall knowledge, or faculties, it is necessary unto the true knowledge of the true God, that wee should be enlightned by the Word, and Spirit.

II. Quid est, τὸ τί ἐστι; what this God is? now this knowledge hath two degrees, viz.

First, γνῶσις, and this knowledge of God is revealed in the Scriptures.

Secondly, ἐπίγνωσις (Zach.) to know Christ to be our Redeemer, and to rejoyce therein, Ephes. 1. 18. &c. And this is life eternall, to know God to be our Father, and Christ to be our Saviour, John 17. 3. Ephes. 3. 18 &c.

Quest. 3. How may we know, that our spiritual blindnesse is expelled, and removed, and the eyes of our mind opened as were the bodily eyes of these two men?

Answ. First, whether canst thou see, or not? art thou enlightned by the word? canst thou perceive, understand, and take up spirituall things? Colos. 3. 16. for the carnall man cannot, 1 Cor. 2. 14. It is a sure signe, that a man is not in a sound, and haile constitution of body, when meat is loathsome to his taste, and stomack, when flowers are not sweet to his smell, nor sugar to his pallat; Thus when men find no sweetnesse in spirituall things, but rather abhorre them, it may justly be feared, that they doe not understand them. Now to the true understanding of spirituall, and heavenly things, it is necessary that the midst, the aire should be enlightned by the word; but the word doth not produce this effect, except it be mixed with faith, Heb. 4. 2.

Secondly, whether canst thou discern or not? is not only thy understanding enlightned, but also thy judgement informed, so that now thou canst approve of things, which are more excellent? Children are faulty in a double regard; namely,

I. They see too much; that is, they approve, like, and allow best of toyes, and childish vanities.

II. They have no desire unto the greater, and better things; a child hath a greater longing after an apple, then a talent of gold; and had rather have some fair seeming Picture, then leases, or deeds, or charters of some faire Lardship: Thus we, so long as we are naturall, and carnall, over-value earthly things, and under-value heavenly: and desire more temporall blessings, then spirituall graces. But the spirituall man, whose understanding is enlightned, and judgement enformed, doth

First, relish best spirituall things; his appetite being now amended, and rectified. And,

Secondly, hence doth contemne, and despise childish things, & all created delights.

Thirdly, whether is Christ made thine or not? canst thou truely say, I am my beloveds, and my beloved is mine, Cantic. 2. 16. And with Paul, I was a stranger from Christ, but I found mercy? 1 Tim. 1. 13. Art thou so assured of this, that no danger, or distresse can cause thee to distrust thy Christ? Iob 13. 15. Certainly where this sweet and bright light is within,

We must examine carefully these foure particulars: namely, within, there is a certain neglect of all temporall things; for the sweet taste they have of Christ, doth wean them from the world.

Fourthly, whether dost thou apprehend, and see the recompense of reward, being so certainly assured therof, that thou livest by hope, and weepest so long as thou art in the flesh, and absent therefrom, desiring to bee dissolved, and to be with Christ?

Sect. 2. §. 2. See that no man know it.

Quest. Why doth Christ prohibite them to divulge the mercy shewed unto them?

Answ. For answer hereunto looke back to verse 26. where this same question is propounded; & answered: I only here adde three short particulars; to wit,

First, that Christ did seriously prohibite the publication of this miracle; as appears by the very phrase; Hee straitly charged them, saying: See that no man know it.

Secondly, but seeing the reason of this prohibition is not expressed wee should not too curiously enquire after it, Mus. & Gual. f.

Thirdly, that these blind men, of their owne judgements, should not have taken liberty to do that which was forbidden them.

Vers 31. Vers. 31. But they, when they were departed, spread abroad his fame in all that country.

Quest. 1. Whether is the revealed will of God in all things to be obeyed, or not?

Answ. Certainly, it is our dutie to obey the whole will of God, and that alwayes; as the Israelites promised to doe, when they said, Whatsoever the Lord commands, we will doe, Exod. 24. For the will of God in all things is just, and holy, and all his commandements are pure, and good; and therfore none are to be disobeyed by man.

Object. Some have disobeyed, and done contrary to the will of God, and yet seeme not worthy therein of reprehension: as wee see in these blind men, who although they were forbidden by Christ to publish what was done unto them, yet they doe it, and seeme not worthy of blame in the doing of it.

Answ. 1. First, some I know affirme, that these blind men did well in what they did; and for their assertion produce these reasons, viz.

I. They did it with a good intention; therfore it was well done.

Answer. It followes not, for Vzzah had a good intent in staying the Arke, but hee died for the doing of it: yea many shall thinke they do God good service, when they kil his own servants, Ioh. 16. and therfore a good intention is not enough to make a good action.

II. They did it to zeale unto Christ: therefore it was well done.

Answer. This followes not neither, because there is a zeale which is not according to knowledge.

III. Christ did not punish them for it; and therfore he did approve of it; and if it were approved of by him, then it is good. 519

Answer. It followes not, Christ did not punish it, therfore Christ did approve of it; for he did not punish that we reade of, the nine Lepers, Luke 17. neither did he approve of them: Christ healed a man at the poole of Bethesda, who after he was healed, went and told the Scribes, and Pharisees u: that it was Iesus that healed him; undoubtedly, out of an evill, and treacherous intent; and yet Christ doth not punish him for it. u Ioh. 5. 15

IV. This was thankfulnesse in them (Chrys. s.) And therfore is praise-worthy.

Answer. This is true, if Christ had not prohibited it: for we must not serve God with will worship: And therfore Christ forbidding it, they should not have done it; but have shewed their thankfulnesse by love, obedience, and internall duties.

V. Else-where Christ commands this: for having dispossessed a man, he saith, Returne to thine own house, and shew how great things God hath done for thee, Luke 8. 39. And therfore these blind men are not to be discommended for thus doing.

Answer. If they had had a direct precept enjoyning, or no direct prohibition forbidding, then they might have done it: But hee being commanded the affirmative, and they the Negative (Non est par ratio) the case is altered, and the reason not alike.

VI. Those things which belong unto the praise of our { Selves, are to be suppressed. / God, are to bee divulged. } Chrysost.

Answ. This is generally true, if no contrary command from God doth crosse it, but we must not seeme to be wiser then God; but submit unto his will in all things.

VII. If Christ had not had a desire, or (at least) would not have had his works, and miracles to have been published: then certainly,

First, he would have enjoyned all to have kept secret what was done. And Secondly, hee would have done nothing in publike.

Answ. wee must not (as was said in the former verse, §. 2.) too curiously demand of a reason of Christs actions, seeing he may doe, and command, or forbid man what he pleaseth.

VIII. It was profitable, and necessary, that the Gospel should be published, both for the redemption of men, and glory of the Redeemer. And therefore they did well.

Answ. 1. We must never doe evill, that good may come of it: we must never disobey God for some good consequence, or effect which is likely to be therby produced.

II. It was not simply necessary, that the Gospell should be published by them, for Christ had other men, and meanes to do it by: and therfore they should not have disobeyed Christ.

520 III. Nathan thought it a good work for David to build God a house, and bade him do all that was in his heart, (1 Chronicles 17. 2.) but presently after told him, verse 4, that although the intent were good, and the work good, yet he must not do it, but it must be done by Solomon his son. And therefore every good work is not to be done by every one: for if so, then every man might preach (it being a good work) whereas indeed none must, but those who are called as Aaron was.

Answ. 2. Secondly, I answer, we must never distinguish against the Law; but remember, that obedience is better than sacrifice. Quod de duobus cæcis affertur, non urget: pessimè enim à Deo, id est, Christi præcepto discesserunt, & non earent peccato, etsi sit veluti. Damas. etsic. Christ. lib. 2. cap. 1. pag. 127. b. Although these blinde men spred abroad the fame of Christ, out of zeal, yet they did amisse, yea sinned, in swerving from Christs precept, or positive, and strict prohibition. Whence I might observe, Observ. That Humane Wisdom causeth us often to stray from the commandement of God: And the reason hereof is, because Humane Wisdom is the Devils instrument, Romans 8. 6, &c. Matthew 16. 23.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, others consider the thing done here by the blinde men, abstracted from Christs prohibition, and deduce hence these two propositions; namely,

First, from their thankfull minde: That a thankfull minde, or man, or thankfull minded man, will alwaies respect and reverence him, by whom he was helped.

Secondly; from their profession of Christ: That those who are truly converted and enlightned, will not fear to professe Christ: as we see in the bold blinde man, John 9. and in the Apostles, Acts 4. and 5. and in the three Children, Daniel 3. and in Daniel himself, chapter 6.

Quest. 2. Whence comes it, that those who are converted, dare so confidently professe Christ?

Answ. 1. First, it proceeds from the love of God: for the minde being filled with God, and his love, doth strive by all means to promote, advance, and set forward the glory of God; and to expresse its love unto God by all means possibly.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this comes from the profit that they know is in the profession of Christ and Religion. Here observe, That the profession of Christ, and Religion, or Christian Religion, is profitable in a three fold regard; namely,

First, for Gods glory; because he is honoured thereby, Mat. 5. 16. Philip. 2. 15.

Secondly, for the example of our brethren; because they are edified thereby.

Thirdly, for the confirming of the truth of our own faith, Gal. 1. 10.

Vers. 33. Vers. 33. And when the Devill was cast out, the dumb spake, and the multitudes marvelled, saying, It was never so seen in Israel.

§. 1. And when the Devill was cast out. Sect. 1.

We see here that untill Satan was cast out, his mouth was not opened, nor his tongue unloosed: whence in the Allegory we may learn, That the best remedy against sin, is to be freed from Satan: so long as we are his slaves, we remain in his obedience, Luke 11. 20. and 2 Timothy 2. 26. And untill we are freed from him, we cannot serve the Lord, Luke 1. 75. Observ.

How doth this appear? Quest. 1.

Answ. First, because it was the cause of Christs coming into the World, to destroy the works of Satan, 1 John 3. 8. And therefore, untill we be free from him, we cannot be free from sin.

Secondly, because this was the end of the preaching of the Gospel, Acts 26. 18. And therefore untill we be delivered from Satan, we cannot serve God.

Thirdly, because all sin comes from Satan: and therefore the best way to be freed from sin, is to be delivered from Satan. The Schoolmen make the devill to be but onely Causa procatarctica, non procatumena; the impulsive cause of sin from without, not from within; and that

I. Because by the corrupting, and conquering of Adam, he hath begot and bred in all men a proneness, and inclination unto sin. And

II. Because sin often proceeds from the motion of the free will. Satan cogitationum malarum non emittit, sed incendit. Beda. Satan is not the sender, but the Incendiary of evill thoughts. Indeed the Devill is three manner of waies the Author of sin; namely,

First, because the beginning of sin was from him, (John 8. 44.) for he onely tempted Adam. And

Secondly, because he alwaies urges, prepares, fits, and objects allurements unto us: for the world and the flesh, are but his instruments, whereby he works. And Thirdly, because he further Instigates our concupiscence. Si non insanis satis instigo. If he see that our own concupiscence do not carry us headlong fast enough unto evill, then he will spur it forward. Hence he is said to walk to and fro, (1 Peter 5. 8.) and hence he is called the Tempter, 1 Thessalonians 3. 5. and 2 Corinthians 2. 11. and 11. 3. Malorum dæmonum causa (inquam) malorum Dæmon est. Dæm. de divin. mun. The multitude of devils in the ayr, is the cause of the multitude of evills in the earth. Omnis malitia, [illegible] à Diabolo originem Damas. lib. 2.

It appears by the consideration of these three particulars, viz.

Vnto what evils doth Satan tempt and allure? Quest. 2.

Answ. In generall, he tempts unto all sin, but more particularly particularly to these: to wit, 1 to pride, 1 Timothy 3. 6. and 2 to uncleanneſſe, and 3 to anger, Ephes. 4. 27. and 4 hinders us from every good work, 1 Thess. 2. 18.

Sect. 2. §. 2. The dumb man spake.

Quest. 1. If this man were dumb, how then could he speak? and if he speak, then how is he dumb? because the Text saith, The dumb spake?

Answ. He retains his former name he had when he was dumb, viz. The dumb man, and this was very frequent in those places and times, to retain the same name, although there were some change wrought in the person: Hence mention is made of Matthew the Publican (when he was none) and Simon the Leper (when he was cured) and harlots and sinners, when they were converted.

Quest. 2. Why did these retain their old names, when they were changed into new men, and indeed were not such?

Answ. 1. First, this was done for the amplification of the miracle, or to shew the power of Christ, who could make men contrary to what they were by nature: who could make a covetous man liberall, and a persecutor a professor.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this was done, because none are perfectly freed from evill, but the reliques of sin remain in all: and therefore they should labour, and strive to grow and increase.

We see here, that assoon as the Devill is cast out, the dumb man speaks, to teach us, Observ. That being once free from Satan, we must be mute no longer, but our mouths must be open, to set forth the praises of the Lord, 2 Cor. 4. 13.

Quest. 3. How doth it appear, that those who are freed from Satan, will, or ought to have their mouths full of good words?

Answ. It appears thus, namely,

I. By that opposition, or contrariety of nature, which is betwixt Christ and Satan: for

I. Satan, linguam vel compescere, vel corrumpere. (Musculus.) he will either corrupt the tongue, by corrupt and evill words, or he will endeavour to curb the tongue from good and gracious words: So long as the devill is in the heart, so long the tongue is fruitfull in wicked, but barren in good and holy words. But

II. Christ doth first open the mouth, and untie the tongue: And then

Secondly, doth sanctifie the tongue, and make it a special instrument of Gods glory, filling it with holy and heavenly speeches.

Secondly, by the benefit of speech: we have ellwhere to speak of the utility of the tongue, and therefore I here onely name two special ends, and uses thereof, namely,

I. Therewith praise, and worship we God, Iames 3. And

II. Thereby we communicate both our selves, and our counsels unto our brethren.

Quest. 4. How may we know whether we be freed from Satan, or not?

Answ. 1. First, examine if thou have no tongue, that is,

I. If thou have no tongue to praise God. And

II. If thou have no tongue to professe Religion. And

III. If thou have no tongue to pray unto God, Iames 2. 4.

IV. If thou have no tongue to explain thy minde, or to communicate counsell unto thy brother; but art dumb in all these, then it is a sign that Satan is not cast out; for if he were, then (as here) the dumb would speak.

Secondly, examine if thou have not a filthy, impure, and corrupt tongue, who continually belcherh our polluted words, either against God or man, or thy own soul? Certainly this argues a corrupt and carnall heart, Matt. 15. 19. Answ. 2.

Quest. 5. How must we so speak, that thereby we may approve our selves to be freed from Satan?

Answ. 1. First, let us praise, and honour God with our tongues, and that

I. For all his works of mercie shewed towards us, whether spirituall or temporall; whether concerning our election, creation, redemption, vocation, justification, or sanctification.

II. We must praise and honour God, by acknowledging him onely to be the true, and ever-living, and everlasting God, who is most worthy to be praised and feared.

III. We must praise, and honour God, by professing his name and truth before men, and that in the most perilous times and places, Dan. 3. Acts 4. and 5. Psal. 69. 30.

IV. We must praise and honour God with our tongues, by holy exercises, delighting to sing Psalms, and to confer, and to speak of God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, let us pray unto God with our tongues: he is not worthy of a tongue, or of any mercie, who is negligent in this duty; yea, in fitting place, the lips are not to be neglected in prayer, because the tongue doth restrain straggling thoughts; that is, although a man may pray internally with the heart without the tongue, yet when conveniently, and without any hypocriticall ostentation, we can use the tongue to expresse the desires of the heart, we should; because it is a means to stay the heart, and to preserve it from wandring cogitations. Although Hanna spake not aloud, yet she spake when she prayed, as appears by the moving of her lips, 1 Sam. 1.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, let us reconcile our selves unto our brethren with our tongues, Matt. 5. let us pacifie their anger with our soft answers, Prov. 15.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, let us comfort our brethren with our tongues: for this is the most sweet and comfortable use of the tongue, in regard of our brethren, both in temporall and spirituall distresses.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, let us counsell and advise our brethren with our tongues, and that

I. Amanter, lovingly, not in anger or hatred, but in love. And

II. Prudenter, wisely, from our hearts, and out of good understanding. And

III. Confidenter, boldly, not fearing their anger, or hatred, if we have any warrant, or call so to do.

528. Sixtly, we must speak purely, and gravely, that so our words may adde grace unto the hearers, Ephes. 4. 29. and Col. 4. 6. For by thus using our tongues, we shall approve our selves to be free from Satan.

Answ. 6.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And the multitudes marvelled.

The phrase here used (the people marvelled) doth mean, that they admired the thing, and wondred at it, knew not what to say, but some thought one thing, some another: From whence in generall we may observe,

Observ. That one and the same action, by divers men, may be diversly censured and judged: as we see cleerly in the cure of the blinde man, John 9. 16. and in the cloven tongues, Acts 2. 12, 13.

Quest. 1. Whence is it, that the same action is diversly, by divers, interpreted?

Answ. 1. First, it comes from hence, because unto a right judgement in divine things, is required the help of the Spirit, both for our illumination, direction, yea and humiliation, for otherwise we shall be subject to a blinde zeal, and with the Apostles often be ready to call for fire from heaven. Now all have not the Spirit of God, and therefore all cannot judge righteous judgment, but some judge dexterously, and some amisse.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it proceeds hence, that some judge one thing, and some another, of one and the same action, because unto the perfecting of the judgement, there is required, not onely the evidence of the action, but also the ability, aptitude, fitnesse and rectitude of the minde: and therefore if the minde be evilly, or finisterly disposed, the judgement must needs be corrupted; that is,

I. If the minde be weak, then the judgment will be foolish: for, the fools mouth utters folly, Prov. 15. 14. and 16. 22. and 24. 7. and 26. 7. Thus when Christ in his agony and passion, cryed Elai, Elai, &c. The ignorant Roman souldiers said, He calleth for Elias, Matth. 27. 47. yea, hence it is that we say Cæci non judicant de coloribus, Blinde men cannot judge of colours; and ignorant men cannot judge aright of that whereof they are ignorant. And therefore unto right judgement is required an understanding heart, and enlightned minde.

II. If the minde be rash, the judgment will be uncharitable: as we see in good old Eli, who through rashnesse censureth an holy woman to be drunk, (1 Sam. 1. 14.) And those of Melita, holy Paul to be a Murderer [b]. And therefore our Saviour saith, Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgement, Joh. 7. 24. Whence we may see, that unto right judgment is required a staid and charitable minde.

[b] Acts 28. 4. and 2 King. 4. and Joh. 11. 37.

III. If the minde be unjust or unequall, then must the judgment needs be most corrupt. Now the minde is said to be unequall or unjust three manner of wales; to wit, either

First, through partiality: thus the Papists dislike and condemn many things in us, and Stapleton in Calvin, which they like, and approve of in men of their own Religion. Or

Secondly, by reason of covetousnesse, or corruption: and thus Felix did with Paul. Or Thirdly, through Envie: thus the Jews said, that John Baptist had a devill [c]. And that Christ came not from God, because he did not keep the Sabbath, Joh. 9. 16: When choller flows in the eyes, it makes all things look yellow, and when in the Pallate, nothing tastes sweet: when the humours are corrupted in the ventricle, they corrupt the best meat, and a red or yellow glasse makes all things seem of that colour. And therefore unto a right judgment, it is required, that the minde be free from partiality, covetousnesse, love of bribes, and envie.

[c] Luke 7. 33.

Quest. 2. How must we, or may we judge?

Answ. We must judge warily, wisely, considerately, simply, (that is, impartially) and piously, alwaies having an eye upon God, meditating, and remembring his will, power, love unto his children, providence, and the unsearchableness of his judgments.

Quest. 3. Why did the multitude marvell?

Answ. Because of that great and extraordinary change, which was so suddenly wrought in this poor man: for

First, the devill did possesse him.	The devill is cast out.
Secondly, his judgment was extinct.	His judgment is restored.
Thirdly, his voice was suppressed.	His voice heard.
Fourthly, his tongue could not speak.	And His tongue untied.

Vers. 35. And Jesus went about all the Cities, and Villages, teaching in their Synagogues, and preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom, and healing every sickness, and every disease among the people.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Teaching in their Synagogues.

Quest. 1. What is meant by this word Synagogue?

Answ. 1. First, the word is a Greek word, but yet frequently used by the old, and vulgar Interpreter, in the old Testament: It comes from the verb συνάγω, which signifies

I. Congero, to gather together, or to assemble. And

II. Compoto, to drink, or banquet together: from the custome of so doing, which was amongst them, (Rhoding.) Hence the place of publike meeting for the exercises of Religion, and worship, was called by the Gentiles, Synagogium; and by the Jews, Synagoga; and by the Christians, Synaxis.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this word Synagoga, sometimes was taken for the place where they convened, and met together, sometimes for the assembly it self, and the men that were gathered together, Acts 13. 43.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some distinguish between a Synagoga, and the Synedrion, or Sanhedrim, by the former understanding a place for religious worship, and by the latter, a place for Courts, and the dispatch of politick and civill affairs: But this distinction is not generally true, because they are sometimes united united and joyned together in the Scripture, and the Jews did both judge, and punish in them both. They will (saith Christ) deliver you up to the Councels, and will scourge you in their Synagogues, Mat. 10.17. Mark 13.9.

Quest. 2. Why did Christ teach in their Synagogues?

Answ. 1. First, this was done, lest he should seem to have condemned the publike assemblies, and meetings of the Jews: But this was touched upon, chap. 4. 23.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ taught in the Synagogue, that that which he taught might be divulged; according to that charge given by him to his Apostles, What I tell you in secret, publish you upon the house top, Mat. 10. and 28. 20. Now this was in respect of the Gospel, and that in a double regard; viz.

I. That it might equally be communicated unto all, Mark 14.9.

II. Lest he should have been calumniated, and slandered, if he had taught in corners, Joh. 18.20.

Observ. We may learn hence, That the preaching of the Gospel is to be published unto all. Acts 5.20. Mark 16.15. and 2 Tim. 2.9. Acts 9. 20. and 13. 14, 44. and therefore we must pray, that it may be freely permitted, 2 Thess. 3.1.

Quest. 3. Why is the preaching of the Gospel to be published to all?

Answ. 1. First, because the effects thereof belong unto all; redemption, life, peace, and the like, which are effects of preaching, are offered unto all in the Gospel.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is the power of God unto salvation, (Rom. 1. 16.) and the ordinary means of begetting faith, and of bringing us unto salvation, Rom. 10.14. and 1 Cor. 1. 18, &c.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because it is ordained by God, and propounded unto men, to be the sweet savour of life unto life, 2 Cor. 2.16.

Object. 1. But it will be objected, we must not cast Pearls before Swine, Mat. 7.6. Now the preaching of the word is a Pearl: And therefore it is not to be published to all.

Answ. 1. First, certainly it is forbidden to preach the word unto some, Acts 16. 6. and 23. 22. and hence Paul would not stay to preach to them who were obstinate, Act. 18.6. and 19.9.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but where there is no such direct and particular prohibition, there the Gospel is to be preached unto all; it being the nature thereof, and herein differing from the Law, that it neither respects Jew nor Gentile, bond nor free.

Quest. 4. Who are here to be blamed?

Answ. Those who preach and teach in corners, secretly, creeping into mens houses, 2 Pet. 2. Jude 4. Here observe, that I do not speak

First, of private reading, or conferring together of what hath been publikely taught. Nor

Secondly, of teaching, exhorting, and instructing of mens own families. Nor

Thirdly, of doctrines which bear, or at least give the light, as the Publicans, who hide themselves and conceal their faith, because they should give an account of their faith to every one that shall demand a reason thereof, 1 Pet. 3. Certainly great and heavie is the calumny that ariseth by unlawfull Conventicles, and therefore woe be to such as are justly guilty hereof; for they will be found to be of that number, who do evill, and therefore hate the light, John 3. 20. Christ we see, teacheth in the Synagogues, and the Apostles in the Temple, Acts 14 and 15 and 16 and 17 chapters. 533

Object. 2. That is not by and by, or alwaies true, which is publikely taught: therefore private preaching may be as good as publike.

Answ. 1. First, it is a suspitious thing, for a man to be a turn-coat: and therefore they who forsake our assemblies which they have frequented, and meet onely secretly, may justly be suspected.

Answ. 2. Secondly, that which is publikely preached, may be proved and tried, but not that which is taught in obscurity.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they who meet in corners, and sleight the publike assemblies of the Saints, out of the times, and places of persecution, either

I. Teach that which is false, and erroneous, and then do wickedly: Or

II. Teach that which is true, and orthodox, and then they are either malitious and envious, in desiring to conceal the truth, or cowardly and timerous, in fearing to professe, and justifie, and own the truth; yea if men do no evill, then why need they conceal and hide themselves?

Sect. 2. §. 2. Healing every sickness, and every disease.

Quest. 1. What is the sense and meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. First, θεραπεύειν signifies healing, or curing.

Object. Against this it may be objected, θεραπεύειν doth not here properly signifie to cure or heal, because it signifies to cure by means, and to heal by medicines, (which Christ did not) whence a part of Physick is called θεραπευτικὴ.

Answ. According to the Physitians, it is true, that some distinction of words is observed: as for example,

I. To give Physick, is called ἰατρεύειν, and this may be without effect: for many Physitians use the means, when they do not restore unto health.

II. To give Physick with good successe, is called ἰᾶσθαι or ἰάσασθαι.

III. θεραπεύειν signifies to cure, though without second causes. And

IV. ὑγιάζειν signifies also to heal, whether by means, or without means. And

V. A man is most properly said to heal, when effectually he cures or recovers, whether by Physick, as earthly Physitians do, or by a word, as our heavenly Physician here doth: And therefore he is truly said to heal.

Answ. 2. Secondly, νόσος and μαλακία (the words here used) sickness and disease thus differ: νόσος is such a sickness as casts men down; μαλακία such a one as onely weakens a man, and therefore is not so great as the former. Now νόσοι, sicknesses are of three sorts, namely,

I. Some are more easily cured, and healed.

II. Some are more hardly cured, & healed. And

III. Some are incurable, and impossible by men to be healed; but Christ cures all diseases.

524

Thirdly, All (healing All sicknesses) is thus to be understood; namely,

Answ. 3. I. Not that he healed singula generum, all that were sick of all sicknesses; for there were many blinde, and deaf, and dumb, who were not cured. Nor

II. That he healed genera singulorum, some of all kinds of sicknesses; because there was not at that time in the whole world (much lesse in the places where Christ came) some sick of all sicknesses, or all kinde of sicknesses which are now: for I conceive that the world then knew neither the sweating sickneſse, which was once rife and brief here in England; nor the Neapolitan, or French disease.

III. It may be that Christ did not heal some of all kinde of sicknesses which the world then knew. But

IV. That he healed every sicknes, and every disease, of all those who either came unto him, or were brought unto him, or in whose behalf he was sent unto. Whence we may see,

First, that nothing is impossible, nothing is difficult unto Christ. And Secondly, that Christ sends none away uncured, that comes unto him; not those nine unthankfull Lepers, or that most ingratefull and treacherous man, who being cured of his eight and thirty yeers disease, did afterwards discover Christ unto the Jews.

Quest. 2. Why did Christ cure all sicknesses, and all diseases?

Answ. 1. First, to shew his Omnipotencie, and the presence of God with him, in all things, and at all times: whence we may learn, That Christ is accompanied with the strength and power of God his Father. (Reade 2 Cor. 5. 19. Act. 10. 38. John 5. 36.) For otherwise he could not have been a Redeemer.

Observ. 1.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ healed all sicknesses, to shew his mansuetudo, and how his mercy is extended towards all (Tit. 3. 5.) and he is no respecter of persons, Rom. 2. 11.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ healed all who were brought unto him, that he might spend the whole time of his being upon earth, in doing good: Thereby teaching us, That as we have opportunity, we must do good unto all, (Gal. 6. 10.) and not be unfruitfull in good works; remembring that we were created unto labour, and to be helpfull unto others: And therefore we must neither be hard-hearted, nor close-fisted unto those who stand in need; but to our ability and strength, helpfull to them in all things.

Observ. 2

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Christ healed all, to shew that it was only he who took away our infirmities, (Matth. 8. 17.) and cured all the maladies of our souls, Psal. 103. 2. For as there is no infirmity so great, but he can cure it; so there is none so small, but he will take care of it, and succour it: Grace was given unto him out of measure, that he might be able to heal all our infirmities.

Observ. 3

Vers. 36. Vers. 36. But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd.

Sect. 1. §. 1. He was moved with compassion on them.

Quest. 1. Why was Christ moved with mercie towards these?

Answ. Observ. The Text saith, Because they were as sheep without a shepherd: whence we may see, that it is a great misery to be deprived of Preachers, and a great mercy to be made partakers of preaching: Or, the preaching of the word is the great mercie of God, being given for this end, that scattered sheep might be gathered to the chief shepherd of their souls, Rom. 1. 16. and 1 Cor. 1. 18, 21.

Quest. 2. How doth it appear, that the preaching of the word is a great mercie of God?

By these dependent particulars, viz.

Answ. First, man by nature is in the state of death, Rom. 5. 12.

Secondly, man by nature cannot free himself from this estate, nor avoid death.

Thirdly, naturally we are so blinde, that we cannot truly see, and know the danger wherein we are.

Fourthly, as we cannot perceive our danger, so naturally we cannot understand the remedy against it, 1 Cor. 2. 14.

Fiftly, but the word of God is a light unto our feet, and a lanthern unto our paths, Psal. 119. 105. And therfore Christ hath given a charge to the Ministers, to preach, (Mat. 28. 19.) and Saint Paul denounceth a woe against him that shall neglect it, (1 Cor. 9. 15.) because indeed their feet are happy, who bring the glad tidings of peace, (Rom. 10. 15.) and reconciliation, 2 Corinth. 5. 19. Wherefore undoubtedly it is a great mercie of God, for any people to enjoy the preaching of the word.

Quest. 3. How must we hear aright the preaching of the word?

Answ. 1. First, we must hear it with love, and delight, and without all wearinesse.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must hear it diligently, and attentively, listening thereto as we would unto a Physician, or Lawyer.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we must hear it so, that we may correct our waies, and errours thereby, Psal. 119. 9. And this is the sum of all.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Because they fainted, and were scattered abroad.

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. First, sometimes this phrase of being scattered abroad, is understood of the Civill government; when people are without a politike head, or Governour, as 1 King. 22. 17. Judg. 17. 6 and 18. 1. and 19. 1. and 21. 25.

Answ. 2. Secondly, sometimes this phrase is understood of the Ecclesiasticall government: when people are destitute of spirituall Pastours. And thus the phrase is taken in this place. But

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Text is diversly read. For

I. Some Copies have ἐσκυλμένοι, erant, They were vexed, grieved and pained, Chrysost. & Hier. But they were not vexed or grieved, but wearied with daily labour, and travell; Vers. 2. Because they were without a Shepherd to leade and teach them. Whence we may observe, Observ. 1 That a man may be wearied in seeking of Christ, and yet not finde him, Isa. 57. 10. Luke 13.

Luke 13. 24. Matthew 7. 22. and 25. 11.

Quest. 2. Why do many seek Christ, who finde him not?

Answ. 1. First, because many seek him in a wrong way: it is no wonder if a man cannot finde a thing, when he seeketh where it is not; and it is no marvell, if men who seek Christ in self-love, or by the works of the Law, finde him not, Rom. 10. 1, 2, 3. and Philip. 3. 9.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because many seek him too late, they do not enquire after him maturely, and early, and therefore they finde him not, Prov. 8. 17. Esa. 55. 6.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, many seek Christ, and finde him not, because they are not rightly prepared; that is, they are not freed from the chains of sin, or weaned from the world, but would gladly joyn the Ark and Dagon together; and desire to retain their sins, and to gain their Saviour. And therefore no wonder if they never finde him; for he will not be found of such as will not leave their sins for his sake.

Quest. 3. How must we so seek Christ, that we may finde him?

Answ. 1. First, we must not seek him merely for our own sakes, but chiefly for himself.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must not seek him by our own works, but by faith in his merits, Philip. 3 8, 9.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we must not seek him in the way of pleasure, but of affliction, Heb. 12. 8. Mat. 16. 24

Answ. 4. Fourthly, we must not seek him in the way of sin; but of righteousnesse, and true holinesse.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, we must not seek him in the way of new or strange opinions, but in the way of truth; submitting, and subjecting both our selves, and our opinions to the word of truth, Esa. 8. 20.

Answ. 6. Sixtly, we must not seek him idlely, and sluggishly, in our beds, Cant. 3 1. but diligently, and industriously, Prov. 8. 33.

II. Other Copies reade, and that more truly, ἐκλελυμένοι, looſed, untied, or scattered abroad; because things being untied, must needs be dissipated: the meaning therefore is, the people were without a Shepherd; therefore they went astray, and were scattered to and fro, hither and thither.

Observ. 2. To teach us, That except people be tied by Pastorall bonds, and ligaments, they must needs erre; or except people be restrained by preaching, and attended carefully by Preachers, they will erre, and go astray. Reade Ier. 2. 5. 8. and 10. 20, &c. and 50. 6. Zach. 10. 2. and 11. 10, 15, &c.

Quest. 4. Why do people stray, when Pastours are a wanting?

Answ. 1. First, because it is the office of a Shepherd, to go in and out before his flock, Numb. 27. 17. And therefore, where there is none to take that care, or to discharge that calling, there the people must needs erre: For I take it for granted, that man by the light of nature, or by the power of any naturall goodnesse that is in him, cannot finde out, or walk in the way of truth.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because those who break Pastorall bonds, will be held by none, that is, those who will not be restrained from sin, by the honour of God, Religion, his word, and Ministers: those will be subject to no cure at all, but like mad, or possessed men, will break all bonds. Reade Act. 20. 28. and Heb. 13. 17.

III. Others reade Disjecti. And expound it thus, viz. 525

First, Errantes, they wandred to and fro, scattered here and there, out of order and rank.

Secondly, Fluctuantes, they wavered, not knowing what to hold, nor what to do, (Ephes. 4. 14.) but were like the Waves of the sea, tossed to and fro.

Thirdly, Incertes, stertentes, dormitantes, securi, they were secure, and fast asleep: to teach us,

That those who are looſed from the Ministery of Preachers, become secure; or none are so secure or presumptuous, as those who are destitute, and deprived of preaching. Observ. 3 This appears thus;

First, the Ministers are Watchmen, set over people, to keep them from sleeping in sin, Ezech. 3. and 33.

Secondly, there is in people a naturall proneneſse unto peace, and quiet, and carnall security. And therfore when those are gone which should keep them awake, they must needs sleep.

Vers. 38. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest. Vers. 38.

S. 1. Pray ye. Sect. 1.

We see here, that although it be a good and necessary work, to send forth labourers into the harvest, yea a work pleasing unto God, and profitable unto men, yet we must not expect it without prayer. To teach us,

That prayer is the onely way to obtain blessings, and good things at Gods hands, Mat. 7 7. Luke 18. 1. Act. 6. 4. and Ephes. 6. 18. and 1 Thess. 5. 17. and 1 Pet. 4. 7. and 5. 9. Observ.

How doth it appear, that we cannot truly hope to enjoy any blessings without prayer? Quest. 1.

It appears thus, viz.

First, because prayer is the ordinance of God, and therefore Elias, without it, could not obtain rain, 1 King. 18. Answ.

Secondly, because prayer is the approbation of our faith; if with a strong confidence and assurance, we make our requests known unto God, it argues faith in us.

Thirdly, because by praying unto God for good things, we shew that

I. He is the Authour and fountain of every good gift, and every perfect being, Jam. 1. 17. And

II. That we depend upon him onely for those good things which we lack. And therefore, as without prayer we cannot be assured of any good thing, so by prayer we obtain whatsoever is good for us.

What need is there of prayer, seeing God hath decreed what he will give us? Quest.

As he hath decreed the end so he hath decreed the means: he who sowes not, cannot reap; and he who casts not, cannot live. And therefore he that desires any blessing, must submit himself to the use of those means which God hath appointed for the obtaining of it. Answ.

God knows what we want, and therfore what need we pray? Quest. 2.

We

526 Answ. We pray, Non ut doceam, sed ut desiderium augeam (August. de orando Deum) not that we might instruct God, but that we might by prayer, set a more sharp and keen edge upon our own desires, after those good things which we want.

Object. But we are commanded to cast our care upon God: And therefore prayer is needlesse.

Answ. It follows not: for we must first pray, and beg, and be instant with God for what we want; and then cast our care upon him, concluding, Father, not as I will, but as thou wilt.

Quest. 4. Why must we pray?

Answ. 1. First, because it is the most certain remedy; God having promised to hear when we call, Iob. 16. 23. &c.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is Pharmacum generale, the most generall means: for

I. Prayer pierceth, and penetrateth the heavens. And

II. Is a means to obtain victory in the day of battell, Exod. 17. And

III. Thereby rain may be procured in the time of drought, 1 King. 19. And

IV. It is a means to make the barren Womb bear, 1 Sam. 1. 10. And

V. By prayer we may obtain pardon of our sins, Luke 18 11. Yea

VI. It changeth a revealed threatning, Ion. 3. 10. For Ionah had proclaimed, Yet forty daies, and Nineveh shall be destroyed: But the King proclaiming a Fast, and commanding prayer, changeth the Commination and sentence, into mercie. And

VII. It worketh miracles; for by prayer Iosua obtained, that the Sun should stand still; and Elias, that the dead should be raised unto life. And

VIII. It takes away evils, and delivereth out of prison, Acts 12. 5. 12. And

IX. It expels, and drives away Sathan, Luke 18. And

X. It ties Gods hands, that he cannot punish, Exod. 32. 10. Let me alone, saith the Lord, that I may destroy this people. Ligatum habens sanctis Dominum ut non puniat, nisi vota permiserint ipsi Bern. The Saints have the Lords hands, by prayer, so fast manacled, that he cannot punish the wicked except they will give him leave. And therefore these things considered, there is great reason, that we should pray for whatsoever good blessing we stand in need of, whether temporall or spirituall.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is necessary that we should pray, because it increaseth our spirits, and enflameth our zeal.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because thereby we worship and please God, Acts 6. 4.

Quest. 5. How must we pray?

Rules. The Rules for prayer, are either Generall, or Particular.

Generall Rules.

Rule 1. First, the generall Rules to be observed in prayer, are these, namely,

First, we must pray with the Understanding, that is,

I. Not in an unknown language, as the Papists do, who pray in Latine.

II. Not without attention; Quomodo Deus audiet quem ipsum non attendis? Cyprian. How can a man hope to be heard of God, that doth not himself mark what he utters? The Papists here give a double distinction; to wit,

First, betwixt a perfect and a weak attention: and this distinction, as true, we admit; because we are imperfect in all services, and weak in the best performances: And therefore at best, our Attention in prayer is but weak and imperfect, yet we must strive unto perfection, and labour that our mindes in prayer may be wholly taken up with heaven, and heavenly things.

Secondly, they distinguish betwixt an Initial, & perpetuated Attention; that is, Men (they say) must have an Intention to pray, and an Attention to what they pray, when they begin their prayers; but there is no necessity of continuing this attention, unto the period of their prayers. This distinction, as foolish and false, I reject, because their aim and meaning herein seems to be this, That men must be attentive at first, when they pray unto God, that so they may procure the Lords attention to their prayers; and when once God attends to what we pray, then we need attend no more unto that which we powre out: because God will hear it, though we do not mark it.

Rule 2. Secondly, we must pray only for good things, & such as are agreeable to the good will of God, 1 Iohn 5. carefully avoiding all petitions, which tend to the hurt either of our selves, or our neighbour, or our God, or our Religion. For if God hear from us, and grant unto us such requests, it is in anger: according to the fiction of Midas his golden prayer, or wish.

Rule 3. Thirdly, we must pray in faith, (Mark 11. 24. Iames 1. 6.) being assured that God loves us, that God hears us, that God is able to help us, yea that he will help us, in as much as may stand with his glory, and our good.

Rule 4. Fourthly, we must pray with the Spirit, 1 Cor. 14. Iude 20. Rom. 8. 26. For if our requests be the sighs and groans of the Spirit, or dictated, and suggested unto us by the Spirit, then they shall be both pleasant unto, and prevalent with our heavenly Father.

Rule 5. Fifthly, we must pray in humility, Luke 18, 13. Latrones, & Errones docent me orare. Hier. in vitas patrum: As Beggars pray for an Alms, and Theeves for a Pardon, so must we for those things which we stand in need of.

Rule 6. Sixthly, we must pray penitently: How can we comfortably, or confidently pray unto God, untill we are assured that we are reconciled unto him, and our sins pardoned? Non prodest medicamentum dum ferrum in vulnere. Isidor. In vain is the plaister applied to the sore, so long as the Bullet or iron is in the wound: In vain do we pray for mercie, or any blessing from God, so long as sin is not forsaken, hated, and repented of.

Rule 7. Seventhly, we must pray perseverantly, Rom. 12. 12. Continuing untill God have heard our prayers, or granted our requests.

Rule 8. Eighthly, we must pray in the name and mediation of Christ, Iohn 16. Acts 4. 12. And that

I. Because he is the onely beloved Son of God, with whom God is well pleased, and in whom he is pleased with us, Iohn 14. 13.

II. Because Christ by his office is our Advocate, 1 Ioh. 2. 1.

III. Because he onely merited pardon and redemption for us.

particular Rules. Secondly, the more particular Rules to be observed in prayer, are these, viz.

Rule 1. First, we must pray daily, and ordinarily; remembring, that God is daily to be worshipped, but prayer is a part of his worship: wherefore we must daily pray, Luke 18. 1. and 1 Thess. 5. 17.

Rule 2. Secondly, we must pray fervently, sending forth loud clamours, and strong cries unto God, Psalm 55.

Rule 3. Thirdly, we must pray for particular blessings; for health, Iames 5. 15. for victory, rain, and the like, as was afore said: and that

I. By an acknowledgment of thy duty; that thou oughtest to pray unto God, and thou wert unworthy to receive any good thing from him, if thou shouldst be negligent herein. And

II. We must pray particularly, upon a sure hope that we shall obtain what we want, if it be good for us, and the rather, because we pray for it, which is the Lords own ordinance, appointed for the obtaining of what is awanting unto us.

Doct. 2. §. 3. Hear the Lord of the harvest.

We see here, that our prayers must be made unto God: for

First, Christ is the Lord of the harvest, as appears by his sending forth of Apostles and Disciples? Yea [Mat. 10. 1 and Luke 10. 1.] Secondly, he names not himself, but the Lord, that he may shew that labourers come from him.

Observ. 1 Hence we may learn; That we must pray unto none, but unto the Lord, Psalm 50. 16.

Quest. 1. Why must we pray onely unto the Lord?

Answ. 1. First, because he onely can give unto us what we want; salvation being onely in his hand.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because he onely can attend unto the prayers of all, every where, at once.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because he onely knows the heart, and discerns whether we dissemble with him, or pray in sincerity.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because he loves us above all others; or none loveth us so much as he doth, Ioh. 3. 16.

Obiect. It will here be objected, we pray unto men for divers things: Paul prays the brethren, and men daily pray and petition Kings, and great, and rich men, and that lawfully, how then do we say, that we must pray onely unto God?

Answ. To pray, may be two manner of wayes understood, namely,

First, in generall, for every petition and request; and thus indeed it is true, that we may petition, sue, and make requests unto men: but it must be for some temporall, not for spirituall things: and these requests must be made unto living and mortall men, not unto the dead and glorified Saints.

Secondly, prayer sometimes is understood, καὶ ἐξοχὴν, for prayer for spirituall graces, and eternall glory, and thus understood, we must pray onely unto God.

Quest. 2. Why is God called the Lord of the harvest?

Answ. 1. First, because the harvest is his possession & right.

Secondly, because the harvest is gathered in by him. Whence we may learn; 527

Answ. 2. Observ. 2 That the collection, and gathering together of men unto the faith, and profession of Religion, is the work of God; as evidently appears thus:

First, Election is his Decree, and the calling of men unto the truth, first came from him.

Secondly, as it came from God, so it ends in him; for he calleth men to the profession of Religion for his own glory. Reade Ephes. 1. 4, 5, 6.

Thirdly, all things which serve hereunto, are but Gods instruments; whether the word, or Spirit, or Ministers, or Day (the Sabbath) or Temple (the Church) yea, or Christ himself: All these are the instruments of God, for the gathering together of men unto the faith. And therefore our Saviour here commandeth us to pray unto the Lord of the harvest.

§. 3. That he would send forth labourers. Sect. 3.

How manifold is the sending of Ministers? Quest. 1.

Answ.

- First, Extraordinary, as was frequent in the old Testament; when sometimes men, sometimes women were suddenly inspired with the Spirit of Prophesie.
- Secondly, Ordinary, and this is two-fold, viz.
  - I. An internall vocation, and call from God: and this hath in it these two things; namely,
    - First, God excites, and stirs up such to have compassion upon the Church, and Children of God; and to desire, that they were able to serve God in this great work of gathering in his harvest.
    - Secondly, then God makes them able Ministers, not of the Letter, but of the Spirit, 2 Corinth. 3. 6.
  - II. An externall calling from men, appointed for this end: For the gatherers of this harvest, must be both missi, and permissi; sent by God, and allowed by men.

By the name of Labourers, which our Saviour here gives to Ministers, we may observe,

That the Ministers of the word are ordained unto labour. Observ.

How doth it appear, that the calling of a Minister requires so much labour and pains? Quest. 2.

First, it appears by the names given unto them; they are called Fishers, Matt. 4. 19. Luke 10. 2. and commanded to be painfull & faithfull Shepherds, Ioh. 21. 15, &c. Act. 20. 28. and 2 Tim. 4. 2, 5. They are called Souldiers; and Planters, and Builders, and the like, 1 Cor. 9. and 3. 7. and 16. 10, 16. and 2 Cor. 6. 1, 5, &c. and 11. 23. Philip. 4. 3. and 1 Thess. 5. 12. and 1 Tim. 3. 1. and 2 Tim. 4. 5. Answ. 1.

Secondly, by the work of the Ministers, it appears that their calling requires much labour and pains: For their work is to attend unto the Church of Christ, which is no small work, containing therein these four things: namely, Answ. 2.

I. To preach the word publikely, Mark 16. 16. and 528 16. and 1 Timoth. 5. 17. and 2 Timoth. 4. 2.

II. To labour, by preaching, to make their people perfect men in Christ Jesus, 2 Cor. 11. 2. Colos. 1. 28.

III. To love their people with their hearts, and inwardly to be carefull of them, and to pray for them, Gal. 4. 11.

IV. To suffer affliction, and persecution (if need require) for the good of their flocks. Reade 1 Cor. 4. 11. &c. and 2 Cor. 4. 8. &c. and 11. 23. and 2 Tim. 2. 3. &c.

Quest. 3. How may a good Minister, and painfull labourer be known?

Answ. 1. First, a good labourer gains more by his working, than he spends upon himself in his diet: so, a good Minister doth not spend all his labour and study upon his flock, but still saves and gains something for himself, being himself bettered by his preaching and study.

Answ. 2. Secondly, a good labourer spends (in a manner) the whole day in labour, and but a small part of it in eating: so, a good Minister spends both day and night, (1 Thess. 2. 12. 9.) in care, labour, and study, and in comparison of the time therein spent, spends but little in refreshing of himself.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, a good workman works as painfully when his Master is absent, as when he is present: so we, though absent in body, should yet notwithstanding, be present in spirit; and as carefull privately to pray for those who are under us, as publikely to preach unto them.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, a good labourer is ashamed to come into his Masters sight, that day that he hath been idle: so, a faithfull Minister will cry Perdidimus diem, and grieve for the mis-spending of any one day, wherein he hath not brought some glory to God, or good to his Church, or benefit or comfort to some of his children.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, if a good labourer labour all day, and gain nothing, then he grieves for his bad successe: so the good Ministers of God grieve and mourn when they labour all night and catch nothing. Reade Luke 5. 5. and Heb. 13. 17.

Sect. 4. Into his harvest.

Observ. We may observe hence, That the end of a Ministers labour is to gather in Gods harvest. Here we must take notice of two things, to wit;

First, in every age of the world, there is a double labour of Ministers; namely, first, Sowing-time; then secondly, Harvest-time: first they must sow, then they must reap, Rom. 15. 20. and 1 Pet. 2. 25.

Secondly, as in America there is a perpetuall harvest, there being something ripe every moneth in the year, in some part or other of it: so is it with the Ministers of God in all ages so long as the world lasts, there will be a perpetuall harvest, some still ready to be gathered to the faith, and the profession of Religion.

Quest. What are the works which God requires of these labourers?

Answ. First, to sow the soil, that is, to preach the Word. And Secondly, to water it, that is, to nourish and cherish what begins to take root, or to labour daily that the Word may be the more cleer to the understanding of the hearers; and that they may grow up, and increase in knowledge, Ego plantavi, Apollos rigavit, sed Deus incrementum dedit. Ille primus operis dator fuit. Iste vero rigandi gratiam habuit. Ille posuit fundamentum doctrinæ Christianæ, hic ædificavit. g. Aretius in 1 Cor. 3. 6.

Thirdly, to hedge in the corn, that it be not trampled down, that is, labour to fence them about with Commination & Threatnings, and legall feares, that thereby they may be kept from sin: and to hedge them in with sound Doctrine, that the viperous brood of Heretikes may not devour them.

Fourthly, to labour to ripen the corn, that is, to strive, that they may be the more setled, and rooted in faith, and built up in all holyness and spirituall knowledge, Coloss. 1. 28.

Fiftly, to harrow the field, and to break the clods, that is, to labour to break and humble the obdurate, and obstinate hearts of hardned sinners, by the hammer of the Word.

Sixtly, to gather in the Wheat, that is, to gather men unto the Communion of the Saints: for there is a double gathering of the righteous, namely,

I. By the Ministery of earthly Ministers, the Preachers of the Word, when they are gathered unto the faith, and profession of Religion and the true Church.

II. By the Ministery of heavenly Ministers, the Angels, whose by them they are gathered into Gods garner; that is, the Triumphant Church in heaven.

Seventhly, to cast the Tares into the fire, that is, to give over unto Satan those who will not repent. This we do unwillingly, and alwaies but hypothetically, because we are commanded to be mercifull and charitable, and to hope the best,

Observ. The chiefe works of the Ministers of Christ are these divers and severall works as

CHAP.

TO THE CHRISTIAN READER.

CHristian Reader, If thou knoweſt me, I know thou ſtandeſt amazed (and no wonder) to ſee the inſolencie of this our Age; and how truly the Poet propheſied, when he ſaid, Scribimus indocti, doctique poemata paſſim.

That with the Cripple in the Acts, we are running, and leaping, aſſoon as ever we have found our legs: yea, undertaking to teach others, when we have need our ſelves to be taught. Indeed, great may their boldneſs be thought, that ſeek without fear to ſet forth their knowledge, (or rather, as I have done, their ignorance) and ſuffer their doings to be ſeen, they care not of whom. For, not onely thereby do they bring men to think, that they ſtand much in their own conceit; but alſo they ſeem to aſſure themſelves, that all men will like whatſoever they write, which is a great folly to imagine. Now the beſt way for an Offender (in this kinde) to finde favour, is to pretend a good intent, and if a good intention happen to produce an evill action, then to accuſe himſelf, and not to ſtand upon his own juſtification. And therfore (having by this Book both betrayed my own folly, and given great occaſion unto others to talk largely of me) that thy cenſure may be the lighter, I will Article againſt my ſelf: My intention in the publication of this imperfect Peece, was ſincere; namely, that by theſe my weak endeavours, God might gain ſome Glory, and his people (my Country-men) ſome profit; and theſe were a pair of ſuch ſharp Spurs, and prevalent Motives in, and unto me, that I fear many will either ſay, or think, that (according to the Proverb) I made more haſte than good ſpeed.

Acts 3.8. Hebr. 5.12

Skilfull Muſicians are hardly induced to play, but unskilfull Fidlers will ſcrape before they be entreated, verifying the old Proverb, None ſo bold, as blinde Bayard. Our great and learned Schollers (when they write) excuſe themſelves in their Epiſtles Dedicatory, or to the Reader, that they were unwilling to be ſeen in print, and were induced to write, being overcome with the importunity of their friends, who would take no Nay: But I cannot thus excuſe my ſelf (and therefore am ſo much the more inexcuſable) for I was not provoked, nor perſwaded to make my ſelf a publike Spectacle to all Engliſh eyes, by any friends, but willingly put my ſelf upon it, deſerving therefore the whole blame for it. Indeed the firſt Movers of this work, was Gods glory, and the Churches good; and therefore (whatſoever I deſerve) let me intreat thee (Chriſtian Reader) not to take that with the left hand, which was given with the right; nor ſiniſterly to cenſure what was dexterouſly meant, but to accept it in good part. The Lord commanded, that thoſe who could not bring gold, or ſilver, or purple, or ſcarlet, or fine linnen, for the making of the Tabernacle, ſhould bring Goats hair, or Rams skins, or Badgers skins; and promiſed, that their offerings ſhould be accepted, not according to the worth of the thing offered, but according to the ability, and eſtate of the offerer. Yea, God is graciouſly pleaſed to accept of a Mite, at a poor womans hands, and of two Talents encreaſe, where he gave no more: Wherefore do thou imitate thy Father herein, taking thankfully, and bleſſing God for a weak work, from a weak workman: And as Charity covers a multitude of ſins, ſo ſhew thou thy ſelf to be endowed with this Chriſtian vertue, by being more ready to cover, than diſcover a fault, more ready to excuſe, than accuſe the guilty.

Exod. 25. 3. 1.

I will entreat thee breifly to take notice of two or three particulars, and ſo I will commend thee to the Lords gracious protection, and this Book to thy Chriſtian conſideration.

Firſt, I do not propound in this work, to teach Teachers, or to inſtruct thoſe from whom I might receive inſtruction; for both the language, and method, and matter, and ſtile thereof ſhew, that it was written ad vulgus, onely for the help, and benefit of the unlearned, although perhaps the wiſe may learn ſomething therein.

Secondly, I do not profeſſe my ſelf to be an Interpreter; and therefore I do omit ſome Verſes wholly, and ſome in part; picking and chuſing what I underſtand beſt my ſelf, and what I conceive may be moſt profitable and uſefull for thee.

Thirdly, a Gentlewoman having wrought in ſilk a curious Rainbow, another viewing of it, thus carped at it, that the Rainbow ſhould have all colours in it, and this was defective, not having ſuch or ſuch: To whom the skilfull Sempſter thus ſubtilely anſwers, That ſhe ſaw but one ſide of the Bow, and therefore thoſe colours ſhe could not ſee, ſhe muſt ſuppoſe them to be on the back-ſide. Let me entreat thee (courteous Reader) to do thus, and if thou meeteſt with any Queſtion, or Objection ſleightly anſwered, to suppose that it is either more fully answered in some other place of this Tractate, or is to be handled more amply in the ensuing Evangelists.

Fourthly, some places I have handled herein something largely, either because I have publikely treated of them, and so my Meditations have been enlarged, or because my helps have been more therein. Now if in those places some necessary things (as thou conceivest) be omitted; Remember, I saw onely with my own dim eyes, and conceived with my own dull heart; and if I had had the eyes, fancies, and understanding of all, the work certainly would have been by much better than it is.

Fifthly, if thou meetest with any thing which thou canst not understand at once reading over, then reade it twice, that thou maist understand what thou readest; for otherwise thou wilt not benefit thy self by thy reading: Legere & non intelligere negligere est; A man reades no more to purpose, than he understands. And if thou canst not reade the divisions, and subdivisions which ever and anon thou shalt meet withall, then repair to any Minister, or Scholler, and they will easily teach thee.

Sixtly, if thou findest any thing which dislikes thee, either in the Method, or Matter; Remember, this is not the work of any of our Antistites, or mighty men, or Worthies of our Church; but of one who is no old man in yeers, and but a childe in Understanding. And therefore (I say) if thou spiest any faults in this untimely and imperfect Booke (as many will be spied by seeing eyes) then doe with them as Appelles did who covered Venus mole with her finger that it might not be spied. Where the beare cannot find Origanum to heal his grief, he basteth all other leaves with his breath: So many reject whatsoever they reade, if their expectation be not fully answered in every thing: But this is no pious practise, and therefore I entreat thee not to imitate it; but make use of that which is good, and labour to hide and conceal what is amisse.

Epistle to the Reader.

Seventhly, refuse not to buy this Book because the Author is alive; for thou needst not fear any additions at all. Master Wilson having set out the Art of Rhetorique and in Rome being in danger of his life for it, was entreated when he came home, to amend it, that it might be re-printed: Whereunto he answered, That his Book should mend it self, if it would, and make him amends for the danger he was brought into by reason of it; for, for his part he would own it no more. So say I, take this as it is, for I assure thee, having exposed it to the wide world, I will never receive it, nor intertain it any more; but as Beggars do with their Brats, let it shift for it self. Artificers are sometimes enamoured of their own works, as Archidamus of his woodden Dove, Pigmalion of his Ivory Image, and Atachne of his wooden Swan: resembling herein Narcissus, who doated upon his own shadow. Believe me, I am none of these, for I am so sensible of my own inabilities, that none can dislike what comes from me, more than I do in my self; neither have a lower conceit of me, than I have of my self. When I call to minde, how the Arabians, being stuffed with perfumes, burn Hemlocks; and in Hybla, being cloyed with honey, they think it dainty to feed on Wax; and how the Eagle, fearing to surfet on spices, stoopeth to bite on wormwood: Then I confesse I have some hope that this Book will please some pallat; for we do so surfit, and are so cloyed with rare, learned, and Scholler-like Books, that plain ones, and unlearned perhaps will relish with us.

Eighthly, although there be many defects which may occur unto thee in this Miscellany, yet excuse them and me, thus; That as the Vine is more regarded, that beareth Grapes, than the Ash that hath nothing but leaves; and the Deer that encreaseth the Park, more than the barren Doe; and the Orchard that is fraught with fruit, than that which hath nothing but Blooms: So it is better for a man to have but a little Learning, and to employ it wholly to the good of others, than to have much buried in him, and learned onely unto himself: for Bonum quo communius eo est melius.

Ninthly, some scapes thou wilt meet withall, which were committed through the negligence and oversight of the Printer: but they are rectified and amended in the end of the Book, in the Errata, whereunto I intreat thee to turn, when thou findest any fault, and having found the correction, to amend it with thy Pen.

Tenthly, and lastly, thou hast a profitable Index at the end of the Book, wherein thou maist see what is contained in the whole Work, and how readily to finde out any of the things contained. Thus intreating the Lord to enlighten thy understanding, that thou maist understand what thou readest; and to sanctifie thy affections, that thou mayst put in practise what good duties thou understandest; I bid thee in the Lord, Farewell.

Thine in CHRIST JESU,

R. W.

CHAPTER X.

Verse 1. VERS. 1. And when he had called unto him his twelve Disciples, he gave them power against uncleane spirits, to cast them out, and to heale all manner of sicknesse, and all manner of disease.

Sect. 1. §. 1. HE called unto him his twelve Disciples.

Observ. Our Saviour heere calleth these twelve by their old name, Disciples, not by their new, Apostles; that he might teach us, That Apostles are not chosen, but onely out of Disciples: or, that we must first be Disciples, before we can be Apostles.

Quest. 1. How often were these twelve called, and sent?

Answ. Four severall times: viz.

First, when they were called into the family and society of Christ; to follow him, and to be his Disciples, Mat. 4. 18, &c. Mar. 1. 16. Luke 5. 10.

Secondly, when the twelve were separated from the other Disciples, unto the future Apostleship, and were called Apostles, Mar. 3. 13. Luke 6. 13. John 15. 16. Mat. 19. 28, &c.

Thirdly, when they were initiated into a particular office, and sent onely unto the Jewes: and of this the Text speaks, as also doth Mark 6. 7. and Luke 9. 1.

Fourthly, when they were fully sent, by a perpetuall ordination unto the Gentiles; as Matth. 28. 19. and Mark 16. 15. and Luke 22. 36. and Acts 13. 46. And thus we see how they were called, and sent by degrees.

Quest. 2. Why must Ministers be Disciples, before they be Apostles? the servants of Christ, before they teach others?

Answ. 1. First, because Piety is the greatest helpe unto the work of the Ministery: and therefore is first to be learnt, and laboured for.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because ability is not given by Miracle; but God blesseth our indeavours: And therefore it is necessary that learning should goe before the undertaking of the Ministery. To this purpose, mention is made of the Schoole of the Prophets, 1 Sam. 19. 20. and 2 Kings 2. 3, 5. And Paul telleth us how he was brought up under Gamaliel, and how himselfe taught Timothy, Aquila and Apollo: yea, hence it was that Universities were founded in those places where Christianity was embraced. And therefore, those who despise Learning and Literature, are unfit for the Ministery; neither savour of the Spirit of God.

Sect. 2. §. 2. And gave them power.

Observ. 1. We learne hence, That all power is from God; and every good thing in Man, is from divine strength.

Quest. 1. How doth this appeare?

Answ. 1. First, most cleerly from these Texts of Scripture, 1 Chron. 29. 12. James 1. 17. John 19. 11. Mat. 6. 14. and 1 Tim. 6. 16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we have lost that power which was given us by nature, (Rom. 3. 23.) being now so impotent, that we cannot so much as thinke a good thought, 2 Corin. 3. 5. And therefore it is evident that all power comes from God: and the true way unto God, is,

First, to goe out of our selves, and to confesse and acknowledge that we have no power nor ability at all unto any thing that is good: we should confesse our owne naughtinesse, and nothingnesse, and cast our selves at the feet of God, as good Origen did, confessing that we are but unsavoury Salt. Then

Secondly, let us beg, and intreat new strength from God; praying with David, Teach (Oh Lord) my hands to warre, and my fingers to fight.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is evident that all strength is from the Lord, in the worke of the Ministery: for

I. Preaching is unprofitable, without a calling, and sending from God, Rom. 10. 14. How can he preach (that is, profitably; or by his preaching beget faith in you) except he be sent? And therefore except God shine in us, we cannot enlighten, 2 Cor. 4. 6.

II. Hearing is unprofitable, except God imprint, and infuse Faith in the Hearers: for if the Word be not mixed with Faith, it cannot profit, Heb. 4. 2. Now it is God that both opens the heart, (Act. 16. 14.) and gives a blessing to the Word, 1 Cor. 3. 7. Paul may plant, and Apollo may water, but God gives the increase.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it is apparent that all power is from God; and that in regard of him all things are passive, if we looke upon Miracles, which are wrought onely by the finger of God: but of this elsewhere.

Quest. 2. To whom did Christ here give power?

Answ. To his Apostles, and in them to the Church.

Quest. 3. What power did Christ give to the Church?

Answ. 1. First, he gave a limited power, not absolute: this being so undeniable, that it is not questioned. I enlarge it not.

Answ. 2. Secondly, he gave ἐξουσίαν, authority unto them, and also δύναμιν, power, Luke 9. 1. Men can give the former unto Men, but not the latter; that is, Authority, but not Power; but God gives both.

I. He gives ἐξουσίαν, authority over every hurtfull thing, Luke 10. 19.

II. He gives δύναμιν, Power: he promised it when he was ready to ascend up into heaven, Act. 1. 8. And he performed presently after; reade Act. 3. 12. and 4. 33. and 6. 8. Rom. 15. 19. and 1 Thes. 1. 5.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, he gave a miraculous power, or power to worke Miracles, Acts 10. 44. and 19. 6.

Quest. 4. To how many of the Apostles did Christ give power?

Answ. Unto all, to Judas as well as the rest: for the Text is plaine, He called unto him his twelve Disciples, (now Judas was one of the twelve, verse 4.) and gave them (that is, all of them) power, &c.

Observ. 2. Whence we may learne, That wicked Men may be true Ministers, (Matth. 7. 22. and 23. 1.

2 and 1 Cor. 9.27.) Balaam propheſieth, and God often uſeth the Miniſtery, and ſervice of wicked Men; bad Miniſters may ſtrengthen the feeble hearts of the righteous, as the ſtalke upholds the Corne; and yet when the Wheat is gathered into the garner, with the ſtraw, they ſhall be burnt in unquenchable fire.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Over unclean ſpirits, and to heale ſickneſſes and diſeaſes.

Obſerv. The phraſe here is worth obſerving:

He gave the power over Satan, that { They might caſt him out, / They might cure ſickneſſes and diſeaſes, } Becauſe Satan wrought in them.

Whence we may obſerve, That where evils are either brought, or continued, there Satan is the cauſe thereof: for he provokes David to number the people, 2 Sam. 24. he tempts unto ſin, that God may puniſh; he hinders ſinners from repentance, becauſe he knows that would turne away wrath, and appeaſe the anger of God, Ionah 3.3. yea, ſometimes he is the Miniſter of God to inflict diſeaſes, as we ſee Iob 2. and Luke 13.16.

Verſ. 2. VERS. 2. Now the names of the twelve Apoſtles are theſe; The firſt, Simon, who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother, &c.

Sect. 1 §. 1. The names of the twelve Apoſtles.

Our Evangeliſt here intimates the degrees of the Apoſtleſhip; for in the former verſe, they were called Diſciples, but here Apoſtles, after they are called, that they may be ſent abroad. But yet we ſee, that it is onely theſe twelve who are called Apoſtles, and not the ſeventy (although they were alſo ſent to preach the Goſpel) for they are ſtill called Diſciples, Luke 10.1.

Obſerv. Whence we learne, That there are degrees of eminencie and dignity in the Miniſtery it ſelfe; reade Iob 6.70. Mat. 19.28. and 1 Cor. 12. 28,29. and Epheſ. 4. 11.

Queſt. Who are here blame-worthy?

Thoſe who maintaine a parity, and equality of all Miniſters: Indeed as Noble-men and inferiour Juſtices are equall; and alike, in regard of their conjoynt charge, when they are joyned together in Commiſſion: ſo Miniſters are equall, in regard of the Miniſtery; but in regard of eminencie and dignity, all are not alike; for the degree of the Apoſtleſhip did excell the Diſciples and all others.

Obiect. 1. But theſe twelve Apoſtles are after this called Diſciples: And therefore Apoſtles, and Diſciples are equall; Ieſus going up to Ieruſalem, tooke the twelve Diſciples apart in the way, (Mat. 20.17.) And again, He called his twelve Diſciples together, and gave them power, &c. Luke 9. 1.

Anſw. This name Diſciple, is a generall name unto both: for Apoſtles and Diſciples, are not membra dividentia, but Genus and Species; for all Apoſtles are Diſciples, (as was ſhewed in the former verſe) but all Diſciples are not Apoſtles: And hence our Saviour ſometimes calleth the twelve, Diſciples, (Luke 9.1.) and ſometimes, Apoſtles, Luke 9.10.

Obiect. 2. But others, beſides theſe twelve, are called Apoſtles: and therefore there is no difference of degree between Apoſtles and Diſciples.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, the name Apoſtle is uſed diverſly, namely;

I. Sometimes κατ' ἐξοχὴν, for Chriſt; conſider the Apoſtle, and high Prieſt of our profeſſion, Hebrews 3. 1.

II. Sometimes extraordinarily: thus S. Paul is called an Apoſtle, although he were not one of the twelve, yet becauſe he was extraordinarily called by Chriſt to the worke of an Apoſtle.

III. Sometimes the word is uſed generally, for all thoſe who labour in the worke of the Miniſtery: thus Titus is called an Apoſtle, and alſo the reſt who were employed in the Lords worke: Whether any enquire (ſaith S. Paul) of Titus, or our Brethren, they are ἀπόστολοι ἐκκλησιῶν, the Apoſtles of the Churches, 2 Corin. 8. 23. And thus Epaphroditus is called ὑμῶν δὲ ἀπόστολον, The Apoſtle of the Philippians, Philip. 2. 25.

IV. Sometimes the name is uſed abuſively, They that boaſt are falſe Apoſtles, deceitfull workers, transforming themſelves into the Apoſtles of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 11. 13.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, although the name Apoſtle be thus diverſly uſed ſometimes, yet this hinders not the genuine and naturall acception of it, namely, for thoſe twelve: according to the plaine Text of Scripture, When it was day, Ieſus called unto him his Diſciples; and of them he choſe twelve, whom he called Apoſtles, Luke 6.13. where we ſee the name Apoſtle diſtinguiſhed from Diſciple, and given as proper, unto the twelve.

Obiect. 3. The Apoſtleſhip, or place of an Apoſtle, is extraordinary; and therefore from thence we cannot from thence prove a diſparity, or inequality, in thoſe who are ordinarily called, as all are now.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it doth not ſeeme that the place of an Apoſtle was extraordinary: for although S. Paul ſhew many extraordinary callings, and places, and things in others, beſides Apoſtles, 1 Cor. 12. 28,29. yet he omits them all, Epheſ. 4.11. ſpeaking there onely of ordinary places, and yet even there Apoſtles are mentioned. But Anſw. 2. Secondly, the beſt rule of perpetuity, is Uſe, and Neceſſity: and therefore by way of diſtinction, I ſay,

I. In the Apoſtles, there were ſome things which were extraordinary; as to worke Miracles. And

II. Some things ordinary; as to governe Churches, to call Councels, to determine of Controverſies, and points in difference, Act. 15. Now although the firſt were peculiar unto themſelves, yet the ſecond is communicable unto others; that is, principally to thoſe whom God hath raiſed to greater eminencie, and dignity in the Church.

Sect. 2. §. 2. The firſt Simon, who is called Peter.

Queſt. 1. How many names had this firſt Apoſtle?

Anſw. Three; namely, 1 Simon, which ſignifies either fatneſſe, (Staplet. ſ. Mar. 3.) or obedient. 2 Peter, πέτρα, from a Rock; namely, either from Chriſt, or from his confeſſion of Chriſt, Matth. 16. 18. 3 Cephas, a Rocke, or a ſtone, Ioh. 1.42.

Queſt. 2. When was he firſt called Peter?

First,

Anſw. 1. Firſt, certainly not when he was brought by Andrew unto Chriſt, *Ioh.*1.40. Neither

Anſw. 2. Secondly, when he was called with Andrew, from mending the Nets, Marke 1 16. But Anſw. 3. Thirdly, when the twelve were ordained by Chriſt, to be with him, and to goe to preach, Mark. 3. 13, 14.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, & therfore it was before they were actually ſent to preach, and work Miracles: of wch ſending, this Text ſpeaks; as alſo, *Mar.*6. 7.

Becauſe it is here ſaid, primus Petrus, The firſt, Peter: the Papiſts collect, (though falſly) That Peter was the Prince of the Apoſtles, and that he was Primate of them, and had preheminence above them: And they object for the proofe of Peters preheminence, many things; namely,

Object. 1. Firſt, Peter was the firſt that confeſſed and acknowledged Chriſt to be God: therefore he is the Prince of the Apoſtles.

Anſw. Both Antecedent and Conſequent are falſe, or uncertainly true. The whole Argument ſtands thus:

He that firſt confeſſed, and acknowledged Chriſt to be God, is the chiefe of the Apoſtles.

But Peter firſt confeſſed, and acknowledged Chriſt to be God.

Therefore Peter is the chiefe of the Apoſtles.

The firſt propoſition they prove not, either becauſe it is too hard to doe; or elſe becauſe to prove the truth thereof, is to overthrow the ſecond Propoſition, which they fight mainly for.

The 2d propoſition is falſe, That Peter was the firſt who acknowledged Chriſt to be God. For Firſt, he was acknowledged by Iohn Baptiſt; Behold the Lambe of God, Ioh. 1.36.

Secondly, he was acknowledged by Andrew; We have found the Meſſias, the Chriſt, Ioh. 1. 41.

Thirdly, he was acknowledged by Philip, before any confeſſion from Peter, that we reade of; We have found him, of whom Moſes in the Law, and the Prophets did write, Ieſus of Nazareth, *Ioh.*1.45.

Fourthly, he was moſt plainly acknowledged by Nathaniel; Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Iſrael, Ioh. 1.49. And therefore, if the Major of this Argument be true, then the Minor is falſe: and if the Major be falſe, then the Minor follows not from it, but is plain Nonſenſe. For if he who firſt acknowledged Chriſt to be God, be the chiefe of the Apoſtles, then Iohn Baptiſt, or Andrew, or Philip, or Nathaniel, are rather than Peter. Now if this Major be falſe, That he that firſt confeſſed and acknowledged Chriſt to be God, is the chiefe of the Apoſtles; then this is true, That he that firſt confeſſed Chriſt to be God, is not the chiefe of the Apoſtles: to which, adde their Minor, and the Concluſion will be this; Therefore Peter is not the chiefe of the Apoſtles.

Fiftly, Peters confeſſion is made in the name of all the Apoſtles, or the reſt of the Apoſtles did confeſſe, together with Peter, Chriſt his Deity; as appeares by the Plurall number, We believe, and are ſure that thou art that Chriſt, the Son of the living God, *Ioh.*6.69. If we conſult with Cyprian, Hilary, and Beda, concerning Nathaniel, they will tell us, Eum agnoviſſe Chriſti divinitatem: That he acknowledged Chriſts Deity. If we aske Auguſtine and Primaſius, what they thinke of him; they will tell us, Confeſſionem eandem, quam Petrus diu poſtea profeſſus: That his confeſſion of Chriſt was the ſame with that which was made by Peter, long after. See Fulke againſt Rhem. S. *Mat.*16.18. 3

Sixtly, I might take the Papiſts firſt Propoſition; and from thence (by adding, and proving this ſecond, That the devils confeſſed Chriſt before Peter) deduce a horrible, and impious Concluſion: but I forbeare it.

Secondly, they object againe, Peter is called Cephas; as much as if a Man ſhould ſay, κεφαλη, the Head, or a Head: Therefore he is the Prince, and Primate of all the Apoſtles. Object. 2.

Anſwer. This is too great audaciouſneſſe and preſumption, in divine things, to make (quidlibet e quolibet) any thing of any thing, to prove any Tenet by any Text: but it is here inexcuſable, to wreſt that which the holy Ghoſt hath expounded; and to call that a Head, which he cals a Stone, (Ioh. 1. 42.) and to make that a Greeke word, which is a Chaldean.

Object. 3. Thirdly, they object againe, He is called Peter; and that not in the beginning of his calling, but when the twelve Apoſtles were ordained to be ſent abroad to preach, *Mat.*5.1. and *Mar.*3.13.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it is uncertain when he tooke this name of Peter. But perhaps

I. It was included under Cephas, which was given him, Ioh. 1. 42. Becauſe the one ſignifies a Stone, and the other a Rocke. Or

II. Perhaps this name was impoſed upon him, when he was called with his Brother Andrew, to be a Diſciple of Chriſt, *Mat.*4.18. Or

III. Perhaps afterwards, when he made his confeſſion of Chriſt, *Mat.*16.18.

IV. But I care not to grant what they deſire; viz. That this name, Peter, was given unto him when the Apoſtles were ordained; becauſe it may ſeeme ſo from Luke 6. 13, 14. where it is ſaid, that Ieſus choſe twelve, whom he called Apoſtles, Simon, whom he alſo named Peter, &c.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, he was then called Peter, (Ad diſtinguendum ab altero Simone Chanani, Hier. ſ.) that he might be diſtinguiſhed from the other Simon the Canaanite.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, there is a difference betweene Peter (derivatively) and Petram, a Rocke; becauſe Petra either ſignifies Chriſt, 1 *Cor.*10. or Peters confeſſion; as many of the Fathers expounded it.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, if Peter be not the Rocke it ſelfe (as I hope they will not ſay) but onely built upon the true Rocke, Jeſus Chriſt; then he is no more than are all the other Apoſtles, yea all the faithfull, for they are built upon Chriſt, Rev. 21. 14. *Epheſ.*2.20. and 1 *Pet.*2.5, &c.

Object. 4. Fourthly, Maldonat objects here, That Iudas is named laſt, of all the twelve: And why? onely becauſe he was worſt of all, and moſt unworthy: And therefore Peter was named firſt, becauſe he was the beſt of all, and moſt worthy.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it is no plauſible arguing from a Traytor to a Primate, or Prince.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, grant it, that Iudas was the moſt unworthy, and Peter the moſt worthy, in regard of 4 age, or eloquence, or a grace in ready speaking, or the like; yet this is nothing to the purpose, because we speake not of intrinsicall dignity and worthinesse, or eminencie of parts, but of authority and power.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Antecedent is false, if Chrysostom be to be beleeved before Maldonat; for he saith, That Iudas is not named last of all for his wickednesse, but perhaps because he was last called of all the Apostles, or because Christ placed him so; and that, neither in regard of dignity or power, but of order. For it is requisite and necessary, in all troups or multitudes, that there should be a first and last.

Object. 5. Fiftly, they object, But it is said Peter, πρῶτος, the First, in this verse: this is the objection of Bellarmine, lib. 1. de Pontif. cap. 18. and of Stapleton. f. Peter is named first, and that by all the Evangelists; who, although both Marke, and Luke vary from Matthew, in the placing of some of the rest, yet all three name Peter first: whereby it is apparent that he is first, in regard of dignity and power.

Answ. 1. First, Peter is named first: therefore he is the chiefe, follows not; for Priscilla is not better than her Husband, because she is first named in the Text, and Aquila after her, (Acts 18. 26.) S. Paul himselfe saying, that the man is the womans head, 1 Cor. 11. 3.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this word πρῶτος, First, (as Theophylact interpreteth) hath reference to his brother Andrew, who was called before, and Peter after: for these two Brothers were πρωτόκλητοι, the two first that were called.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if the rest of the Apostles be not named according to dignity (as the Papists grant) then why should we thinke that Peter onely is? Let them give a reason of it, without begging the question.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it is evident, that the Scripture doth not perpetually observe the same order in such rehearsals; as Rezel. 21. 19. the twelve Apostles are compared to twelve precious stones, whereof the Jasper is the first; but Exod. 28. 20. where the twelve precious stones are named, which should be set in Aarons Brest-plate, the Jasper stone is the last. Now if the Jasper, for the dignity thereof, do signifie Peter in the Apocalypse; how then is it placed last in Exodus? And therfore we may here say with Origen, who thus writeth of the order of the twelve Patriarchs; Sciendum est quod in singulis locis, &c. Hom. 17. in Gen. It is to be marked, that every where, where the Scripture maketh mention of the Patriarchs, there is great diversity in the order: for there is one order observed in their nativity, (Gen. 29.) another in their going downe into Egypt, (Gen. 46.) another when they are blessed of Iacob, (Gen. 49.) another when they are numbred to doe any thing in the wildernesse, (Num. 1.) another when the Land of Canaan was divided. After the same manner, when the twelve Apostles are named, they are not alway set downe in the same order, as followes by and by.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, to that of Stapleton (alleaged also by Bellarmine, lib. 1. de Pontif. cap. 18.) that Peter every where is named first, though the rest be not set down alwayes in one order. I answer, so is Reuben the first named of all the Patriarchs, in those five severall places noted by Origen, in the former answer; he is the first borne, first entreth into Egypt, first blessed, first numbred, first divided; yet Reuben for all this, was not the chiefe among the Patriarchs: neither by this reason, is Peter the greatest among the Apostles.

Sixtly, Peter is not alwayes named first; for Iames is named before him, Galath. 2. 9. And when Iames, Cephas, and Iohn perceived, &c. Two shifts Bellarmine hath for this; the first is grosse, the second is good. Answ. 6.

I. He denies the Text, saying, It should be read Cephas, Iames and Iohn: but this is grosse, to cut a knot, which he should, but cannot untie. Or

II. He saith, Iames is read first, because he was Bishop of Ierusalem: this reason is good, because hereby he directly overthrows himselfe; for if Iames be mentioned first, because he was Bishop of Ierusalem; then at Ierusalem, Peter was not before Iames, but next unto him; and consequently not Prince of the Apostles.

Thus also his Brother Andrew is named before him, Iob. 1. 44. and he not named first, before the rest, but onely with the rest, Mat. 20. 24. When the ten (whereof Peter was one) heard this, they disdained.

Seventhly, Peter is named first, because he was the most ancient in yeeres, or one of the first that was called: And so S. Hierome saith, asking the question why Peter was preferred before Iohn; Ætati delatum est, quia senior erat: His age was preferred, because he was the elder [h]. Answ. 7.

[h] Lib. 1. Adverſ. Iovin.

Eightly, the Catalogue of the twelve Apostles, is thrice recited, namely, by the three first Evangelists, that we might fully know by whom Christ planted the first Church through the whole world: but in the order of reciting the Apostles, lurks no mystery, if we may credit Theophylact, who saith, ἀδιαφόρως, Indifferenter sic recenseri, nulla dignitatis vel potestatis ratione habita. The holy Ghost names the Apostles indifferently, not having therein any respect either unto their dignity, or power. Videsne non ex dignitate nominatos, quia Iacobus ante Iohannem [i]; We see the order of dignity is not observed in the reckoning up of the Apostles, because Iames is named before Iohn. Ne quis ob hoc (quod Prius nominatur) primum faciat Petrum [k]. Let none thinke Peter to be the chiefe of the Apostles, for this reason, because he is named first of all. Answ. 8.

[i] Chryſ.

[k] Baſm. f.

Ninthly, I conclude and confesse, that there is a Primacie among the Apostles, Sed ordinis, potestatis, confessionis, non honoris: But it is of order, not of power; of confession, not of honour: and thus we grant Peter to be Chiefe of the Apostles. Answ. 9.

[l] Ambro. f.

Sixtly, and lastly, Maldonate upon this verse, objects yet further, Peter is called here πρῶτος, First, absolutely, and none are called the second, or third, therefore First doth not denote a Primacie or Precedencie, but onely an Order. For if any had beene called second, he might then have rather seemed to have been inferiour unto Peter, who is called first, as the second in the kingdome Object. 6.

or the next unto the King, is inferiour unto him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but neither is this perpetuall, or universally true, things or persons, being often called first, and second, in regard of time, not of honour, or order; as we reade of a first man, and a second, 1 Corinth. 15.47. And yet the first is not the chiefest, or most honourable, or of most power, and dignity; for the first man is of the earth, earthy: but the second man is the Lord from heaven: And therefore the Jesuite may as well prove hence, Adam to be more worthy then Christ, as Peter to be more worthy than the rest of the Apostles [m].

Verse 5. VERS. 5. These twelve Iesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Goe not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any City of the Samaritans enter ye not.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Goe not into the way of the Gentiles.

Quest. 1. What is meant here by the way of the Gentiles?

Answ. Way is taken
- First, sometimes for this whole life, as Math. 5.25. and 7.13. Iohn 14.4.
- Secondly, sometimes by the way of the Gentiles is meant, wicked manners, and vaine customes; Reade Psalm. 1.1.6. and 10.5. and 14.3. &c. Ioh. 24.23. and 34. 11.21. Esa. 59.7. &c. Ierem. 10.2.3.
- Thirdly, sometimes by the way of the Gentiles, is meant, the wayes, or pathes, by which men went unto the Gentiles. As Ierem. 2.18. Esa. 7.3. and 9.1. and 11. 16. And thus it is taken in this place.

Quest. 2. Why are the Apostles forbidden to preach unto the Gentiles?

Answ. 1. First, because they were strangers from God, and the Covenant of mercy, Ephes. 2.12, 14. &c. and 4.18.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because the Covenant of grace was onely made with Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob; and therefore the Israelites were called the people of the Covenant, Psalm. 110.2. Esa. 2.3. Mich. 4.2. yea hence Christ is called the Minister of the Circumcision. Rom. 15.8. &c. And the Oracles of God are said to be committed unto them, Rom. 3.2. and 9.4.

Object. But it may here be objected, that Gentiles were admitted to the hearing of the word, yea and that by the precept of Christ, who commanded his Disciples (after his resurrection) to goe into all the whole world, and preach the glad tydings of his passion, and Ransome, payd for all men [n].

[n] Math. 28.19. and Mark. 16 16.

Answ. 1. First, the preaching of Christ belongs of right unto the Jewes; whence it is said, salvation is of the Iewes, (Rom. 9.4.) And that the Gentiles partake of their spirituall things, Rom. 15.27 [o].

[o] 2 Cor. 9.11.

Answ. 2. Secondly, as yet the fulnesse of time was not come, that Christ should be manifested unto the Gentiles, (Galath. 4.4.) and therefore God as yet suffered them to walke in their own waies [o].

[o] Acts. 14. 16.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the word was not preached, nor Christ proclaimed to the Gentiles, untill the Jewes were rejected, and had rejected the promulgation therof: And thence the fall of the Jewes is called the riches of the Gentiles, Rom. 9.12.25 Yea hence it is said, that it was necessary the Gospel, should be first preached unto the Jewes, Acts. 13.46. 5

Sect. 2. §. 2. Into the Cities of the Samaritans enter ye not.

Quest. 1. Why doth not our Saviour say here as before; enter not into the way of the Samaritanes, but into the City of the Samaritanes?

Answ. 1. First, perhaps it was, because the Gentiles being more remote from them, they must necessarily undertake a journey for to come unto them: And therefore our Saviour saith, Goe not into the way that leads unto the Gentiles. But the Cities of the Samaritanes were nigh at hand, wherfore he saith, enter not into them. Or Answ. 2. Secondly, perhaps it was, because he could not prohibit them the waies and pathes of the Samaritanes; Samaria being situate betwixt Iudea, and Galile, (Iohn 4.4.) Gualt. f. and Ioseph. Bel. Iud. 3.2. And therefore our Saviour saith, enter not into their Cities, and not go not into their wayes; for they could not avoid that when they went too and fro betwixt Iudea and Galile.

Quest. 2. Why doth our Saviour speak here in the singular number, εἰς πόλιν σαμαριτῶν μὴ εἰσέλθητε, enter yee not into the City of the Samaritanes?

Answ. 1. First, some thinke that here is Numerus pro numero: the singular number for the plurall.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Erasmus thinks our Saviour to speak this κατ' ἔξοχήν, as if hee would say, Enter into no one City of theirs at all.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, others say (and Erasmus doth not gainsay it) that our Saviour speaks here of Samaria it selfe.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, but there were other Cities besides this, which were possessed by the Samaritanes, as appears plainly Iohn. 4.5. And therefore the meaning plainly is this, that the Samaritans must not be taught, which Inhabited those places, which once belonged unto the ten Tribes.

Here wee may observe these few short particulars, namely;

First, that the ten Tribes were separated from the other two under Ieroboam.

Secondly, that Samaria was built by Omri, 1 King. 16.24.

Thirdly, that it was made the head of the ten Tribes.

Fourthly, that it was depopulated, and the inhabitants carried into captivity by Hoshea, 2 King. 17.

Fiftly, it was destroyed by Hircanus, and re-edified by Herod, and called Sebaste. Ioseph. 13.18.

Sixtly, who these Samaritanes were, followes by and by.

Quest. 3. Why must not the Samaritanes be taught, or preached unto? was not the promise made to the twelve Tribes?

Foure reasons may be given hereof. To wit,

I. Because they were Apostates. M.

II. Because they were odious to the Israelites. N.

III. Because they were not Jewes at all. O.

IV. Because thus the rejection of the Jewes is justified. P.

M. First, the word must not be preached unto the Samaritans, because they had relapsed, and fallen from the profession of the true Religion; and that M Answ. 1. swer. 1.

6 I. Under Ieroboam, (1 King 12. 28. &c.) and all his successours untill Hoshea. And Observ. 1 II. Being admonished by the punishment of Lions, yet they abstaine not from their Idolatry, 2 King. 17. Whence we may learne, that those who forsake Religion, shall be rejected and cast off; when the Church had married an harlot (Gomer) the issue was Lo-ruchama, and Lo-ammi, Hos. 1. The meaning is, that when any particular Church shall fall from God unto Idols, from the worship of the Everliving God, to the service of false Gods, and Idolatry; that then they shall be no longer the Lords people, nor pityed of him, or made partakers of mercy by him. We see this in Ephraim, Hos. 13. 1. and 14. 1. And in the parable of the Vineyard which must be let out unto other Husbandmen. The end of all Gods Ordinances, is to bring us unto Religion, and to make us subject therunto: For this end we were p. Tit. 2. 14. separated, p elected, called, q and created r. And q 1 Thes. 4. 8. therefore we need not go to search the secret will, and hidden decree of Gods predestination; neither must wee too much presse or inforce the r Ephes. 2. 10. words of an externall Covenant; but we must examine faithfully, whether we have addicted our selves unto Religion, or separated our selves from it.

Quest. 4. Who erre here?

Answ. 1. First, those that boast of an outward Covenant, as the Israelites did in times past; and as the Papists do now: who bragge of our Saviours words unto S. Peter, I have prayed for thee, that thy faith should not faile, Luke 22. This should remember, that the Covenants which God makes with a people or nation, are alwaies conditional, as is evident, Rom. 11. 22. yea hee will rather raise up Children to Abraham of stones, than have wicked Children, Matth. 3. For although the promises were made to Israel, yet not to Israel according to the flesh; as we see by the rejection of Ephraim, Hos. 13. and Iudah, Ezech. 16 And therefore the Church of Rome, in stead of boasting of promises which wrestedly are applyed unto them; they should examine, whether they be not separated from the true Religion? namely;

I. Whether the authority of the word of God, (with them) be whole, and sound, or corrupted rather by their false expositions, and wicked additions of Traditions, which they equall with the Scripture, and hold as available and sufficient to build an Article of faith upon, as the word?

II. They should enquire if they have not diminished, and lessened the merits of Christ, as insufficient to save us from punishment, without our own humane satisfactions.

III. They should examine, if most palpably they have not given the worship due onely unto God, to Idols; and set up the abomination of desolation in the holy place?

IV. They should marke, if they have not invented other sacrifices, besides Christ, by which they hope to be saved; as the Church treasure, and the Popes pardon, and merit of their own workes, &c.

V. They should consider if they have not diminished, and lopped off an essentiall part of a Sacrament from the Church; taking away from their Laity the Cup, although the contrary was both plainly prescribed by Christ, and practised by his Apostles. If they consider these and many more things, wherin they have degenerated from the primitive Church, they will have small cause to boast.

Secondly, they erre here, that boast of their Answ. 2. profession, and vocation, without sanctification: certainly outward things are insufficient to bring us to heaven; for therunto is available, only the application of the death of Christ, revealed to the heart by faith: But yet these things cohere and go together, as the Tree and the fruit doth. And therefore let none dreame of a vocation without sanctification; for whosoever is called, and regenerated, is sanctified, Rom. 8. 30. 2 Cor. 6. 11. Thus we have the first reason, why the Apostles must not preach to the Apostate Samaritans.

N. Secondly, the word must not be preached to N Answ. the Samaritanes, because they were odious to the 2. Israelites; according to the womans speech, The Iewes have no commerce or Communion at all with the Samaritanes, Iohn 4. And hence the Samaritanes would not receive Christ into one of their Cities, because they perceived he was going to Jerusalem, Luke 9. 53. And the Jewes thought that they could not disgrace Christ more, than by calling him a Samaritane s. So inveterate was the s Ioh. 8. 49 hatred betwixt the Jewes and the Samaritanes.

Why were the Samaritanes so odious unto the Quest. 3. Jewes.

First, because they being Gentiles, possessed Answ. 1. the inheritance of the Israelites: as appeares, 2 King. 17.

Secondly, the Jewes hated them, because they Answ. 2. were Idolaters; and that,

I. Under Ieroboam 1. King. But

II. More under Salmanasser; for he brought in amongst them, five Nations, or five severall sorts of Heathenish people, with their household, and Country Gods t, or rather seven sorts of Idola- t Ioseph ters (2 King 17.) who ceased not from their Idol- Antiq. atry, though they were extreamly punished 9. 14. with Lyons.

Thirdly, the Jewes hated the Samaritanes, be- Answ. 3. cause they were perpetuall enemies unto the Jewes, reade Ezra 41. 2. 10. Nehem. 41. &c. Yea when the Jewes were in affliction, the Samaritanes u Ioseph denied that they were Jewes, or any thing of Antiq. kinne unto them u. 9. 14. and 11. 4. 8.

Fourthly, the Samaritanes were hatefull unto Answ. 4. the Jewes, because they despised the Prophets, admitting and embracing onely the Pentateuch, or five Books of Moses, Cartouf. f. And Fiftly, because in imitation of the Jewes Tem- Answ. 5. ple in Jerusalem, the Samaritanes built one in Garizim: which was founded by Sanballat, in the time of Alexander the great, and dedicated to Iupiter the defender of strangers, 2 Macch. 6. 2. and Iosephus Antiq. 11. 7, 8. And about this the woman disputes with Christ, Iohn 4. 20. Our fathers worshipped in this mount alone, and ye say that in Ierusalem is the place where men ought to worship: Now the reason son why they thought that God was to be worshipped in this mountaine, was this, because Iacob erected there an Altar unto the Lord, (Gen. 33. 20.) And because Simeon, and Levy, and Iudah, and Issachar, and Ioseph, and Benjamin, stood upon this mountaine Gerizzim, to blesse the people when they came over Iordan, Deut. 27. 12.

Observ. 2. From the third answer we may observe, That those who are enemies to the Church of God shall be rejected: reade these places, and we shall see that God wil love those who love his Church, and hate those who hate his Church, and set himselfe against those who set themselves against his Church, Gen. 15. 14. Psalm. 129. 5. Exod. 23. 22 Deut. 33. 29. Esa. 29. 7. and 41. 11. and 60. 12. Ierem. 12. 14. Acts. 7. 7.

Quest. 6. Why will the Lord reject and destroy the enemies of his Church?

Answ. 1. First, because the Church is the Lords portion, and the lot of his inheritance: and therefore those who are enemies unto the Church, are enemies unto God. Reade Deut. 32. 9. &c. Psalm. 17. 8. Zachar. 2. 8. and 12. 2. 3. 9. and 14. 12. Iudg. 5. 31. and 2 King 19. 22. Esa. 49. 25. Ioel 3. 2. Philip. 1. 28.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is an Argument of a wicked & reprobate man to oppose the religious, or religion of Christ. Egone ausim vel joco lacessere. Augustin.

Object. 1. Against this answer, it may be objected, Saul persecuted, and opposed the Professors, and profession of religion, Act. 8. And yet he was no Reprobate.

Answer. But he repented of it, and continued not in it; and therefore was pardoned, 1 Tim. 1. 13.

Quest. 7. How are the godly, and religious opposed?

Answ. 1. First, Accusando, by accusing of them unjustly of any crime.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Deridendo, by deriding and scoffing them for their religion.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Impediendo, by hindring the progresse of Religion, and their progresse in Religion, by taking away in toto, or lessening in tanto, the preaching of the Word.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Odiendo, by hating them in heart. And thus we have the second reason, why the Apostles must not preach to the Idolatrous Samaritanes.

O Answer. 3. O. Thirdly, the word must not be preached to the Samaritanes, because they were not Iewes at all, but Gentiles; for all the Israelites were carried captive (2 King. 17. 6. 18. 20. 23.) and all the Cities were replenished with Heathens, either by Salmanassar, (2 King. 17. 24.) or by Esar Haddon, Ezra 4. 2. Against this it will be objected, that they professe themselves to be Israelites, Iohn 4. 20. yea at the least, they were mixed with Iewes: for in such cases, when they led any Cities into captivity; they were wont alwayes to leave some, and to reserve some remainders of the true Inhabitants, as Ierem. 52. 16. and 2 King. 24. 14. and 25. 12.

Object. 3.

Answ. 1. First, when all are not carried into captivity, but some are left; for the most part (if not alwaies) the Scripture doth expresse it, as Ier. 52. 16. And therefore where no such thing is expressed, we are not bound to beleeve it.

Secondly, they doe not seeme to be mixt; and that, Answ. 2.

I. Because none knew the externall worship of God, (2 King. 17. 26.) As appeares by this message sent to the King of Assyria; The nations whom thou hast removed, and placed in the Cities of Samaria, know not the manner of the God of the Land, &c. And

II. Because the King of Assyria upon this message sent one Priest unto them, to instruct them, 2 King. 17. 28.

Thirdly, their professing of themselves to be Iewes, was but hypocriticall, and counterfeit; as the Hagarens call themselves Saracens; when the State or Common-wealth of the Iewes was in prosperity, then they would be Iewes; but when the Iewes were persecuted by Antiochus Epiphanes, then they laid that they were not Iewes, but Sidonians [t]. Answ. 3. [t] Ioseph. Antiq. 9. 14. & 11. 8.

Fourthly, the Samaritane woman speakes unto Christ, according to the received manner of speech; namely, Ex professione, non origine, that they were of the seed of Iacob, or Ioseph, by profession, but not by descent and lineage. Answ. 4.

P. Fourthly the word must not be preached to the Samaritanes, because thus the following rejection of the Iewes, for the Gentiles, is justified; the Samaritanes, and Gentiles being first rejected for the Iewes. P Answ. 4.

VERS. 6. But goe rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Vers. 6.

Who were these who are here called Israelites, unto whom the Gospel must be preached? Quest. 1.

The word Israel is diversly taken; namely,

First, generally for the twelve Tribes, before Ieroboams time, Deut. 4. 20. and 9. 26. Esay 8. 14. and 43. 1. and 44. 1. Answer.

Secondly, for the ten Tribes under Ephraim and Samaria; and this is frequent with the Prophets after Ieroboams time.

Thirdly, sometimes for the people of Iudah and the two Tribes, 1 King. 12. 17. Esa. 1. 1. 3. and 4. 2. 3. and 5. 7. Zeph. 3. 14. Zach. 1. 19.

Fourthly, Israel sometimes signifies the Elect, and Predestinate nation, and people, and thus it is taken divers times in the Epistle to the Romans.

Now it is taken in this place in the third sense, for Ierusalem, Iudah, Benjamin, and the Levites there; and not in the first or second acception, because (in the former verse) they were forbidden to goe unto the Samaritanes; nor in the fourth signification of the word, because then all the Iewes should have beene permitted, and many who were elected among the Gentiles, and so Samaritans prohibited and debarred of the Word.

How can these be called Israel? For Quest. 2.

I. The name was given unto Iacob, and derived unto all the twelve Tribes. And

II. After the twelve Tribes were divided into Ten and Two; the name Israel was given to the ten; and the two Tribes, Iudah and Benjamin were called by the name of Iudah, or Iewes. And

III. There were by many more, in the ten

8 Tribes, than in the two; for as Ephraim was the greatest, so Benjamin was the least. And therefore how can the people of Iudah, the two Tribes, be called Israel?

Answ. 1. First, some in answer hereunto, fly unto the Allegoricall sense; for Israel after the flesh, (1 Cor. 10. 18.) and this is frequent in the New Testament. But this seemes not, because then all the Elect among the Samaritanes and Gentiles, should be denied the word of God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the name Israel is justly given to Iudah, in a double regard; namely,

I. Because it is the name of the Covenant; but the Covenant was made with Iudah, Zeph. 3. 15. And

II. Because the ten Tribes were carried into captivity; and if any remained, they were polluted with Idolatry among the Heathens: whence we may learne, Observ. 1. That multitude, glorious names, and titles, outward prerogatives, and privileages, doe not confirme the true Church.

First, not multitude; for evill men and Heathens may be as the sand by the Sea-shore [x].

x Rom. 9. 27.

Secondly, not glorious names and titles: for y Apoc. 2. 9. All are not Iewes that are so called [y].

Thirdly, not outward prerogation: For To the Iewes were committed the Oracles of God: and yet they were rejected at last for their disobedience, Rom. 3. 1. 2. and 9. 4. 6. and 10. 3.

Quest. 3. Why will none of these prove a true Church?

Answ. 1. First, because God judgeth us by our hearts, and inward man; and therefore no outward thing will approve us unto God, 1 Sam. 16. 8.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because all outward things are mutable; therefore none can be a marke of the true Church: The Vineyard is sometimes let out to other husbandmen.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but I may yet further answer, that Christ doth not here simply name Israel, but the house of Israel: as if our Saviour would say, whersoever they are (if so be they be but true Israelites) they belong to this house, Temple, Zion, Ierusalem. Hence observe, Observ. 2. That they are not acceptable unto God, who separate themselves from the house of God, Rom. 16. 18. Iude 19. Yea hence profession and society are joyned together, Heb. 10. 23. 25. The truth hereof more particularly appeares thus.

First, the Church is but one house, yea one body. And Secondly, Vnion and Vnity is a signe of the true Church, Act. 5. 12. 13. and 1. 14. and 2. 42. and 4. 32.

Thirdly, Vnion is a signe of our union with our head, 1 Iohn 1. 3. And therefore Christ wisheth it, and prayes for it, Iohn 17. 11. 22.

Quest. 4. How manifold is this Vnion?

Answ. Two-fold, namely:

First, generall, in profession this is mentioned, Heb. 3. 1. and 4. 14. And Secondly, particular, in the worship of the Temple: for the Lord loves publike assemblies.

Quest. 5. Who are faulty here?

Answ. 1. First, those who separate themselves from the Church: Certainely these were alwayes odious, that is, Donatists, Circumcellions, Separatists, and the like.

Quest. 6. Is all kind of separation evill, and to be avoyded?

Answ. 1. First, wicked men must be severed from the assemblies of the Saints, Ier. 15. 19. Ephes. 5. 7. 11.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee must goe out from among wicked Idolaters, Esay 52. 11. and 2 Corinth. 6. 14. 17. and Revel. 18. 4. And this is blessed, Luke 6. 22.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but we must not separate our selves from the Church of God; for although we are separated, Tim. 2. 14. yet it is, not from, but into the society of the Church, 1 Pet. 2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who refuse the holy worship of the Temple, and publike assemblies: let those who neglect the Congregation of God, and his publike service, and thinke they can serve him as well at home, reade considerately these places, Psal. 68. 26. and 96. 6. & 100. 4. & 111. 1. & 122. 1. and Act. 2. 46. and 1 Corinth. 11. 18. and 14. 34.

Quest. 7. Why were the Apostles sent unto Israel to preach the Gospel?

Answ. 1. First, because Christ would have it so; or that he might shew that he is obliged unto none, but will have mercy upon whom he will have mercy, Rom. 9. Whence we may learne, Observ. That God directs, and sends his Ministers Ad placitum, whither he himselfe lists, Act. 14. 2. and 16. 6. And the reason hereof is, because by sinne, death is due unto all, and pardon or mercy unto none, except it be of meere grace and favour: Now the preaching, and Ministery of the Word is the way unto salvation; and therefore God gives it (and justly may) to whom he pleases.

Quest. 8. What is here required of all men?

Answ. 1. First, those unto whom God hath not sent the Word, must acknowledge & see Gods correcting hand upon them (it being a signe of anger, yea a great plague, to be deprived of the preaching of the Word) then they must hunger after it, and seeke it, and turne unto the Lord, and pray, feed us oh Lord.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who through Gods mercy enjoy the Word, must

I. Confesse and acknowledge the great goodnesse of God, in sending it unto them. And

II. They must remember, that they are to give an account for the Word, which they are made partakers of; for God expects fruit from such: & woe be to those who frustrate his expectation, Heb. 6. 7. &c. And therefore such must examine,

First, If they deride, and mocke the Word which is sent unto them, Act. 19. 9. Or Secondly, If they kill, and persecute the Preachers of the Word. Or Thirdly, if they be hardned, obstinate, and rebellious, refusing to heare, Rom. 10. 20. Or Fourthly, if the Word heard, be not mixed with faith, Heb. 4. 2. Or Fiftly, if they begin in the Spirit, but end in the flesh, Gal. 3. 3. Certainely heavie is the account which those have to make, which shew forth no other fruit of Preaching than these.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Apostles must goe now only to the lost sheepe of the house of Israel, that the mouthes of the Jewes might be stopped, or that they they might have no exception against him, saying, He sent his Disciples to the Gentiles and Samaritans, who were thought by the Jews, to be most vile. Hier. ſ.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ sends his Apostles to the house of Israel, that he might thereby shew that he was not angry, although they had despised him: Ergo leni phrasi demulcet: Oves (non sponte errantes sed) seductos- periturosq; &c. And hence he calleth them Sheep, but not such as wilfully wander; but such as are seduced, and led aside, and ready to perish.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the Apostles were sent to the Israelites, that Christ their Master might first exercise them in Judea, as in Palustra, that they might afterwards be more fit to indure the lists of all nations. Chrysſt. ſ. hom. 33. And Answ. 5. Fifthly, because the Law ought to have this privilege, to enjoy the first preaching of the Gospel; and hereby the sinne of the Jews was made the more inexcusable, in that they were with more diligence instructed; who notwithstanding, received not the Gospel: when as the Gentiles, towards whom lesse diligence was used, received it. Hilar. ſ.

Answ. 6. Sixtly, Christ sends his Apostles to Israel, because he was sent to be the Minister of the Circumcision, and to fulfill the promises made to the Fathers; he therefore at the first, held the Gospel within the bounds of the Elect nation; intending afterwards, when the time should be fit, to publish it to all. Calv. ſ.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, the moving, or efficient cause of this, was, because Israel was the Nation of the Covenant, (Acts 3. 25.) to whom the promises were made, (Iohn 4. 22. Acts 13. 26. Rom. 9. 4.) And as yet the Kingdome of Heaven (as Ambrose sings in his Te Deum) was not opened to the Gentiles; neither was to be opened, untill Christ pronounced Conſummatum eſt, It is finished; for the Gospel was to be published to the Gentiles, when the partition wall should be broken downe, which yet stood betwixt the Jew and Gentile; the breaking downe of which partition, was signified, when the vail of the Temple was rent asunder at the time of Christs passion. Thus this gate of the Kingdome of Heaven was opened unto the Gentiles, two manner of wayes; namely,

I. By the Resurrection of Christ. Calvin ſ. Iob. 4. 4. & Ambroſ. ſ. Mortuus reſurrexit.

II. By the obduration of the Jewes, Romans 11. And therefore it was necessary (saith Saint Paul) that the Word of God should first be preached to the Jewes; and when they would not receive it, then to offer it to the Gentiles, Act. 13. 46.

Queſt. 3. What if the Jewes should have admitted, and received the Word, should Salvation then have beene denied unto the Gentiles?

Answer. No: for if the Jews had but begun to convert unto Christ, they should then have been as Jesus (Mat. 13. 33.) and as a holy lump, (Rom. 11. 16.) And would certainly have endeavoured to doe, as Christs commands Peter, namely, being converted, to convert their Brethren, (Luke 22.) the Gentiles.

VERS. 7. And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdome of heaven is at hand. 9

Verſe 7. Sect. 1.

S. 1. And as ye go.

From these words many things are by many collected; namely,

First, some collect hence the office of an Evangelist, or Preacher of the Gospel, to wit, to go from place to place, and not to remain or abide alwayes in one place, as we now do.

Secondly, others denie this, and that for these reasons, viz.

I. Because the Churches are every where now established: and therefore it becomes not us (like begging Friers) to go preaching up and downe.

II. Because this (to go from place to place) is the worke and office of an Apostle, and not of an ordinary preacher of the Gospel.

III. Because it is unworthy the office, and place of a preacher of the Gospel, to go up and downe begging for his meat, as the Mendicants do.

IV. Because Ministers must expect a command, or calling, sending, or at least a permission from that Church wherein they live.

Thirdly, from these words (as ye go) we may rather collect, That the preaching of the word, is not to be limited to a few places, but to be extended unto all, Mark 1. 38. This was the fire that Christ came to kindle, Luke 12. 49. And this was meat and drinke unto him, to preach, publish, and propagate the Gospel, Iohn 4. 34. Obſerv.

What is here required of Ministers? Queſt:

To snatch, and lay hold upon every occasion, of preaching the word every where. Whether Anſw.

First, our Church should send us to preach and plant the word in some forreigne place of heathenisme: as they did, Acts 13. 3, &c. Certainly if Rome had not caused a corrupt Religion to have been preached in India, she had deserved praise for sending preachers thither. Or

Secondly, whether the reverend Prelates should allow Sermons upon the weeke-dayes (as hath been in divers Shires, principally in Yorkshire, in the time of that famous Prelate, Bishop Mathew) at those Churches which have no setled preachers. Or

Thirdly, whether occasion extraordinarily offer it selfe? Now in all these cases we must willingly and readily offer our selves to preach and promulgate the Gospel: If our Church would send us abroad, we must go; If our Prelates would permit us to preach to those upon the weeke-day, who have no preaching upon the Lords day, (nor unto whom we can then preach in regard of our owne particular charges) wee should not be backward, but every one in his course helpfull, and ready to uphold and further it. If we should be intreated (when we are provided, and not employed) either by a Pastour, or his people, to preach, we should not lightly refuse it: If any extraordinary occasion should invite us to preach, we should not decline, but embrace it: That is, if a Minister should come to a setled congregation upon the occasion of some 10 Baptizing, or Marriage, or Buriall, or Faire, or the like; if he were provided, and permitted, it were Chriſtian-like done to preach: For when Chriſt ſaw a multitude, he began to preach, Mat. 5. 1. upon which words Muſculus obſerves, Quando datur frequens congregatio excitantur Miniſtri ad concionandum. And thus Peter, Acts 3. and Paul, Acts 17. take occaſion to Preach Chriſt.

Baptizing,

Certainly, if

Firſt the obedience of the Church be obſerved, that we have a commiſſion, or at leaſt a permiſſion to Preach from the Church wherein we live. And

Secondly, if the rule of decencie be obſerved. And

Thirdly, if ſcandals, and giving of juſt offences be avoided: Then the word may be preached alwayes, and every where, in ſeaſon, and out of ſeaſon, 2 Tim. 4. 2. both becauſe it is the word of God, and ſeed of ſalvation; and alſo becauſe herein we imitate our Lord Chriſt.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Preach.

Wee ſee here that loſt and wandering ſheepe muſt be reduced, and brought home againe: and that by the Preaching of the word, to teach us,

Obſerv. That the meanes of bringing us home unto Chriſt, is the preaching of the word: the truth hereof in generall appeares by theſe places, Rom. 1. 16. and 16, 25. and 1 Corinth. 1. 18. 21. Titus 1. 3. But more plainely by theſe particulars, namely;

Firſt, becauſe as God gave his word, ſo hee gave alſo Preaching (Rom. 10. 8 and 1 Pet. 1. 25.) and Preachers, Epheſ. 4. 11.

Secondly, becauſe God forbids thoſe to Preach, who are not ſent, Rom. 10. 15, &c. or not called, as Aaron was, Hebr. 7.

Thirdly, becauſe God bleſſeth, and aſſiſteth thoſe whom he calls, and ſends: that is,

I. He enables them by his grace in ſome meaſure, for that great calling; making them able Miniſters, 2 Cor. 3. 6. and 4. 6. And

II. He bleſſeth their labours with good ſucceſſe, making them profitable, and powerfull, for the reducing of loſt ſheepe unto Chriſt, Acts 2. 47. Romanes 15. 29. and 1 Corinth. 3. 6, &c. 2 Tim. 4. 17.

[b] Acts 2. 41. and 4. 4. and 8 6. 35, &c. and 10. 34 &c. and 11 Acts 16. 6. and 19. 9. 19. 20. 26. and 13. 43 &c. and 17 11.

Fourthly, becauſe where hee will not have thoſe who go aſtray, to be reduced, and brought backe, there he denies the word, Amos 8. 11, &c. Acts 16. 6. and 19. 9. Fiftly, becauſe ſtill thoſe who are converted, are converted by Preaching. Reade the places in the margent [b].

Object. But it may here be objected, This is but a temporall precept to preach the word: and therefore it is not the meanes now of bringing us home unto Chriſt.

Anſwer. I denie the antecedent: becauſe it is not a temporall precept, but an eternall, continuing from the beginning to the ending: as may bee thus proved.

Firſt, God himſelfe preached divers waies, and after manners, unto Adam, Abraham, and Jacob, Heb. 1. 1.

Secondly, God hath enjoyned, and commanded the Prophets to preach unto his people, Eſa. 40. 9. yea to lift up their voyces, and reprove them, Eſa. 58. 1.

Thirdly, the Lord ſanctified Iohn Baptiſt in the wombe, for this end, that by preaching he might bring many children unto their fathers, Mal. 4. Luk. 4. Matth. 3. 1. &c.

Fourthly, Chriſt himſelfe preacheth, yea ſpends his time wholly in preaching and working of miracles, Matth. 4. 17. and 9. 35. and 11. 1. Epheſ. 2. 17.

Fiftly, here he commands his Apoſtles to preach to the Iewes, and the loſt ſheep of Iſrael.

Sixtly, afterwards he makes this precept concerning preaching, generall for all people, Matth. 28. 20. Go and teach all nations; and promiſeth to be with them, and to aſſiſt them, Mark 16. 16.

Seventhly, and to the Churches which are eſtabliſhed, he hath given Paſtours and Teachers, Epheſ. 4. 11. unto whom he hath committed the care of his flock, Acts 20. 28.

Eightly, yea this he hath ordained untill the end of the world (Epheſ. 4. 13. &c.) and his ſecond comming, 1. Tim.

Who are here to blame? Queſt. 1.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, thoſe Paſtours who being called unto this worke, are negligent therein, not caring how ſeldome they preach: Saint Paul enforced himſelfe to preach, and did ſtrive therein, (Rom. 15. 20.) becauſe he knew that a woe belonged unto him if he did not preach, 1 Corinthians 9. 15.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, thoſe are here faulty who neglect, and deſpiſe the word preached: whether it be

I. Through tediouſneſſe, and wearieſomneſſe: this is ſo common, as nothing more; men uſually are ſo weary of the word, that they ſlight and contemne it, Amos 8. 11. Or

II. Through an opinion of another Spirit: or as though the Spirit of God would teach them without the word. Indeed it is ſaid, that the faithfull under the Goſpel ſhall be taught of God, Ierem. 31. 32. but this is by his word, and the preaching thereof, as was ſhewed in the proofe of the point. Or

III. Through curioſitie; except the word preached be ſweetned: Here

Firſt, hearers are to blame, who having itching eares, deſpiſe ſound doctrine, loving, and liking onely quaint, and rhetoricall, and humane learning.

Secondly, ſpeakers, who vaunt themſelves, or ſeeke onely for praiſe, and applauſe, by their acute, neat, and eloquent diſcourſes? Not like Paul, who deſired onely to preach in the demonſtration of the Spirit: Nor like Peters preacher, who muſt ſpeake as the Oracles of God, yea ſo as that God in all things may be glorified through Ieſus Chriſt [c]. [c] 1 Pet. 4. 11.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, they are very faulty here, who hinder the preaching of the word: the more carefull we are to promote Preaching, the liker we are unto Chriſt: and the more we oppoſe or hinder it, the more unlike, yea contrary we are unto him: This was the fault of the Iewes continually, nually, Matth. 23. 13. and Acts 14. For they ſtill withſtood, and hindered the word of God, and the preaching of Chriſt: And this is too great a fault now in our dayes, and places: For

I. Some diſſwade others from the preaching of the word: as the Papiſts, and Seminaries do.

II. Some forbid others the preaching of the word: Now theſe are either maſters of families who will never, or very ſeldome ſuffer their ſervants to come to Divine Service, or Sermons: or elſe idle Miniſters, and dumbe dogs, who neither will, or can teach their people themſelves, nor ſuffer them to go where they may be taught: This is as much as in them lies, to hinder them from converſion, Chriſt, and ſalvation.

III. Some calumniate, detract, and ſlander the godly Miniſters of the word, that ſo their mouthes may be ſtopped, and they hindered from preaching.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, they are to blame here, who make other uſe of the word preached, then this, that they may be converted thereby: Certainly we are loſt, and wandring ſheep, untill we be reduced unto Chriſt; and therefore although it be a good thing for a people to have a faithfull, and carefull Paſtour; yet it is unprofitable unto them, ſo long as they are not brought home by him, unto the Shepherd of their ſoules, Iere. 51. 9. Luke 5. 5.

Queſt. 2. What is meant by this word, preach?

Anſwer. It ſignifies to publiſh, and proclaime: to teach them,

First, that preaching is a worke publikely to be performed. And Obſerv. Secondly, that in preaching, they muſt rather teach then perſwade: Or

That the chiefeſt office, duty, and worke of a Miniſter, is publikely to teach his people the Chriſtian faith: here two things might be diſtinguiſhed, namely;

First, Quomodo docendum? how muſt they teach? they muſt teach them publikely; not ſecretly, [d] Iohn 18. 20. [d] but on the houſe tops, Matth. 10. 27.

Secondly, Quid docendum? what muſt they teach? they muſt teach the doctrine of faith, and the myſterie of the Goſpel, Rom. 6. 25. For thus did the Apoſtles, Acts. 2. 29, &c. 3. 13, &c. and 8. 5. 35. and 10. 36, &c. and 4. 10, &c. For herein is perfected, and performed the promiſe of God, that the world ſhould be enlightened by the preaching of Chriſt, Luke 2. 32. Rom. 10. 18, &c. And hence ſalvation is called knowledge, Iohn 17. 3.

Queſt. 3. Is nothing elſe required of Miniſters, but only to teach publikely?

Anſw. Certainly many other things are required of Miniſters beſides this: to wit,

First, ſome private duties, namely,

I. To watch, attend, and be carefull over their flocks, Acts 20. 28. Hebr. 13. 17.

II. To admoniſh them lovingly alone, 1 Theſſ. 2. 11.

III. To reduce and bring home thoſe who erre and go aſtray: For although to admoniſh an offender, and to labour to reclaime him, be a Chriſtian office, generall, and common to all Chriſtians (as appeares by theſe places, Coloſſ. 3. 16. and 1 Theſſ. 5. 14. Heb. 3. 13. and 10. 24.) yet the Miniſters are principally, and more particularly obliged and tied hereunto, 1 Theſſ. 5. 12. 11

Secondly, ſome publike duties there are alſo required of Miniſters, beſide publike preaching; namely,

I. To pray for them, Act. 6. 4. And

II. To adminiſter the Sacraments unto them, Matth. 28. 20. And

III. To reconcile, and make up breaches, betweene thoſe of their flocke: and to labour to compoſe jarres, and to quench all ſparkes of griefe. And

IV. To confute thoſe errours, and falſe opinions, which their people hold.

V. To uſe the power of the Keyes, whether unto binding, or looſing, as juſt occaſion offereth it ſelfe. But

VI. Chiefly Miniſters muſt exhort, 2 Tim. 4. 2. and publikely admoniſh, 2 Pet. 1. 12. &c. and 3. 1. And therefore often, to Doctrine is added Exhortation, (Act. 2. 38. 40. and 3. 19.) But the Principalleſt of the two is the declaration of the myſterie of Chriſt, and godlineſſe, 1 Tim. 3. 16.

Queſt. 4. Who are here to blame?

Anſw. 1. First, thoſe who neglect the preaching of the Word, and publike aſſemblies; what promiſe can they cleave unto, who deſpiſe the preaching of the Word? that being by the Divine Ordinance of God the meanes whereby wee muſt be taught and inſtructed, in the knowledge of the truth.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, they are faultie here, who excite, and ſtirre up the affections without knowledge; for hence came zeale without knowledge; therefore Saint Paul labours, that the Coloſians may be firſt rooted, grounded, and eſtabliſhed in the faith, Coloſ. 1. 9. 10. and 3. 16. I will not here diſpute, whether the Iudgement ſhould firſt be enformed, or the affections awakened? For certainely, as faith and Repentance doe mutually beget one another, and are reciprocally begotten; ſo doth knowledge and affection: And yet there is a ſort of knowledge, which ſeemes to be firſt; becauſe Ignoti nulla cupido, a man cannot love that which hee knowes not: And againe, the affection being inflamed, kindled, and excited, doth draw us to a more ſublime, and inward knowledge.

VERS. 8. Heale the ſicke, cleanſe the Lepers, raiſe the dead, caſt out Devils: Freely ye have received, freely give. Verſe 8.

§. 1. Cleanſe the Leper. Sect. 1

Queſt. Why is the Leper here ſeparated from the ſick? or particularly named, and not generally included under theſe words, Heale the ſicke?

Anſw. 1. First, this was not becauſe the Leproſie was an incurable diſeaſe; for there are many other diſeaſes (in nature) incureable; or at leaſt, for the moſt part, which are not here particularized, but implied under this Word Sicke. Yea, the Leproſie it ſelfe was not incureable.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, but Sickneſſe and Leproſie are here ſepara-

12 ſeparated, becauſe they differ in ſignification: For

I. Sickneſſes ſignifie the weakneſſe of the mind, and the want of health in the heart. But

II. Leproſie is condemned as an impure thing, by God; and therefore ſuch muſt be extruded out of the Congregation of the faithfull: And therefore it is ſaid here, Cleanſe the Leper: but Heale the ſicke; to teach us; that,

First, in ſickneſſe wee receive ſtrength from God, and are freed from the weakneſſe and infirmities of the ſoule; and corroborated, both in our underſtanding, affection, and obedience. And

Secondly, that in Leproſie, we are received, and reſtored unto the love of God, and the aſſemblies of the Saints.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Freely yee have received.

Our Saviour here commands them to give freely, becauſe he hath ſent them, and given power unto them freely; imitating herein Kings, who are wont to adorne their Embaſſadors, and Embaſſages, for the praiſe of their owne munificence, and bountie: For Chriſt,

First, in his Legates, ſhewes his munificence; and that thus, viz.

I. He doth not adorne or honour them with nobility of ſtocke, or rich attire, or precious ſtones, or ſend them in Chariots, bravely accompanied, and attended upon; becauſe his kingdome was not of this world, Iohn 18. And therefore his chiefe Embaſſadors, Iohn and Peter had no no gold to give the poore man, (Act. 3.) ſo poore were they themſelves. But,

II. He ſends them adorned with the power of Miracles, enabling them to do thoſe things, which no other could doe, Luke 10.17. and Act. 3.

Secondly, Chriſt ſhewes his glory, and bounty in his Embaſſage; for,

I. By his Embaſſadors, hee offers great gifts unto all; namely,

First, temporall, and ſpirituall health; he offers to diſpoſſeſſe, heale, cure, recover, and reſtore the dead unto life: Kings are wont to caſt money abroad among the poore: but what Monarch can heale the ſicke? or cleanſe the Leper, or raiſe the dead, or caſt out devils, as Chriſt here gives his legates power to doe?

Secondly, but all this, and more than theſe, are nothing in compariſon of that kingdome of heaven, and eternall felicity, which hee offers in the life to come; for gold is corruptible, but this joy e 1 Pet. 1. 24. is perpetuall, and endures for ever e.

II. Theſe great gifts, Chriſt by his Embaſſadors offers to give freely, if wee will but come unto him: How great, and immenſe therefore are the riches of God? Epheſ. 1.18.

Chriſt by theſe words, Quia accepiſtis, becauſe ye have received, would teach us,

Obſerv. That we have no good thing of our ſelves; but whatſoever good thing is in us, we have received it from God, who is the Fountaine of all good, Iames 1.17.

Queſt. 1. How doth this appeare?

Anſwer. Thus; whatſoever thing we have, either

First, it comes aliunde, from ſome other; and therefore from God, who is the Author, and giver of every good thing; the cattle on a thouſand hils, being his, (Pſalme 50.) yea, hee giving and governing our nature ſo, that in him we live, and move, and have our being, Act. 17.28. Or

Secondly, it is in our ſelves; and is either

I. Evill in it ſelfe, as the concupiſcence of the heart, Geneſ. 8.21. Or

II. At leaſt good, but corrupted; like wine in a poyſoned cup. And therefore it is cleare, that theſe good things which wee have, comes from God.

Who are here to be taxed? Queſt. 2.

First, thoſe who expect heaven, and hope for happineſſe, although they have received as yet no gift of grace from God, Rom. 5.5. Anſw. 1

Secondly, thoſe are egregiouſly faulty, who waxe proud of the things they have received; whether they be, Anſw. 2

I. Temporall, as riches, honour, knowledge, and the like: Or

II. Spirituall, as grace, faith, ſanctity; and herein the Papiſts faile: For

First, none prohibits men to labour and endeavour, after a greater meaſure of ſanctification: for this is commanded poſitively by Saint Paul, Phil. 4.8. Nor

Secondly, is it forbidden men to rejoyce, in the teſtimony and evidence of the holy Ghoſt in their ſoule: But only

Thirdly, we are forbidden to aſcribe that to our merit, or to boaſt of that, which we have received: What haſt thou (ſaith the Apoſtle) which thou haſt not received: and if thou have received it, why doſt thou boaſt as though thou hadſt not received it?

Why doth God give good things unto us? Queſt. 3.

Not to hide in a Napkin, but to improve, and to make good uſe of: as for example, Anſw.

First, doth God give us riches, and poſſeſſions? then we muſt be liberall, bountifull, and free unto every good worke.

Secondly, hath the Lord raiſed us to dignities, and honours? then we muſt uſe our countenance, friends, and place for the good, and patronage of the profeſſion, and Profeſſors of the Goſpel.

Thirdly, hath the Lord endued us with prudence and wiſedome? then wee might counſell, adviſe, and inſtruct others; ſo helping thoſe who are weake in underſtanding, knowledge, policie, and the like.

Fourthly, hath the Lord inriched us with Religion? then we muſt ſo ſhine before others, that by our light of a holy life, they might bee f 1 Pet. 2.12 and 3.1. brought out of darkeneſſe, Mat. 5.16. f.

Fiftly, if the Lord hath beſtowed upon us Confidence, Boldneſſe, and magnanimity; wee muſt not uſe it (as many doe) for our owne revenge, or only in our owne private affaires; but alſo, and eſpecially, for our brethren, or the publike good.

How did the Apoſtles receive Gratis, Freely? Queſt. 4. Freely yee have received.

First, in reſpect of the gifts; becauſe they could not buy them, neither had any right at all unto them. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, in reſpect of the price: becauſe the Apoſtles gave nothing for them. Anſw. 2

Thirdly,

Thirdly, in respect of the persons; because the Apostles were no better then others; yea rather of the most abject sort, 1 *Cor.*4.9. Whence we might observe;

Observ. That all the gifts of God are free: This thus appeares.

First, otherwise grace were no more grace, *Rom.*11.6. Yea,

Secondly, otherwise God should not bee the only Fountaine of good; for all merit is good; and therefore if merit came not from God, hee should not be the only Fountaine of all good.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Freely give.

Quest. 1. What is meant here by Gratis, Freely?

Answ. It is taken here Adverbiè non Adjectivè, and signifies two things, namely,

First, that they must doe the worke for which they are sent cheerfully, and with alacrity; labouring in season, and out of season, 2 *Tim.*4.2

Secondly, that they must do their worke without any price, or compact: Whence wee may learne, Observ. That things freely given, should be freely bestowed, 2 *Cor.*11.7. and 1 Cor 9.15.18. &c.

Quest. 2. Why must we freely give, what we have freely received?

Answ. 1. First, because the name imports it; these free gifts are called Charismata, and therefore they must not be, bought and sold: That which belongs unto Gods house must be free; because his house must not be made a house of Merchandize, Iohn 2.16. *Zachar.*14.21.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because a price will blind the eyes, and quickly mislead a man: Although spirituall dignities should not be bought and sold; yet it is too ordinary: One askes what difference there is Inter Patronum & Latronem, betwixt a Patron of a Living, and a Thiefe? For they both often steale mens money out of their purses; and many Patrons dispose of their livings to them who will best reward them, or to some unworthy friend or Kinsman. These are theeves to the Church of Christ.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because if a Patron give a Living to an honest man, but yet for money he is a thiefe; because hee enricheth himselfe by that which is not his. For a Patron is but a Surety, or Feoffee in trust (not an Vsurer) of a Living, or Gods Almoner or Treasurer, betrusted to see the place well supplied, for the glory of God, and his peoples gaine, and not for their owne base lucre.

But because some may thinke Simony a stranger to this place, therefore I doe not enlarge it.

Quest. 3. How farre, and wherein doth this precept oblige us, Freely give, because yee have freely received.

Answ. 1. First, some by this Command take away from the Ministerie all Stipends, affirming that they must live in a voluntary povertie, and of meere almes: And not only the Monkes thinke thus, but also many godly persons; for it was the common opinion of the Albigenses, and of those faithfull Martyrs, Fryth, Tyndall, and Barnes; who were deceived with a temporall precept, as followes by and by.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if our Saviour speake here of preaching the Word, then it is but a temporall Precept, and is not to be extended to all times. And that, 13

I. Because S. Paul himselfe urgeth Stipends, and that by divers strong and convincing reasons.

II. Because Christ himselfe seemes to revoke this Precept; when he said, But now he who hath a Purse, let him take it, and likewise his Scrip, Luk. 22.36.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if our Saviour speake of preaching, then, although the Precept be but temporall, yet there is a perpetuall morality to be acknowledged herein, viz.

I. That we preach the Word cheerfully, and willingly: And

II. That wee bee contented with necessary things, not seeking for great things: yet in the meane time wee are not prohibited to live upon the Altar, 1 *Corinth.*9.14. Idque honestè non sordidè. Bucer. And hence the Tithes were consecrated and set apart for the Priests, both before the Law, and now after the Law, &c.

b Vide Carletonum & Tillesleyum.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, but certainely this charge was given concerning Miracles, and the power of healing, and of casting out devils, and the like; because these were not wrought by their owne power, but by the power of God; and therefore they must not sell them; nor as Physicians and Chirurgeons now doe (and justly may doe) bargaine, and contract for such a summe, for the healing of such a sickenesse, or for cleansing a Leper, or for raising one dead unto life, or for dispossessing some possessed with a devill: This power they have freely received, and therefore they must freely give; and this is the true sense and meaning of these words; namely, That those Miracles, which they worke in the name of Christ, they must doe Gratis, not seeking their owne gaine and lucre in them.

Quest. 4. Why must they worke Miracles freely? or why may they not take money for doing them?

Answ. 1. First, the Text saith, because they have received this power freely; if by long study they had found out the nature of hearbs, plants, roots, and second causes, and by those have cured or healed; or if healing by meanes their physicke had cost them ought, then they might have taken money for their cures; but seeing neither their skill cost them study, nor their meanes of healing money: therefore they must give, and doe these freely.

Answ. 2. Secondly, whether it was lawfull for them to take any gratuity for healing, or not, I confesse I am not able to decide: This I know was unlawfull, namely,

I. In healing to aime at their owne gaine and profit. And

II. To covenant for such a summe for such a cure. But

III. Whether here they were forbidden to take any gratuity, which was neither thought of, nor contracted for on their parts, but freely offered, and given by the partie, or friends of the partie cured; I confesse my selfe unable to determine. Indeed, I doe not thinke that ever the Master took any recompense for any of his cures: nor doe I reade that the Apostles did for any of theirs, and 14 I know how Elias refused to take such a gratuity from Naaman: and therefore I leave this to the intelligent Readers opinion, to conceit of as he findes most ground for.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the reasons why they must not contract for any thing for working any miracles, but doe them freely, are these; namely, I. Because spirituall things cannot be equalled to any terrene price, and therefore they are not to bee sold. Simon Magus would have given money for this power; that upon whom soever he should have laid his hands they might have received the gifts and graces of the holy Ghost: but Peter rejects him, and sharpely reproves him for it, because it is a work more worth then all the money in the world. II. That onely is to be sold, whereof a man is master; but the Apostles were not lords and masters of these gifts, but onely dispensers[h]. And therefore it were unjust to seek gaine by that which is not their owne. III. In bestowing of these graces they must carefully avoid, shunne, and abstaine from gifts, lest the grace of God in them should have been vilified: For by the free magnificence of God who freely gives such power unto his servants, and by the contempt of riches, and gifts in the dispensers of these graces, men will be the more provoked to admire those charismata, and graces, which are given, and to glorifie God the free giver of them, and to beleeve that doctrine which is sent from such a Lord, and brought by such servants. Men usually are wont lesse to admire, or esteeme those things which they know how to esteeme: and therefore the Apostles must freely give them, because people should the more highly prize them; and see and acknowledge, that no price was able to purchase and procure them.

[h] 1 Cor. 4. 1.

Verse 9, 10. VERS. 9. 10. Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brasse in your purses; nor scrip for your journey, neither two coates, nor shooes, nor yet staves: for the workman is worthy of his meat.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Provide neither gold, nor silver, &c.

Quest. What is meant by this word, Provide?

Answ. 1 First, the old Interpreter renders it, Ne possidete, possesse not; but this is improper: For 1. The word here used κτήσησθε, signifies both, but more commonly to provide, procure, or get. It

[i] Olynth. 2 is easier (saith [i] Demosthenes) φυλάττειν, to keep those things which thou hast then κτᾶσθαι, to procure those things which thou hast not: and hence Aristotle calleth those Arts whereby men provide and procure food, Artes κτητικὰς. 2. Our Saviour doth not here command a long custome, but an action, or a law, which is by and by to be revoked and repealed, Luke 22. 35. And therefore the word is unfitly rendred by the vulgar translation, Possessе not.

Answ. 2 Secondly, the word is here to be understood, either 1. De non possidendo, of not possessing gold, silver, &c. As the Votaries, and Franciscanes corruptly would have it. Or 2. De non accipiendo, of not receiving gold, silver, &c. of their hearers; lest they should seem to preach for their owne gaines sake, and not for Gods glory, or the salvation of his people[k]. Nin dicas ne accipiamus vobiscum, sed ne possideamus (alienum) Chrys. Or 3. De non portando, of not carrying about with them these prohibited things. And this I thinke to be the true meaning of the place. For, first it is most like that the Apostles themselves now had no money about them, neither used to carry any; because Christ bought and procured all things needfull for them all; and Iudas carried the bag, and Peter had not Didrachmum (which is not above a shilling at the most in our money) to pay Tribute withall. Secondly, our Saviour forbids them to goe home, to their owne houses to provide these things; for although they have them not now, yet they shall be supplied when they want. For the workman is worthy of his hire, Luke 17. 31.

[k] Hier. ſ.

§. 2. Neither gold, nor silver, nor brasse, nor scrip, nor coates, nor shooes, nor staves.] Our Saviour seemes heere to answer an objection which they might make: If we must give freely, then (might they say) we must provide money, and garments, and purses, for our selves; otherwise we shall bee destitute. Sect. 2. Object.

To this Christ answers no: for I doe not bid you to give freely to others, that you may burden and overcharge your selves; but because you shall be freely provided for by others, therefore carry not these things about with you, neither goe home to make ready for your selves, or journey. Answer.

Chrysostome observes here the order observed by Christ: he doth not first say carry nothing with you, but first gives them power to worke miracles: and then afterwards bids them not to be carefull for their journey; he gives unto them, before he will burden them, that so they may the more confidently, and assuredly, hope, and trust to be provided for.

How many sorts of money are there, that our Saviour forbids to provide gold, silver, brasse? Quest. 1.

There are divers sorts of money, which are differenced two manner of wayes; namely, First in regard of time: thus money first was made of Lether, and of brasse, and of iron, (and ἀργύριον signifies any of these) then secondly of silver, and thirdly, of gold. Ita crescunt nummi decrescunt mores: as money increased, manners decreased. Aetas Saturnia, aurea, Iovialis, argentea, Nostra ferrea: Saturne lived in a golden age, Iupiter in a silver, but we in an iron age: thus resembling Daniels Image, Dan. 2. 32. Secondly, money is differenced in regard of its estimation: for in one and the same time there was a double use of money; namely, 1. Ad divitias, a man was esteemed rich who abounded in gold, silver, and jewels; and the estimation they had of these long before the incarnation of Christ, yea even in the times of Moses, Abraham, Iacob, and David. 2. Ad emptiones quotidianas, for the buying of necessarie, and daily provision, brasse, and iron money was sufficient: And thus in our dayes, gold and silver are prized, and yet copper farthings are currant, for small things. Now our Saviour heere forbids Answer.

both

both these, that the Apostles might learne to depend upon the providence of God, even for necessary things, and not caring for the morrow.

Quest. 2. What doth our Saviour here meane by a Scrip? or why doth he prohibit the carrying of one?

Answ. Our Saviour hereby doth taxe the Philosophers, or at least shewes that his Apostles must not be like unto them, for they carryed scrips about them: hence Bias saith (Omnia mea mecum porto) that hee carried all his riches about him. The Philosophers who contemned all worldly things, yet had necessary things in a scrip, as have also the Hermits, and Franciscanes. David had a scrip when he was a sheepherd [l], and it seemes that they used of old to carry corne in scrips [m].

[l] 1 Sam. 17. 4. [m] 2 King. 4. 42.

But this our Saviour prohibits his Apostles, because they must not care at all for to morrow, but rely and depend upon God even for necessary things.

Quest. 3. How doth these words Nor shooes, agree with Marke 6. 7, 8. where it is said bee shod with Sandals?

Answ. 1. First, some answer here by putting a difference between shooes and sandals, but I omit this.

Answ. 2 Secondly, these places differ in the word Two, for the words here may be read thus, yee shall not carry two coates, nor two (that is, two paire of) shooes: in Saint Mark it is spoken plainly of what they weare onely.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, these places differ in the word, Provide; for the meaning here of our Saviour is this, take what shooes ye have, along with you, but take no care (as Travellers are wont) to provide better: And hereby also he would have them to depend upon the providence of God.

Quest. 4. How doth these words Nor a staffe, agree with Mark 6. 7. where plainly he permits one?

Answ. 1. First, Baculus a Baccho, because drunken men used to stay themselves by sticks.

Answ. 2. Secondly, there are two sorts of staves; namely, I. Ad sustentandum, for the supporting and staying of him who carried it: Thus Iacob had a staffe, Gen. 32. and Elisha, 2 Kings 4. and Moses, Exod. 4. to stay themselves upon, and to ease them in their journeys. This staffe is called sometimes Virga, and sometimes Baculus (from whence he who used such an one was called Imbecillis, quasi invitus baculo) and this kind of staff was frequently used, and is by S. Mark permitted, because it was a symball of poverty. Reade for this purpose these places, Exod. 12. 11. and 21. 19. and 2 Kings 18. 21. Zach. 8. 4. II. Ad propugnandum, there were staves for defence, wherewith men did fight; and the Traveller defend himself from those who offered any injurie unto him: For the proofe of this warlike staffe, reade these places, 1. Sam. 17. 40. 43. Psalm. 23. 4. Esa. 10. 24. and 14. 5. Ierem. 48. 17. Ezech. 39. 9. Hos. 4. 12. Now this staffe is here forbidden by S. Mathew. Habentes auxilium Dei, cur quærimus baculi præsidium? [n] They must not carry these staves, but trust unto the carefull, watchfull, and gracious protection of God.

Quest. 5. Why doth our Saviour forbid his Apostles these things?

First, some for the answer hereof fly unto Allegories, thus I. By the purse is meant the provision or furniture of the Ministerie, in which nothing must be selable, or set to sale: or for the provision of every Christian, who must have their loines girt with this Zona, but yet must not care for money. Hilar. ſ. II. By the scrip is meant care for outward or secular things: and therefore we must avoid it, because if wee care for them, our hearts will be upon them. III. By not carrying shooes is meant, that he walks safest, who walks with a bare and naked conscience, for the holy land, is not filled with the thornes of sinne. Hilar. ſ. IV. By the staffe is meant worldly power. Non egent qui virgam, de radice Ieſſe. Hilar. ſ. V. By two coates is meant simplicity, and sincerity of a Christian; who must not have a heart and a heart, neither with a double garment, but must put off heresie and impietie, the love of the word, and sinne: and then put on the Lord Iesus Christ, Romanes 13. 13. Ephes. 3. 16. Answ. 1.

Secondly, omitting the foresaid Allegories, the plaine reasons of our Saviours prohibiting of these things now unto his Apostles, were these; to wit, I. That his Ambassadors might avoid all externall pompe: because his kingdom was not of this world, Ioh. 18. 36. And II. That hereby his Apostles might free themselves from all suspition of covetousnesse. And III. That hereby they might be freed from worldly eare, and not distracted from their worke. Answ. 2.

For thus their Iourney was made (as it were) so much the shorter, and their worke done so much the sooner, when they had nothing else to take care for.

IV. That hereby they might learne to leane and rely wholly upon the protection, and providence of God, Chryſoſt. ſ.

What is the scope of Christ, in the prohibition of these things? Quest. 6.

First, to teach us, that worldly power doth not become the Ministers of Christ: and therefore the pride and pompe of the Pope, and Church of Rome, doth shew it to be Antichristian: The Pope is carried upon mens shoulders, and Potentates must kisse his Toe; yea, Cardinals are equal to Kings: These things, together with the rituall pompe, and bravery they have in their worship and service, doth neither become the Apostles of Christ, nor Successors of the Apostles, nor the Ministers of the Gospel: for Christian worship is to be adorned spiritually, Iohn 4. 24. And they only stand in need of outward pompe, who want the Spirit, and inward grace. Answ. 1.

Secondly, our Saviours scope was herein also to take away distrust; that they might acknowledge the protection and providence of God, resting herein, and adhereing thereunto, and not caring for outward things. Answ. 2.

What must not the Ministers of Christ care for? Quest. 7.

First, they must not care for great things, Ieremie 45. Answ. 1.

Secondly, they must not care for necessary things, if God cals, and commands, as here. Answ. 2.

16

VERS. 11. And into whatsoever Citie or
Vers. 11. Towne yee shall enter, enquire who in it is worthy, and there abide till yee goe thence.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Enquire who is worthy] What is meant by Quest. 1. Worthy? or who is worthy?
Answ. 1. First, some understand this temporally; namely, either

I. Of those who are high, and honorable; because these are to be respected. Or, II. Of Statesmen, or those who are prudent and politicke in worldly things; but Saint Paul overthrowes this, Rom. 8.6.8. and 1 Corinth. 1.26. Or III. Of those who were rich and able to entertaine them: And thus Erasmus understands it, and renders it Idonei, but is justly taxed both for his translation, and interpretation by learned Beza. Or IV. Of those who are bountifull, liberall, hospitable, and given to entertaine strangers: These indeed are truely called worthy, but yet our Saviour lookes higher than these.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand this word spiritually, and thus it is to be expounded; but yet Expositors differ herein. For,

I. Some understand it, De merito congrui, of the merit of congruitie; but it is not thus to be interpreted, because Christ came to call sinners, Matth. 9. 13. Yea, telleth them that Publicans and Harlots shall enter into heaven before the proud, and boasting Pharisees, Matthew 21.31.

II. Some by worthy, understand the humble, Beza.

III. Some by worthy, understand those, who receive them willingly, and cheerfully, Musculus.

IV. Some understand here those, who are of a laudable, and praise-worthy conversation, in whom the feare of God, and religion shines, and shewes forth themselves, Calvin.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this word Worthy, is a relation, and therefore we must seeke forth his Antecedent, and enquire who they are, who are esteemed Worthy? namely; either,

I. Those who are worthy of the message of peace, (the preaching of the Gospel) which was brought by the Apostles: Now these were they, who received them willingly, admitted and permitted them to preach readily, and heard them cheerfully. Or,

II. Those who are worthy to receive, and entertaine Guests, and such Messengers, as these were: Now these were such, as were of good name, fame, credit, and reputation, among their neighbours, with whom they dwell: And these indeed the Text seemes to speake of, because it is said, Enquire; that is, of others, or of the neighbours. Hence then two things are very worthy our observing; namely,

First, that we must so live, that our goodnesse may appeare unto others.

Secondly, that we must enquire after peoples worthinesse, before wee guest and lodge with them.

First, we must labour so to live, that the worthinesse of our conversation may bee evident to others; he is worthy, who else where is called the good man, and the righteous man, Luke 23. 47. and Rom. 5.7. Mich 6.8. Ephes. 5.9. The observation plainely is this: Observ. 1.

That we must so live, that we may seeme worthy to the Church of God, and the brethren of Christ: hence wee are commanded to procure things honest before all men, Rom. 12.17. And to walke worthy, in regard of those who are without, 1 Tim. 3.7. and 2 Corinth. 6.4. and 2 Timothy, 4.5.°. 1 Pet. 2. 12 Phil. 6.

Why must our lives be thus perspicuous, and our Christian conversation so evident, that it may be seene, knowne, and perceived by others? Quest. 2.

First, because the promises of God are made, and belong unto such, Deut. 12. 28. Ier. 5. 29. and Rom. 7.16. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because it is necessary, that the worthinesse of our conversation, should appeare unto others; and that in a double regard; namely, Answ. 2.

I. In regard of our selves; because thus, and thus only, we approve our hearts, and inward man, to be pure and upright before God: for the fruit shewes the tree; and the streames the Fountaine, Matth. 12.35. Galath. 5.22. And

II. In regard of our God, and religion; because hereby strangers, and those who are without the Church, will magnifie our profession, and honour that God, whose name we professe, 1 Pet. 2.12. Matth. 5.16. And on the contrary, if our lives be wicked, wee are a dishonour and shame to our religion, in regard of the Gentiles, 1 Peter, 3.16. P. 2 Cor. 4. 12.

Are workes necessary? is it not sufficient to have faith towards God, but unto men, our works also must appeare? Quest. 3.

Certainely, outward workes of the life, and the fruits of religion, are necessary, wee being created for that end, Ephes. 2.10. And therefore let none say; if they have faith, they shall be saved: for although it bee true, that we are saved by faith, and not by workes, (John 6.29.) yet faith alone without workes, will not save us; as appeares by Philip. 4. 8. Deut. 6.18. Psalme 37. 3. where we are commanded to serve God in a good conscience. Now there is a double Conscience, viz. First, of the person, 1 John 2.1. when we are assured of our remission, reconciliation, and adoption, being able to say with Saint Paul, I know whom I have trusted. But this alone is not sufficient for us, God himselfe enquiring more then this of us. Answ.

Secondly, of the actions, when wee are rich in good workes, 1 Timothy, 6.18. And this also God exacts at our hands, and expects from us; because the truth of the other is to be confirmed by this, and faith is to be approved by workes.

Whether is it necessary to shine before men, or not? Quest. 4.

It is, as it appeares by Philip. 2.15. Here ob- Answ.
serve diligently;

Evill

That Light, or Fame, is two-fold; namely, either
Good, which is to be procured; and herein are two things, viz.
Evill; now this is to be avoided, and shunned; and that, both
I. In doing that which is evill; according to that of Saint Paul, The word of God is evill spoken of through your evill workes, Rom. 2. 24. And also,
II. In doing that which is scandalous, and not seeking Gods glory, and the peace of his Church, and the Edification of our brethren, before our private ends, 1 Cor. 10. 31. & 1 Thes. 5. 23
First, Res, the matter thereof, which is either
I. Towards God, as in Piety; for wee must not be like the Church of Ephesus, who fell from her first love [q], but wee must labour that others may see our holy hearts, by our worthy workes, and our love and zeale, by our ardent profession.
II. Towards men, which is either, In Justice, and truth, wherein is required these things viz.
First, to do that which is aright, and to be injurious unto none, as 1 Thes. 4. 6. And,
Secondly, to speake that which is true and right, neither respecting the person of the poor, nor rich, Gal. 1. 10. And Thirdly, to thinke, and love, and hold the truth, Amicus Plato, amicus Socrates, sed magis amica veritas;
Mercy, which doth not consist in giving a crust, or farthing to a poore man, (although the smallest almes are not to be despised, or neglected) but in the bowels of compassion, and tendernesse of heart.
Secondly, Modus, the manner thereof, which consists in two things; namely,
I. That all these things be done sincerely, as in Gods sight [r], and with a perfect heart [s].
II. That they be done fervently, with all the heart [t]: Herein many things are included; namely,
First, wee must not be corrupted with the wicked customes, or manners of those, with whom we live; but like Lot, abhorre, and hate the impieties, 2 Pet. 2. 8. otherwise, we doe not serve God with our whole heart.
Secondly, we must serve God Interpidè, without worldly feare; no apprehension, or feare of danger must daunt us, or detaine us from the service of the Lord; but like Daniel, the three Children, and Ioseph of Arimathea, wee must boldly, and before men professe the Lord, otherwise we doe not serve him with the whole heart.
Thirdly, wee must serve the Lord perfectly, in all things, Heb. 13. 21. not parting of stakes with him. And,
Fourthly, we must serve him perseverantly, not being weary of well doing, Gal. 6. 9.

[q] Rev. 2. 5.
[r] 2 Chro. 31. 20.
[t] 2 Chro. 31. 21.

And thus if we desire so to live, that the worthinesse of our conversation, may appeare to the Church of God, and the brethren of Christ; we must take heed, that wee bring no evil report upon our selves; either by doing that which is evill, or scandalous: And wee must labour to procure a good report amongst men, by being zealous in our profession, and holy towards our God, and both in word, worke, and thought, just and true towards all, and mercifull and pitifull towards the poore, and afflicted; yea, all this sincerely, (not in hypocrisie) fervently (not key coldy) perseverantly, not by starts, or unconstantly; and then the Lord will accept of us as worthy, to be made partakers of the preaching of his Word.

Observ. 2. Secondly, wee must first enquire after the worthinesse of people before we lodge with them: the Apostles must first enquire who are worthy, and then goe unto their houses: To teach us, that we must not converse with the unworthy, or those who have an evill name, or fame amongst men: reade Psalme 1. 1. Prov. 1. 15. Ephes. 5. 7. 11.

Quest. 5. How many sorts of unworthy persons be there?

Answ. Foure; namely,
First, wicked and prophane persons.
Secondly, hereticall persons.
Thirdly, heathenish, and barbarous persons.
Fourthly, excommunicated persons. Here observe, I. That the two last are alike: the excommunicated person might be unto us as a heathen. II. That the Gentile, or Heathen, is worse then the excommunicate person; because we must refuse to converse with him but only for a time (1 Cor. 5.) For upon his repentance he is to be admitted againe unto the Church, and unto the society of the Saints. III. But it seemes, that for the instant, or during the time of his excommunication, that the excommunicate person is worse than the heathen man, because with such an one, while he stands justly excommunicate, it is not lawfull to eat; which is not prohibited in or with a Heathen. But I enlarge not this disputation, because the present Text speakes of the first sort of unworthy persons; namely, wicked, prophane, and scandalous men.

Quest. 6. Why may we not familiarly converse, and associate our selves with wicked, and unworthy persons?

Answ. 1. First, because as God is a jealous God, so those who love him are very jealous also; and as a chaste, honest, and loving wife, will not love, nor delight in, nor frequent the company of whores, or whoremasters; so the friends and lovers of the Lord, will not love his enemies, and those whom his soule hates: For those who love the Lord will hate evill, in whomsoever it be. And therefore if we desire to approve our selves to love the Lord, we must not frequent the society of those who hate and are hated of the Lord.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must shunne all familiarity with the wicked, because otherwise we should seeme 18 to justifie them in their wickednes, and so bring a woe upon our selves, Esa. 5. 20. And therefore if wee desire to approve our selves to hate the corruption of sinne, we must not love the company of sinners.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we must not converse with wicked men, because so we shall be made like unto them: Ioas was good as long as Iehoiadah lived, and men learne goodnesse by associating themselves with those who are good: And on the contrary, the company of wicked men begets corrupt and wicked manners; As we see in Ioseph who learnt to sweare by the life of Pharaoh.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, we must not frequent the society of the wicked, because if we be not righteous and holy, wee cannot truly love it: The bond of Christian love is mutuall piety and sanctity; and therefore this bond being broken, there can bee no true love. It is a blessed thing for brethren to dwell together in unity, Psalm. 133. 1. But what union or concord can there bee betwixt light and darknesse, good and evill?

Quest. 7. How many sorts of companions or associates are there?

Answ. Foure; namely,
- First, grosse, palpable, and enormous sinners. These are altogether to be avoided.
- Secondly, those who are not enormous sinners, neither shew forth any life or power of religion: namely meere carnal men. These are unworthy to be made chosen of for intimate friends.
- Thirdly, hypocriticall professours, painted tombes: these are to bee avoided and turned away from, because they weare Christs livery, and yet serve the devill.
- Fourthly, there are sincere professours: These are most and best worthy of our love and society.

Quest. 8. With whom must wee not hold familiarity and societie?

Answ. With the two former sorts of companions: namely, who either follow after evill, or fly that which is good; who love vice, and hate vertue: For if we see men to grow wicked, we must leave their friendship and familiaritie. Here some things may be objected.

Object. 1. First, some will say, I have formerly promised to continue a league of amitie for terme of life; and therefore I must not shake off my friends acquaintance though he prove wicked.

Answ. If our friends prove wicked, then we must say that we onely said we would continue our former familiaritie, but we did not promise it: Not that it is lawfull linguâ jurare (as Ennius said) to sweare or say that with our mouth which our heart never thought; but because, First, promises of friendship, familiaritie, and intimacie, made unto any are to be understood, as long as he shall continue holy, and religious: but if hee turn to be irreligious or wicked, then those promises are annihilated, and void. And, Secondly, because we are not of our disposing, but of the Lords, whose wholly we are; and therefore it is not in our power to make any league of friendship with the enemies of God.

Quest. 9. Concerning the second sort of unworthy persons, mentioned Question 7. it may be demanded, If it be not lawfull to associate carnall men.

Answ. There is a manifold societie, (to omit marriages, bargaines, and the like) namely, First, to live peaceably with our neighbours, whatsoever they are: And this is required of us, for wee must have peace with all in as much as in us lies, Rom. 12.

Secondly, mutually to helpe one another in our wayes, and callings: or to exercise the office of love and charity one towards another: And this is necessarily to be done unto all, for in this sense, and respect, every one is our neighbour, and so to be esteemed.

Thirdly, mutually to use the helpe one of another in our callings: this is lawfull, with this proviso, that wee preferre the godly alwayes when we can have choice; that is, if a man cannot have the counsell and advice of a good and godly Physitian or Lawyer, he may then make use of a wicked: but if both may bee had, then the good is to be preferred: And so of all other callings and trades, if we cannot be provided of good, we may make a shift with bad.

Fourthly, wee must love others with a true heart; This Christ himselfe requires of us in regard of our very enemies, Matth. 5. Because this is the root of all the former particulars, viz. a man will hardly live peaceably with a man, except he love him; a man will hardly helpe him who is in want, and necessity, or distresse, except he love him: a man will hardly make use of his neighbours helpe in his calling, or helpe his neighbour in his owne, except he love him. And therfore it is necessary that we should love others with a true heart.

Fifthly, to receive others into intimate friendship and familiaritie: or to professe and acknowledge unto the world such or such to bee our intimate, and entire friends: And this is prohibited us in regard of carnall men.

Object. 2. But it will be here objected; Many things, and causes, and considerations require that wee should continue our former amity with such or such, although they be but naturall and carnall men; as for example; First, the consanguinity, affinity, and kindred that we have with them.

Secondly, the vicinitie, neighbourhood, and brotherhood we have with them, because they live neere us, or they are of the same company, or calling with us, and are joyned unto us in some place or office.

Thirdly, the offer, and desire of friendship; they desire our acquaintance, and familiarity, yea, they offer many courtesies unto us, and it is scandalous not to requite these kindnesses. And therefore wee hope we may be intimate and entire with them, although they show but little religion in their lives.

Answ. If these coards tie us unto them, or these occasions be offered of familiaritie with them; then we must labour to be like Physitians, because perhaps God hath called us to their acquaintance for this end, that we must be a meanes to bring them to good, or at least to restraine them from evill: For

First,

First, some justifie, defend, and maintain the sinnes of others: at least connive and winke at them, or seeme to approve, or assent unto them: But we must not doe any of these.

Secondly, some are silent when their friends
Object. 3. sinne, but we must reprove them; If any heere object, that their friends will be angry if they reprove them; and therefore they forbear it.

Answer. I answer, they are not worthy to be pleased in this; for we are therefore their friends, that we may have liberty to admonish them: and we must not continue familiarity with those, who will not suffer us to discharge the office of friends, in reprehending what is amisse.

Thirdly, some slightly, and lightly taxe the failings of their friends, but quickly have done: but we must continue incessantly to inculcate into their eares wholsome counsell and advice, untill wee have reclaimed them from their wandring wayes.

Fourthly, if we therefore desire (by reason of some other bond) to continue the bond of amity with carnall men; we must thus labour to discharge the office of faithfull friends; namely, I. Speak, & reprove what we see in them amisse. II. Do it candidely, & in love, and meeknes. III. But doe it plainely, and evidently, that hee may know what it is we taxe him for. IV. Do it unweariedly, continue to hammer him with our reproofes, untill we have wrought him to our will. V. If he will not hearken to advice, counsell, and reproofe, then we must cast off his acquaintance, and abstaine from his society, at least familiarly, and frequently.

Object. 4. Concerning the third sort of unworthy companions, namely hypocriticall professours; it will bee objected, Charitie is not suspitious, (1 Cor. 13.) And therefore why should I judge him to bee an hypocrite; and for so judging of him, reject his familiarity?

Answ. 1. First, certainly charitie does much, both in judging charitably, and covering carefully, and hoping comfortably of others.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must not speedily, nor rashly beleeve suspitions and jealousies.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but if it be evident that he doth but double with God; then we must not preferre our privat affection before the truth: for we must do nothing against the truth, but for it, 2 Cor. 13. 8.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the truest charitie is to admonish, and to chide him who doth evill; for none loves a man so well, as he who telleth him of his faults, because hereby hee may bee saved, and reduced from his wicked wayes: but on the contrarie, if wee should not counsell and advise, then wee should be like those who perswade a sicke man that he is not sicke, and so cause him to neglect seeking for remedie.

Object. 5. Againe it will be objected; Charitie covers a multitude of sinnes, (1 Pet. 4. 8.) And therefore why should we shunne any mans familiarity because he hath some sinne in him?

Answ. 1. First, this position hath truly place in the godly: For I. Although they sinne not, 1 Ioh. 3. 9. to wit, doe not give up themselves wholly unto sinne, because the holy Spirit is their guide and governour, Col. s. 3. 15. yet II. They fall often, and sinne in many things; yea, III. They may remaine for a time in some particular sinnes; either First, through ignorance, or Secondly, through careleslenesse, as David did in the matter of Bathsheba. And therefore these things well weighed and considered, makes charitie cover a great many of sinnes in the faithfull flocke of Christ. 19

Secondly, but these sins are to be covered, neither I. Iustificando, by justifying, either First, the sin; for that were false witnes, condemned in the Ninth Commandment: Nor Secondly, the person sinning, for that is a plaine respect of persons: Nor II. Acerbi increpando, by sharply reprooving the reproover, or by recrimination: many when they heare their friends sinne reprehended, flie in the face of him that reproved him, labouring to disgrace him, by ripping up some sinne of his: but wee must not thus cover our brethrens sinne. But III. Procurando, by procuring (in humility and modesty) pardon, and a good opinion of our brother, by lessening, and excusing his sinne, and by shewing the weakneslse of the flesh and corrupt nature, in the best men. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, although wee must thus cover our brethrens sinne from the eyes of others, yet wee must severely reprove it, and lay it open both to the eye, and understanding, and eare of our brother who transgressed: For, I. It is a fooliish, yea, an unchristian practise to silence our brothers sin, and to forbeare to reprove it when we love him; and afterwards in anger to reproach him for it, and to cast it in his teeth: yea II. The nature of true zeale, and love is, to speak, when we see any thing in our brother, whereby God is dishonoured, or his soule endangered. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, if after such faithfull and friendly admonition our brother will not amend, wee must then forsake his familiarity, because God is to be loved more then men. Answ. 4.

But profession and religion will be scandalized, by thus casting off the acquaintance of hypocriticall professours, or by discovering them unto the world to be such. Object. 6.

First, the Religion of God needs not the lies of men: and it is a great errour to cover hypocrisie under this pretence. Answ. 1.

Secondly, when any professe Christ or Religion falsely, they scandalize profession; and therefore such are not to be familiarly associated, or intimately loved: yea those who cover wicked workes with a rugge of Religion, doe scandalize it most of all: and therefore are most worthy to be shunned, and their company to be avoided. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, in such a case as this, the right hand is to be cut off: If one member be seized upon by a gangrene, it must be taken away, otherwise the whole body perisheth: yea we know that one sore sheepe infects the whole flocke: Wherefore such hypocrites as under a show of Religion commit evill, are to be cast off; yea given over unto Sathan for a time, (1 Corinthians 5. 5.) that so other formalists may learne to amend. Answ. 3.

20 VERS. 12. And when yee goe into an house, salute it.

Verse 12.

We may observe here, that the salutations of the Iewes were testified either by words, or some humble gesture of the body.

First, by words, and then these were the usuall formes, The Lord be with you, or, The Lood blesse you, Ruth 2.4. From the last of these, blessing is often taken in Scripture for saluting. If thou meet any, blesse him not; and if any blesse thee, answer him not again, saith Elisha to Gehazi (2 Kings 4.29.) The sense is as our English renders it, Salute him not. Sometimes they said, Peace be unto thee: peace be upon thee, Goe in peace, and such like: When ye come into an house, salute the same; and if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it, but if it be not worthy, let your peace returne to you. In this verse and the next.

Secondly, by gestures; thus their salutations were signified, sometimes by prostrating the whole body, sometimes by kissing the feete, (Luk. 7.38.) commonly by an ordinary kisse. Moses went out to meet his father in law, and did obeysance and kissed him, Exod. 18.7. Moreover, Ioseph kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them, Gen. 45.15 This Saint Paul calleth, an holy kisse, 1 Cor. 16.20. Saint Peter, a kisse of charity, 1 Pet. 5.14. Tertullian calleth it Osculum pacis, a kisse of peace. And these were kisses which a Cato might give, and a Vestall receive.

Verse 13. VERS. 13. And if the house bee worthy, let your peace come upon it; but if it be not worthy, let your peace returne to you.

§. 1. If the house be worthy:

Sect. 1. Object. It may here be objected, that none are worthy; and therefore if the Apostles must goe to none but such, they must goe to none at all.

Answ. 1. First, the Papists say that there is a worthinesse of congruitie; but I omit it.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this word Worthy, is often put for Fit, Ephes. 4.1. Philip. 1.27. Coloss. 1.10 and 1 Thes. 2.12.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, there is a double worthinesse, Rei & Personæ, a worthinesse of the thing (Luke 3.8.) and a worthinesse of the person.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, there is a worthinesse in respect of God, and a worthinesse in respect of men: And thus here if the Apostles judge them worthy, then they may lodge with them. Reade before verse 10. of this Chapter, and Luk. 7.4. and 1 Tim. 5.17. and 6.1.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, although we are not worthy, yet God will, and doth, repute us as worthy, if humbly we receive his word, and Messengers; here I might shew two things, but I but name them; namely,

I. That God doth accept of the persons of the faithfull, as though they were worthy. Reade Luke 20.35. & 21.36. Act. 5.41. and 2 Thes 1.5. Revel. 3.5. II. That God doth accept of the workes of the faithfull, Luke 3.8. Act. 26.20.

Quest. But who are worthy, or how are any worthy?

Answ. 1. First, some are reputed worthy, because they receive and embrace the Gospel, which is offred unto them.

Secondly, some are accepted as worthy, and thought so, because they repent at the preaching of the Gospel: And hence Christ himselfe abides with the Publican, Matth. 9. because he repented. Certainely, this place speakes of both these. For, I. The Word is to bee received. And, II. It being received, doth teach us how to repent, and what to doe. For the end of preaching, is to convert and repent, Matthew 4.17. Hence we may note:

Answ. 2.

Observ. That the true worthinesse of a Christian doth consist in a ready receiving of the Word, and in being converted thereby. Reade Iohn 8.47. and 10.27. For Christ first offers himselfe unto us in the Word, (Iohn 1.12.) And the end of giving the Gospel, is to frame us after the likenesse of Christ; and therefore we must let it have its perfect worke in us, Coloss. 3.16. More particularly;

First, we must receive the Word when it is offered, Iohn 10.16.27. Act. 2.41. Not rejecting it as some doe, nor seeking other wayes besides it, as others doe.

Secondly, our life is to bee renewed by the Word, and wee must be built up thereby, (Matth. 7.24. &c.) And this is to receive the Word indeed, Iohn 13.17. Act. 11.1.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Let your peace come upon it.] What is meant here by peace?

Quest. 1.

Answ. 1. First, love, and a familiar conversing; this is true, but not the whole truth.

Answ. 2. Secondly, prayer for their peace; this is true also, but is not the meaning of this place: because this is to be denied unto none.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, by your peace, may be meant the preaching of the Gospel; because it is not to be cast unto dogs or swine, Matth. 7.6. This is true likewise, but the word implies something more.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, true peace is the effect of the Gospel preached; as if our Saviour would say, indeed they shall obtaine peace, who receive you, and repent by your preaching.

Object. Against this exposition it may bee objected, the phrase here is Imperative, and therfore it signifies something which is in the Apostles power, to give, or to take away. Veniat, let your peace come upon it; and let your peace return unto you againe.

Answ. Certainely, because in the receiving or refusing of the Gospel, peace is brought or taken away, imparted, or deprived; therefore Christ saith unto the Pharisees, yee have shut out the kingdome of God. To those who receive the Gospel, peace is given, but from the rejecters thereof, peace is taken away; wherefore the sense and meaning of this place is this; If they be worthy, continue preaching unto them, and then they shall have indeed the peace of God.

Observ. To teach us, that the Gospel being received, doth bring true peace along with it; or those who receive the Gospel preached, have true peace, Luke 19.9. Esa. 26.12. and 54.13.

Quest. 2. How doth this appeare, for it seemes otherwise; and experience shewes, that the Professors of Religion are the most derided, scoffed, and persecuted, of all other?

Answ. 1. First, God is called the God of peace, and the King of peace, (Hebr. 7.2.) and therefore they who who embrace his word and truth, shall surely have peace.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is proper to the Gospel to bring peace: whence the Preachers thereof are said to preach peace, (*Ephes.*2.14.17.) And the Gospel is called the Gospel of peace, *Ephes.*6.15. because the Ministers of the New Testament preach peace, *Act.*10.36.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Peace is an effect of faith, Rom. 5.1. And therefore the faithfull, who are the onely true Receivers of the Gospel, shall certainely have peace.

Quest. 3. With whom have the faithfull, and the true Receivers of the word peace?

Answ. 1. First, with God, because they are reconciled unto him, from whence ariseth exceeding joy; for they are of all other, then the most safe and secure: What can harme them, who are covered under Gods wing? yea, who are married unto him, (*Hos.*2. 19.) with an everlasting covenant, Rom 8.38.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they have peace with their brethren; for they are all servants of one Master, in one house, Ephes. 2. 19. yea all members of one body, Rom. 12. and 1 Corinth. 12. And therefore they have peace among themselves: They are exhorted unto the love of one another, 1 John, because love is the bond of peace, Ephes. 4. 3. Certainely the Church of Christ is no other then a family of love; for they have not only sweet societie among themselves, but also with Christ their Lord and head, 1 John 1. 3. and 1 Cor. 1. 9. yea such peace have the faithfull receivers of the Gospel, that we reade of three thousand, yea five thousand, that had but (Vnam domum- mensam- animam, Chrys. s.) One house, one home, one table, one soule, *Act.*2. 41, &c. and 4. 4. 32.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they have peace with themselves, and in their own hearts, and affections. For I. Although they have inward corruptions which rebell against them, Rom. 7. 23. yet II. With their mindes they serve the law of God, Rom. 7.22.25. and the peace of God beares rule in their hearts, Colos. 3. 15. And III. Although they bee sometimes pollured by sinne, yet they wash themselves with the teares of sorrow, as David, Psal. 51. and Peter, Matth. 27. did: and then by the Lord are restored againe unto peace of conscience.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, there is another peace which is proper to the faithfull receivers of the Word; and that is securitie from danger, reade Psal. 27. & 31. and 91. and 2 Tim. 1. 12. and 1 John 4. 18. And therefore happy, thrice happy, are the godly embracers and receivers of the Gospel; who have peace with God, and men, and their owne consciences, and assurance that (Malum qua malum) no evill, as it is an evill, can come unto them.

Quest. 4. How may we know whether we are right receivers of the word or not?

Answ. Examine these things, viz.

First, whether by our hearing, wee are made partakers of inward peace or not, 2 *Pet.*3.14.

Secondly, whether our hearing have united us, in love, unto our brethren, or not?

Thirdly, whether doth the peace of God beare rule in our hearts, *Colos.*3.15.

Fourthly, whether is all feare of temporall evils expelled out of our hearts, or not? Are we in dangers, as bold as Lyons, carefully avoiding perils, but cowardly fearing none? Certainely, hee who truely heares, and receives the preaching of the word, hath peace within himselfe, peace with his brethren, peace with his God, and assured hope of protection and preservation from evils, as such. 21

VERS. 16. Behold, I send you forth as sheepe in the midst of wolves; be yee therefore as wise as Serpents, and simple as Doves. Verse 16.

§.1. Be wise as Serpents.] It is given as a rule by our Divines, that words which are Medix significationis, and have a double signification, a Translator must take heed how hee translates: as for example, Gnarum signifies subtle, or crafty, and also prudent or wise: and therefore an Interpreter must take heed, that he doth not give it the one signification, when he should give it the other: It is said, *Gen.*3.1. The Serpent was Gnarum, now it cannot be translated, more wise than any beast of the field, but more crafty. So Proverb. 1.4. It cannot be said, To give subtlely, but wisedome to the simple; so in this verse it cannot be said, be yee crafty as Serpents, but wise as Serpents. Remigius, s. saith, That Christ doth very well admonish the Apostles, to be wise as Serpents, because Adam was deceived by a Serpent; as if hee should say, As the Serpent is crafty to deceive; So be yee wise to deliver: Hee praised the fruit of the tree, but praise ye the crosse. Sect.1.

What is the nature of Serpents? and wherein must we imitate them? Quest. 1.

First, the Serpent is a creature more crafty then strong: so because we are not strong enough, to withstand the forcible assaults and temptations of Sathan; wee must therefore bee wise to prevent occasions, and to decline such assaults. Answ. 1.

Secondly, the Serpent will defend her head above all things; and hideth it with her whole body, as with a shield, in the time of danger; and Hierome saith, it is, Quia ibi vita, because her life lieth in her head: and therefore, although she be sore wounded in the body, yet if her head bee whole, shee dieth not of her wounds. So wee should repose our substance, estates, fame, and life, and all to danger, and losse, rather then suffer our head (Christ) to be harmed: now our head is hurt by sinne; for when we give way unto that, wee dishonour our Christ; and therefore wee ought alwayes carefully to avoide it, and rather the losse of riches, reputation; yea life, then keep them by sinne, because Christians should preferre the greatest corporall mischiefe, before the least spirituall evill: yea, lay downe our lives, rather then suffer our Christ to bee dishonoured: hee that saves his life, shall lose it; but he that loseth, and layeth downe his life for Christ, shall find it; hee that suffereth his body to be wounded, for the safeguard of his head, shall live, and not die; but he that exposeth the head to danger, for the safety of the body, shall die and not live. Hee that will Answ. 2.

22 rather ſuffer then ſinne, and diſeaſe himſelfe, rather then diſpleaſe his Lord, ſhall not be harmed by any evill. And therefore like ſerpents wee muſt labour to preſerve our head whole, and entire, whatſoever becomes of our bodies, becauſe of our bodies, becauſe our life lies in this our head.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, the Serpent doth caſt off her old skinne, to inveſt her ſelfe in a new: So wee muſt put off the old man which is corrupt, and put on that new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſſe, and holineſſe of truth, Epheſ. 4. 24. Some writers, (namely, Iſidor, Robanus, Dormiſecur. de temp. ſerm. 5. & Anton. part. 4. Titul. 2. Cap. 5. §. 1.) doe expreſſe the kind of Serpent, which is thus accuſtomed to doe; and the time when ſhe doth it, and the manner how ſhe doth it. I. Iſidor ſaith, that that kind of Serpent which caſteth his skin, is called Coluber, a Snake. II. Concerning the time when this is done, there is ſome queſtion: For firſt, ſome ſay ſhe caſteth her skinne in the ſpring time. Cromwell.

Secondly, ſome ſay it is when ſhe findeth herſelfe to be loaded and burdened with poiſon. Dormiſee. ſ.

Thirdly, the moſt ſay it is when ſhe findes her ſelfe to grow old and infirme. Antonin.

Thus ſhould we doe, and herein intimate the ſerpent; namely, I. Caſt off ſinne, and the old man, in the ſpring of our yeeres, and remember our Creator in the dayes of our youth, Eccleſ. 12. 1. We muſt give our beſt dayes, to him that beſt deſerves them, to wit, to God: and not as many doe, who give their youth to ſathan, and their age to God; their ſtrength to ſathan, and their weakneſſe to God: their health to ſathan, and their ſickneſſe to God: yea, who deſire to dedicate their life to ſathan, and their death unto God. We muſt be wiſe as ſerpents, who neither caſt off their skinnes in Autumne, nor in Winter, but in the Spring. II. We muſt labour to finde and feel our ſinnes to be a burden unto us, and then ſtrive to diſgorge our ſelves of them: we muſt firſt labour to hate, and loath them, and then endevour to leave them: wee muſt firſt feele our ſinnes to be a burden too heavie for us to beare, and then eaſe our ſhoulders of that loade; as the ſerpent doth diſcharge her ſtomacke of her poiſon when ſhe findes it overcharged therewithall. III. We muſt, when wee feele our ſelves weake, and infirme, by reaſon of ſinne, labour to leave it, and caſt it off; when we finde that our ſinnes hang ſo faſt on, and cleave ſo faſt too, that wee cannot run the [t] Heb. 12. 1. race that is ſet before us, [t] when we finde our hands ſo hard manacled by ſinne, that we can neither fight the good fight of faith, nor worke out the worke of our ſalvation: when we finde our ſelves to be ſo low, and weak through ſinne, that we have no ſtrength to the performance of any thing that is good, then it is time for us, with the ſerpent to caſt off our old coate of maliciouſneſſe. IV. The manner of the ſerpents caſting her skin is this (according to Iſidor, Dormiſ. Anton. and Raban.) when ſhe deſires to caſt off her skin, Then firſt, ſhee abſtaines from meat for divers dayes. And ſecondly, ſhe eates a certaine kinde of bitter herbe. And thirdly, having eaten that, ſhe bathes her ſelfe in the water. And fourthly, having ſo done, hee ſeeketh out, and chooſeth a ſtrait hole of a firme ſtone; and violently entring therein, and paſſing through with great difficultie, leaves his old skinne behinde him. Fiftly, and laſtly, his old skinne being thus ſtripped off: he then layeth himſelfe in the warme ſunne, that he might fortifie and harden his new skinne. This courſe muſt they take, who deſire to be renewed in their inward man; namely, Firſt, they muſt beate their bodies, and bring it into ſubjection, both by a corporall abſtinence from meat, and a ſpirituall abſtinence from ſinne, 1 Cor. 9. 27.

Secondly, beſides faſting, they muſt eate the bitter and ſowre herb of contrition, humiliation, and godly ſorrow; mourning both for the ſinnes already committed, and alſo for the power of ſinne which lies in the ſoule.

Thirdly, having eaten this ſowre herb of true ſorrow, wee muſt then labour that wee may bee waſhed with the teares of unfeigned ſorrow, and bathed over and over in that Iordan of Chriſts blood, which is better then all the rivers of Damaſcus to waſh in.

Fourthly, if we deſire that our youth, and ſtrength may be renewed by grace, wee muſt go through that ſtrait hole of repentance, entring thereby into that firme rocke which is Chriſt: or the ſtone of repentance through which wee muſt enter, muſt be firme and ſtable; that is, our repentance muſt be accompanied with a firm and full purpoſe and reſolution, never to return backe againe unto ſinne: for the ſerpent having once entered, never pulleth backe his head, but violently ruſheth through though with pain and difficultie. Nihil proſunt lamenta ſi iteremur peccata, &c. (Auguſt. de pœnit.) Our ſorrow and teares for ſinne profits us nothing, if we returne again unto our ſinnes; for wounds being iterated are more hardly and ſlowly cured.

Fiftly, having thus humbled our ſelves by faſting, and true godly ſorrow, and waſhed our ſoules with the teares of contrition, and not only repented us of our ſinnes by paſt, but fully purpoſed and reſolved never to turne unto ſinne any more: then wee muſt lie in the ſun-ſhine of Gods grace, aſſuring our ſelves that faithfull is he who hath called ſuch unto him, and hath promiſed that he will receive them into favour, and pardon their former ſinnes, and preſerve them from ſinne for the time to come, and enable them to ſerve him, as becomes a new, and renewed creatures.

Fourthly, the ſerpent ſtops her eares at the voice of the charmer, and will not heare his incantations; now if any deſire to know how a ſerpent can ſtop both her eares? Antoninus (Part. 4. Tit. 2. Cap. 4. §. 1.) ſaith, ſhee layes one eare cloſe to the ground, and ſtops the other with her taile. Thus muſt wee doe; when the devill would ſeduce, allure, or inchant us, by any wicked ſuggeſtions, or temptations, we muſt ſtop our eares, and thoughts, and affections, leſt being allured by his provoking temptations, we ſhould aſſent, and conſent thereunto: and this we ſhould Anſw. 4.

doe in regard of the end of sinne (which is signified by the serpents taile,) namely, destruction: For the wages of sinne is death, and the end of sinners damnation.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, the serpent seeing that he is hated, doth carefully decline, and shunne whatsoever may be hurtfull unto him: So the children of God must take heed, that they doe not rashly expose themselves to dangers, neither live negligently; but wisely, and circumspectly, Ephes. 5.15. Colos. 4.5.

Answ. 6. Sixtly, the serpent carrying poison in her mouth, doth ever put it out before she drink. So when we come either to the Word, or Prayer, or Sacraments, wee must strive to lay aside our malice, hatred, envie, bitternesse, yea all wickednesse whatsoever. And thus in some few particulars wee see wherein the serpent is to bee imitated.

Quest. 2. Who erre here by misunderstanding of our Saviour?

Answ. The Ophites, who because the wisdome of a serpent is here commended, and because the brazen serpent in the wildernesse was a figure of Christ: doe therefore ascribe unto a serpent all knowledge, and worship it, offering bread unto it, and kissing it, keeping alwaies one for that purpose alive. Epiphan. haref. 37.

Quest. 3. Are serpents in all things to be imitated?

Answ. 1. First, according to Augustine, the serpent hath wisdome in bringing up her young, in the making of her hole, in the getting of her food, in the healing of her wounds, in the avoiding of things hurtfull, in the foreknowledge of the change of times, in the love of her fellowes. And in these she is to be imitated.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but in the things following, she is not to be followed: namely, I. Her high spirit is to be avoided. And II. Her desire of revenge, even when she is dying. And III. Her flattery, stinging when shee imbraceth. And IV. Her treacherie. And V. Her ingratitude, stinging to death him that hath nourished her up. And VI. Her poison. And VII. Her voracity, in killing much more then shee can devoure. And VIII. Her generall hatred against all creatures, destroying all that she can match.

Quest. 4. How manifold is wisdome? or how many kindes of wisdome are there, because our Saviour bids us to be wise as serpents?

Answ. There is a double wisdome, namely

First evill, which is foure-fold; namely,

I. Arrogant wisedome, when men will undertake to judge of those hidden, and secret mysteries, which God hath reserved unto himselfe; thinking themselves wise enough, to render a reason of all the Lords dealings with men. There is, II. False craftie, and lying wisedome, which is diametrally opposite; yea, an enemy unto Christian simplicity, (Iohn 1, 47.) which must bee without fraud, or guile. There is, III. Cruell wisedome; Mortui non mordent, dead men cannot bite; and therefore it is good to kill. Irish men never thinke a man slaine outright, till his head be off; and theeves never thinke themselves safe, untill hee be killed whom they have robbed; because if he be once murdered, he cannot then accuse them; whereas if such an one should live, he might bring them to the gallowes. Our Saviour doth not command us to be strong as Lions, and Tygers, but to be wise as Serpents: and therefore this cruell wisedome is not allowed. IV. There is a selfe confident wisedome; when men hide their counsels, and so craftily conceale their wicked plots, that in wardly they boast, and rejoyce, that they shall prevaile: these shall at last bee discovered, and God in his appointed time will infatuate their devices. 23

Secondly good, & this is that wisdom, wch here Christ cõmands, and cõmends unto us.

What is this good wisedome, which we must labour for? or wherein doth it consist? Quest. 5.

The properties of this good Wisedome are these; namely, Answ.

First, Mala intelligere, to see, perceive, and understand evils, and dangers; for men must not be willingly blind, but learne to foresee evils to come.

Secondly, Malum non facere, malo ignoscere. Hier. ſ. to doe evill unto none, but to pardon and forgive those, who offend and injure us.

Thirdly, Suspicari, to suspect evils, from evill men; especially those who hate us: for Christ himselfe (wee see) would not commit himselfe unto the Iewes, [u]. [u] Ioh. 2.24

Fourthly, Tacere, to keepe our owne counsel; for it is lawfull to conceale some truths, August. A man is not bound by his owne babling to betray himselfe; it being the part of a foole to utter all his mind, Proverb. 29.11.

Fiftly, Evitare, to avoid perill, and not to run into the Lyons mouth [x]. It is wisedome, saith Hieronme, ſ. Insidias vitare, to avoid the trap, gins, snares and traines that are laid for us. [x] 1 Macc. 2. 37.

Sixtly, Patienter ferre, to endure patiently, and contentedly the evils which lie upon us, Muſc. ſ.

Seventhly, Scandalum non dare, so to live, that we give no offence, neither to the Iew, nor to the Gentile, nor to the Church of God.

Eightly, sincerè profiteri, to professe Christ and religion, in sincerity, not in shew, in truth, not in hypocrisie.

§. 2. Be simple as Doves. Sect. 2.

What is meant by these words? Quest. 1.

The meaning is, be innocent and harmelesse, thinking evill of none, neither intending evill, or offence unto any, in thought, word, or deed; and yet we must be wise as Serpents, who have great subtilty in saving, and defending themselves from harme: that is, every one who looks to be saved, might labour for so much wisedome, as may preserve him from the hurt of false Prophets. Answer.

How many sorts of Simplicity are there? and what Simplicity is it which is here enjoyned? Quest. 2.

First,

24 Answ. 1. First, evill, fooliſh, and contrary to wiſdome; and is two-fold, namely,

I. Negligent; when a man doth not take heed to himſelfe, and beware.

Firſt, leaſt he ſhould be hurt, and harmed by any. Or Secondly, leaſt he ſhould be deceived by errour, Epheſ. 4. 14. Or Thirdly, leaſt he ſhould bee ſeduced unto ſinne, as Gen. 20. 5. and 2 Sam. 15. 11.

II. Sluggiſh and idle, when a man doth not labour.

Firſt, for knowledge and underſtanding: as Hoſea 4. 6. Epheſians 5. 15. And hence, namely from ignorance comes errours, and therefore the Papiſts and ſome others, perſwade men to neglect hearing, reading, ſtudying, and the meanes of knowledge, becauſe as hee that is altogether ignorant of the true way may be perſwaded to take any path, and made beleeve by every man hee meets, that every falſe path is the right: ſo thoſe who are ignorant of the divine truth, may bee ſeduced, and quickly led aſide by any into humane errours.

Secondly, that is called ſluggiſh and idle ſimplicity, when a man doth not labour to ſtrive, and wreſtle againſt ſinne, and his own corruptions.

Simplicity is two-fold, namely,

Object. If it ſhould bee objected that David bids us to commit our wayes unto the Lord, and and therefore what need we thus ſtrive?

Anſw. I anſwer, it is true we muſt commit and commend our ſelves unto God, but yet we muſt fight againſt ſinne, and our inbred corruptions, and that even unto blood. [a]

[a] Hebr. 12. 4.

2. Secondly, good, ſincere, and an enemie to deceit, and fraude. And this is that Simplicity which is here commended and commanded.

Queſt. 3. What is this good ſimplicity which we muſt labour for? or wherein doth it conſiſt?

Anſw. First, in a ſingle heart, Acts 2. 46. Hee therfore who deſires to have this Dove-like ſimplicity, muſt not have a heart, and a heart; but muſt be ſincere and ſingle hearted.

Secondly, in a tender conſcience, and a feare to ſinne or offend God: He therefore who deſires this Dove-like ſimplicity, muſt be of a circumciſed heart, who is ſenſible of the leaſt ſinne, and of a cowardly conſcience who feares to commit the leaſt evill; For this is the beſt ſimplicity. Reade theſe places, and to this purpoſe imitate the perſons mentioned therein, Geneſ. 39. 9. and Iob. 1. 1. and 2, 3, Rom. 16. 19. and 1 Corinth. 14. 20. Phil. 2. 13.

It conſiſts in theſe four things, viz.

Thirdly, in a ſingle tongue: he therefore who deſires this dovelike ſimplicity muſt avoid all lying, and deceitfull ſpeeches, and take heed of being double tongued. Iob. 33. 3. and 2 Cor 1. 12 [b].

[b] 2 Cor. 11. 3. and Epheſ. 6. 5.

Fourthly, in a boldneſſe unto that which is good; not being hindred either by employments or dangers, or feare, but courageouſly, and confidently profeſſing and ſerving God. Reade Act. 4. 19. & 5. 29. Pro. 10. 29.

Queſt. 4. Is the Dove to bee imitated in all things?

Anſwer. No, for in her there are two things to bee eſchewed, To wit,

Firſt, negligence, and fooliſh curioſity: For while ſhee lookes about, and turnes her head deliberating whether to flie, the arrow, or ſhot meets with her, before ſhe flie away. (Greg. & Barth. Aug.)

Secondly, Pride; for while ſhe admires her feathers of divers colours about her necke or breaſt, and trimmes, and picks them, ſo intending that, that ſhe intends not her owne ſafety; ſhe is often taken, and ſeized on by the Hawke, (Plin. & Barth.) We muſt not in theſe two things be like Doves, but muſt take heed of delay, and pride, which are enemies unto ſaving health.

I. We muſt take heed of Pride, which is a dangerous enemy; for it makes us unwarie, and ſpoiles all we doe, (Deſtruit omnia Auguſt.) When men begin to be proud either of themſelves, or their performances or parts; it makes them careleſſe of their wayes, unthankfull towards their God, and haughty and diſdainfull towards their brethren: And therefore is carefully to be ſhunned, the end thereof being (with Lucifer) to be caſt into Hell.

II. We muſt take heed of Negligence, and Procraſtination: many end their ends, before they have reſolved to beginne them; and finiſh their life, before they have thought of living. And therefore we muſt not deferre the worke of our ſalvation, putting it off from day to day, but while it is ſaid to day, make ready our ſelves to undertake it, reſolving that no labour, feare, or danger whatſoever ſhall hinder us from it.

Queſt. 5. Wherein is the Dove to be imitated?

Anſwer. In the Dove are many vertues, or vertuous qualities, worthy imitation, As for example.

Firſt, ſhe doth no evill or hurt unto any, but is,

I. Meeke, without beake to hurt, or talent to teare, or Gall to plot or imagine miſchiefe, or intend harme to any; And therfore if we would imitate the Dove; we muſt not be angry, or miſchievous, or revengefull; for charity doth no evill [c] nor is angry [d] but is patient, and ready to remit. Many in their words, deeds, and lives, ſhew themſelves more like Lions, Beares, Wolves, Dragons, Vultures, and furies then meek Doves: but we muſt take heed of this, the end of theſe being deſtruction. Exech. 32. 23. Epheſ. 4. 32. Coloſ. 2. 8.

[c] Rom. 13. 10. [d] 1 Cor. 13. 5.

II. Shee is is ſimple, or innocent without deceit; as in this verſe; And therefore in ſacrifice ſhe muſt not be divided. Geneſ. 15. 9. Levit. 1. 14 Thus we muſt be true and free from lying, and deceit, every one ſpeaking the truth unto his neighbour from his heart. (Reade Zach. 8. 16. Epheſ. 4. 25. Coloſ. 2. 9. and 1 Peter 2. 1.) and labouring to be innocent and harmeleſſe in his life and converſation: for God will protect the innocent, but diſcover and infatuate the plots of the wicked, who craftily imagine evill againſt their neighbours.

III. She is humble building her neſt in the rocke rock, except ſome build or provide a Dovehouſe or other place for her to breed and remaine in. Thus we ſhould be without carefulneſſe for the things of this life, labouring that God may be our Lord; and then, if he provide plentifully for us, or proſper us, or build us houſes, we muſt take it thankfully, and praiſe his name: but if otherwiſe, we muſt be content to build in the rocke, that is, to live by faith in Chriſt, and to learne to want and to abound, Philip. 1.21. Coloſſians 3. 3.

Secondly, ſhe propoundeth good examples, or examples of good unto us for our imitation: and that I. Towards God. II. Towards her ſelfe. III. Towards others.

Firſt, the Dove is to be imitated by us, or an example unto us of a double duty towards God: viz. I. She is a very loving creature, yea full of loue: Thus we ſhould be ſick of love (Cant. 5. 8.) loving our God before and above all things, and all other things for God, yea our neighbour, becauſe a member of God. II. She is very fruitfull, breeding ſometimes ten, ſometimes eleven, ſometimes twelve times in a yeare: Thus we ſhould ſtir to be fruitfull, bringing forth ſome good fruit unto our God, every Moneth in the yeare, every week in the Moneth, every day in the week, every hour in the day, every minute in the hour; like the trees of heaven, which yeeld fruit every moneth, Rev. 22.2, Thus we ſhould be fruitfull, but alas, for pity, for the moſt part, we are altogether barren, thinking it well if we can but ſay, Negatively, That we are neither Theeves, nor Murderers, nor Drunkards, nor the like, although wee cannot ſay Affirmatively, what wee are, or what good we doe.

Secondly, the Dove is an example unto us of a fourfold duty, in regard of her ſelfe. For I. She is chaſt; Conjugii fidem non violant [e]: Doves doe not couple with any, but with their Mates; Nec cum pluribus coeunt, nec conjugium initum deſerunt. Ariſt. They will neither wrong, nor change, nor forſake one another, after they have made their choice; but continue inviolable this bond of Love: And as they are chaſte, ſo alſo they are pure in their food, eating no uncleane thing at all, (Hier.) but living onely upon Graine. Ariſt. Wherefore thoſe are unlike Doves, who ſeeth the ſcum with the broth, (Ezek. 24. 6.) and live impure and uncleane lives; for we ſhould labour that we might be purged from all pollutions both of the fleſh and ſpirit, and perfect holineſſe in Gods feare, 2 Cor. 7.1. Wee ſhould examine our ſelves, whether wee be Doves or Vultures, Lambs or Wolves, whether with Pigeons, and Dove-like Peter, Acts 10. wee let no uncleane thing come into our mouthes; or like Swine, we feed groſly, and wallow filthily. Gualter applies this to ſuperſtition, and not injuriouſly; for nothing is more impure and filthy in the ſight of God, than to mingle humane things with divine, as a part of Gods worſhip, Col. 2. 18. II. She is conſtant, keeping her own common Loat or Dove-houſe [f]; and although ſhe doe flye from it, yet ſhe returns againe, Gen. 8.11. Eſa. 60. 8. Thus we ſhould remaine conſtant in the profeſſion and practiſe of Religion, and never ſtart aſide, or ſeparate our ſelves from it. III. She is wary: Iuxta fluenta manent [g], they remain neere the water, (Ergo columba dicitur à πολυμβᾶν. Rhod.) that ſo in the water they may ſee the ſhadow of the Hawke, long before he comes neere them: whence Solomon ſaith, His eyes are as the eyes of Doves, by the Rivers of water, Cant. 5.12.) Thus we ſhould labour to prevent the craft and ſubtilty of Satan, leſt otherwiſe he circumvent us; he is a Lyon, 1 Pet. 5. 8. and watcheth ſecretly for us, that he may devoure us: Now the way to prevent this, is by living neere the waters, that ſo we may ſee him afar off. Theſe waters are the Word, which we muſt heedfully heare, and religiouſly reade, becauſe it is a true glaſſe wherein we may ſee our ſelves, and eſtates, and enemies, and dangers, and the meanes and wayes how to prevent them, Iames 1.23, &c. IV. She is patient; for firſt, they are full of dangers, their yong ones being robbed and taken away from them, and themſelves chaſed, and aſſaulted, and preſſed upon, both by Hawks and Men. Secondly, they are very fearfull and timorous creatures, ſeldome or never ſafe, but when they are in the holes of the rock, (Hier.) and all their helpe is in the ſtrength of their wings, and ſwift flying away, (Eraſm. chil. 3. 6, 48.) Ezek. 7. 16. Thirdly, their mirth is mourning, and their ſongs (as it were) ſighes, and ſad Ditties: whence the Prophets ſay, that they have mourned as doth the Dove, Eſa. 38.14. and 59.11. Nahum 2. 7. Fourthly, yet they are unmindfull of all theſe, and builds their neſts againe, where they built them before, although (ſic vos non vobis nidificatis aves) her former care was taken for others, and her yong ones ſtollen from her. Thus we ſhould be like Doves, given to godly ſorrow, becauſe the end of this mourning is mirth: yea, if the Lord afflict us, we ſhould be Doves; that is, not labour to free our ſelves by rebellion, or revenge, or deceit, or any wicked meanes; for thus wee ſhould ſhew our ſelves to be Hawkes, and Kites, and birds of prey, and not innocent Doves. We muſt be patient both becauſe it is given us to ſuffer. (Philip. 1.28.) and becauſe our ſufferings ſhal be rewarded and recompenced with an internall and incorruptible weight of glory [h].

Thirdly, the Dove is unto us, an example of a threefold duty, in regard of our ſelves: for I. The Male or Cocke, governes well his family; Tum fœminam cogendo ad partum, tum extrudendo pullos e nido, (Ariſtot. & Barthol.) By a certaine compulſion he enforceth the female and Hen, to lay, and breed; and aſſoone as the yong ones can flye, thruſts them out of the neſt, that ſhe may breed againe. Thus we ſhould not be like thoſe, who are Lyons abroad, and ſimple Doves at home; who are cruell to others, but too indulgent (like old Eli) to their children; Tranquillo animo natus, non poſſum adverſari meis; they cannot croſſe, nor contradict them in any thing, but gives them all their will. Doves doe not thus, for they beat none but their owne yong ones, and thoſe onely Ad caſtigandum, when there is need of it: And therfore Parents muſt not ſpare the rod, and ſpill the childe; but with the rod of correction fetch 26 out that folly, which is bound in the heart of a child. II. The Doves are ſociable, and fly by flocks, and love to build in Dove-coats, where there are many together. Thus (like them) wee ſhould be affable to our neighbours, and to all; but principally to thoſe, who are of the houſhold of faith; For (Pares cum paribus) wee ſhould delight only in thoſe who are good, and aſſociate our ſelves onely with them. Doves build, and breed, and harbour with Doves, not with Crowes and Kites; and therefore it is a ſigne, that they are no Doves, who aſſociate and frequent the ſocieties of wicked men. III. If Doves meet with one, who ſtrayes, they bring it backe againe to its owne habitation: And therefore, although ſome thinke themſelves to be Doves, becauſe they tolerate all ſinne in others; yet indeed they are not; this not being the nature of this bird, to ſuffer any to ſtray, but to reduce, and bring home thoſe who wander. Indeed Charity ſuffers much, and is not provoked, nor angry; but yet it reproves, (Non odio ſed amore) in love, not out of hatred; as Saint Paul, who would have the fleſh to be deſtroyed, that the Spirit might be ſaved, (1 Cor. 5. 5.) becauſe to omit and forbeare, reproofe is the cruelleſt mercy.

Sect. 3. h Topſel. Hiſtor. animalium. Epiſt.

§. 3. Be wiſe as Serpents, innocent as Doves.] Topſell [h] obſerves here, that the Serpent is on the earth, and by innocency fly to the heavens; Or, as Serpents wee ſhould goe ſlowly about worldly things, but fly ſwiftly like Doves about heavenly things: Or, as Serpents, wee ſhould be armed againſt our enemies, but as Doves, be without gal. Moreover, the Serpent biteth the heele, ſo wee the roots of concupiſcence. That they may be quiet, they live in buſhes, where they may be hid, and not amongſt men: So wee that wee be not infected with ſinne, muſt avoid the company of wicked men. The Serpent ſwimmerh with his head above the water; ſo we muſt take heed, that we be not drowned in voluptuouſneſſe. The Serpent eateth duſt, and lyeth along upon the ground, ſo muſt wee through humility bee content in the pooreſt eſtate.

Verſe 17. 18. VERS. 17. 18. But beware of men; for they will deliver you up to the Counſels, and they will ſcourge you in their Synagogues, and yee ſhall be brought before Governors, and Kings for my ſake, for a teſtimonie againſt them, and the Gentiles.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Beware of men.

Queſt. 1. Who are meant here by men?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome referre this to the 16. verſe, and reſtraine it to Wolves: I ſend you forth as ſheepe in the midſt of wolves; where wee ſee that they are Men (beware of men) whom he cals Wolves; and this is frequent in the Scriptures, for the Holy Ghoſt to compare men to the beaſts, that periſh, and dumbe creatures; and that in a three-fold regard, viz. I. In reſpect of himſelfe, and his own nature; and thus, Firſt, in regard of his contemptibleneſſe, and vileneſſe, hee is compared to a Worme, Pſalm. 22.6. Secondly, in regard of his fooliſhneſſe, he is compared to a Horſe or Mule, Pſalmes. Thirdly, in regard of his ſinning, he is compared to an Oxe, Prov. 7. 22. Fourthly, in regard of his filthy luſt, and laſciviouſneſſe, he is compared to a Dog, Prov. 26. 11. and to Swine 2 Pet. 2. 21. &c. Fiftly, in regard of his perverſeneſſe, he is compared to Vipers, Matth. 3. 7. Sixtly, in regard of his craft, hee is compared to a Foxe, Luke 13. 32. II. Man is compared to bruit beaſts in regard of others; namely, Firſt, in reſpect of his pride, hee is compared to a Bull, Pſalme 22. 8. Secondly, in reſpect of his barking, and evill ſpeaking, he is compared to a Dog, Pſalme 22. 16. Thirdly, in reſpect of his covetouſneſſe, hee is compared to a Wolfe, Ezek. 22. 27. Fourthly, in reſpect of his cruelty, hee is compared to Lyons, Wolves, and wild Boares, Zeph. 33. Pſalme 80. 13. III. Man is compared to bruit animals, in reſpect of God, and Religion: And thus, Firſt, in regard of his refuſall to heare the word of God, hee is compared to an Adder, Pſalme 58. 4. Secondly, in regard of his hypocriſie, hee is compared to a Wolfe, Act. 20. 29. Thirdly, in regard of hereſie, hee is compared to a Wolfe, Mat. 7. 26. Fourthly, in regard of his ſluggiſhneſſe, and idleneſſe, he is compared to a Dog in the manger, or a dumbe dog, Eſay 56. 10. &c.

Secondly, ſome by theſe words, (beware of men) conceive, that our Saviour would have them to expect all men every where to bee their enemies: And it is true, that the Goſpel ſhall find ſome enemies, and oppoſition whereſoever it comes, Act. 17. and 19. and 28. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, but I conceive, that theſe words ſignifie ſomewhat more yet then this; namely, that hereby our Saviour would have us to take notice, that the very humane nature of man, is an enemy unto the preaching of the Goſpel: For he doth not ſay, Beware of Lyons, or Tygers, or Wolves; but beware of men: Homo homini lupus. Hence then obſerve: Anſw. 3.

That the nature of man, and the naturall man is alwayes an enemy to God, Religion, and the preaching of the Goſpel. Obſerv.

Why is the naturall man ſuch an enemy to the Word, and Goſpel, and God? Queſt. 2.

Firſt, becauſe he is wholly averſe from God, and will not be ſubject unto him, Rom. 8. 6. 7. 8. His Motto is, Ais nego, nego ais; what God bids, that he will not doe, what God forbids, that he will doe, juſt like the Florentine, who is mentioned in the ſecond Booke of the Courtier, of Count Baldeſſar Caſtilio; two enemies being together in the Councell-chamber of Florence, (as it hapneth often in thoſe Common-weaths) the one of them which was of the houſe of Altoviti, ſlept, and hee that ſate next unto him (for a ſport) ſtirring him with his elbow, made him awake, (although his adverſary, that was of the houſe of Alamanni, had ſaid nothing at all, as yet againſt him) and ſaid unto him, heareſt thou not what ſuch an one ſaith? Make anſwer for thy ſelfe, for the Lords require it. Whereupon he of Altoviti, all ſleepie, aroſe upon his feet, & without any more deliberation, ſaid: My Lords, I ſay the cleane contrary to that Alamanni hath ſpoken: To which Alamanni anſwers, why, I have ſaid nothing. Altoviti ſaid immediately: Then to that you will ſpeake. Thus averſe is Anſw. 1.

the naturall man, crossing and opposing, whatsoever the Lord doth, or shall command. Nitimur in vetita, we desire nothing so much as that which is denied us; like our Mother Eve, who longed for no fruit so much, as the forbidden fruit.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Law doth forbid all sinne, and the Gospel condemne all licentious liberty; Now we being given unto sinne, and not able to cease from it (2 Pet. 2.14.) Hence it comes, that wee are enemies unto the Gospel, which forbids and condemnes it. Naturall men being captives, and slaves, cannot endure to heare those things which are contrary to their Lord, and Master, Sinne.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Gospel would humble us (1 Pet. 5.6.) and teach us to deny our selves; and therefore we oppose & set our selves naturally against it, because we are proud, and lovers of our selves.

Sect. 2 §. 2. Tradent, They will deliver you.

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of this delivering?

Answ. 1. First, the word is not to be understood of betraying, but of accusing. They shall accuse you.

Answ. 2. Secondly, there were divers Tribunals, or Iudgement seats: the Sanhedrims, and Synagogues, and Princes, and Kings; as if our Saviour would say; There are no Tribunals, where you shall not be accused, and condemned. Where we may see and marke the wicked craft of Sathan, who rather endeavours, Lege, by law, then Vi, by force to oppresse, and persecute Christ; because this will prevaile, even with the good; as we see in the King, who, because there was a law decreed, therefore cast Daniel into the Lyons den; Daniel. 6. although it were sore against his will.

Observ. Whence wee may note; That humane lawes are often opposite to true Religion: this might be proved by many examples, both by the law made against Daniel, chap. 6. and that Idolatrous Decree, chap. 3. and those Popish Lawes in Italy, Spaine, and France; yea, by that Councell that condemned Christ, and that speech of the Iewes, Wee have a Law, and by that Law he ought to die.

Quest. 2. How doth it appeare, that mans law is often opposite to Gods truth?

Answ. 1. First, it appeares thus; the Law of God in it selfe is eternall, masculine, diurnall, cleare, immoveable, good; yea, the rule of goodnesse.

Answ. 2. The Law of man, is oft times nocturnall, darke, feminine, infirme, stained, and subject to errour: For seeing that all men are lyers, and uncleane, how can any bring a pure thing out of an impure? or truth out of a lye?

Sect. 3. §. 3. Ad Concilia, unto Councels.] There were in Israel, distinct Courts, consisting of distinct persons; the one principally for Church busines, the other, for affaires in the Common-wealth; the one an Ecclesiasticall Consistory, the other a civill Iudicatory: Now, although the tyrannie of Antiochus, and the troublesome times ensuing, had bred such a confusion in matters of government, among the Iewes, that an evident distinction can hardly be found in the New Testament; yet some foot steps, and imperfect tokens of both Courts are there observeable, principally in Matthew 21. 23. and 26. 3. where the chiefe Priests, and the Elders of the people, are named as two distinct Consistories; and each Consistorie seemeth to bee differenced by its proper name; For the Secular Consistorie was termed συνέδριον, a Councell, and the Spirituall termed συναγωγὴ, a Synagogue; as in this verse, They will deliver you up to the Councels, and they will scourge you in their Synagogues. 27

§. 4. Yee shall be brought before Governors, and Kings] Our Saviour in this verse, and so forward, doth foretell the Apostles of five sorts, or degrees of dangers, that would attend them, and annexeth (for their comfort) the remedies with the evils: as for example. Sect. 4.

First, the initiall and first degree of evils, is the hatred of the world, verse 22. Yee shall be hated of all men, for my names sake. Now the remedy against this evill, is perseverance, laid downe in the same place, in these words; but hee that endureth unto the end, shall be saved.

Secondly, the next degree of evils is worse, and more perillous; and that is, that the world shall not onely hate them, but also accuse and imprison them; this is laid downe in this verse, and the next. They will deliver you up to the Councels, and yee shall be brought before Governors, and Kings. Now the remedy against this evill is Confidence, laid downe, verse 19. in these words: When they deliver you up, take no thought, how or what yee shall speake, for it shall be given you, in that same houre, what ye shall speake.

Thirdly, the sequent danger is yet worse, and that is, scourging, and buffeting, under which all kinds of torments are understood: They will scourge you in their Synagogues, verse 17. Now the remedy against this evill, is this; It shall be given you in that same houre, what yee shall answer, verse 19. and that, in being thus handled, you are no worse dealt with all, than your Master was, verse 24.

Fourthly, the next degree is yet more sad, and this is banishment, and persecution from Citie to Citie; when they persecute you in this Citie, flee ye into another; where the evill is, persecution, and the remedy, flight, verse 23.

Fiftly, the last, but not the least kind of evils, is a bloody death for Christ; Brother shall deliver up brother to death, and the father the child, verse 21. But the remedy is this, that they need not feare those, who can but only kill the body, verse 28. 1 Parent. 1.

VERS. 23. But when they persecute you in this Citie, flee yee into another: for verely I say unto you, yee shall not have gone over the Cities of Israel, till the Sonne of man be come. Verse 23.

§. 1. When they persecute you, flee. Sect. 1.

Our Saviour here doth expresly teach us; That there is no other remedy against persecution, but only flight. Observ.

How doth this appeare? Quest. 1.

First, by these examples, Iacob fleeth, Gen. 27. and Moses, Exodus 2. 15. Act. 7. 29. and Elias, 1 King. 17. and David often, and the woman, the Church, Revel. 12.6.14. Answ. 1.

Secondly, it will appeare, by distinguishing the right of power given, from the use of that power; For, 1. Princes, and great ones have right, and power given from God, Rom. 13. 1. Answ. 2.

28 But II. The uſe of this power, comes from the corruption of their owne hearts. And yet becauſe they have their power from God, they are therefore to be obeyed, either with an active or paſſive obedience, and not to be reſiſted, or rebelled againſt.

Queſt. 2. Who are faulty here?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, they are too blame, who neglect the meanes; for although wee muſt lay downe our lives for Chriſt, when and where there is no evaſion, or way to eſcape; yet when wee may flee, we ought, and leave the ſucceſſe and event unto God, committing our ſelves wholly unto him.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, they are faulty, who rebell to free themſelves from perſecution; for our Maſter did not teach us this, who could have prayed for twelve legions of Angels, and have had them, but hee would not; hee permitted not Peter to wound with the ſword, but checked his too hot and forward ſpirit: And hence the Primitive Church, would rather ſuffer themſelves to be led as ſheepe unto the ſlaughter, then take up weapons againſt their Princes and Governors, although they were but Heathens [k]. Bellarmine and the Papiſts obey, Donec vires habeant, untill they be able to make their parties good, but no longer: Indeed, ſome thinke that it is lawfull to withſtand, if God give lawfull power, to repell an unlawfull force; the King of Navarre, withſtood King Henry of France, when he raiſed perſecution: But I confeſſe, I dare not ſubſcribe, or aſſent unto it; both becauſe Chriſt our Lord (who might by a lawfull troop of Angels, have overcome all his wicked adverſaries, would not doe it, but ſaid his kingdome was not of this world; and alſo becauſe Tertullian tels us; that the Chriſtians in the Primitive times, were able to have driven the Emperour out of his Dominions, and to have pulled him from his Throne, and ſufficiently to have defended themſelves, and their religion from the power of the Tyger, but they would not: And therefore as an unwarrantable thing, we, and all Chriſtians muſt carefully avoid it.

[k] Lege Apol. Iuſtin. & Tertul.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, they are here to blame; that in the times of perſecution flee not, but faint, yea, faile, and fall from their profeſſion, baſely and cowardly denying Chriſt, and the faith: Thus did the Samaritanes, and thus the Priſcillianiſts thinke they may lawfully doe: But our faith and Profeſſion is not to be forſaken, our Chriſt is not to bee denied, nor the truth to be betrayed, for any perill or paine whatſoever: yea, wee muſt be ſo farre from denying of Chriſt, that wee muſt not ſo much as bluſh, or ſo much as feare to profeſſe him, if wee deſire ever to come where he is [l]. A beautifull face is unfitly masked, it ſhould rather be ſeene; now the face of Religion is faire, beautifull and amiable; and therefore it were a ſhame to hide that head and face under a buſhell, which ſhould rather (like a Citie ſet upon an hill) bee held forth to the view of all [m]. Chriſt hath nothing in him, whereof we need be aſhamed, for he is the beſt of all; neither is there any cauſe why wee ſhould feare to profeſſe him; for he is the greateſt of all, and of all others moſt able to protect and defend us. There are ſome commended by the Spirit, and Chriſt, becauſe they loved not their lives unto death; and yet wee deſire to be ſo commended, wee muſt ſo labour to deſerve that commendation. Reade Act. 20. 24 & 21. 13.

Fourthly, they are faulty here, who although in the times of perſecution, they doe not fal from their profeſſion, unto ſuperſtition, yet they dare not openly confeſſe Chriſt and the truth: theſe muſt conſider, why they hide, and conceale Chriſt, and dare not openly profeſſe him? I. Haſt thou any thing in the ſecret cloſet of thy heart, which thou dareſt not reveale? that is, art thou afraid to reveale any truth, or truſt, or fundamentall point of religion? Is not religion, like the Church, Tota pulchra, all glorious and beautifull? Then why ſhouldeſt thou be aſhamed to profeſſe thy faith? A good face need not bluſh to be ſeene, neither any be aſhamed to ſhew forth the face of religion to any. II. Doſt thou feare danger, or death? why, remember that we muſt not eſteeme our lives in regard of Chriſt; wee muſt not to ſave our bodies, diſhonour our head, but labour to glorifie him in life and death; and if he require it, by our death, as well as our life. III. Art thou not aſſured of protection? Then remember, if thou have Chriſt, thou ſhalt have all things; yea, if Chriſt bee with thee, thou needeſt not feare, though all the world be againſt thee, Rom. 8. 31. 32, God hath decreed the end, and determined what ſhall come to paſſe: and therefore in all perils of this nature, wee ſhould ſay with the three children; We know that our God whom wee ſerve, is able to deliver us; but if hee will not, wee will ſuffer for him, Dan. 3. 18. Anſw. 4.

Fiftly, they are extremely to blame, who thinke, and ſtiffely maintaine, that it is not lawfull to flee in the times of perſecution; when our Saviour expreſly here ſaith, If they perſecute you in one Citie, then flee to another.

Is it lawfull then to flee in the times of perſecution? Queſt. 3.

First, ſome hold, that it is not lawfull for any at all to flee (Tert. ad Fabium) becauſe our Saviour expreſly bids us, not to feare thoſe who kill the body, Matth. 10. 28. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, ſome thinke, that it is lawful to flee; yea, more, that this charge of our Saviours is a poſitive Precept, and bids all to flee perſecution. Athanaſius. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, Auguſtine (Epiſt. 180.) ad Honoratum) anſwers two things hereunto; namely, I. For the place, Licitum eſſe non imperatum; that it is lawfull to flee in the times of perſecution, but is not commanded and enjoyned unto all. II. For the thing, Aliam fugam eſſe licitam & laudabilem, aliam verò illicitam & culpandam; that there is a lawfull and unlawfull flight, and a flight to be commended and condemned. And therefore to flee, is not given as a poſitive Precept to all, alwayes. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, in theſe, certainely it is lawfull to flee perſecution; as appeares by theſe reaſons. I. God is not to bee tempted; and therefore when any doore is left open for us to eſcape by, we muſt not ſtay and awaite the ſtroake of death: Meanes to prevent danger muſt bee uſed; and therefore Chriſt would not caſt himſelfe from the Anſw. 4.

the Pinacle, *Mat.*4. nor commit himſelf unto the Iewes, Iohn 2.24. Wee naturally are carefull to take heed of cliffs, and rocks, and waters; and therefore why not of the fire of perſecution? If wee ſhould ſee a Lyon in the way, wee would ſhunne him; yea, flee from him; why not therefore may wee flee from a Lyon and Tyger-like Tyrant, who ſeekes to quench the fire of his rage with our blood? II. Affliction is not alwayes determined catigorically unto, or upon us: and therefore wee ought not to betray our ſelves, or our owne lives; but ſtill uſe the means, and leave the ſucceſſe unto God. III. There is a time appointed by God, when his children ſhall ſuffer; but they are often perſecuted before this time of ſuffering comes; and therefore untill this appointed time comes, they may flee. It is ſaid plainely, Chriſt walked in Galilee, but hee would not walke in Iury, Iohn 7.1. and the reaſon hereof is given, verſe 6. Becauſe his time (that is, of ſuffering) was not yet come. IV. If wee doe not flee from our vocations, but that they will give us leave, and permit us, then wee may flee perſecution. V. If the Church may reape more profit, and God more glory (as it often times fals out) by our flight, than by our death; wee muſt then decline perſecution, and flee from it. Paul wiſhed that hee might live, in regard of the Church, although death in regard of himſelfe, was by much the beſt, *Philip.*1.23.24. VI. If our flight be no way offenfive to the weake brethren, wee may then flee.

Queſt. 4. Whether is it lawfull for Miniſters to flee from perſecution, or not?

Anſw. 1. First, that it is lawfull for Miniſters ſometimes to flee, appeares by theſe particulars; to wit, I. From the direction of Chriſt, given in this verſe; If they perſecute you (my Apoſtles, and Miniſters of the Goſpel) in one Citie, flee unto another: ſo before, verſe 16. I ſend you as ſheepe amongſt Wolves; therefore be wiſe as Serpents. II. From the example of Chriſt himſelfe, who withdrew himſelfe, when hee knew the Phariſees held a Councell againſt him, *Matth.*12.14.15. So alſo when he heard that Herod had beheaded Iohn Baptiſt, he departed from them by ſhip, and went into a deſart place, *Matth.*14.13. and againe the Iewes ſought to take him, but hee eſcaped out of their hands, Iohn 10.39. III. From the example of the Saints; Moſes fled, *Heb.*11.27. Elias fled, 1 *King.*18.13. and 19.3. And the Diſciples helped Paul to flee, Act. 9.25. IV. Si tota Eccleſia credit, non li et tibi manere poſt illos [p]: If all a Miniſters flocke ſhould flee away, then by no meanes is he to ſtay behind. V. From the Law of nature, men are taught to defend, and preſerve themſelves, and their lives, untill manifeſtly it appeare, that God the Lord of life, requires it; that is, we muſt be carefull of our ſelves, untill either our neceſſity, or Gods glory, or the Churches utility, doe perſwade unto the contrary.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, if any liberty be given, or occaſion may be taken, to diſcharge the worke of a Miniſter, and that there be no other left to execute this charge, or diſcharge this function, then it is not lawfull at all for him to flee.

Thirdly, it is unlawfull for a Miniſter to flee, if thereby his calling be hindered: For hence it was that Chriſt would not flee, Matt. 16.23. and 26.54. Yea, hence it was, that the Apoſtles fled from one Citie to another (according to the charge given in this verſe) becauſe they were ſent to preach the Goſpell [o]: and therefore when they could not bee permitted to preach in one place, they preached in another; that being their calling, and worke, and the calling and worke of every Miniſter; and is to bee performed, and executed in one place or other.

Fourthly, in a perſonall perſecution a Miniſter may lawfully make an eſcape; that is, if wait be laid for the precious life of ſome particular perſon, or Miniſter; I conceive that hee may lawfully flee for his life, as Elias did, but in a common perſecution, it is a ſhame for a Paſtor, (who ſhould be to all his flocke an example of conſtancie, & courage) to ſhew any fearfulneſſe, or too great forwardneſſe to flee away.

Fiftly, it is not lawfull for a Miniſter, to flee perſecution: If I. His flocke, and Church, and particular charge, be endangered by his flight; that is, bee either left as ſheepe without a ſhepheard, having none to teach them, or by their flight, have a Wolfe ſet over them, inſtead of a ſhepheard, who feedeth, not feedeth them; who devoureth, inſtead of nouriſhing them; who is more like a traytor then a teacher, labouring only to betray their ſoules, unto the enemy of their ſoules; and inſtead of edifying preaching, feeds them with infectious poiſon. Wo be to that man, who ſaves his body with the deſtruction of his ſoule: Woe be to that Miniſter, who ſaves his life with the death of his flocke, and his body, with the loſſe of their ſoules. II. It is not lawfull for a Miniſter to flee, if his preſence bee neceſſary for the edification of the Church; becauſe in thus doing, hee ſhould rather ſeeme to decline preaching, than perſecution.

Many object many things, againſt that which we firſt affirmed; namely, That perſecution is to be declined, and avoided by flight.

First, this Precept, If they perſecute you in one Citie, flee unto another, is not generall, belonging unto all, but particular, belonging only unto the Diſciples; and therefore is now abrogated, as are alſo the other two charges given them in the ſame Chapter; viz. Goe not into the way of the Gentiles, neither enter into any Citie of the Samaritans, verſ. 5. which are expreſly taken away, and made void, Matth. 28.19.20. Goe and teach all nations; and Mark. 16.15. Goe ye into all the world, and preach the Goſpel to every creature.

Anſw. 1. First, there is not the like reaſon of theſe Precepts, and that, as followes by and by.

Secondly, the Objecter [p] affirms, that this Precept (If they perſecute you in one Citie, flee unto another) is abrogated, but he confirmes it not, which he ſhould doe, if hee would doe any thing.

Thirdly, it follows not, thoſe two Precepts are corrected; therefore this is revoked, becauſe Chriſt himſelfe with his owne mouth rectified thoſe, (*Mat.*28.20. Mark 16.15.) but there is no place extant, where this Precept concerning Anſw. 3.

30 Flight, is either abrogated or corrected; which without doubt, Chriſt would have done, if there had been the ſame neceſſity of amending it. And therefore they falſly collect, thoſe two Precepts are amended; therefore alſo this third is amended: for I. This Precept concerning flying, doth not cohere nor depend upon the two former; and therefore it may not be drawne unto the ſame rule, and meaſured thereby. II. In this Chapter there are many other Precepts, which by the like reaſon, and ſame conſequence, they may as well contend to have been amended, than which, nothing is more abſurd: I will firſt frame their Argument (as it is formed by themſelves) and then caſt them ſome in the ſame mould.

Theſe two Precepts, Goe not into the way of the Gentiles, neither enter ye into any City of the Samaritans; are corrected, amended, and rectified.

Therefore ſo alſo is this, When you are perſecuted in one City, flee unto another: for they are both in one and the ſame Chapter. Benè habet.

Chriſt in this Chapter, ſends his Apoſtles before him, that they may teach through Iudea; and he gives them a forme of inſtruction, and direction, wherein are theſe Precepts:

Firſt, in this Embaſſage upon which he ſends them, hee teacheth to whom they muſt not preach: namely, to the Gentiles, and Samaritans; verſe 5. And ſecondly, to whom they muſt: To the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, verſe 6. And thirdly, what they muſt preach: That the Kingdome of Heaven is at hand: or that ſalvation is offered unto them by Chriſt, verſe 7. Fourthly, what they muſt doe: They muſt heale the ſicke, and cleanſe the Lepers, and raiſe the dead, and caſt out devils, verſe 8. Fiftly, what wages or reward they muſt expect for their Miracles and works: Freely ye have received, freely give, verſe 8. Sixtly, how they ſhall be provided of neceſſary things, and things needfull for their journey: They muſt provide neither gold nor ſilver, &c. but into whatſoever City they enter, they muſt enquire who is worthy therein, and there abide, verſe 9, 10, 11. Seventhly, what they muſt doe unto the rejecters, and refuſers of their meſſage: They muſt ſhake off the duſt of their feet, verſe 14. Eightly, what danger muſt they expect for their great labour in preaching? Perſecution: I ſend you forth as ſheepe among wolves, &c. verſe 16, 17, 18. Ninthly, to theſe dangers he addes the Antidotes and preſervatives againſt them, viz. I. To Simplicity and Innocencie, they muſt joyne Wiſedome, verſe 16. II. In the midſt of danger they ſhall be preſerved, and defended, verſe 19. III. They muſt perſevere and endure unto the end, if they would be ſaved, verſe 22. IV. By Flight, ſometimes it is lawfull to decline perſecution, and perill, verſe 23. Now from one or two of theſe, I argue:

Firſt, theſe two Precepts, Goe not into the way of the Gentiles, neither enter ye into the way of Samaritans; are abrogated. Therefore ſo alſo is this Precept, Preach the Kingdome of God. For they are both in one and the ſame Chapter.

Secondly, theſe two Precepts, Goe not, &c. are abrogated. Therefore ſo alſo is this, Be wiſe as Serpents, and innocent as Doves. For they are both in one and the ſame Chapter.

Thirdly, theſe two Precepts, Goe not, &c. are abrogated. Therefore ſo alſo is this, Perſevere and endure unto the end. For they are both in one and the ſame Chapter. Now if theſe be abſurd and falſe conſequences, ſo is alſo the reaſon and conſequence of the Objecter.

Secondly, God willingly and wittingly (they ſay) doth ſend affliction and perſecution: and therefore none ought to decline it, or to withdraw themſelves from it. Object. 2.

Firſt, I grant that the Antecedent is true, that all things are foreſeene, foreknowne, and diſpoſed of by God. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, the Conſequence is palpably falſe: for they argue thus; Perſecution is ſent from God, and diſpoſed of by him: therefore none ought to flee Perſecution. Now if this conſequence be good, then ſo alſo is this; Famine, War, Sickneſſe, and Death, are diſpoſed of by God; and therefore we neither ought to decline, or prevent, or eſchew them, which is abſurd. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, thoſe who flee in the time of Perſecution, doe it not for this end, that they may withdraw themſelves from the divine ordination of God, or decline that which God hath determined, but rather that they might fulfill his will: for they not being certaine of the houre and time of their ſuffring, muſt follow Gods call and direction; and therefore when there is a way left, and laid open, for them to eſcape by, they take it as done by God (whoſe particular providence is to be ſeene in all things) and therefore for feare of tempting his providence, dare not neglect the occaſion offered, but make uſe of it. Anſw. 3.

Thirdly, they object againe, every perſecution is good, and doth make both for Gods glory, and our good; for thereby we are made better, and called home unto our God: Therefore we muſt not flee from it, nor ſhun it. Object. 3.

Firſt, every perſecution is good, therfore none is to be declined, follows not: for Bonum aliud eſt per ſe, & ſua natura bonum, aliud per accidens, (Aret. prob. f. 4.) one thing is good of its owne nature, and another accidentally good onely: And thus things that are evill in themſelves, are made good by accident: as for example, It is good to dye, and to be with Chriſt; and yet death may be avoided in his time and place, it not being neceſſary that all occaſions of death ſhould be taken. Thus it is with perſecution, for it is good accidentally, as God uſeth it unto good, but in regard of the enemies of God, which are the inſtruments of perſecution, it is evill in it ſelfe; & therfore it is not neceſſary that every kind of evill ſhould be ſuffered at wicked mens hands, without any labouring or ſeeking to prevent it. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, thoſe words in the objection (Perſecution makes for Gods glory) are doubtfull and ambiguous, and may either be underſtood of ſuffring perſecution, or flying from perſecution: for ſometimes God is glorified by the patient, cheerfull, and conſtant ſuffring of the Martyrs: ſometimes flight in perſecution makes for Gods glory; the Lord ſometimes ſending perſecution Anſw. 2.

for this end, that his power may be the more illuſtrated thereby, while miraculouſly, and extraordinarily hee doth preſerve his children from the rage of their and his enemies, and elude and fruſtrate all the plots and endeavours of the perſecuters. And therefore the phraſe is true in this ſenſe, Every perſecution makes for Gods glory, either by abiding it, or by fleeing from it; but in this ſenſe the objection is Non-ſenſe. David by flight, eſcaped the traines which Saul had laid for him, and his eſcapes and preſervation did more magnifie and illuſtrate Gods glory, than if he had yeelded his necke to the ſword of the perſecuter at the firſt: yea we ſee what elegant Pſalmes David compoſed in his flight, wherein ſometimes he gives thanks unto God, that had made his feet like Harts feet, that is, ſwift to flee away.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, theſe words in the objection (By perſecution we are made better, and called home unto God) are ambiguous alſo; for herein that is attributed to Perſecution, which is proper to the grace of God, and his holy Spirit; to make us better, & to convert us unto God, is the work of divine grace, and cannot be aſcribed unto perſecution, as the cauſe thereof, except onely by accident; the Spirit of God being the true, primary, and efficient cauſe thereof.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly and laſtly, I anſwer, I. It is moſt true, that to flee in the time of perſecution is not alwayes lawfull; namely, either firſt, when flight hinders our vocation: & hence it was, that Chriſt would not flee, but cals Peter a Devill, for perſwading him unto it; becauſe then he ſhould have left the worke undone, for which he was ſent. Or Secondly, when the will of God is revealed; and thus Euſebius telleth us, that Chriſt forbade Peter to flee from Rome, becauſe he ſhould ſuffer there. Now II. On the other ſide it is as true, that it is not alwayes unlawfull to flee, and decline perſecution, as we ſee by Joſeph and Mary, who fled, and Paul, Act. 9. 25. and 14. 6. and 17. 14. and Chriſt himſelfe, Mat. 12. 15.

Queſt. 5. If flight in the time of perſecution, be ſometimes lawfull, ſometimes unlawfull; then how may we regulate our ſelves? or know when we may flee, and when we may not?

Anſw. Let us moderate, and ſquare our ſelves herein, according to theſe rules; namely,

Rule 1. Firſt, never flee except thou be perſecuted; we muſt not run away for idleneſſe, as ſome doe, before ever they be ſo much as queſtioned; or flee for feare, as Jonas did, before he had any juſt cauſe: The Text here is plaine, When you are perſecuted in one City, flee unto another; and therefore, where there is no perſecution for the Truth, but liberty and freedome given to profeſſe it, and to injoy the holy Sacraments, and the divine Ordinances of the Word and Prayer: there muſt be no flight, nor departure; for we muſt not flee for cowardlineſſe, but for conſcience ſake, becauſe we would not tempt the providence of God.

Rule 2. Secondly, in our flight, let us reſpect Gods glory, and before we flee, ſeriouſly conſider all the weighty circumſtances of both ſides, whether in probability God may be more glorified by our ſtaying, or by our going: for that muſt be our firſt and maine ſcope. 31

Rule 3. Thirdly, we muſt before we flee, reſpect the offending of the weake brethren: carefully avoiding (as much as in us lyes) the giving of offence unto any. Now weake Chriſtians are offended often by the fearfulneſſe, and too ſwift flying of the Miniſters, who leave their charges, and forſake their flockes upon every jealouſie, feare, and ſuſpition of danger; whereas on the contrary they ſhould be like good Leaders, the firſt in the field, and the laſt out; the firſt to aſſaile, and the laſt to retire; and by their example, animate their people, and harten them on to be conſtant and couragious in the profeſſion of the truth.

Rule 4. Fourthly, we muſt before we flee, reſpect our office, and function; examining whether that will be hindered by our flight, or not? Chriſt here ſaith, when they perſecute you in one Citie, flee unto another; thereby ſhewing, that Miniſters muſt not by their departure, hinder the preaching of the Word, or by their flight, forſake their function; but if they cannot be permitted without perſecution, to preach in one place, then they muſt go unto another to preach; becauſe their lives, rather then their vocations, are to bee laid downe, if it lye in their power. Thus Paul being perſecuted, flees, but he preacheth whether ſoever he goes, Act. 14. 6. And great reaſon there is for it, becauſe we are thereunto called and ſent: For Miniſters ſhould ſeriouſly conſider the end of their flight, and beware they flee not (with Jonas) that ſo they may bee free from preaching the Word, and live in eaſe and idleneſſe; but if one Citie perſecute them, they muſt flee unto another; that is, not caſt off the worke of the Miniſtery, but in other places and times, put out the Lords talent to uſury, and labour to improve their gifts to Gods glory, and the peoples benefit, amongſt whom they live.

Rule 5. Fiftly, in our flight, wee muſt reſpect the enemies of God, and religion; For if they bee ſo exaſperated, and incenſed againſt ſome particular Miniſter, that his preſence doth but make them ſinne more grievouſly, and ſet themſelves againſt the Church more maliciouſly, and cruelly, then they may lawfully depart [p]: but more of this by and by, in the ſeventh Rule.

Rule 6. Sixtly, in our flight, wee muſt reſpect the place wherein, and perſons with whom we live: For if the departure of the righteous doe haſten anger, and fury, and judgement from God upon the wicked, (as Lots departure did upon the wicked Sodomites) then we muſt not be haſty to depart, but labour rather to ſtand in the gap, and to with-hold judgement from them, by counſelling, adviſing, admoniſhing, and reproving of them, and by praying for them: yea, continuing to doe this, untill either the Lord by ſome particular command call us away; or untill they come to that maturitie and ripeneſſe of ſin, that they will not endure inſtruction, admoniſhion, or reproofe, but hate us for it, and ſet themſelves againſt us, and that not one or two, but generally; yea, in a manner, one and all; as the Sodomites did againſt Lot. Now, if in this caſe,

32 wee may say with the people of God, wee would have cured Babell, but shee would not be cured; let us therefore forsake her: And if wee have any command, or vision, or voice from God, as the faithfull in Ierusalem had, (who being in the Temple, heard a voice, saying unto them, Migremus hinc, let us flee hence; or as Ioseph had, Mat. 2.13.) then wee must follow the Lords call, and depart.

Rule 7. Seventhly, a Minister in his flight, should consider, whether he onely be not aimed at by the enemies of the truth; who for some certaine causes beare a personall hatred, and grudge against him; and if they could but procure his departure, then the Church should have peace and tranquillity. Chemnitius (harmon. fol. 1043. medio.) is of opinion, (and I dare not gaine-say it) that that Pastor sins against, and breakes the rules of Christian charity, who knowes that the Church is disquieted and disturbed only by reason of some personall hatred against him; and that the Church might have peace, and his particular Congregation leave to enjoy as good a Pastor, yea in every regard as able to edifie them as he is, if hee were gone; and yet rather than he will undergoe the trouble, molestation, and danger of exile, will stay, and suffer the Church in generall, and his particular flocke to be disquieted, and hindred from the peaceable enjoyment of the Word.

Rule 8. Eightly, in fleeing persecution, wee must respect the utility, and profit of the Church; that is, I. If the Church, by the retaining and keeping of a Minister, may reape spirituall gaine and advantage, then he is not to flee. Or II. If the Church may reape comfort, courage, or benefit, by the example of the Ministers constant and couragious suffering for the truth; then I conceive that he is not to flee, because a good Shepheard will lay downe his life for the good of his sheepe. But III. If a Minister can have no leave to discharge his Ministeriall function, no liberty to preach unto his flocke, or to pray with them, or to administer the Sacraments unto them; nor any hope by his presence, to benefit the Church, or to gaine more soules unto Christ; nor cause any occasion likely to be offred, whereby he may propagate, and further enlarge the kingdome of Christ: without doubt then, he may safely, and lawfully flee for his life, and shun persecution. IV. If a Minister can see in likelihood, that if some certaine time, or brunt were over, he might much benefit and comfort the Church; but for the present there is small hope, either of saving his owne life, or doing good to his flocke; hee may then for a while run unto the Wildernesse, and hide himselfe in the Desart, and shelter himselfe, untill the showre bee over. Now all these Rules belong unto the Ministers of the Gospel, because the Text speakes only of their flight in the times of persecution.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Untill the Sonne of man come.

Quest. 1. How doth Christ come?

Answ. Christ comes diverslie, namely

First he came unto us, In carne, in the flesh, when he tooke our nature upon him. This is past.

Secondly, In gloria, in glory, when hee comes unto judgement, Rom. 2.6. This is to come.

Thirdly, In protectione, in preservation, and defence: Behold, I am with you, unto the end of the world, Matth. 28.20. that is, by protection, care, and speciall assistance. This Comming is alwayes, and thus he is for ever present with his children.

Fourthly, In donatione Spiritus, he comes unto us by the donation of his Spirit; and this is either extraordinary (as he came to the Apostles, giving singular and extraordinary gifts unto them, Act. 2.) or ordinarie: and thus he comes unto all the faithfull in their regeneration, when new and spirituall habits, principles, and graces, are infused into them.

Fiftly, In interno lumine, In internall illumination, enlightning the heart, and opening the eyes; for he enlightens every one that comes into the world, Iohn 1. 9. Now these two last are one, and our only and true felicity. Whence we might observe,

Observ. That true happinesse doth consist in the presence of Christ in the heart: when Christ came to Zacheus, then came salvation to his house, and consolation to his heart: when Christ comes unto the heart of the faithfull, then; and never untill then, comes joy unto their soules; then, and never untill then, are they truely happy. And therefore this we should desire first, that is, before and above all other things, Psalm. 27.4. and 42.2.

Quest. 2. Why are wee made happy by the fruition of Christ?

Answ. 1. First, because then, and never untill then doe wee truely see: A blind man would thinke himselfe a blessed man, to enjoy his sight; now wee by nature are blind, and our eyes are opened, and our understandings enlightned, onely then, when Christ enters into the soule: And therefore, happy are we when he comes unto us, Psal. 4.6. & 80.3.7.19.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because the comming of Christ unto the soule, doth represent the beatificall vision (wherein our chiefest heavenly happinesse doth consist;) therefore thereby wee are made truely blessed. Reade Psalme 16.11. and Psalme 98. and Matth. 5.8.

Observ. Christ by this title, Disciple, would teach us: That those whom he receives, he will teach. Reade for the proofe hereof, Esay 54.13. Ierem. 31.33. &c. Proverb. 8.1. and 9.1.

Quest. How, or how many wayes doth Christ teach his servants?

Answ. 1 First, he teacheth them by his Word, Matth. 28.19. Prov. 8.1. and 9.1.

Answ. 2 Secondly, he teacheth them by his Spirit, Psal. 143.10. and 1 Iohn 2.27. And without this, the other is ineffectuall: and therefore we must first labour to be taught by the Word, and cleave close unto that, Esay 2.3. it being then cause of regeregeneration (1 Pet. 1.24.25.) And then labour to be taught inwardly by the Spirit. For without his gracious illumination wee can know nothing aright. 1 Cor. 8.2. certainly humane knowledge muſt needs deceive us, and miſleade us; and therefore we muſt not be inſtructed by that Tutour, nor conſult with fleſh and blood, concerning the things of our ſoules, (Rom. 8. 6, 7, 8, and 1 Corinth. 3. 18.) but labour that we may be taught of God. The truth of this more particularly appeares thus, namely,

Firſt, naturally we know not God aright, but have theſe groſſe, and falſe conceits of him, viz. I. We thinke, that he ſees not our ſinnes, Pſalm. 50. 21. But the Spirit of God teacheth us that his eyes are over all the world, and run too and fro through the whole earth: from which leſſon proceeds theſe things.

Firſt, a fearefulneſſe to ſinne: for if God ſee us, how ſhall we then dare to do evill?

Secondly, a watchfulneſſe over our waies in ſecret; becauſe God ſeeth all things, therefore we dare not privately do evill, or ſo much as conceive, or imagine miſchiefe in our hearts.

Thirdly, becauſe God ſeeth all things, therfore the Spirit workes in us humiliation, and godly ſorrow for our evill thoughts, Yea

Fourthly, hence comes alacrity, and cheerfulneſſe in the wayes of God, and every good work, becauſe God ſees them and writes them in his Book of remembrance. Malach. 3. II. We think that God is like unto us, (as the Heathens conceit of their Gods, as Saturne, Iupiter, Mars, and the reſt) and that ſinne is not ſo diſpleaſing unto him as we ſay it is. But the bleſſed Spirit teacheth us, that he is of ſuch tender, and pure eyes, that he cannot endure to behold any thing that is evill. (Habak. 1. 13.) And hence the ſpirituall man is afraid to commit the leaſt ſinne. Matth. 12 36. and 1 Theſſal. 4. 6. III. We thinke that God may be deceived: but the Spirit admoniſheth us to take heed, that we do not deceive our ſelves, for our God will not, nor cannot be mocked. Galath 6. 7. When we remember that God ſits in heaven, and there markes the words and works that are done and ſpoken upon the earth, (Pſal. 2. 6.) it makes us the more carefull to purge the inſide of the Cup as well as the outſide, Math. 23. 26. IV. We thinke, that God is all mercy, and no Juſtice; but the Spirit teacheth us that he is both, according to his owne Proclamation of himſelfe: The Lord, the Lord God, merciſull and gracious, long-ſuffering and abundant in goodneſſe and truth, keeping mercy for thouſands, forgiving iniquity, tranſgreſſion, and ſinne. And this the Lord would have us take notice off, (leſt the ſight of our ſinnes ſhould make us deſpaire) And a God that will by no meanes cleare the guilty, but will viſite the iniquity of the Fathers upon the Children, and upon the Childrens Children, unto the third, and fourth generation; and this the Lord ſpake, leaſt carnall ſecurity, and naturall ſtupidity ſhould make us to preſume.

Exod. 34. 6, 7.

Secondly, naturally, we are ignorant of Religion and the word of God. For I. we thinke it to be a hard ſaying. Iob. 6. 60. But the Spirit of God doth teach us, that it is ſweeter then honey, (Pſalm. 119. 103.) and more precious then gold. Pſalm 119. 127. yea the very joy and rejoycing of our hearts. Ierem. 15. 16. If we attentively reade Pſalm 119. we ſhall ſee what exceeding joy David felt and found in the wayes and workes of Religion. II. We thinke Religion but fooliſh curioſitie: but the Spirit teacheth us that without it there can bee no ſalvation. Hebr. 12. 14. 33

Thirdly, we do not know our ſelves, having made a Covenant with death, and being at an agreement with hell: yea, ready to ſay that wee are rich and abound in all things. Revel. 3. 17. But the Spirit teacheth us, that theſe are but deceivable dreames ariſing from blind pride: the truth being this, that we are poore, naked, blind, and miſerable. Eſa. 28. 14

Verſe 25. It is enough for the Diſciple, that he be as his Maſter, and the ſervant as his Lord; If they have called the Maſter of the houſe Beelzebub, how much more ſhall they call them of his houſhold? Verſe 25.

§. If they have called the Maſter Beelzebub.

Sect. Queſt. 1. How was Chriſt called Beelzebub? that is, Divell.

Anſwer. One may be called Divel two manner of waies; namely, either

Firſt, by nature; and thus all, and onely the reprobate Angels, are called divels, Or

Secondly, by participation, or by imitation of a diabolicall corruption: And in this ſenſe the Jewes falſely call Chriſt Divell, and Chriſt truly calls Iudas Divell, I have choſen you twelve, and one of you is a Divell [q]. [q] Ioh. 6. 70.

Queſt. 2. What doth Beelzebub truely ſignifie?

Anſwer. The text here reades Βεελζεβὺλ, Beelzebul; but Syrus reades בעל-זבוב Beelzebub: according to whom the vulgar reades B. and it appeares that it is to be written with β, not with λ, from 2. King. 1, where Abaſia, being ſicke, ſends to Baalzebub, the God of Ekron, to know whether hee ſhould recover or die. Tremellius interprets Baalzebub, Sminthium, becauſe Apollo was wont to bee called Sminthius, from the Mice he killed, which they of Myſia called σμίνθας. Pliny (lib. 29. naturall hiſtor. cap. 6.) calleth this God of Ekron Myjodem, (but more rightly he is called Myothen) that is, the God of flies, or the driver away of flies: and Nazianzen (contra Iulianum) witneſſeth, that this God Baalzebub was made in the faſhion of a flie. And the name is compounded of בעל Baal, that is, a Maſter, or a Prince, or a Lord; and זבוב zebub, that is, a flie. And therefore this was the name of an execrable Idoll of the Akenorites, and was called Baalzebub the God of flies, becauſe they beleeved that he deſtroyed, & expelled the deadly and peſtilentiall flies, which ſo grievouſly infeſted, and moleſted the inhabitants of that Iland: Or elſe (perhaps) he was ſo called, becauſe when the Divell did give any Oracles, or anſwers concerning the health of any, hee appeared unto the Inchanters in the forme of a great flie: Now by the name of this Idoll the Jewes went about to diſgrace the miracles of Chriſt, and conſequently 34 ſequently his Doctrine, which was confirmed by Miracles, hoping hereby to overthrow it, and to caſt ſuch an aſperſion upon it, that none ſhould beleeve it[r].

VERS. 27. What I tell you in darkneſſe, that ſpeake ye in light: and what ye heare in the eare, that preach ye upon the houſe tops. Verſe 27.

§. Preach ye on the houſe tops.

Queſt. 1. What is meant by this Phraſe?

Anſw. The phraſe, On the houſe tops, is taken from the forme of buildings among the Jews, mentioned Deut. 22. 8. When thou buildeſt a new houſe, then thou ſhalt make a battlement for thy roofe, leſt any man fall from thence. So Iudg. 16. 27. and Acts 10. The meaning therefore is, In tecto, id eſt, In publicis congreſſibus; Preach upon the houſe tops, that is, in publike aſſemblies. Here therefore our Saviour doth expreſſe two things; namely, First, that they muſt conceale nothing, but make knowne the whole truth of Chriſt, taught unto them[f]. Secondly, that theſe things muſt be publiſhed, and publikely preached. Whence we may note,

Obſerv. That the profeſſion of Chriſt is not to be concealed, and hidden, but apparantly to be held forth to the view of others. Reade Rom. 10. 10. Hebr. 4. 14. and 10. 23, &c. For First, the Spirit is a fire, and that a ſhining fire, (Quis poteſt celare ignem) And therefore if the Spirit of God be in us, it will ſend forth both heat and light, Marke 4. 21. Iohn 5. 35. Secondly, the heart directs the tongue; for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth ſpeaks; Mat. 12. 34. Rom. 10. 10. and 2 Cor. 4. 13. And therefore, if there be grace in the heart, there wil be gracious words in the mouth. Thirdly, faith feares no dangers; for it apprehends Chriſt alwayes preſent, Mat. 28. 20. And therefore, if there be faith in the heart, there will be profeſſion in the mouth, and practiſe in the life.

Argu. 1. The Papiſts affirme, that the Sacramentall words are not neceſſarily to be ſo ſpoken, or publiſhed, that the people may underſtand them, unto whom the Sacrament is to be adminiſtred. We affirm the contrary, thus: Every word which the Apoſtles heard from Chriſt, is a word to be preached, and publiſhed, and not to be ſo muttered or whiſpered, as that it cannot be heard. But the Sacramentall word was heard from Chriſt, by the Apoſtles: Therefore it is to be preached, and publiſhed, and not to be muttered. The Minor Propoſition is both plaine, and alſo granted: and the Major is evident from this verſe, What I tell you in darkneſſe, that ſpeake ye in light: and what ye heare in the eare, that preach ye on the houſe tops. Hence Saint Paul, 1 Cor. 11. being about to recite the Sacramentall word of the Euchariſt, begins with this Preface, I received from the Lord, that which I alſo delivered unto you. Afterwards, 1 Cor. 15. 3. I delivered unto you, firſt of all, what I received; which words were ſpoken when he was about to intimate, or rather perſpicuouſly to handle, and plainly to preach the word of the Reſurrection. From whence follows a facile and faire concluſion: As the word of the Reſurrection thus delivered by the Apoſtle, was not muttered and mumbled without ſenſe, or after the manner of a charme; ſo neither is the Sacramentall word of the Euchariſt. Chamier. lib. 1. de Sacram. cap. 16. Arg. 4.

It is queſtioned between us and the Church of Rome, whether thoſe things are to be written, and taught in the Vulgar and Mother-tongue, which are contained in the Scriptures, or not? Argu. 2.

Now they holding the Negative, and wee the Affirmative, we argue thus:

Whatſoever things are to be preached, and publiſhed in all tongues and languages, and thoſe which are commonly and generally knowne, may alſo be written in the ſame tongues and languages.

But whatſoever things are contained in the ſacred Scriptures, are to be preached unto all, in the tongues they beſt know and underſtand.

Therefore nothing with-holds or lets, but that they may be written in the ſame tongues alſo.

The Major is cleere, becauſe neither words nor letters are uſed for themſelves, but onely for the things ſake which are ſignified therby: wherfore, if the things ought to be knowne unto all, then certainly their ſignes ſhould not be unknowne unto any.

The Minor is proved, both by Precepts and Practiſe. First, by Precepts, in this verſe, and chap. 24. 14. and Mark 16. 15. and Mat. 28. 19. Secondly, by Practiſe; for before any of the Apoſtles preached, there was given unto them the gift of Tongues, that ſo every one that heard, might underſtand, Acts 2. If any deſire to ſee this Argument enlarged and proſecuted, let him look upon Chamierus de Canonis uſu. lib. 11. cap. 3. Tom. 1. pag. 391.

VERS. 28, 29, 30, 31. And feare not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the ſoule; but rather feare him who is able to deſtroy both body and ſoule in hell. Are not two Sparrows ſold for a farthing? And one of them ſhall not fall on the ground without your Father. But the very haires of your head are all numbred. Feare ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many Sparrows. Verſe 28, 29, 30, 31.

Illyricus (lib. de ratione Cognoſcendi. ſ. literas. Tract. 1.) pitcheth upon theſe verſes, to teach yong Miniſters, how to raiſe Doctrines, and how many ſorts of Doctrines they may raiſe from a Text.

First, Διδασκαλία. I. It is neceſſary that wee ſhould publikely profeſſe the knowne truth ſo often as there is need. II. Confeſſion of our faith Faith is to be made, though we hazard thereby, the loſſe of our goods and lives. III. We ought to contemne our lives, in regard of Chriſt and his Truth. IV. Eternall torments are prepared, to be inflicted upon all thoſe both in body and ſoule, who are afraid to deny Chriſt and his Truth.

Truth. V. He who would make a right confeſſion of his Faith, muſt with a full purpoſe of heart, yeeld himſelfe to bee guided and directed by God. VI. The providence of God is not onely generall, but alſo ſpeciall, taking care of our leaſt things, even the haires of our heads.

Secondly, Ἔλεγχος. I. They are deceived, that thinke it ſufficient to aſſent in heart to the truth of the true Religion, and to approve their conſciences unto God; but in the meane time, think it lawfull, with or before men, to ſay or unſay, to affirme and deny what they will in Religion, according to the condition of time, and place, and perſons; principally, when the danger of death hangs over their heads, or attends upon the profeſſion of Chriſt and Religion. II. The Epicures erre, who deny Divine Providence, thinking that it doth not ſuit with the Majeſty of God, to regard humane and terrene things. III. The Stoicks, who thinke all things to be governed by Fate, are far from Truth. IV. They are erroneous, who thinke, that beſides thoſe things which are governed by the wiſe ordination of Divine Providence, there are others which are ruled by chance and fortune. V. The Pelagians are out of the right way, who yeeld more than is meet, or true, viribus humanis, to the power of Nature; namely, That it is in Mans power and Free-will, to embrace Faith, to perſevere in the ſame, and boldly to profeſſe it unto the end. VI. They do amiſſe, who labour more for fraile and externall things, than for internall grace and goodneſſe.

Thirdly, Παιδεία. I. We muſt to the utmoſt of our power, endeavour, that we may have the true feare of God before our eyes; becauſe the true God is to be feared before all men. II. We muſt learne ſuch a contempt of humane things, that we may alwayes deſire to leave them, and to goe hence, that ſo we might be united unto our Chriſt in Heaven. III. The conſideration of the ſpeciall Providence of God, ſhould make us remember that God alwayes looks upon us, and is preſent with us; and therefore we ſhould implore his ayd, and perſwade our ſelves that he will helpe us, and deliver us in a fitting and ſeaſonable time.

Fourthly, Ἐπανόρθωσις. I. Theſe words of our Saviours, doe correct and taxe the negligence of thoſe, who doe not by fervent prayers, beſeech God ſo to inflame their hearts with a true and ſincere love unto his ſacred Majeſty, that for his Names ſake they may not be afraid to lay down their lives. II. The ſtupidity of thoſe men, are here blamed, who doe not ſee nor acknowledge all things to be ordered by the Providence of God. III. Thoſe are juſtly to be reproved, who neglect to give thanks unto God, that he hath and doth vouchſafe to defend and governe both us, and all our affairs by his ſpeciall Providence. IV. They deſerve to be taxed, that abuſe any of the good creatures of God, ſeeing that he takes care even for them alſo, and his Providence is over them.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Feare not him that can onely kill the body; but fear him that can caſt body and ſoule into hell.

Our Saviour ſheweth here, that man can goe no further then the body, but God can deſtroy both body and ſoul: but yet we reade of one who bragged that hee killed both his enemies body and ſoule. The Hiſtory is this. Henry, Stephen (in his world of wonders, Chapter 18.) telleth us of an Italian, who having nouriſhed malice and rancour in his mind a long time, yea, for the ſpace of ten yeares, yet diſſembling friendſhip with his foe: at laſt being together, unawares threw him down, ſetting his Dagger to his throat, ſwearing to kill him, except hee would deny, and renounce God, and all part and intereſt in Chriſt; which hee at length (to ſave his life) with much unwillingneſſe did: whereupon the wicked wretch having his deſire, preſently ſtabbed him with that Dagger which was at his throat, and afterwards bragged that he had taken the braveſt, and moſt exquiſite revenge of his enemie, that ever man did, for he had deſtroyed both his body and ſoule. 35

Queſt. 1. What things doth the Scripture ſilence, as being not neceſſary to be knowne.

Anſwer. The Scripture ſpeaks nothing diſtinctly, concerning the place of this Hell (whereinto God can caſt both body, and ſoule) nor of the manner of the torture thereof, nor of the nature of thoſe outward things that belong thereunto: becauſe theſe are not neceſſary to bee knowne by us. There are two things which concerne us, whereof the one concerns us little, but the other concernes us much.

Firſt, it concernes us but little, to know whether Hell bee in the Aire or in the concave of the earth, or of what longitude, latitude, or profundity it is.

Secondly, it concerns us much, I. To acknowledge that there is a Hell; and II. To know that the torments thereof, are eternall, perpetuall, and inſufferable, extending both to body, and ſoule, and III. to labour, indeavour, and pray, that we may never come there.

In hell there's nothing heard, but yells, and cryes;
In hell the fire nere ſlakes, nor worme ere dyes:
But where this hell is plac'd [my Muse] ſtop there;
Lord, ſhew mee what it is, but never where[a].

Queſt. 2. What things doth the Scripture expreſſe, as being neceſſary to be knowne of us?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it teacheth us that there is a ſpirituall death of the ſoule, as well as a corporall of the body: and that by and after death the ſoule of the wicked is caſt into Hell but at the Reſurrection both ſoule and body. Revel. 21. 8.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the Scripture teacheth us the fruits and effects of this ſpirituall death; namely, ſorrow, Lamentation, howling, and unſpeakable torments, gnaſhing of the teeth, and the like. Reade Luke. 13. 28. and 16. 23.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Are not two Sparrowes ſold for a farthing? &c.

Obſerv. In theſe words our Saviour doth teach us, That the providence of God doth governe all things, yea even the leaſt things. Reade Pſalm 104. 21. and 145. 15. and 148. 8. and Hebr. 1. 3.

God

36 God doth not take care for Oxen. 1. Corinth. therefore not for all things.

Object. First, God cares for ſomethings for themſelves
Anſw. 1. (and thus he cares for his Children) and he cares for other things for others, namely, men, or the elect, and thus he cares for the creatures.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, that ſaying of the Apoſtle is to bee underſtood comparatively: that God doth not care for Oxen in compariſon of men.

Queſt. 1. How doth it appeare that the providence of God rules and governes all things?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it appeares by the example here given; For our Saviour I. Names a poore contemptible bird a Sparrow. And II. A bird of ſmall value, or price; for two of them are ſold for (ασσαριον) a farthing: Now although the true value of this coyne is not certainly known, yet all grant that it is leſſe then a penny: Our Tranſlaters render ασσαριον, a Farthing; the Marginall note telleth us that it is a halfpenny Farthing, Thomas Thomaſius ſaith it is worth onely ¼ of a penny: Beza ſ. Luke. 12. 6. ſaith it is ½ of an Engliſh penny: Marlocrats ſ. Math. 10. 29. ſaith that it was foure pence in French mony. The Rabbines call it Iſor, and ſay that it containeth eight mites, (Druſius in Præter Luk. 12. 59.) And Godwyn in his Jewiſh Antiquities pag. 324. ſaith that Aſſarium valueth of ours in preciſe ſpeaking, q^a.--q. Whatſoever it was worth, certainly it was of leſſe worth then a penny in our Engliſh coyne; and we know that a penny is but a thing of a ſmall value: according to that of Catullus, Omnes unius aſſis eſtimemus And yet although two of theſe poore Birds be ſold for a Farthing, and a quarter of a Farthing, or thereabouts not one of them falls to the ground without the providence of God. III. Our Saviour doth not onely name a ſmall bird, a ſparrow, of a ſmall price but hee alſo uſeth a diminutive phraſe: for the word here is στρουθιον, which is a diminitve τὸ στρουθος; now this ſignifies Paſſer, a Sparrow, that Paſſerculus a little Sparrow. And therfore hence it is cleare and evident, that the moſt contemptible, and leaſt things, are not excluded from the providence of God.

Anſw. 2 Secondly, it is further evident thus: becauſe it belongs unto the Omnipotency of God.

I. To governe all thoſe things which he hath created. And II. To direct them to that end, which himſelfe hath ordained.

Queſt. 2. What is providence?

Anſw. The providence of God is (Ratio, ordinandi præcedentis ad finem. Thom.) a wiſe ordering, and diſpoſing of things unto their end. And therefore Providence is the principall part of Prudence. And therefore we muſt endeavour to ſee God in all things, and not looke to intently upon ſecond cauſes: For ſo we ſhall bridle our anger and revenge, againſt our brethren, and our murmuring againſt our God.

Queſt. 3. Who erre about this doctrine of divine Providence?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, the Epicures who deny all Providence.

Anſw. 2 Secondly, the Platonicks; whereof there are two ſorts, namely, I. Some held that there was a divine Providence in heaven, but not in earth. Thom. That God by a ſpeciall providence did rule and governe all things above, but nothing below. Iob. 22. 14. II. Some of them held a providence in Spirituall, and eternall things, but not in corruptible.

Thirdly, the Maniches, who held (Duo principia, or Duos Rectores,) two Lords, Rulers, and diſpoſers of all things, namely, I. God, by whoſe providence all good things were ordered. And II. Sathan, who did diſpoſe of all evill things, and actions. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, the Stoicks who connect the ſecond cauſes, by a certaine fatall, and inevitable neceſſity. Anſw. 4.

What are Chriſtians bound to beleeve, and hold concerning this divine Providence? Queſt. 4.

Firſt, we muſt hold, that God hath ordained nature, able to produce her effects, even by naturall cauſes, and that not neceſſarily but contingently. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, we muſt hold, that God doth accompany, corroborate, and helpe (or co-worke) in all theſe: for from hence it is ſaid, that in him we live, move, and have our being. Acts. 17. 28. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, we muſt hold that God (when it ſeemes good unto himſelfe) can ſo bridle, and change theſe cauſes, that they ſhall not produce their effect, either contrary to his ſecret will, and decree, or to the good of his children. Examples of this we have in Scripture, when moſt violent and moſt naturall cauſes, could not produce their effects; fire could not burne, Fire could neither burne nor ſcorch (though nothing more naturall) Dan. 3. Lyons could neither kill, nor eat, though nothing more uſuall, Dan. 6. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, we muſt hold, that although the Subject of divine providence be principally rather in Practical things, then ſpeculative. Thom. 22 q. 49. Art. 6. 2. yet it is alſo, I. In all contingent things. Thom. 1. 22. 2. and 4. and 103. 5. And, II. In all mutations, and changes of the Univerſe. Thom. 1. q. 22. 2. And III. In evills Sub ratione bone. Anſw. 4.

§. 3. Your haires are numbred. Sect. 3.

Many things might be obſerved from theſe words, your haires are numbred: namely,

Firſt, that haire is but an excrement, and the moſt contemptible part of man.

Secondly, that all our haires are obſerved, and not one of them ſhall be loſt.

Thirdly, Chriſt doth not ſay, that the haires of our eye-lids are numbred, but of your head where there is the greateſt plenty, and the leaſtuſe.

Fourthly, your haires, (Non ſolum numerandi, ſed & jam numerati) are not onely to be numbred hereafter, but are already numbred. But I omit theſe.

What is our Saviours ſcope and meaning in theſe words? Queſt. 1.

To ſhew that God takes care for all things which concerne the elect, and faithfull. Hence then Note that the Providence of God, doth particularly preſerve all the elect, in al their affaires, yea in the leaſt temporall things. The Lord doth take that ſpeciall care of them, that all things (by his all wiſe providence) turne to their good. Romans 8. 28. Pſalme 23. 1. and 33. 18. and 34. Answer. Obſerv.

15. Esa. 43. 1. and Deuter. 2. 7. and 8. 5. and 28, 2, 14, Levitic 26. 4, 14. Besides the consideration of these two particulars will further confirme this truth: to wit,

First, God hath made the Angels ministring spirits for the good of of his people, and children[t]. And [t] Psal. 34. 7. and Mat. 18. 10 and Hebr. 1. 14.

Secondly, the Lord forbids us to care, (1 Pet. 5. 7.) and commands us to walke in faith. 2 Corinth. 5. 7. yea that we may the readilier obey, he promiseth to give us all things. Math. 6. 33. And to be more tender over us, then ever Mother was over Child. Esa. 49. 15. And therfore blessed are the righteous in all things, for they shall lacke nothing that is good. Psalm. 34. 10.

Quest. 2. What good things doth the Lord provide in part, and bestow upon his Children.

Answ. 1. First, hee Provides possessions for them, and hee will give the earth unto them. Psalm. 37. 22 Math. 5. 5.

Answ. 2. Secondly, hee will bestow blessings upon them; For I. He will give them raine in their need. Amos. 4. 7. And II. Hee will free them from danger and evill. Acts. 27. 24. And III. He will give unto them issue, and posterity Psalm. 127. and 128.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, he will direct them in all their waies, and pathes. Psalm. 37. 23.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, he will give good things unto them for their body: For

I. He will provide food for them: If they hunger hee will give them bread, if they thirst hee will give them drinke, Reade Genes. 21. 17. and and 28. 20. and 1 King. 17. 14. II. If they bee naked hee wil provide garments for them Deuter. 8. 3. III. If they be sicke hee will cure and heale them, Psalme 147. 3. and 2 King. 5. 1. and Esa. 38. IV. If they mourne, he will comfort them, Mat. 5. 4. Esay 60. 2. 3. V. If they be in debt, hee will releeve them, 2 King. 4. 3.

Verse 23. 33. VERS. 32. 33. Whosoever therefore shall confesse me before men, him will I confesse also before my Father, which is in heaven: But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

Quest. What is observable in these words?

Answer.

Sect. 2. The Reward of { Professors, wherein are two things, Viz. Apostates, & deniers, wherin also are, } { The Person; Whosoever shall confesse me before men. §. 1. The Reward: I will confesse him before my Father in heaven. §. 3. The Person: Whosoever shall deny me before men. §. 3. The Reward: He shall be denied by me, before my Father. §. 4.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Whosoever shall confesse me before men.

Quest. 1. What is the sense and meaning of these words?

First, ὁμολογεῖν, to confesse, hath many significations; namely, 32

I. Properly, it signifies to consent, or to say as another saith (Simile loqui) and that either, First, Idem affirmando, by affirming the thing affirmed: φαρισαῖοι δὲ ὁμολογοῦσι, (Act. 23. 8.) But the Pharisees confessed, that there were both Angels and Spirits, and a Resurrection. So, οἱ ὁμολογήσαντες: The Fathers confessed also, that they were Pilgrims, and Strangers in the earth, Heb. 11. 13. Or, Secondly, Idem negando, by denying the thing denied: καὶ ὡμολόγησε, John confessed, and denied not, that hee was not the Christ. II. Hence the word is transferred unto the confession of sinnes: ἐξομολογούμενοι, confessing their sinnes, Matth. 3. 6. and 1 John 1. 9. Yea, III. Hence it is transferred to Promises: Herod, (ὡμολόγησεν αὐτῇ) promised to give her whatsoever she should aske, Matth. 14. 7. So Luke 22. 6. ἐξωμολόγησε. And Judas promised to betray him unto them. And IV. Hence the word is to a particular profession of Religion applied, thus: Saint Paul answering, for himselfe, saith unto the Governour, ὁμολογῶ δὲ τοῦτό σοι. But this I confesse unto thee; that after the way which they call heresie, so worship I God. So, the Iewes had agreed; that if any man did confesse (ὁμολογήσῃ) that Iesus was the Christ, he should be put out of the Synagogue, John 9. 22. V. It signifies to praise and magnifie the name of God: every tongue, (ἐξομολογήσεται) shall confesse (τῷ θεῷ) to God, Rom. 14. 11. and 15. 9. where wee may observe; that in this last sense, ὁμολογεῖν, is put with a dative case; but in the other significations and acceptions, it is either put with an Accusative, or with this Proposition ἐν: And in this verse, and Luke 12. 8. Now in the present Text, ὁμολογεῖν, doth signifie the profession of Christ and Religion,

Secondly, ἐν ἐμοὶ. In me. Beza thinkes this to be an Hebraisme, because ἐν is redundant; but I rather imagine, that it makes the phrase more emphaticall: because to beleeve in God is more then to beleeve God: and therefore the meaning is; whosoever shall professe his whole hope and confidence to be in Christ, and shall make him the Rocke, upon which he fastens the Anchor of hope, and builds his faith: he shall be owned by Christ at the last day. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, before men, shewes that our profession must be publike, and published, and not concealed. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, these words, πᾶς ὃς ἐστι, every one that shall confesse me, &c. doth shew, that the rule is generall, and belongs unto all, Phil. 2. 11. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, the meaning therefore of these words, whosoever shall confesse, &c. is, that Religion must be publikely professed; yea, so professed, that we may be sure and certaine to be rewarded and acknowledged by Christ. Hence then three things offer themselves to bee considered of, namely; I. That Religion is outwardly and publikely to be professed. II. That outward profession of religion alone, is not sufficient unto salvation. III. That that profession which shall be rewarded by Christ, with eternall life, Answ. 5.

38 must be adorned with purity and piety, both externall, and internall.

Observ. 1. First, Religion must not only bee beleeved with the heart, but also publikely bee professed with the tongue. Reade Acts. 7. 51. and 9. 22. 29, and 18. 9. 28. Rom. 10. 9. 10. Heb. 10. 23. 25. Phil. 1. 14.

Quest. 2. Why must we outwardly, and publikely professe Religion?

Answ. 1. First, because God commands it, 1 Pet. 3. 15.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it hath a promise of salvation, in the next verse, Rom. 10. 10.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because the neglect hereof hath a fearefull commination annexed with it: those who will not professe Christ before men, shall be denied, and utterly disclaimed by Christ. Reade Marke 8. 38. Luke 9. 26. and 18. 8. and 2 Timothy 2. 12.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because a constant and bold publike profession of Religion, is a meanes to edifie, and build up others; and on the contrary, a fearefull concealing, and neglect thereof is scandalous, offensive, and a stumbling stone unto others, Philip. 1. 12. and 2. 15. 16.

Answ. 5 Fiftly, because the publike profession of our faith makes for Gods glory, Phil. 1. 20. whereas on the contrary, the deniall of Christ is the greatest dishonour we can doe unto his name; as though Christ or Religion were things to bee ashamed of, Luke 9. 26. whereas truth blusheth not, neither feareth, nor seeketh corners.

Answ. 6. Sixtly, because by denying of our Religion, wee sinne against the truth, and consequently against Christ, John 14: 6. And therefore Paul durst not doe it, 2 Cor. 13. 8.

Answ. 7. Seventy, because wee need feare nothing; Christ having promised to give his Holy Spirit unto us, to teach us, and to comfort us, John 1. 14. Ingreditur carcerem nobiscum. (Tertul.) If for the profession of Christ and Religion, we be cast into prison, the Holy Ghost then will goe with us into the prison, as wee see by experience, Act. 4. 31.

Quest. 3. Who are blame-worthy in this particular?

Answ. 1. First, they are to blame, who contemne and despise the profession of Religion: For out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh: and therefore, where there is no profession, there is no religion.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they are faulty, who palliate and cloake Religion: Certainely, the fearefull shall never enter into heaven (Revelat. 21. 8.) as followes by and by; because externall profession is distinguished from the action of the heart, and is added over and above. If thou shalt confesse with thy mouth, the Lord Iesus, and shalt beleeve in thine heart, that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved, Rom. 10 9.

Quest. 4. Who palliate and cloake Religion, or hide and conceale the profession thereof?

Answ. Temporizers, and time servers: and that either:

First, in the time of peace; namely, either I. Because they living in wicked places, dare not professe Religion for feare of derision. Or II. When in wicked company, they counterfeit themselves to be such; like the fish Polypus, taking upon them any shape; or the Chamelion, any colour, changing their garbe, according to the circumstance of time and place. Or,

Secondly, in the time of affliction and persecution: when I. They dare not publikely professe the truth. But II. Publikely dare deny their profession. The hearbe Asolis is made green with heat drops, but shrinkes into the ground with winter showres: So many flourish, and make a brave shew of religion, in the times of peace and prosperity; but when once the sharpe winter of persecution comes, then they whither, die, and forsake the truth.

Is the publike profession of religion alwayes, and every where necessary? Quest. 5.

First, every where, and alwayes without any difference, to professe publikely what we beleeve, is neither necessary nor convenient: as for example; if a mad, and frantick man should come into a roome, where many were, with a sword drawne; and should say, that which of them soever did confesse, and professe himselfe to be a Christian, should presently be slaine; then at such a time, or before such a person, it were unadvisedly done to confesse, & professe our faith. Answ. 1.

Secondly, it is alwayes, and every where required, that we should never, either deny our faith, or by any meanes professe that which is contrary to the truth, or true faith. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, affirmatively, wee are then enjoyned to professe publikely Christ and religion, when there is any hope, or probability by our profession; either to glorifie God, or to edifie our brethren, although there may be likelihood of danger to our selves: For the necessity of the meanes is measured, and conjectured by the relation it hath unto the end. Answ. 3.

But it is dangerous for our selves, in some places to professe the truth, although there may be hope, that glory will redound unto our God, and benefit unto our brethren thereby. Object. 2.

Danger in this case is to be despised, Act. 20. 24. and 21. 13. but of this more by and by. Answer.

Holy things must not bee given to the dogs: and therefore we need not professe Christ, or the truth before wicked men, or in wicked places. Object. 2.

First, this command was giveu to the Apostles, and Ministers, not to preach to those who contemned, and despised the word, as in the 14: verse of this Chapter. Answ. 1.

Secondly, but we are no where taught to deny the truth, or to cover it with a lye: Imo ingenuam fidei confessionem, Deus severè exigit, licet mundus non ferat, Calvin. ſ. God requires, and exacts at our hands an ingenuous and free confession of our faith, although the world brooke it not: Whence Saint Peter commands us to glorifie God in our hearts, and to be ready to give an account of our faith, unto every one that shall demand a reason thereof, 1 Pet. 3. 15. And therefore the righteous dare not dissemble or double. Answ. 2.

But Saint Paul saith plainely, hast thou faith, have it with thy selfe before God, Rom. 14. 22. Therefore the profession of our faith to God, is sufficient, and to man is needlesse. Object. 3.

First,

Answ. 1. First, the Apostle there speakes not of justifing, or saving faith; but of a full perswasion of the use, or not use of indifferent things; and this may bee retained, and concealed; that is, wee must so use them, as that our brother be not offended thereby.

Answ. 2 Secondly, this Precept Paul gave for those times, when men were not certainely perswaded of the use of Gods creatures; to wit, meats and drinke, &c. But it belongs not unto us, or our times.

Object. 4. But God is a Spirit, & must be worshipped in Spirit, Iohn 4.24. Therefore externall profession is not necessary at all.

Answ. God requires the worship of the heart, as appeares by the first Precept; and the worship of the outward man, as appeares by the second, third, and fourth: Yea, the Lord ought to have both the body and heart, but κατ' ἐξοχήν, the heart, Prov. 23.26. Because the outward worship of the body, may be without the inward of the heart; but the inward of the heart cannot bee without the outward of the body: For if God have the soule and inward man, he will certainly have the outward.

Quest. 6. How is Christ and Religion to be professed?

Answ. 1 First, we must labour to have Christ, and Religion in our hearts; for outwardly to professe them, and not inwardly to possesse them, is but a lying profession, 1 Cor. 12.3. and 1 Iohn 4.2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, having Christ in our hearts, let us then professe him with our tongues, and in our tenents and opinions; For Christ is denied. I. If wee deny him to bee God and man: Yea, II. If wee deny him to be our Iustification Redemption, and Salvation. Yea, III. If we deny the truth of the doctrine, contained in the Scripture. Bulling. ſ.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ and the truth, are to be professed publikely, especially before Persecutors, Act. 5.20. and 17.17.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, our profession must be in subjection, & an acknowledgement of our obligation thereunto: wee must publikely professe Christ, and wee must confesse, that it is our dutie so to doe, 2 Cor 9.13.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, our profession must be constant, that is, wee must: I. Suffer and endure whatsoever is laid upon us for our profession; not giving it over, for any danger whatsoever. And II. Wee must persevere in our profession, and not for any wearisomnesse whatsoever, fall, or forsake our first love.

Answ. 6 Sixtly, let our profession bee fervent and zealous, that so wee may glorifie our Christ, unto whose glory we are ordained, Ephes. 1.6.12.

Quest. 7. What things must we professe, or outwardly shew forth?

Answ 1. First, shew forth thy faith, and religion; let the world know what thou holdest, (Act. 24.14.) for a palliating of religion doth much hurt the weake brethren. Hence observe these cautions, or rules, viz. I. Wee must courageously, and resolutely oppose our selves against the kingdome of sinne, and the abetters thereof. II. Towards those which are weake, we must carry our selves more gently, Iude, verse 22. III. In circumstances we must suffer as much as wee can, for the peace of the Church, as Paul did. IV. We must avoid, and beware of all unprofitable controversies, or medling with heresies, which are antiquated, and long since left. V. In the meane time we must not bee wanting to the truth of religion; but hold and maintaine all the principall and fundamentall points thereof, Act. 20.20. 39

Secondly, shew forth the love of the Word: let others see what delight wee have in reading, hearing, studying, and meditating of the Word of God, Phil. 2.16. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, we must shew forth an holy life, and unblameable conversation, 1 Tim. 4.12. Titus 1.16. and 2.7. Answ. 3.

Quest. 8. What things hinder us from the profession of Christ, and religion?

Answer. First, there are some impediments, which hinder us from the profession of religion, viz. I. A feare of persecution, or derision: many fly from their colours, because Religion is derided, scoffed, and persecuted: And therefore, the remedy against this impediment, is Resolution; resolve that neither height, nor breadth, nor affliction, nor persecution, nor death, shall separate us from the profession of the truth. II. The love of the world, and the thorny cares thereof, keepes many from Christ, and the profession of the truth, Mat. 13.22. And therefore the remedy against this, is neither to love the world, nor the things that are in the world, 1 Iohn 2.15. III. The love of sinne, and iniquity, which is condemned by religion: wherefore we must eschew evill, and doe good, Psalme 34.14.

There are two sorts, or kinds of hinderances, namely,

Secondly, there are some impediments which hinder others from profession; namely, I. The evill examples of Professors: The Grecians made a Horse, but the Trojans brake downe the wals, and brought it into the Citie, by which the Citie was destroyed. Balaam gives wicked counsell, and the Israelites follow it, and so are ruined, and plagued, and the enemies of the Church lay snares for her destruction; but it is the Professors of Religion, that let destruction enter in; For seldome doth a scourge, or judgement come upon a Church, untill there be a backsliding of the Professors thereof. The sinnes of Professors are like dead Amasa, they hinder the mareh, and put men to a stand, whether they were best to embrace that Religion, or no, the Professors whereof doe such and such things. The remedy therefore against this impediment, is; for all Professors to be watchfull over their lives, and to labour to be upright towards all men, as well as holy towards God. II. The indiscretion of Professors, hinders others from a good profession: whereas on the contrary, God is glorified by the wise, and holy conversation of Professors among the wicked, Titus 2.10. and 1 Pet. 2.12. If a religious person be undiscreet, or imprudent in his carriage 2 Sam. 12. 12.

and converſation: Then, Firſt, he expoſeth himſelfe to contempt, & opens the mouthes of the wicked to exclaime againſt him. Yea, Secondly, hee expoſeth the Goſpel to contempt, which he profeſſeth, and conſequently cauſeth the name of God to bee blaſphemed, and evill ſpoken of, Rom. 2. 24. And therefore, if wee would not be bridles to keepe any backe from religion, but ſpurres to ſpur them forward; let us in our lives, converſations, actions, and dealings, be wiſe as Serpents, and innocent as Doves. III. Diſſenſion amongſt Profeſſors, either in opinion or practice, is a great let and hinderance to the profeſſion of the Goſpel. And therefore, for the removing of this blocke out of the way, let all Profeſſors remember theſe three things, viz. Firſt, that theſe diſſenſions are kindled by Satan, and come from his malice; For hee knowing how ſtrong the bond of Chriſtian Love is, (Epheſ. 4. 3. Coloſſ. 3. 14.) labours by all meanes to ſow ſome ſeeds of ſedition, or contention, that ſo this bond of perfection may bee broken. Secondly, the Profeſſors of the Goſpel muſt remember; that it is very reproachfull, in regard of thoſe who are without, thus to diſſent and jarre among themſelves: yea, many reject all religion, becauſe we doe not agree together in one. Thirdly, the beſt Profeſſors, and Practicioners ſhould remember, that theſe differences and diſagreements of opinion in matters of religion, doe kindle the hearts of Profeſſors, and make them often times to hate one another, to ſeparate, and forſake the ſociety one of another; yea, ſometimes to refuſe to communicate, or to ſerve God publikely one with another. Thus we reade of the ſeparation of Paul and Barnabas, Act. 15. 39. And of the too deepe rooted hatred, which is betwixt the Lutherans, and Zwinglians, or Calviniſts; and of thoſe bitter rents which are amongſt our ſelves, through the difference of opinion. And therefore let us endeavour after unitie and concord: and that, I. In opinion, that we may all ſpeake and hold the ſame things, 1 Cor. 1. 10. Phil. 2. 2. and 3. 15. 16. II. At leaſt in heart; and this Chriſt deſires and prayes for, John 17. 11. 21. and 2 Cor. 13. 11. This I confeſſe, will hardly be without the former, (Phil. 1. 27.) for wee ſee, that difference in opinion, doth diſioynt often times hearts once loving; and that few are truely intimate, except thoſe of the ſame opinion, and ſect. III. Wee muſt labour after union in ſociety, according to the example of the Faithfull, of whom the Scripture witneſſeth ever and anon, that they were gathered together, Act. 1. 14. and 2. 1, 44. 4, 6. And then IV. There will be an union of our prayers; For thoſe who are one in opinion, one in heart, and one in ſociety, will undoubtedly pray one for another, Act. 4. 24.

Queſt. 9. What are the effects of a zealous, and good profeſſion of Religion?

The hatred, and oppoſition of the world. Anſwer.

Firſt, true and holy profeſſion doth make a man odious unto the world; as appeares I. From theſe places, John 15. 19. and verſe 21. 22. of this Chapter, where the world is ſaid to hate Chriſt, and his Apoſtles, and all, that by a holy profeſſion follow Chriſt. II. From theſe following particulars; namely.

Firſt, Religion naturally is odious to nature; and therefore alſo the religious.

Secondly, Religion doth condemn & reprove the world; and therefore the world which cannot endure reproofe, hates religion, and the profeſſors thereof, by whom ſhe is reproved. The world (ſaith Chriſt) hateth me, becauſe I teſtifie of it, that the workes thereof are wicked, John 7. 7.

Thirdly, the zealous Profeſſors of Religion are culled out of the world, and ſeparated from it, and therefore they are hated by it. Becauſe (ſaith Chriſt to his Apoſtles) Yee are not of the world, but I have choſen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you, John 15. 19. Let not then the Profeſſors of the truth, expect the love of the world, but arme themſelves againſt the hatred thereof, Mat. 16. 24.

Secondly, Profeſſion of Religion breeds and begets warre with the world, or Chriſtian Profeſſion doth not give peace with the world, but rather a ſword, verſe 21. 22. of this Chapter. For I. The wicked worldlings require ſilence, and forbid all checks or reproofes: they would doe evill, but they would not heare of it. If John Baptiſts tongue reprove Herod, then Herods tongue commands the Baptiſts head to bee hewen off, Marke 6. 24. II. The world deſires applauſe, and praiſe, ſhe would doe evill, and yet deſires to bee commended, and extolled, and flattered, though falſely. Yea, III. The world deſires (beſides theſe) practiſe with them in their wickedneſſe, Prov. 1. and Pſalme 50. worldlings would not only have the tongues of Profeſſors tied, and their mouthes ſtopped from reproving of them; but rather their mouthes open to commend them in their wickedneſſe; but alſo they deſire, that Profeſſors would not be ſo holy as they are, but communicate with them in their ſinnes, and wicked practices. Now theſe things are not to be done, neither theſe requeſts to be granted: Becauſe the Spirit of God will not ſuffer, nor permit, that either:

Firſt, the glory of God ſhould be prophaned, Act. 17. 16. Or,

Secondly, that the Law of God ſhould be violated and broken. Or,

Thirdly, that the truth ſhould be ſuppreſſed or oppreſſed by a falſe religion, Or Fourthly, that the bretharen or members of Chriſt ſhould be injured: either by errour, or ſeducements, or oppreſſion, or the like: And therefore in theſe things the profeſſours of religion interpoſing themſelves they muſt expect affliction and perſecution [c]. [c] Mat. 16. 24. & Hebr. 12. 8.

Queſt. 9. Are all they hypocrites and falſe profeſſours, that dare not alwayes boldly profeſſe Chriſt and Religion? Anſw. 1.

There will alwaies be ſome of the bretheren that that dare not publikely profeſſe Chriſt: There were Seven Thouſand in Iſraell, which had not ſerved Baal, and yet the Prophet could not ſee them, 1. King. 19. 18. and ſo Rom. 11. 4. In the Church there are ſome who are but Children, and newly borne. Hebr. 5. 13. Some who by nature are timorous, and fearefull, and ſome who are ſluggiſh and lazie.

Queſt 11 To whom may this be applyed?

Anſw. 1 Firſt, to men, and ſtrong profeſſours of Religion: For I. When they ſee this, they muſt learn not to deſpiſe them for it, for although they bee timorous and weake Babes, yet they are brethren and ſo called by S. Paul. Philip. 1. 24. Yea II. When they ſee this, they muſt learne conſtantly, and boldly to profeſſe Chriſt, that ſo they may winne and encourage them, by their example, unto the ſame confidence and reſolution. Iames 5. 20. And then they ſhall ſhine, as the Sunne in the firmament. Daniel. 12. 3.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, this may be applied to infants, and weake profeſſours, who muſt remember, I. That hereby they are an offence unto their brethren. Matth. 16. 23. And II. That they diſhonour God by their fearefullneſſe, and faintneſſe, And III. That hereby they diſtruſt both the love and power of Chriſt; as though hee could neither free them from affliction, nor preſerve them from it, And IV. That by this their timorouſneſſe they provoke God to anger, who can inflict as great yea, greater, and more heavie torments upon them, then perſecutors can. We reade of one Wolſey, who being in priſon at Ely, in Queen Maries time, amongſt other of his friends, to whom he had diſtributed ſome moneyes, he ſent 6s. 8d. to one Richard Denton a Smith, who lived at Well in Cambridge-ſhire, with this meſſage, that hee marvailed that he tarried ſo long behind him, ſeeing he was the firſt, that did deliver him the booke of Scripture into his hands, and told him, that it was the truth; and therefore hee deſired him, that he would make haſt after him as faſt as he could. Thomas Hodilo (to whom the monye was given, and by whom the meſſage was ſent) delivered both the money and meſſage, and received this anſwer from Denton, I confeſſe it is true, but alas I cannot burne. Now marke, how hee that could not burne for the cauſe of Chriſt, was afterward burned againſt his will, when Chriſt had given peace to his Church. For in the Yeare of our Lord 1564. On Tuesday being the 18. of Aprill, his houſe was ſet on fire, and while he went in to ſave his goods, he loſt his life, and hee who durſt not burne for his God, did burne for and with his gold [d]. And therefore all profeſſors ſhould feare to faint in Chriſts cauſe. V. Weake Profeſſours muſt remember, that it behoves them, to grow up from Children to men of ripe yeares; and not to bee alwayes babes. Hebr. 6. 1. Ioſh. 23. &c. Hebr. 13. 5. And thus much for the firſt obſervation.

Secondly, outward profeſſion alone, is not ſufficient unto ſalvation: or it is not enough for a man publikely to profeſſe Religion, or confeſſe Chriſt: Sathan himſelfe gives unto Chriſt outward worſhip. Mark. 5. 6. and our Saviour himſelfe telleth us, That not every one that ſaith unto him Lord, Lord, ſhall be ſaved. Matth. 7. 21. Man chooſeth not an apple by his skinne, nor God a good man by his face. 41

The Wolfe hath as ſmooth a skinne as the ſimple ſheepe, the ſower Elder a fairer barke, then the the ſweet Iuniper. Truth is naked, falſhood covered, An empty veſſell hath a lowder ſound, then a full barrell. And therefore the Lord will not doe, as man doth, looke upon the outward appearance; but hee lookes upon the heart (1 Samuel 16. 7.) and requires not the outward worſhip without the fervice of the heart, as is evident from his owne mouth. For I ſpake not unto your Fathers, nor commanded them in the day that I brought them forth of the Land of Egypt, concerning burnt offerings and ſacrifices. But this thing commanded I them ſaying, obey my voice, and I will bee your God, and you ſhall be my people &c. Ierem. 7. 22. 23. That is, God did not firſt of all, or principally command ſacrifices (for they were inſtituted for another end then to pleaſe God) but he chiefly requires obedience: And elſewhere hee doth not require profeſſion. Eſa. 1. 11. 12. that is, without practiſe. Proverb. 23. 26. Mark. 7. 6. The Nightingall hath a ſweet voice, but a ranke fleſh: the Storkes in India have a pleaſant cry, but a bloody bill; and many have a forme of Godlineſſe, who deny the power thereof, from which God will turne away his loving countenance. 2. Tim. 3. 5.

Queſt. 12 How doth it appear that an outward confeſſion of Chriſt, and profeſſion of Religion, is inſufficient unto ſalvation?

Anſw. It appears evidently from theſe five particulars, namely,

First becauſe it is the manner of the hypocrites to waſh the outſide of the cup and platter, and not the inſide, to whom belongs onely a double woe. Mathew 23. 25. And therefore the bare outward Profeſſion, and performance of Religion, and religious exerciſes, will not ſerve the turne.

Secondly, becauſe the externall profeſſion of Chriſt and Religion, often ſprings from an evill roote: namely,

I. Sometimes from the love of promotion and preferment; thus many in the flouriſhing age of the Church, counterfeit holineſſe for preferments ſake. And II. Sometimes from a feare of puniſhment. And III. Sometimes from the ſhame of men. And IV. Sometimes from the praiſe of men, and eſtimation of the world. Matth. 6. 1. 5. 16. V. Sometimes from gaine, and filthy lucre. Mathew. 23. 14.

Thirdly, becauſe God is a Spirit, and therfore they that worſhip him muſt worſhip him in Spirit, and in truth. Ioh. 4. 24. that is,

I. They muſt worſhip him with their hearts. And II. They muſt worſhip him with their whole hearts. And III. They muſt worſhip him only, (and no other) with their hearts. Wherefore the outward worke alone is not ſufficient.

Fourthly, becauſe the heart is a great way from the mouth. Pacis quidem nomen ubique eſt, res autem nuſquam. Iſidor. All men talke of peace, but few keep it, Eccleſia nomine armata ni, ni, & contra eccleſiam dimicatis f. Many ſeeme to arme themſelves, with the name of the Church, who yet indeed fight againſt the Church. Diabolus excogitavit novam fraudem, ut ſub ipſo nominis Chriſtiani titulo fallat incautos g. The Devill hath bethought him of a new deceit, namely, under the name of a Chriſtian to delude the ignorant, and unwarie. And therefore ſeeing there are ſo many who draw neare unto God with their mouthes, and not with the heart, (Mathew 15. 9.) a bare profeſſion onely will neither ſerve God, nor ſave us. Men naturally would have the outſide to be good, although the Lineing be but rotten ragges: and their cloath to have a fine dye, though a courſe threed: The Fowle may have faire feathers, and ranke fleſh: the Fiſh glиſtering ſcales without, and yet rotten: The Amber-Stone will burne outwardly, & Freeze inwardly; and the barke of the Mirtle Tree, which growes in the mountaines in Armenia, it as hot as Fire in the taſte, and as cold as water in the operation. Thus the heart lieth a great way diſtant from the mouth, and therefore the mouth is not alwaies the interpreter of the heart, but often faints and counterfeits that which the heart thinkes not: Wherefore the outward confeſſion of Chriſt, and profeſſion of religion wil not ſave us.

Fiftly, many relapſe, and fall finally from their profeſſion; as appeares plainly by theſe places. Mathew 13. 20. Iohn 6. 66. Hebr. 10. 25. Now onely they who endure unto the end ſhall be ſaved. And therefore outward profeſſion will not ſave us.

Queſt. 13 How many ſorts of falſe, and outward profeſſours are there?

Anſw. Foure, to wit:

First, ignorant; who are without the knowledge of the grounds, and principles of Religion.

Secondly, ſtupide, and blockiſh; who profeſſe (ore tenus) with their mouth, but without ſenſe or life.

Thirdly, unwilling: thus Julian the Apoſtate in ſpite of his teeth, was forced to acknowledge the divine power of Chriſt. Vicisti Galilæe. and thus alſo doth Sathan. Math. 8. 29.

Fourthly, mixt; thus the Samaritanes worſhipped God and Idols. 2. King. 17. 27. &c.

Qu. 14. How may wee know whether we be onely outward profeſſours?

Anſw. 1. Firſt negatively, wee cannot know it by our outward appearance, for that may deceive us: Silenus Pictures were without lambs and Doves, but within Wolves and Tygres: ſo many inwardly are ravening Wolves, who outwardly ſeem innocent lambes. Experience teacheth us, that the fineſt Scabbard hath not ever the braveſt blade; nor the goodlieſt Cheſt, the moſt rich treaſure, neither is every bird with white Feathers a ſimple Dove; nor every faire Lais, a faithfull Lucrece. And therfore let us neither meaſure our ſelves by our outward appearance, nor truſt in our externall profeſſion, but ſearch our hearts, and our inward man. Anſw. 2.

Secondly, the notes and markes of outward profeſſours are theſe, namely,

I. They thinke profeſſion better then practiſe, and to ſeeme, better then to be good indeed. The Macedonians thinke the hearbe Beet, (which looketh yellow in the ground, but blacke in the hand) better ſeen, then touched: So many thinke it better to looke upon Religion, then to undertake it, and hold the ſpeculation thereof to be preferred before the practiſe. The Camelion draweth nothing into the body but aire, and nouriſheth nothing in the body but Lungs: ſo many heare and reade onely for Table talke, and outward ſhew, but not for true practiſe. And therefore let us examine our ſelves whether wee thinke it better to ſeeme good, or to be good; and whether we take more paines to approve our hearts unto God, or our outward man unto the world. II. Outward profeſſours are more given to their pleaſure and belly, then to the ſervice of their God. Philip. 3. 19. For many walke and yet are the enemies of the Croſſe of Chriſt; whoſe end is deſtruction, whoſe God is their belly, and whoſe glory is their ſhame, who mind earthly things. Theſe thus deſcribed by the Apoſtle, had been profeſſours, and it ſeemes ſtill were: and yet theſe foure things are predicated of them: namely,

Firſt, that they are enemies of the Croſſe of Chriſt. And Secondly, that their end is deſtruction. And Thirdly, that their belly is their God. And Fourthly, that they place their glory in their ſhame; that is, ſerve their pleaſures more then God. III. Outward profeſſours are more highly conceited of themſelves, then inward are, and exalt themſelves above others: Thus the Papiſts call themſelves Catholikes, and all others Heretikes, and ſome of the Heathen called themſelves Deiſts, and and all others Atheiſts: yea the Turk will be the true Muſulman, and all others muſt be Pagans. IV. Outward Profeſſours for the moſt part grow worſe and worſe; being profeſſours in youth, and prophane in age. The leaves of Polyon are white in the morning, but blew before night. Ameſta a ſweet flowre at the riſeing of the Sunne, becomes a weed at the ſetting. The Ravens in Arabia being young have a pleaſant voice, but in their age a horrible cry: So many beginne in the Spirit, and end in the fleſh; at firſt ſeeming to be young Saints, but afterwards appeare to be old Devils.

V. Outward Profeſſours are more ready to diſcerne then to chooſe; more able to perceive what is ſpoken, then to practiſe or remember what they heare; although the life of profeſſion conſiſt in practiſe. Lynces had a quicke ſight to diſcerne, but a ſhort memory to retaine; and ſo have many externall Profeſſours. But we muſt remember, that profeſſion, knowledge, and judgement to diſcerne, are all nothing without Practiſe. And therefore if upon mature ſearch and enquiry we find that our outſide is better then our inſide; that wee ſeeme to bee that which wee are not; that wee ſerve our bellies and ſacrifice unto our ſelves, and our owne pleaſures, more then

then to our God; that we are proud and selfe-conceited: that we grow the longer, the worse; and lastly that wee are more ready to heare then to marke and discerne, more ready to discerne then to remember, more ready to remember then to practise: wee may then truely conclude that our profession is but in shew, and our Religion in vaine.

And thus much for the second Observation.

Observ. 3. Thirdly, That confession of Christ, and profession of Religion, which shall be rewarded by Christ, with life everlasting, must be adorned with piety and purity both of heart and life.

Quest. 15 How many sorts and kinds of Professors are there?

Answ. First, those who professe Religion with their mouthes, but are openly and continually wicked and prophane in their lives, selling themselves to worke wickednesse, and that with greedinesse, Ephes. 4 19. And

Secondly, those who professe Religion, and now and then sin grievously; falling sometimes into drunkennesse, sometimes into adultery, sometimes into blasphemy, and the like. And

Thirdly, those who professe Christ, and have no egregious impiety in their lives, but their hearts are polluted, and run after sin, Ier. 4. 14.

Fourthly, those who professe and practise Religion, as did Zachary and Elizabeth: And these last onely must we strive to imitate, labouring that we may be pure both in our profession and practise, both in thought, word, and deed.

Foure; namely,

Luke 16.

Quest. 16 Who can be thus pure, both in heart and life, seeing all men carry a body of sin about them, and remainders of sin in them, yea are daily overtaken by sin? Rom. 7. 24. and 1 Ioh. 1. 8. Psa. 14. 3.

Answ. We confesse that none can perfectly obey, both in thought, word, and deed: for although we are perfectly justified, yet we are not here perfectly sanctified, Phil. 3. 12, 13. Indeed we have a copy set, to teach us unto what we must strive, and after what endeavour; the purity of our Father is our examplar, Mat. 5. 48. and therefore we must sweat, (Hebr. 12. 4.) and labour as much as in us lieth, to come neerer and neerer to that similitude, every day learning something, every day doing something, (Nulla dies sine linea) untill the Lord make us perfect, by bringing us to heaven.

Quest. 17 Why must the outward confession of Christ, and profession of Religion, be joyned both with the inward and outward practise of piety?

Answ. 1. First, because this is the will of God, that we should be holy: and therefore, all those who professe Christ, must possesse their soules in sanctification, 1 Thes. 4. 3.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because all professors of Religion, are commanded to put on the new man, in holinesse and honour, Ephes. 4. 21.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because it becomes professors to be holy, Ephes. 5. 3. Alexander, Duke of Saxony, hearing two Christians to revile and mis-call one another, forbade that they should any more be called Christians; because this did not become those who had put on the name and badge of Christ, but was rather a shame and disgrace to their profession: for as Aurelius once said, Leve delictum in Philosopho graviter puniendum; a Philosopher ought to be severely punished for a light offence, because he should be a guide and example unto others: So it may truly be said of Christians, but principally of professors, that a small sin in them is great, and deserves grievously to be punished; because they ought to be pure and holy, both towards God, and towards man, and in themselves. 43

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because thus we gaine others unto Christ, and Religion. A Duke of Saxony said once to his followers and people, Vos Origenem audiendo convertimini, at ego ejus sanctimoniam intuendo; You are perswaded to embrace Origens Religion, because of his Doctrine; but I, because of his life and example: for a holy life in a professor, is better, and more prevalent for this purpose, than a thousand Sermons. And therfore Saint Peter exhorts the Jews, to have their conversation honest among the Gentiles, that they may by their good works, which they shall behold, glorifie God in the day of their visitation, (1 Pet. 2. 12.) that is, when God shall be pleased to visit them in mercie, and to convert them, they may blesse God for that holy life, which they saw in the professors; which was a meanes to convert them, and win them unto Religion.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, because profession conjoyned with evill works, is infidelity. If any man provide not for his family, he is worse than an Infidell, 1 Timoth. 5. 8. where we must observe, that the Apostle speaks not here of the Jews who were truly converted; for the Faith and Religion of the Jews did not teach them to neglect their families: but the meaning is, He that follows the wicked works of idlenesse, drunkennesse, gluttony, pride, and lasciviousnesse, which impoverish him, and makes him unable to maintaine his owne charge and household; although he professe Christ, and make a shew of Religion; yet the truth is, he is but an Infidell.

Answ. 6. Sixtly, because a pure life and sincere profession, pleaseth God. As the Jem which is gallant in colour, and perfect in vertue, is the more precious; and the Herb which hath a faire bark, and sweet sap, is the more to be esteemed; and the Panther with his faire skin, and sweet breath, is the more delighted in: So those who are strict in their profession, and unblameable in their lives and conversations, are of high price, value and esteeme with God.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, because the name of God is blasphemed by the evill life of professors: therefore those who desire to be saved, must, to outward profession, conjoyne outward and inward practise: he that honours God on earth, him will God honour in heaven; but he who dishonours him on earth, shall be punished in hell. Maillard reports, how at Tours, in the Raigne of King Lewis the eighth, the Jews reproved Christians, for saying that Christ dyed for them, and yet they dishonoured and blasphemed his name, Rom. 2. 24.

Eight-

44 Eightly, becauſe profeſſion without practiſe, doth not free us from the ſervitude and bondage
Anſw. 8. of ſin and captivity of Satan. None can be ſaved, ſo long as they are the ſlaves and bondmen of ſin and Satan; but profeſſion without practiſe, cannot free us from theſe chains or bonds: and therfore it is neceſſary for thoſe who would be ſaved, to conjoyne them together. The ſervice of Chriſt is to be judged by the ſubjugating of our wils unto the will of Chriſt, and by giving up of our ſelves wholly unto him: yea, he onely is Chriſts ſervant, who doth his worke, and obeys his command, Ioh. 8.32. *Rom.*6.6. Wherefore, if we would approve our ſelves to be free from Satan and ſin, and to be made the free-men of Chriſt, we muſt obey and fulfill his will, as well as profeſſe his Name.

Anſw. 9. Ninthly, it is neceſſary, that thoſe who would be ſaved, ſhould conjoyne ſtrict profeſſion and ſincere practiſe together, becauſe profeſſion without practiſe, doth not pleaſe God. As the Vine is more regarded, that beareth Grapes, than the Aſh that hath nothing but Leaves; and the Deere that increaſeth the Parke, more than the barren Doe: as the Orchard is better, that is fraught with Fruit, than that which beares nothing but Bloomes: So thoſe who are rich in every good worke, (1 Tim. 6.18.) are more acceptable to God, than thoſe who are onely rich in leaves, ſhadows, and outward ſhews; for theſe the Lord cares not for at all.

Sect. 2 §. 2. I will confeſſe him before my Father which is in heaven.

Object. The Papiſts ſay, that becauſe the Saints ſuffred more than their ſins required; therfore the overplus of their paſſions and ſatisfactions, belong unto the Treaſure of the Church. And Bellarmine argues for the proofe hereof, thus; The Martyrdome of the Saints is able to redeeme great offences; as Chriſt ſaith, Whoſoever confeſſeth me before men, him will I confeſſe before my Father which is in heaven. But many of the Martyrs had ſmall offences, at the time of their Martyrdome: And therefore there remaineth abundance of ſatisfaction for others [g].

g Bell. lib. 1. de Indulgent. cap 2 Prop. 4.

Anſw. The Martyrdome of the Saints was profitable unto themſelves, God crowning their patience with immortality, through Chriſt; but they are no way available unto us, ſave onely for example: in which ſenſe, Saint Paul ſaith, was Paul crucified for you? 1 Corin. 1.13. And Saint Ambroſe ſaith well, Pendebat in cruce filius, &c. While her Son hanged upon the Croſſe, Mary offred her ſelfe to the Perſecuters, Si fortè ſuâ morte publico muneri aliquid adderetur, ſed Chriſti paſſio adjutore non eguit: if ſo ſhe by her death might adde any thing to the publike benefit; but Chriſts paſſion needed no helper. Inſtitut. virg. cap 5. Now if the ſuffrings of Mary could adde nothing to Chriſts paſſion, much leſſe the afflictions of others.

For the underſtanding of theſe words (I will confeſſe him before my Father which is in heaven) obſerve theſe three things; to wit, Firſt, to confeſſe, ſignifies, to acknowledge, and to owne and accept before God.

Secondly, to the preſence of God, is added, the preſence of the Angels, Luke 12.8,9. He that confeſſeth me before men, him ſhall the Son of God confeſſe before the Angels of God.

Thirdly, the time when, is declared to be at Chriſts ſecond comming in glory, both by Saint Marke, chap. 8.38. and Saint Luke, chap. 9.26.

Whence we learne, That they who adhere and ſticke cloſe (on earth) to Chriſt, and the profeſſion of Religion, ſhall at laſt be received into eternall happineſſe: Or, Thoſe who are ſincere in their profeſſion and practiſe, ſhall be ſaved. Obſerv.

Sacerdos Dei evangelium tenens, & Chriſti præcepta cuſtodiens occidi poteſt, vinci non poteſt [h]. He who holds and maintaines the doctrine of the Goſpel, and is obedient to the precepts therein contained, may be killed, but cannot be overcome; becauſe Chriſt hath promiſed that he will confeſſe, and own him at his comming to judgement; & quem Chriſtus tum confitetur, invictus eſt. Cypr. Beſides for the proofe hereof, we may reade theſe places, Luke 22.28. *Rom.*8.16. and 1 Cor. 1.21. and 2 Tim. 4.8. and Revel. 2.9, 10, 11. Religion is the commandement or worke of God, life eternall is the reward, Hebr. 6.10. And therefore, it is both Equall that this ſervice ſhould be crowned with a reward, (Rom 1.17. & 2 Tim. 2.12.) and alſo Iuſt, 2 Theſſ. 1.6,7. Wherefore they that in ſincerity of heart, confeſſe themſelves to be the Lords ſervants, and in integrity and ſingleneſſe of ſpirit, labour to ſerve him, ſhall certainly be crowned with bleſſedneſſe at the laſt.

h Cypr.

What is required of us, in regard of Religion, and the profeſsion thereof? Queſt. I.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, we muſt neglect the care of our bodies, in regard of the care of Religion, Mat. 10.28. and 16.25. Acts 20.24. and 21.13. Rev. 12.11. We muſt not care for the world, (Iames 4.4.) but caſt that care upon God, (1 Pet. 5.7.) And bend all our ſtudy and care, how to glorifie God, and helpe forward the profeſsion of Religion.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, we muſt not feare infamy for Religion, or the profeſsion thereof; but if we be laughed at, and ſcoffed by reviling and taunting Michols for our profeſsion, and ſervice of God; with David confidently let us ſay, That we will yet be more vile for the honour of Religion, 2 *Sam.*6. Lucrece for feare of infamy, murdred her ſelfe, but Suſanna would not; neither muſt we doe evill, that good may come of it. But remember theſe two things; namely, I. That the providence of God rules and governes all things, (Acts 3.18. and 4.28.) A dog cannot barke at, nor a wolfe bite the righteous, without Gods permiſsion: the wicked cannot open his mouth to ſlander, backbite and revile the righteous, nor ſtretch out his hand to hurt them, except God give him leave. And therefore we need not feare reproach for Gods ſake. II. All things at laſt ſhall be revealed, and the truth of every thing appeare, verſe 26. of this chapter: and therefore, although we ſhould be calumniated for Religion, and detracted for the practiſe thereof; yet we need never feare, but in the end, God will cauſe our innocencie to breake forth as the Sun out of a cloud, as we ſee in Ioſeph and David.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, we muſt conſtantly and reſolutely ſticke sticke to our Religion, and not be shaken from that, by any wind or storme of affliction or persecution at all; reade Mich. 4.5. and Revel. 3.11. Two things the Lord (in holy Writ) inculcates into our eares to this purpose, namely; I. Patience and exultation in affliction: we must endure persecution, we must endure it patiently, yea we must rejoice, when we suffer for our Gods or the Gospels sake, Rom. 5.3. and Ism. 1.3. Now where is patience or joy in suffring, when men avoid affliction and persecution, by denying Christ, and their profession? II. Hope, and expectation: if we suffer patiently and joyfully, then we may confidently hope for, and expect the reward promised, even the crowne of glory, Rom. 8.24,25. and 15.5. and Col. 3 4. And therefore, when we are ready to forsake our colours, and to deny our profession; let us examine which of these three considerations it is, that moves us thereunto; namely, First, whether doe we think, that our profession and Religion is false? Or Secondly, that the promises of God, contained in the Word, or the promise of Christ, contained in this Text, is false? Or Thirdly, whether the reward promised, or promises made in the Scripture, be not worth the seeking, or labouring, or suffering for? For if our Religion be built upon the Scriptures, and regulated by the rule of truth, (as it is) if all the promises of God, made in his Word, be Yea and Amen in Jesus Christ, (as the word of God it self witnesseth:) if all the sufferings of this life be not worthy to be compared to that glory which shall be revealed, (as is revealed to us from heaven, Rom. 8.18. and 2 Cor. 4.17.) Then we are left without excuse, and reserved for insupportable torments, if we shall decline persecution and affliction, by denying of Christ and Religion.

Quest. 2. What things hinder us from sticking close to the profession of Religion?

Answ. 1. First, losse; for Religion is hard with danger, and losse: If the yong man cannot follow Christ without selling all he hath, he will rather stay behinde; Mat. 19.22. John 6.66.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the world hinders us from true constancie in Religion, Gal. 1.4.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the fleth and lusts thereof, often violently withdraw us from the truth, and practise of Religion, Iames 1.14.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Satan by sifting and assaulting of us, doth often leade us aside out of the way of Religion, as we see Luke 22.31. and 1 Pet. 5.8.

Quest. 3. Why must we adhere thus constantly and resolutely to the profession of Religion?

Answ. 1. First, because true Religion is true Wisdome; and therefore it is worth retaining, worth dying for, Deut. 4.6. Psal. 111.10. Prov. 1.7. and 1 Corinthians 2.6, 7.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because true Religion sustaineth and upholdeth the world: As before Solomons Temple, there were two Pillars, (1 King. 7.21. and 2 Chron. 3.17.) the one named Iachin (that is, God will establish) and the other Bohaz (that is, Strength:) so there are two supporters which beare up the world, viz. I. Religion, which sustaines and upholds the Church. And II. Justice, which supports the Commion-wealth. Whence the Jews rightly say, That for Jerusalems sake (namely, the Church of God, and true Religion) the world stands. 45

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because if we suffer for the profession of the truth, and Christs sake; then Christ will finde us out, and comfort us, as he did the blinde man, who was excommunicated for confessing his name, Ioh. 9.35. yea he will owne us for his owne at the dreadfull day of judgement, as our Saviour promiseth in this verse.

Quest. 4. By what meanes may we attaine unto a constant, bold, true, and right profession of religion?

Answ. 1. First, the foot of this Ladder which reacheth unto heaven; or the beginning of Religion is a cessation from sin (Acts 2.38. and 3.19. and Esa. 1.16.) for untill we be free from sin, we are the servants thereof, (Rom. 16.6.) and therefore, so long all our boastings are in vaine, 1 Pet. 2.23. And therefore, if we desire to live with Christ, yea rather dye than depart from Christ, let us labour to hate and eschew all sin whatsoever; for so long as we love and follow sin, so long we cannot suffer for Christ.

What sins must we cease from?

First, from our owne sins, not onely from the sins of others.

Secondly, from all sins, not from some onely.

Thirdly, principally from our principall sins, and not onely from those we care least for.

Fourthly, from our least sins as well as our greatest, 1 Thes. 5.23. Iude 20.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the top of this Ladder which reacheth up unto heaven, is obedience; for without that, there is no happinesse, Deut. 4.1. and 5.1. and Mat. 7.21, 26. Luke 11.28. And therefore obedience is necessary for the confirmation of our Religion and Faith, and assurance of glory, Mat. 7.20.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Religion cannot be learnt without divine illumination, Mat. 11.27. and 16.17. Ioh. 6.44. And therefore this spirituall knowledge is a principall meanes to make us stout and strong professors. Paul confesseth, that he learnt Religion in the Schoole of heaven, Gal. 1.12,16. And so must we, for I. It is a mystery, 1 Corinth. 2.14. And II. It is revealed by the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 2.10. Esa. 55.13. For as there are two impediments which hinders us from Religion; namely,

First, the vaile that naturally hangs over our hearts, 2 Cor. 3.14. And,

Secondly, the blindnesse of mind, which is wrought in us by Satan, 2 Corinth. 4.4.

So also there are two remedies, against these two impediments; namely,

I. To the Ministers is given illumination, and their lips preserve knowledge, 2 Corinth. 4.6. And II. The vaile is taken away from the eyes of the faithfull, and they thereby enabled to understand what is delivered, 2 Cor. 3.16. And therefore if wee desire to be instructed, and built up in the truth, wee must invocate, and supplicate God our Father, that hee would be pleased for his deare Sonnes sake.

First, to give light unto his Ministers, and to make

46 make them able to cut the Word aright, and to teach, instruct, and lead his people, both by doctrine and example.

Secondly, to give light unto our minds; that wee may understand his word, and will which is taught unto us, Ephes. 1.17. And,

Thirdly, to give strength to our hands, and courage to our hearts, that wee may obey and performe his will, both in heart and life; both in prosperity, and adversity, both in freedome and in affliction.

Quest. 5. How may we know, whether our religion bee true; and according to the religion of the Apostles of Christ, or not? Because the profession of no other religion, save that, can please God; nor the Professors of any other religion be acknowledged by Christ at the last day.

Answ. This may easily be knowne, by comparing of our religion with their doctrine, as it is comprehended, and expressed in the New Testament.

Quest. 6. To find out the sense and meaning of Scripture is very difficult, and hard; how therefore can we know, what religion is according to the doctrine of the Scriptures?

Answ. 1. First, all things in the New Testament, and Epistles of the Apostles are not hard, but some onely, 2 Pet. 3.16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those things which are necessary to be knowne unto faith, and salvation, may bee knowne; viz. I. By a diligent reading of the Word. And II. By a frequent, and attentive hearing of the Word. And, III. By a sincere, and strict obeying of the Word, read, and heard. And IV. By comparing place with place; and judging of every place with humility, and not with wilfulnesse, or selfe-conceitednesse: And V. By fervent prayer unto God, to enlighten our understanding, and to anoint our eyes with that eye salve, that we may perceive what we reade, and heare.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, in the New Testament, two things are principally aimed at; to wit, I. The exaltation of the name and glory of our Lord, and Saviour Iesus Christ. And, II. The spirituall worship and service of God and Christ. And therefore that doctrine is according to the doctrine of the Apostles, which teacheth us rightly to worship, & to serve God and Christ, as is prescribed in the Word: namely,

First, by a mortification of the flesh, and a dying unto sinne. And,

Secondly, by a newnesse of life, and a living unto God. And,

Thirdly, by a spirituall obedience.

Quest. 7. How must wee so professe Religion, that wee may be certainely assured, that Christ will confesse us?

Answ. 1. First, forsake not Religion for gaine, or the pleasures, or honours of the world; as many doe: The Citizens of Heidelberge, leaving a little Village, called the Holy Mount: Tilly from thence battered the Citie: So Religion being once forsaken, we are easily overcome, because without Religion, wee are truely miserable. And therefore, neither a Land, nor Citie, in generall, nor any particular person should forgoe, or fall from the profession of Religion.

Answ. 2. Secondly, forsake not truth for errour, nor religion for superstition, nor God for Idols: as the Philistines, who would forgoe the Arke for Dagon. Woe be to that people, or person, that shall thus reward the Lord, to forsake the ever-living waters, and digge to themselves Cisternes, that will hold no water.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, doe not staine the purity of Religion, with the blots and blemishes of sinne: For God and Mammon, and the Arke, and Dagon, cannot stand together: Wherefore wee must labour, that we may be purged from all pollutions, both of the flesh, and spirit, 2 Corinthians. 7.1.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, direct we all our actions according to the rule of Religion, and Law, and word of God, Psalme 119. 9. 105. Here two things are worth our observation; namely, I. The sacred Scriptures teach, and instruct all sorts of men, how to walke and live: as for example, the Word teacheth Kings, Princes, and Iudges, Psal. 82. and Bishops, 1 Tim. 5. Yea, both wise men and fooles, old and young, Eccles. 11. and 12. The Word directs Husbands, how to carry themselves unto their Wives, and Wives unto their Husbands: Fathers unto their Children, and Children unto their Parents; Servants unto their Masters, and Masters unto their Servants, Coloss. 3. & 4. Ephes. 5. and 6. yea, in the Word both rich and poore are taught: And who not. II. The Scripture descends to all the particular actions of our lives: Forbidding:

First, all grosse and enormious sinnes; as Drunkennesse, Adultery, Oppression, Vsury, and the like, Rom. 13.13. And,

Secondly, all small and petty things; as namely: I. The detaining of the poore mans wages, Levit. 19. And II. Filthy and impure communication, Ephes. 5.3. And III. How wee must beare our selves, in selling, Levit. 25. 14. Prov. 20. 14. And IV. What wee must doe about Corne-selling, Amos 8. Prov. 11. 26. And V. To avoid Suretiship, Prov. 6.1. and 17.18. And VI. To leave gleanings for the poore, Levit. 19.9. And VII. It teacheth huswifery, Proverbes 31. Yea, VIII. It teacheth us how to eat, or what to doe when wee eate[i]. [i] Corinth. 10 31. & 1 Tim. 4.4.

Now to what end is all this, but only to teach us, that all sorts of men, in all the severall actions of their lives, are to be regulated by the word of God. And therefore Religion doth not require, only the worke of the Lords day, (although many will not give God that) but it requires the labour of the whole life; and that all our workes should bee directed with conscience, rightly informed. And if wee doe thus; that is, preferre Religion before gaine, and Idols and sinne, and square all the actions of our lives by the Word of God; then wee may certainely expect that reward of glory, which is here promised.

§ 3. Whosoever denieth me before men. Sect. 34.

Quest. 1 How manifold is denial, or how many kinds thereof are there?

First

Denial is manifold; to wit, there is Negativa:

First, Dignitatis, a refusall of dignity, or honour: Thus Moses denied to be Pharaohs sonne in law, or his daughters son, Hebrewes 11.24.

Secondly, Sacerdotis; thus the Israelites denied, and refused Moses; saying, who made thee a Ruler, and a Iudge, Act. 7.35.

Thirdly, Resurrectionis. Thus the Sadducees denied, that there was any Resurrection, Luke 20.27.

Fourthly, Mendacitatis, when men deny the truth; as Sarah did, Gen. 18.15.

Fiftly, Pompositatis, of pride; when men raised and promoted unto honour, will not daigne to acknowledge, or take notice of their poore friends, and kindred, Iob 8. 18.

Sixtly, Timiditatis, of fearfulnesse; thus Peter denied Christ, Marke 14. 71. but of this by and by.

Seventhly, Parcitatis, vel Cupiditatis, of coveteousnesse; when men deny to relieve, or to give almes unto the poore, Iob 31.16.

Eightly, Egoitatis, and thus wee are commanded to deny our selves, Matth. 16.24.

Ninthly, Deitatis, or Infidelitatis, when men through Infidelity deny God. Now this is two-fold, viz. I. When men deny God the Father; who is denied three manner of wayes; namely, either

First, Directly, Corde & ore simul, when men deny God both with their hearts and tongues; as the Atheists doe, Psal. 14.1. Or,

Secondly, Indirectly, Corde tantum, only in heart; that is, when men deny the providence of God, and all his Attributes; that is, when men blasphemously affirme; either I. That God is ignorant of humane things, and knowes not what is done on the earth, Iob 22.12. Psalme 10.11. and 64.6. Or II. That he cares not for the things of this life; but Suspue deque habet, although hee sees humane things, and knowes what is done below, yet hee cares not which way they goe. Or III. That hee cannot resist the wicked world, Iob 22.17. Psalme 10.4. and 12.5. k. Or IV. That hee neither is able to punish the wicked, and wickednesse of the world, nor to reward the righteousnesse of the righteous, Iob 21.14,15. Psalme 10.3. Zeph. 1.13.

k 2 King. 18.32.

Thirdly, God is denied in our workes, Titus 1.16. They professe that they know God, but in their workes they deny him; that is, although they know him, yet they doe not worship and serve him. But of this more amply by and by. II. When men deny God the Sonne: and this is that deniall which the Text speakes of; Whosoever shall deny me: elsewhere the phrase is, Whosoever shall be ashamed of me, Marke 8.30. Luke 9.26. where this addition is put; And of my words; but the sense is one, and the same; for our Saviour speakes not here, de causa movente, of the cause which moves men to deny Christ, whether hatred, ignorance, feare, or shame, but de actu negandi, of the deniall it selfe, and this our Saviour condemnes, this hee threatens, and this he oppoieth to the confession, and profession of his name and word. Whence we observe: 47

Christ is denied many-wayes; or there is a manifold deniall of Christ, namely, either:

That to deny Christ is a great sinne, and doth alienate, and estrange Christ from us. Observ.

How is Christ denied? Quest. 2. Answ.

First internall which is two-fold, to wit, either.

I. Direct, when in heart a man utterly denieth the truth of the Gospell. Or

II. Indirect, when men doe not beleeve in Christ, but place their confidence in others, and other things, and that both for temporall blessings and spirituall graces: Or when men deny the Providence of God: Give mee not poverty lest I deny thee. Prov. 30. 9.

Secondly, Externall, which is two-fold to wit, either

I. Direct when a man denieth Christ with his mouth; and this is twofold, to wit, either.

First, totall, when men deny that there is neither Lord or Christ; as the Atheists who impudently, and blasphemously affirm, that there is no Deity, no Trinity Psalme. 14. 1. Or

Secondly, partiall, and this is two-fold, namely, either

I. When men deny that Christ is not yet come in the flesh, as the Jewes do. Or II When men deny that Christ is the Messias and true God as the Jews did. Act. 3.13. Iohn. 9.22. and As the Turks and Anti-christ doe. 1 Iohn 2. 22. Or II. Indirect, and this is two-fold namely either.

First, when men deny Christ in opinion, and this is two-fold, namely, either.

I. When men hold not the truth of the Gospell in all things and in this sense, whosoever doth thinke amisse either of God, or Christ, or Religion, are said to deny them: As for example.

First, the Valentinians denied that Christ was incarnate, and made true man.

Secondly, the Arrians, denied his Deitie, or that he was true God.

Thirdly, the Epicures deny the providence of God.

Fourthly, the Sadduces deny the Resurrection. Luk. 20.27.

Fiftly, Adam denied Gods truth and wisedome.

Sixtly, the Pelagians deny Christ to be our sanctifier; contrary to 1 Cor. 1.30.

Seventhly, the Socinians deny Christ to be our Saviour: for they who will not acknowledge him to bee such a Saviour, as he is described to be in the word, deny him to be a Saviour.

Eightly, those deny Christ, who forsake, and fall away from the truth once received, acknowledged, and professed; embracing instead of the truth, lyes; and instead of the word, humane Traditions, and superstitious ous

ous vanities: Or II. When men professe not the truth they know, and hold, they deny Christ; for hee is either denied by silence, or speech: Some speake false against their conscience; denying that openly which they know to be true. Secondly, some dare not openly professe that truth which they know for feare. Thirdly, some speake of Christ contrary to knowledge, out of malice, as the Jewes did: or out of covetousnesse, as the Souldiers did. Matthew 28. 13. 15. They offend here against the profession of Christ, and the truth, and Religion, who either.

First, blaspheme Christ, as Julian the Apostate, and the Pharisees, and Jewes did, who said he had a Divell: or as Pope Julius 2 did, when he said he would eat Bacon. Al despetto del Dio, even in despight of God. Or Secondly, when men assent unto errours; for as there is but one Christ, so there is but one truth; and whatsoever is contrary to that is a lye: And therefore the servants of Christ, are the servants of truth Math. 26. 70. Rom. 1.25. And they that deny the truth and accept of errours, deny and forsake Christ.

Thirdly, they also deny Christ, who silence and conceale their profession; who smother the truth in their hearts, not suffering the profession of Christ, or Religion, to appeare unto the world. Iob. 9. 20. and 12. 42. &c. who either are not able, or at least are unwilling to satisfie every man who demands or desires to know a reason of their faith (1 Peter 3. 15.) yea many thinke it now a dayes a high point of wisdome, so to elude by ambiguous answers, all Questions concerning faith and Religion, that no man can tell what Religion they love, like, or embrace: Thus to cloake and cover Religion, doth plainly unmaske and discover a denier of Christ.

Object. But it may bee here objected: It is lawfull sometimes, to conceale some truths: yea we are commanded to flie unto another City, if we be persecuted where we are: and therefore wee may surely conceale Religion.

Answ. 1. First, wee may hide some truths sometimes, and this is most certaine; but wee must neither hide all truths, neither some particular truths sometimes.

Answ. 2 Secondly, the reason is not alike between fleeing from Persecution, and concealing of Religion, we having a precept, for the one, and a prohibition for the other. But I omit these two.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, observe, that there is a double profession of Religion, namely.

I. A Profession which is placed in good workes, that is, when our workes may bee knowne before our Religion. And

II. A Profession, which consists in an open confession, (Quatenus fieri ore) of all the principles & principall points of true religion. Now the first profession is alwaies necessary; But the second is not necessary alwaies: we must never shew forth, or performe any workes, opposite or contrary to true Religion, or the Doctrine of the Scriptures: but we are onely to confesse and professe the Articles of our faith, in a fit time, and place, and upon some serious occasion.

Secondly, Christ is indirectly denied in Practise; and this is Five-fold, namely

I. When Protestants deny Christ, by a wicked life. 2 Timoth. 3. 5. which place is expounded Titus 1. 15. &c. and 1 Timoth. 5. 8. And therefore the warfare of Professors is to deny ungodlinesse, and worldly lusts. Titus 2.12. For hee that denieth not these denieth Christ.

II. When Professours talke much of Christ and Religion, but shew forth no religious workes or performances: not beeing carefull that way to confesse Christ.

III. When men doe not labour to conforme themselves according to the example of Christ. Philip. 2. 5.

IV. When his word which is taught unto us is not obeyed. And

V. When we neglect salvation, trampling under our feet the blood of the Covenant, and sleighting the offers of Christ made unto us in the word, and the tender of salvation by him. Read Hebr. 2. 3. and 10. 29; Acts 3. 14. and 13. 46. And therefore let us take heed of all sorts of denials of Christ, whether externall or internall, whether direct, or indirect; because no branch of it shall goe unpunished, except it be repented of.

Quest. 3. Why must wee not deny Christ?

Answ. 1. First, because if wee deny him, we shall bee denied by him, 2. Timoth. 2. 12. and in this verse.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because if we deny the Sonne, wee have no part in the Father. 1 Iohn. 2. 23.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because it is a signe of Reprobation, and sure condemnation to deny Christ. 2. Peter 2. 1 Iude 4.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because not to deny, but to confesse Christ, and the truth is a thing praise-worthy with God, as appears by that excellent commendation given by the Lord unto the Church in Pergamos. Revel. 2. 13.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, because if wee doe not deny him, then he will preserve his Church planted amongst us, that our enemies shall not prevaile, but rather be subjected unto the Church. Revel. 3 8, 9.

Quest. 4. What are the causes which move men to deny Christ?

Answ. 1. First, hatred: and thus Julian the Apostate out of an impious, and blasphemous hatred against Christ, and his truth, denied both.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Ignorance: for those who are Ignorant of Christ and his truth are easily perswaded to deny them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, shame or reproach makes many (with Nicodemus) afraid to confesse Christ; yea rather choose to deny him, then to undergo the taunts, and scoffes of mocking Ismaels.

Fourth-

Answ. 4. Fourthly, feare of Persecution makes many deny Christ: as we see Iohn. 18. 25. 27.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, gaine, promotion, the love of the world, and estimation of great ones, are meanes to draw many to a deniall of Christ: as we see in Demas, and Francis Spira, and divers others. And therefore if wee would not deny Christ, then let us learne to love him, and his truth, and not to hate it: let us labour for a true knowledge of Christ and his truth, and beware of ignorance: let us not feare the disgrace and reproach of men, but by our constant and couragious confession of Christ and Religion, procure the praise and commendations of God: Let us not feare those who can but hurt the body (yea not hurt that, nor a haire of our heads without the permission of God,) but feare him who can cast body and soule into everlasting perdition: Let us not deny Christ for any temporall thing, but contemne all as nothing worth, in regard of Christ. Hormisda a great Noble mans Son and a man of great reputation among the Persians was condemned by the King Sapor (when he understood that hee was a Christian, and denied to turne from his Religion) to keepe his Elephants naked. In processe of time the King looking out, and seeing him all swarted, and tanned in the sun, commanded him to have a shirt put on, and to be brought before him; whom then the King asked if he would deny Christ. Hormisda hearing this, tare off the shirt from his body and cast it from him saying; I will never surely deny my Christ for a shirt. So wee should never deny our Lord for riches, or honours or the esteeme of the world, but reckon all these as dung and drosse in regard of him Phil. 3. 8. 9.

Theodor. lib. 5. cap. 39.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

Quest. 1. When will Christ deny those who deny him?

Answ. At the day of judgement, for our Saviour speaks here clearely of that day: To teach us.

Observ. That, at the day of judgement, there shal be a retribution of all those who deny Christ: The truth hereof appeares most plainely by these particulars. viz.

First, there shall be a day of Judgement. Acts. 17. 31. Rom. 2. 16.

Secondly, then Christ will returne. Math. 24. 30, and 25. 31. and Acts. 1. 11. and 1 Thessal. 4. 16.

Thirdly, then all shall bee gathered together. Mat. 24. 31. and 25. 32. Rom. 14. 10. Revel. 20. 12.

Fourthly, the sheepe and goates shall then be separated asunder. Math. 25. 32. &c.

Fiftly, all men shall then be judged, 2. Corinth. 5. 10. Revel 20. 12. 13.

Sixtly, the godly shall then be received into glory, Mat. 25. 34. and 1 Corinth. 15. 52. and 1 Thes. 4. 17.

Seventhly, and lastly, the wicked shall then be cast into hell. Mat. 25. 46. And therefore in all our sinnes, and delayes, and worldly delights (Luke 16. 25.) let us meditate what the end of all will be, and what will become of us at the last.

What must we meditate off, or remember, in regard of this last dreadfull day? 49

Quest. 2. Answ.

First, that wee are all guilty of manifold transgressions. And

Secondly, that none can deny, none can palliate, or conceale their sinnes, the books shall bee opened (Revel. 20. 12) the accusers mouth will not be stopped, and our own consciences will bee as a thousand witnesses against us And

Thirdly, that the judge of all the world cannot be bribed. And Fourthly, that all helpes and meanes, wee can use to prevent this judgement, or condemnation are vaine, whether they be riches, or honour, or craft, or friends, or the like.

Fiftly, that Christ will deny us there, if here wee be wicked: this wee should seriously consider of, and say with David, who have I in heaven but thee O Christ, (Psalme. 73. 25.) and wilt thou deny me? This was it which went so close to the heart of Ushbazares one of king Sapores Eunuches, and made him so bitterly cry out: woe is mee, with what hope, with what face shall I behold my God, whom I have denied, when as this Simeon my familiar acquaintance, thus passing by mee so much disdaineth me, that hee refuseth with one gentle word to salute mee. If any desire to reade the whole story: let him looke upon M. Foxe his Booke of Martyrs. fol. 97. 98.

We must remember continually these seven things, namely,

Sixtly, that we can by no meanes delight our selves, or arme, or strengthen our minds to suffer those paines which wee shall be adjudged to undergoe. For as the mind of the righteous shall be confirmed and established for ever in ineffable peace, and perfect joy Phil. 4. 7. So the mind of the wicked shall be dejected, and deprived for ever, of all comfort, peace, or light: and the darkenesse of the heart shal be more full of heavinesse and Lamentation then hell it self. And Seventhy, that the last comfort which miserable men have, shall bee taken away, and denied unto those, who here denied Christ either with their mouth, or hearts: When men are in excessive and extraordinary misery, their comfort is, that death will put an end unto it: but there the miserable can neither kill themselves nor dye for ever, but must remain alive for all eternitie, although the pangs of death be continually upon them.

And all these miseries and many more we must remember are prepared for those who deny Christ.

What deniall doth our Saviour speake of here? Quest. 3.

I will deny him &c.

There is a double deniall namely, Verball amongst men, and reall, which is a direct Rejecting of one, and this our Saviour speakes here of, to teach us. Answ.

That those who are wanting to the profession of Christ, or forsake Religion shall bee rejected or forsaken by Christ at the last. Math. 7. Observ.

50 23. and 25. 12. Luke 19. 27. and 2 Timothy 2. 12.

Verse 34, 35,36. VERS. 34,35,36. Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against the mother, and the daughter in law against her mother in law. And a mans foes shall be they of his owne household.

Sect. 1. §. 1. I came not to send peace, but a sword.

I came not to send peace (that is, an agreement and concord in evill, such an evill peace as cannot stand with true Religion and a good conscience) but the sword.

Quest. 1. What is meant here by the Sword?

Answ. 1. First, some understand here, a sword sent unto those who despise the Gospel: because this place is borrowed from Mich. 7. 6. where he speaks of wicked men, who shall slay one another, as the Moabites did, Iudg. 7.22. And Ephraim and Manasses, Esa. 9.21. Or as Luke 19.27. But I doe not conceive this to be the meaning of this place.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some by this Sword, understand the Gospel, (Chrysost. imperf.) Revel. 1. 16. And that for these reasons; to wit, I. Because it wounds, cuts, and penetrates unto the hidden man of the heart, Luke 2.35. Hebr. 4.14. II. Because it overcomes sin and Satan, Ephes. 6.17. III. Because it provokes the enemies of God and goodnesse unto anger, Exod. 5. 21. IV. Because it destroyes the enemies of the truth, Rev. 2.16. and 19.15.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some by Sword, understand the division which shall be amongst men, by meanes of the doctrine of the Gospel. Perkins.

Answ. 4 Fourthly, by Sword, are meant afflictions which the Apostles must suffer from wicked hearers of the Word; and the dissensions which shall be amongst hearers themselves, Luke 12.51. Now our Saviour cals these a Sword, that thus he may admonish us of a Christian warfare.

Observ. Whence we may learn, That our life, or a Christian life, is but a warfare, Iob 1.7. Heb. 13.13.

Quest. 2. Whence is it, that a Christian mans life is a warfare?

Answ. 1. First, it comes hence, because they are odious unto Satan: he knows that they are mortall enemies unto him, yea those who shall confound and overthrow him: and therefore he bruiseth their heele, Gen. 3.15. and he raiseth up tumults against them, Acts 19.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the righteous are odious unto the world, who hate Christ and all true Christians, Iob. 14. And hence their life is but a warfare. Religion, and the Word of God, I. Condemns sin, and the wayes of the world. II. The gaines which come by oppression, craft, deceit, and the like. And III. The delights, honours, and vanities of the world. And IV. The wisdome of the world it selfe, counting it but foolishnesse. And hence the world holds war with all those who adhere to the Word.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the godly cannot endure the wickednesse of the world: from whence it comes, that the world wars with them. The moderation and humility of the Saints often suffers much, and makes them live peaceably with all, (Rom. 12. 18.) and hide and conceale a multitude of sins, 1 Pet. 4.8. But when the Word comes, and doth I. Detect impiety, and the wickednesse of the world: And II. Commands the faithfull to reprove the works of darknesse, and to have no fellowship with them, Ephes. 5.11,13. Then the godly shew their dislike, and worldlings hate them for that dislike. True zeale respects none but God and his glory, and therefore when he is dishonoured, the righteous cannot hold their peace, neither are carefull to please men, (Gal. 1.12.) And therefore the world holds war with them.

How manifold is our Christian and spirituall warfare? Quest. 3.

Answ. Twofold; namely,
- First, Internall; when a man wars against his owne inbred lusts, concupiscence, and corruption: this warwe reade of, 2 Cor. 10. 3,&c. Ephes. 6. 11. and 1 Pet. 2. 11. but this we speake not of in this place.
- Secondly, Externall; when a man suffers afflictions, and persecution for Christ: and this is here spoken of, and also mentioned in these places, viz. 1 Corinth. 15.31,&c. and 2 Cor. 11.23,&c. Philip. 1.29. and 1 Tim. 1.18. and 6.12. and 2 Tim. 2.3.

How may we know whether we be Souldiers, or not?

Examine seriously these foure things; namely,

First, whether dost thou oppose Satan, sin, the flesh, and thy selfe; that is, withstandest all the devils temptations, and sins, provocations, and thy owne inbred corruptions, and daily insultings?

Secondly, whether dost thou oppose the world, and honour, and riches, and peace, and whatsoever else doth war against thy soule?

Thirdly, whether dost thou fight at thy owne charges, or goest a warfare at the Lords? 1 Cor. 9.7. For the Lord doth I. Prepare his Souldiers by illumination, and knowledge, Hebr. 10. 32. And then II. Arme them, with Christian and spirituall weapons, Ephes. 6.14. And III. Support, and strengthen them in the day of battell, Psal. 34.7. Luke 2. 13.

Fourthly, hast thou put off all love of the world, and wordly care? for no man that goes on warfare, entangleth himselfe with the affaires of this world, 2 Tim. 2.4.

§. 2. For I am come to set a man at variance with his Father, &c. Sect. 2.

What is the meaning of this verse? Quest. 1.

First, some understand this of wicked men; as though our Saviour would say, where the Gospel is despised, there the obligations, and tyes of nature are of no force, Ier. 9.4. Mich. 7.5,6. Answ. 1.

Whence we may observe, That God will send domesticall dissensions amongst, and unto those, who contemne and despise the preaching of his Word, Esa. 57. 21. Examples hereof we have in Sennacherib, Esa. 57. Rehoboam, 2 King. 12. and Baasha, 1 King. 16. For it is just with God, that I. Those who despise God their Father, should be despised by their children, servants, and families. And Observ.

II.

II. That those who despise the Truth, should be deceived by errours, 2 Thes. 2. 11.

Quest. 2. Is God the Author of this? doth he send dissensions, and lying and evill Spirits amongst us?

Answ. No: for first, there are in us evill habits, which would continually produce these acts, if God did not curbe and restraine them, by a preventing grace. But secondly, God being provoked, he doth take away this bridle and restraint, and breaks the stay and staffe, whereupon we leane. And therefore, where Religion is despised, there domesticall jars are to be expected. For I. God doth direct and blesse those who feare him. And II. Religion doth teach children, and servants, to obey, and love their superiours: And therefore, they who disobey the Lord, and despise Religion, doe break the onely bonds that unite, and knit families and households together.

Quest. 3. Why are there there dissensions, and broyles, and jars, in privat and particular families? or whence comes it?

Answ. 1. First, it comes hence, because there is no Religion in that house. Or Answ. 2. Secondly, because there is no solid, or sincere Religion, but onely a forme, 2 Tim. 3. 5. Or

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because the Master of the family doth not teach, and instruct his household: many follow Religion (in some sort) themselves, but doe neglect to instruct their families, and to teach their wives, children, and servants their duties. Or Answ. 4. Fourthly, because either the head, or parts of the family, doe follow some other respects, besides Religion, and conscience; namely, either covetousnesse, or gaine, or partiality, or selfe-will, or the like.

Quest. 4. What are the remedies against these domesticall dissensions?

Answ. 1. The best remedy in all these, is to run unto God, Mic. 7. 7. as for example: I. If our friends or kindred, or those who are neerest (in the bond of nature) unto us, be angry, or at strife with us; then let us goe unto God, and labour that he may be our friend, and we shall then be happy, and have cause to rejoyce in the middest of these jars and distastes. If we be injured, and unjustly wronged by any who are neere unto us, or whosoever, and that we must suffer and endure those wrongs; then let us respect the promises of God made unto such, and rejoyce our selves in them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand this verse, of the dissensions which shall arise amongst the godly.

Quest. 5. How many sorts and kinds of peace are there?

Answ. Three; namely, First, the peace of the wicked; or that peace which wicked men have amongst themselves: this our Saviour spake of, verse 34. Secondly, the peace of the godly amongst themselves: this is both commanded, Ioh. 14. and also promised; The God of peace, will give peace unto the righteous, Esa. 57. Thirdly, the peace of the righteous with the wicked: and this our Saviour speaks of in this place. Here observe, that it is understood two manner of wayes; to wit, either I. Indicatively, onely. Or else II. Imperatively also.

First, this may be understood Indicatively onely, shewing what shall come of preaching: and thus it seemes to be understood by that which went before. Whence we note, 51.

That the preaching of the Gospel will beget jars and dissensions, amongst the neerest and deerest friends; for some will beleeve, and some will belye the Preachers, and preaching of the Word; some will practise it, some will persecute it; some will desire to injoy it, some others envie it: Like the two theeves, whereof the one prayes unto Christ, and the other reviles him. Many more examples hereof may be seen in Scripture; both in the Athenians, Act. 17. and in the Scribes and Pharisees, and Sadduces, and others, Acts 13. 45. and 14. 13, 19. and 18. 6, 8. and 19. 23. and 21. 30. and 23. 7. and Ioh. 6. 52. and 7. 40, &c. and 9. 16. and 10. 19, &c. Obsers.

Why doth the preaching of the Gospel breed this variance betweene fathers and children, masters and servants, friends and friends? Quest. 6.

First, because no man can serve two masters, Matth. 6. 24. The children of God, and of the world, or Belial, cannot agree. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because Religion; and the word withdrawes men from their pleasure, profit, and gaine; and therefore doth exasperate them against their dearest friends. Moses and Aaron (if God had not preserved them) had paid dearely for bringing the Israelites from the flesh-pots of Egypt, Exo. 16. 2. Saint Paul was in danger of death, for dispossessing a Damosell, because she brought much money to her Master, so long as shee was possessed, Act. 16. 18. Afterwards, for speaking against Diana; Demetrius by an uprore, and insurrection, had likely to have slaine him, because Paul spake against his profit, Act. 19. 24. And thus, when Preachers speake against mens lucre and darlings, they are hated by those who otherwise love them. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, because the word is a hard saying to flesh and blood (Iohn 6. 60.) Or because men cannot endure reproofe: Lot was well liked by the Sodomites (for any thing we know) untill he reproved them: but then they threaten him, Gen. 19. 9. So many, when once the word reproves them, will endure it no longer; but spurne against the reproofes, and set themselves against the reprovers. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, because naturally men cannot endure, that others should bee thought to be better then themselves; for those who endeavour not to bee good indeed, doe yet desire to be thought to bee good, Esay 65. 5. And hate those whom the world thinkes better then themselves; as we see in Cain, who hated his brother Abell, because he was better in Gods esteeme: and more beautifull in his eye then himselfe was, Gen. 3. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, the preaching of the word begets dissension amongst deare friends; because thereby one becomes more blessed then another: God promiseth (and performeth) that hee will blesse those who obey his word, but curse the disobedient: And hence the blessed are hated of the other, as Iacob was by his brother Esau, Gen. 27. 41. And therefore we may observe the perversenesse of our nature, and impiety of our dispositions in Answ. 5.

52 this particular, that those whom 1. Nature, and 2. Civility, and 3. Custome, and 4. Acquaintance, hath taught us to love: yea, whom 5. we have loved indeed; wee now hate onely, because they are religious.

Quest. 8. Who hate others, or become enemies unto others for religion only?

Answer. Many, yea in a manner all sorts of people: as for example:

First, wives are offended with their husbands, and husbands with their wives, because they are religious, Iob 2.9.

Secondly, Children are angry against Parents, because with the bridle of religion they seeke to restraine them, of their unbridled wils.

Thirdly, Parents are often angry with their Children, because they are young Saints, and too religious; and Masters dislike servants, because they are too pure, and religiously bent.

Fourth. servants stomack their masters, because they observe such pious practises in their houses; & wil rather leave them, then submit themselves to be taught, and instructed and catechised by them; yea, utterly refuse to be examined at home, what they learnt at Church. And thus I might have gone through all rankes, and qualities, and degrees whatsoever.

Secondly, this verse may be understood Imperatively also, as appeares by that which followes, To teach us:

Observ. That the strongest bonds of nature are to bee broken, and neglected for religion, Deut. 33.9. and Psalme 73.25. &c. David must leave his Countrey, and Rebecca her kindred, if God call and command it. As justice is painted blind without never an eye; so Religion makes men Unoculos, to have but one eye; and therefore they only behold, and Colos. 3. 15. love, and serve the Lord, contemning all other things, though never so strong; as for example:

First, Propinquity, familiarity, and intimacy is a strong bond: and yet Religion makes us forsake our most neare, and deare, and familiar friends, if they labour to seduce us, and lead us aside from God, or if they be hinderances unto us in his service.

Secondly, Nature is a strong coard; yea, what nearer bond can there bee, then is that of the Child to the Father, and of the Wife to the Husband? and yet children and wives must be neglected, in regard of Religion, and Christ.

Thirdly, the authority of Parents, is a strong tye, children being commanded to obey them; and yet they must be disobeyed, rather then God, and forsaken for Christ.

Object. It may here bee objected, God is the God of peace, and the nature of the Gospel is to bring children unto their Fathers, Malach. 4.6. How then doth Religion occasion these dissensions?

Answ. 1. First, the fault certainely is not in the Gospel, but in the vicionsnesse of our natures.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Prophet Malachie doth not speak of the persons of Fathers, but of Religion, and divine worship; according to that of the Prophet; Seeke the old wayes: That is, Iohn Baptist by his preaching, shall reduce and bring backe men to the former, and true religion of the Patriarkes, which was taught them by God.

Thirdly, certainely Religion doth sow the seeds of concord amongst the godly, but not with the wicked; although they be most deare, in regard of some other naturall bond: For it is with the wicked, and the righteous, as it is with the wheat and the tares; while the wheat and tares grow together, the wheat is oppressed with the tares, and the tares supported by the wheat; but when they are separated, then the corne is gathered into the Garner, and the tares bound in bundles, and cast into the fire. So while the righteous and wicked are conjoyned together, the righteous are oppressed and burdened, and the wicked supported; on the contrary, when they are separated, the godly flourish, and the wicked fall and wither. Answ. 3.

VERS. 37. Hee that loveth Father or Mother, more then me, is not worthy of me; and he that loveth Sonne or Daughter, more then me, is not worthy of mee. Verse 37.

§. 1. Hee that loveth Father or Mother more then mee. Sect. 1.

It is questioned betweene us, and the Papists, whether children may enter into profession of Monkery, without their Parents consent? They holding the affirmative, prove it thus from this verse. Christ saith, Whosoever loveth Father or Mother more then me, is not worthy of me. Therefore children may become Monkes without their Fathers leave. Bellarm. de Mon. Cap. 36. Object.

First, in this place our Saviour speaketh of Persecution, when a man ought not, for love of his friends, to deny Christ; but the Monkish life is not Persecution. Answ. 1.

Secondly, a man may leave his Parents, as Christ commandeth, though hee dwell in the same house with them: that is, by setting his love and affection on heavenly things. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, all goe not to Christ, that come into Monasteries. Answ. 3

Doth our Saviour speake here only of Parents, and Children? Quest. 1.

Hee doth not prohibite these, that he might grant this liberty unto others; but rather doth include all others in this, A majore ad minus. For Answer.

First, all authority, and superiority (whether Kings, Magistrates, Iudges, or whatsoever) are included here under the name of Parents, or Father and Mother. And,

Secondly, all love, and propinquity of brethren, friends, and the like, are implied here in Children. So that the meaning is; that all men whatsoever, are to be post-poned unto Christ, seeing that these who are most deare, both by nature and the Law of God, are to be left, and forsaken, in regard of him.

Our Saviour, by this expression of Father and Mother, would teach us,

That great honour is due unto Parents from Children. Reade Levit. 19.3. Prov. 23.22. Malachie 1.6. Why must Parents be thus highly honored? Observ.

First

Answ 1. First, because nature teacheth it: all nations (though never so barbarous) honoured their Parents, and taught that this reverence, and honour was due unto them, because Children had their being from their Parents, and were begotten for their Parents good; Ego nihil te genui.

Answ. 2 Secondly, because reason doth dictate this unto us: For, I. Parents sustaine many cares, and sorrowes for Children: the Mother undergoes great paine, when the child is in the wombe, but greater, when it comes out of the wombe into the world, yea, being borne, much paines and care in the nourishing of it: The Father, he provides, and takes care for it, and often breakes his head, and sleepe with care, for his child: yea, II. All the care of Parents is for their children: and whatsoever they have, they have it for them: and they weary their bodies, for the enriching of them. And therefore it is the greatest reason in the world, that children should honour their Parents.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because Religion teacheth this unto us: For I. God commands it, Exod. 20. 12. Honour thy Parents. And II. God hath engraven his image in Parents: A King in a Common-wealth, and a Father in a house, being the image and substitute of God. Whence, First, sometimes God is called our Father, as Malach. 2. 6. and 2 Cor. 6. 18. Ephes. 4. 6. And Secondly, sometimes Parents and Magistrates are called gods, Exod. 23. 28. Psal. 5. III. God gives wisedome unto children, as they increase in years, that thereby they may understand, what honour, love, obedience, respect, and duety is due unto their Parents, Iob 32. 7. IV. God hath encouraged, and excited children to honour their Parents, with a promise of blessings, (Ephes. 6. 2, 3.) And therefore seeing God hath commanded it, and promised to blesse it, and charged children to see him in their Parents; yea, endued them with wisedome and understanding, to know what belongs unto Parents, or what is their duetie towards their Parents: It is then great reason, that children should love and honour them.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, children are bound to love and reverence their Parents, because otherwise it were no great matter, nor worth acceptance, to forsake that for Christs sake, which wee care not for.

Quest. 3. Who are here to be blamed?

Answ. 1. First, those children who curse their Parents, are cursed children, and justly to be reproved: Reade Exod. 21. 17. Levit. 20. 9. Deut. 27. 16. Proverbes 20. 20.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those children who deride, and despise their Parents, are here also to bee blamed. Many despise their Parents, because they are wiser themselves then their Parents are: Indeed, young men perhaps may bee more quicke and prompt, but old men are more solid, and profound; young men may thinke old men to bee fooles, but old men know that young men are fooles, Gen. 9. 23. Yea, suppose that children bee more learned, or wiser then Parents, yet by no meanes they must despise them; and that for these reasons; namely, I. Because they are their Parents: Men of rare and singular gifts, must not despise those of inferiour parts, whatsoever they are; much lesse then their Parents. II. Because God hath threatned to punish such children, as contemne their Parents, Prov. 30. 17. III. Because if they bee more learned then their Parents, they are the more obliged, and beholden unto them, that have taken more care of their education, and bestowed more in the bringing of them up, then their Parents bestowed upon them. If a Father shall educate his child ignorantly, and that child bring up his sonne in learning and knowledge; and for this education, the learned sonne shall deride, or despise his unlearned Father; his ingratitude is great, and his fault inexcusable, both in the sight of God and men. IV. Because if the sonne, have indeed more naturall excellent naturall parts, then the Father, yet hee must not despise him; they being given him by God, who doth distribute his gifts, not according to our merits, but according to his meere mercy, and free-will. And therefore it argues pride, arrogancie, and unthankefulnesse towards God, to bee so proud of our owne qualities, that in regard of our selves, wee slight and contemne others. 53

Thirdly, those children are too blame, that refuse (being able) to releeve, and helpe their poore and old Parents, (1 Tim. 5. 4.) For that which they borrowed of them, when themselves were young, and unable to helpe themselves; they should in equity repay backe, when their Parents through age and weakenesse are not able to worke, or releeve themselves. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, those children are faulty, who disobey their Parents, Deuteronomie, 21. 18. Yea: Answ. 4.

Fiftly, those Parents are here too blame, who through their owne neglect, of the education of their children, procure this disobedience and contempt from them. For I. Some have a care to feed their children, but are altogether carelesse to teach them; insomuch, as every one can say, they are better fed then taught. II. Some are so indulgent over their children, that they cannot correct, they cannot check them: Certainely, children (like fields) are to be plowed, tilled, and sowne betime, Ierem. 4. 4. III. Some doe so admire their children, that they wholly neglect their religious education; Suum cuique pulchrum, the Crow thinkes his owne young ones, as brave and faire birds, as the best: and many Parents are so enamoured of their owne children, that they thinke none may bee compared with them: whence: Answ. 5

First, their children become proud, and being proud, learne to contemne and despise them: Or,

Secondly, their children thinke them foolish thus to dote upon them. Or,

Thirdly, their children being thus cockered, pampered, and doted upon, learne to disdaine and reproach their Parents. And thus through carelesnesse, and too much indulgence, Parents bring a curse upon their children, and their children, (in stead of a blessing) become a curse unto them: How great care then should Parents have to edu-

54 cate, and bring up their children, in the feare and nurture of the Lord.

Quest. 4. What is required of children towards their Parents?

Answ. 1. First, they must so highly and cordially love them, that no worldly thing should separate them from them; for although marriage separate them, in regard of cohabitation, yet not from that love, reverence, and obedience, which the morall Law, or the Law of nature requires in them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, yet for Christs sake, they must leave and forsake these.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they must learne to increase in love, reverence, and humility towards their Parents.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, they must communicate of their substance, to the releeving of the necessities of their Parents.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, they must see God in their Parents.

Sect. 2. §. 2. He that loveth sonne or daughter more then mee, is not worthy of mee.

Observ. Our Saviour here by this phrase of sonne and daughter, would teach us; that a great deale of love is due from Parents to children: or that Parents ought to love their children with a great measure of love, Ephes. 6. 4.

Quest. 1. Why must Parents thus greatly love their children?

Answ. 1. First, because they are flesh of their flesh, as it was said of the wife, Gen. 2. Yea, this is more truely said of children, then of wives; and therefore Christ tooke our flesh upon him, or assumed flesh, not by becomming the husband of a woman, but the sonne of a woman: Hence children are said to issue out of their Fathers loynes. Now if a man should love his wife, as himselfe, because they are one in a conjugall bond: then also, (if not much more) his children which are parts of himselfe in a naturall bond; although in other regards, a wife is to be loved more then children.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because in children, a man becomes to be immortall in the world, his name being upheld and continued in them. The Heathens knew no other Resurrection, then this; for Parents to survive in their children, as the Phœnix springs up out of the ashes: And therefore Posterity was alwayes highly praised and desired, as Gen. 15. 2. Abraham thought all things nothing, so long as he was childlesse; so Gen. 30. 1. Levit. 20. 20. &c. Numb. 3. 4. Deut. 25. 5. Ruth. 4. 5. and 1 Sam. 1. 2. and 2 Sam. 14. 7. Ieremie 18. 21. Hosea 9. 12. 14.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, children are greatly to be loved, because they are [illegible] gifts of God, Genes. 33. 5. and 48. 9. and,

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because God hath given us an example hereof in himselfe, loving his naturall and only begotten sonne, with an exceeding love, Mat. 3. 17.

Quest. 2. Who are blame-worthy here?

Answ. 1. First, those who neglect their children, or their duety towards their children. And,

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who are partiall in their love, and care towards their children, Deut. 21. 15. &c.

Quest. 3. What is the duety of Parents towards their children?

Answ. 1. First, they must love them; for nature descends faster then it ascends.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they must teach, and instruct them, Deut. 4. 10. and 6. 7. and 11. 19. and 32. 46. Genes. 18. 19.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they must correct, and reprove them, when they doe amisse, Prov. 23. 17. and 1 Sam. 3. 13.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, they must pray for them, 1 Chron. 29. 19. Iob 1. 5.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, they must provide some substance, estate and meanes for them, Gen. 24. 36. and 1 Tim. 5. 8.

Sect. 3. §. 3. More then me?

Our Saviour expresly here teacheth; that neither Father nor Mother, sonne nor daughter, must be loved above him.

Quest. 1. What is love?

Answer. Love is a passion, or affection in the concupiscible appetite, that it may enjoy the thing which is esteemed to be good, as neere as it can.

Quest. 2. How many sorts, and kinds of love are there?

Answer. There are three sorts of love: namely,

First, Innatus, or naturall love: Now the naturall love, is that love, whereby every thing hath an inclination naturally to the like; as heavie things naturally goe downe to the center of the earth: beasts are carried by sense, and instinct of nature to their objects; thus the Pismire in Summer, layeth up provision against the winter, Prov. 6. 8. This naturall instinct, the Greeke call ὁρμὴ. So man is carried to his object by love: and because hee must love something, what better object can hee chuse to love then God?

Secondly, Imperatus, or commanded love: Now this commanded love, is that, whereby reason sheweth us some good thing to be loved, and then our will commandeth us to love the same. If wee had no more but reason to shew it to us, and the will to command us; yet this were enough, to move the affections to love God.

Thirdly, Elicitus, or love freely proceeding: now this love, proceeding freely, is that, when the affections make choise of God freely; when as the consideration of his goodnesse breeds admiration in us; when the consideration of his bountie breeds love in us; and his sweetnesse doth so satisfie our whole desires, that wee thinke nothing so worthy an object to be beloved, as our God, who hath all these excellent properties in him.

Quest. 3 Answ. Why must we love God above all others? Because he loved us first, Iohn 3. 16. and 1 Iohn 4. 10.) and therefore wee are bound to love him againe, and that above all things. Here observe, that there are three sorts of love: viz.

First, the love that seeks his owne profit only; as when a subject loves his Prince only for his goods: such was the love of Laban to Iacob; here the Prince is not bound to love his subject againe; neither neither was Iacob bound to love Laban for this sort of love.

Secondly, the love that lookes to lewdnesse and dishonestie, such was the love which Potaphars wife carried to Ioseph, Gen. 39. 9. Now Ioseph was not bound to love Potaphars wife againe in this sort of love.

Thirdly, there is a most pure and holy love; and in this love we are bound to love back againe God loved us before we loved him; yea, he loved us freely, and for no by-respect; therefore wee are bound to love him first, and above all things. Weems Image of God, part 2. pag. 191.

Verse 38. Vers. 38. And he that taketh not up his Crosse and followeth after me is not worthy of mee.

Sect. 1. Observ. 1. §. 1. And followeth after me.

Our Saviour here expresly teacheth, that it is not sufficient to beare the Crosse, except also wee follow him. Mat. 8. 22. and 4. 20. 22. and 9. 9. and 19. 27. Luke 18. 43. Revelat. 14. 4. Iohn 10. 4. 27.

Quest. 1. Why is it not enough to suffer, but we must also follow Christ?

Answ. 1. First, because wee cannot suffer persecution for any other cause: for to beare the Crosse, for error or pride, or vaine glory, or desperation, or the like belongs not at all unto Christ, it being the cause, not the punishment that makes the Martyr.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because this is the end of persecution, it being so hard to follow Christ, that a man cannot do it without some persecution or other; or without crosses in some kind or other. Many are the enemies of Christ and religion, and therfore we must suffer, that so wee may follow our Saviour, which without suffering wee cannot doe: for if a man could follow Christ without persecution, there were then no need that hee should suffer at all.

Quest. 2. To whom doth it belong to follow Christ, or who must doe it?

Answ. This duty of following Christ belongs unto all, and is common to all, none being excepted or exempted, but onely those who exclude themselves. Here observe three sorts of men, viz.

First some thinke that sanctity belongs not unto them, but onely unto Ministers; but these must know, that they who follow not Christ in the waies of holinesse, follow the Divell in the waies of wickednesse.

Secondly, some say they have their labours, and employments, and callings to follow; and therefore have neither leasure nor spare time to follow Christ: but these must know, that to follow Christ is the principall, and most generall vocation of the soule, and woe bee to him that puts Christ into the Manger, and post-pones the following of him unto wordly affaires.

Thirdly, some binde themselves Apprentices, and give themselves wholly up to the service of Christ, both in prosperity, and adversity, both in persecution, and peace: And these as the best of the three by much, are to bee imitated.

But it may bee objected, that this dedicating of men unto the service of God, doth make them neglect their vocations and callings: And therefore is it not to be imitated. 55 Object.

Religion doth not teach this; and therefore they who under colour of Sanctity and profession neglect their callings, doe amisse, and are neither to bee imitated nor excused. For Answ.

First, Religion teacheth us to devote our selves wholly up to the service of the Lord. And Secondly, to follow our callings in the Lord; because hee hath so ordained, so commanded.

§. 2. He is not worthy of mee. Sect. 2.

None is worthy of God or Christ, and therfore this censure of our Saviours is needlesse. Object.

First, certainely no man in himselfe is worthy of God or Christ. Answ. 1.

Secondly, without doubt none can repute or think themselves worthy of God or Christ, without a great measure of pride: for if any be worthy indeed, then grace is no grace. Rom. 11. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, but the Lord is graciously pleased to esteeme those who are in grace worthy of him as was shewed before verse 13. Hence wee may then observe. Answ. 3.

That those who endeavour to give themselves up in love to the service of Christ; Christ will esteeme them as worthy of himselfe by his grace. See before verse 10. and Luke 21. 36. Colos. 1. 12. and 2 Thes. 1. 5. Observ. 1.

Why will Christ esteeme such as these worthy? Quest. 1.

First, because their persons are worthy, both in regard of the Covenant contracted betweene the Lord and them; and in regard of their participation of Christ; and also in regard of that New Garment of Christs which they have put on. Answ. 1.

Secondly, the Lord is pleased to thinke such worthy, because the holy Spirit leads them unto worthy workes. Ephes. 4. 1. and 3 Iohn 6. Galath. 5. 22. And therefore if wee desire that our Lord should thinke us worthy of him, let us walke worthily, bringing forth fruits worthy of amendment of life. Mat. 3. 8. Acts. 26. 20. Philip. 1. 27. Colos. 1. 10. and 1 Thessal. 2. 12. For I. This God commands. And II. Unto this the Spirit aids and assists us. Answ. 2.

What is the scope of these words, He is not worthy of mee? Quest. 2.

First, our Saviour hereby would teach us, why others are rejected; namely because they were unworthy. Mat 7. 23. and 22. 8. Answ. 1.

Secondly, our Saviour hereby would teach us, why others are unworthy, namely because they despise Christ who gives such great things, for vile, and base things. Whence we learne Answ. 2.

That it is a most unworthy thing to preferre worldly things before Christ. Ierem. 2. 13. Ionah 2. 8. Esa. 1. 4. 28. and 1 Samuel 8. 8. and 15. 11. Observ. 2.

How doth it appeare that it is an unworthy thing to preferre other things before Christ? Quest. 3.

First, because God hath done such great things for us. Iohn 3. 16. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because hee is the living fountaine of all good, Ierem. 2. 13. Iames 1. 17. Answ. 2.

Thirdly,

56 Thirdly, because Christ purchased us at so deare a rate; to wit, by his death and suffring.

Answ. 3. Fourthly, because all worldly things, in re-
Answ. 4. gard of Christ are base, and vile Philip. 3. 8. And therefore to preferre such things, such a God, and Saviour, and Redeemer, is a most unworthy thing.

Quest. 4. How is Christ to bee preferred before all other things?

Answ. 1. First, we must admire his φιλανθρωπίαν, and love of mankinde, which is miserable without his love.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee must desire his society and fellowship before all other things. Psalm. 27. 5.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, untill hee come, and reveale himselfe unto us, we must weepe and mourne for his absence, Like Rachel who would not be comforted. Mat. 2.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, wee must forsake all worldly things that keep, or hinder us from Christ.

Verse 40. VERS. 40. He that receiveth you receiveth mee; and hee that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

Object. The Donay Disciples dispute from hence for the adoration of Saints, thus.

Answer. The honour of Saints redoundeth to the honour of Christ; as Basil saith, Honor servorum redundat in communem Dominum, the honour of the servants redoundeth to the common Lord, pag. 8. The honouring of Gods servants, as his Ministers, doth redound to the Lord, as our blessed Saviour here saith, He that receiveth you, receiveth me: But to give part of that honour which is due unto God (as all Religious worship is) unto his servants, is a dishonouring of the Lord himselfe; for hee will not give his glory to another. Esa. 42. 8. Willet. Synops. fol. 428.

Vers. 41. VERS. 41. Hee that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall receive a Prophets reward: and hee that receiveth a righteous man, in the name of a righteous man, shall receive a righteous mans reward.

§. 1. He that receiveth a Prophet.

Sect. 1. Quest. 1. Whom doth our Saviour here meane by Prophet?

Answer. To Prophecie, or to bee a Prophet hath divers acceptions in Scripture; namely,

First, sometimes it is taken for the bookes, and writings of the Prophets. They have Moses, and the Prophets. Luke 16. 29.

Secondly, sometimes for the whole word of God: No prophesie of Scripture is of any private motion. 2 Peter 1. 20.

Thirdly, sometimes those unto whom God vouchsafed familiarly to reveale himselfe, are called Prophets. Thus Abraham was a Prophet, Gen. 20. 7. and Miriam a Prophetesse b.

b Exod. 15. 20.

Fourthly, ordinary interpreters of the word are called Prophets: as in this verse, He that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet.

Fifthly, and lastly, it is taken for those, who were enabled by divine Revelation, to lay open hidden secrets, transcending all possibility of humane search. Hence it is that Prophets in old time were called Seers. (1 Sam. 9. 9.) and their Prophesie was termed a Vision. Esa. 1. 1. because God extraordinarily enlightned their minds with the knowledge of these secrets.

Observ. Our Saviour here by receiving a Prophet, meanes by way of Hospitality, to teach us, that it is acceptable unto God to receive the Saints into our houses. Hebr. 13. 1.

Quest. 2. Why must wee bee hospitable unto the Saints?

Answ. 1. First, because they are our brethren, and fellow members; how no man ever hated his owne flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it. Rom. 12. and Cor. 12. Ephes. 5. 27.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because they bring good, yea excellent things along with them; and for carnal things administred unto them, they administer spirituall. 1 Corinth. 9. 11. For if wee receive Prophets, they will teach us: if we receive Righteous men, they will lead and guide us by their example.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because in them wee receive Christ as Abraham did. Genes. 18. 1. &c. and many besides. Heb. 13. 1.

§. 2. In the name of a Prophet.

Sect. 2. Our blessed Lord here sheweth how the affection is to be qualified: and that wee must not onely truely love the Saints, but also for this cause because they are Saints. Whence Note

Observ. That true love unto our bretheren ought to bee sincerely for religions sake: or we ought sincerely and intirely to love our bretheren, because they are Religious (1 John 2. 9. &c. 3. 10. &c. 4. 20.) For this love should bee in God, and Christ, and for his sake.

Quest. 1. Who are heerein worthy blame and reproofe?

Answ. 1. First, hypocrites and dissemblers; who have as Bernard sayes (Melin ore, verbulatio: Fel in corde frous in factis) Peace in their words, but warre in their thoughts: love towards the Saints in their tongues, but hatred in their hearts; their words unto them beeing as sweet as honey and smooth as Oyle, but their deeds beeing deceitfull, and as bitter as Gall. Prov. 23. 7. Iames 2. 13. Our love unto the Saints must be sincere and cordiall, not sinister and counterfeit.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those are here to blame, who love the Saints onely for some second causes: namely, either.

I. Because they are their neighbours, and their good neighbours, from whom they receive no evill, but upon every occasion, all neighbourly offices; Or II. because they are of a kinne, or allyed unto them. Or III. Because they are of meek, affable, and gentle natures, and loving dispositions. Or IV. Because they love them, and theirs; therefore they repay love with love. V. Through vaine glory.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they are here faulty, who love the Saints onely with a mercenarie love, that is, for reward: For (Aliud est scripare, aliud propter hoc agere) It is one thing for a man to hope that the Lord will blesse him, for his sincere love, unto his his Children, and servants (because this God here hath promised:) It is another thing for a man to love, and receive the Saints for the rewards sake promised; for this love is but self-love, (and such as God rejects) not sincere love, and such as the Lord promiseth to rewarde.

Quest. 2. Which is the true respect of love: Or for what respect must wee love our bretheren?

Answ. 1. First, in generall we must love the Saints for Gods sake: or love the Lord in them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, and more particularly, from this verse, we are taught to love them for a threefold respect. viz.

I. Because they are Prophets, and thus we must love them for the words sake which they bring, or at least which they professe.

II. Because they are Righteous, and thus we must love them, for that sanctity, and Purity, and integrity, which we see in them.

III. Because they are Disciples: and thus wee must love them for their spirituall society; and bond of charity, as fellow travellers in a long journey love one another, or as Country-men love one another in a strange place, or remote Country.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Hee shall receive a Prophets reward.

Quest. 1. What is the sense and meaning of these words? They may be understood two manner of waies, namely,

Answ. First, they shall receive that reward, which righteous men are wont to receive from the Prophets, that is, they shall be made Partakers of their labours. August. ſ. Psalm. 102.

Observ. Whence wee may learne, That the Gospell becomes profitable to those who receive the Ministers; the truth hereof evidently appeares,

I. From these places. Luke 10. 6. Acts 8. 6. and 10. 25. 33. 44. and 13. 7. 12. 42. &c. and 16. 14. &c. and 2 Corinth. 7. 15. Galath. 4. 14, 15. II. Because the affection opens the understanding: we easily beleeve what wee earnestly love. III. Because God crownes this affection towards his Ministers, with a spirituall blessing.

Secondly, those that receive the Prophets shall receive that reward which the Lord hereafter will give unto the Prophets.

CHAPTER XI.

Vers. 1. VERS. 1. And it came to passe when Iesus had made an end of commanding his twelve Disciples, he departed thence to teach, and preach in their Cities.

Sect. 1. §. 1. When Iesus had made an end of commanding his Disciples.

Observ. OUr Saviour here expressly teacheth us, that the commission of preaching is a command: and therefore wo be unto him that (being called thereunto) neglects it. 1 Corinth. 9. 16. The worke of preaching neither hath his beginning from us, (for God commands it, and it is his service) neither ends in us; the end thereof beeing to call and reduce Children unto their Fathers (Malach. 4. 6.) and wee but Gods labourers sent into his Vineyard, to gather in his vintage. Matth. 9. 38.

Quest. 1. What is here required of Ministers?

Answ. They must acknowledge the necessity of preaching, and the injunctions of God; who hath enjoyned.

First, Quod, vt sit. That they must preach, as in this verse. And Secondly, Quid, what they must preach? the words of life. Acts 5. 20.

Thirdly, Quibus, To whom they must preach? The Apostles must preach to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Mat. 10. and to all Nations. Mat. 28. 20. Pastours must preach unto that flocke which is committed unto their charge. Acts 20. 28.

Fourthly, Quando, When they must preach? In season, and out of season. 2. Tim. 4. 2.

Fiftly, Quomodo, how they must preach? as becomes the Oracles of God. 1 Peter. 4. 11. And therefore Preachers must be made all things to all men. (1 Corinth. 9 19. &c.) if by any meanes they may winne any: they must be meeke, long-suffering, and gentle. (2 Timoth. 2. 24.) and endure al things so long as they may preach Christ. Philip. 1. 15. 19.

Quest. 2. What is here required of people?

Answ. They must acknowledge the necessity of hearing: Preaching is a Relative word, and cannot goe without his Correlate: a man cannot be a Preacher except he have hearers, unlesse people would have us to doe, as blind Bedaes boy made him doe, Preach unto the Stones, which Christ never required of us, but onely enjoyned us to preach, when we had some to Preach unto.

Objecti. But it will be objected, people are no where commanded to heare; and therefore where there is no command to heare, there is no necessity of hearing.

Answ. 1. First, a command here is needlesse; if a Treasure be offred unto a poore man, or meat unto a hungry man, or drinke unto a thirsty man, or Clothes unto a naked man: what necessity is there to command them to take them, when their necessity requires them? yea they who have any tast of the word at all (which was sweeter to Davids taste, then the honey or the honey comb) will desire it. Acts 13. 42. and receive it with joy.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee have both Comminations and cautions in the word of God concerning hearing: and therefore there is implicitely a command to heare. Proverbs 1. 24. &c. All those are grievously 58 greevously threatned, who will not heare, yea because they would not heare. Mat. 10. 15. Our Saviour saith, It shall bee more tolerable for Sodome, and Gomorrha at the day of judgement, then for that Citie, which will not heare the word, when it is offred unto them. Mat. 22. 7. Those who were invited to the Marriage of the Lambe, are slaine because they would not come. Besides these Comminations denounced against all those who will not heare, we have a caution given to all those who doe, Luke 8. 18. Take heed how yee heare.

Sect. 2. § 2. In their Cities.

The Evangelist here by their Cities meanes the Cities where the Apostles had first preached.

Observ. Whence Note, that the Preaching of the Ministers, is to be perfected by the preaching of Christ. For if the word preached by them bee not mixed with faith, which is imprinted by Christ, it profits not. Hebr. 4. 2. And therefore our Saviour sends them before his face (Luke 10 1) that is he sent the Apostles before, intending himselfe to follow after, because their preaching without his was but in vaine: Man onely working upon the eare, but Christ upon the heart, and that by his holy Spirit.

Quest. 1. Doth not this derogate from the dignity, and excellency of the Ministerie?

Answ. Nothing at all: for Christ doth not worke upon the heart by a worke separated from the Ministery of the word, but by the Ministery of the word; the preaching of the word being an Instrument (as the Sacraments also are) to convay grace unto us, or to worke grace in us: and hence Christ makes us able Ministers. (2 Cor. 4 6.) and waters that which wee plant.

Quest. 2. Who are here to be blamed?

Answ. 1. First, they who seeke for Christ without the Ministery of the word; or they who hope to find Christ, although they sleight and neglect the word preached unto them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they are faultie on the other side, who rest in the Ministery of the word, without Christ. And therefore,

I. They who desire to be made partakers of Christ, must seeke the word, receive the Ministers thereof, and embrace the preaching of the Gospell. II. They who heare and receive the word, must yet further expect, and desire, that Christ by the internall operation of his Spirit, would work upon their hearts, in, and with his word.

Verse 2.3 VERS. 2, 3. Now when Iohn had heard in the Prison the workes of Christ, he sent two of his Disciples, and said unto him, Art thou hee that should come? or doe wee looke for another?

Sect. 1. § 1. When Iohn had heard in the Prison.

Observ. In the eleventh verse of this Chapter, our Saviour saith, there was no greater amongst the sonnes of men then Iohn the Baptist, and yet he is cast into Prison; To teach us,

That the greatest, and best, and dearest of the Children of God are subject to affliction. Reade Acts. 14. 22. and 2. Timoth. 3. 13. and Hebr. 12. 8.

Quest. 1. Why are the best, and most holy afflicted?

Answ. They are afflicted for a fourefold respect, or consideration; namely,

First, Respectu sui, in regard of themselves: there is in all (even the best) a roote of sinne, and therfore our hearts must bee plowed up by the Coulter, and Plow-share of affliction, that so the root of sin may be cast out. Ierem. 4.4. Winter corrects and helpes the overflowing, and abounding of humours; and the fore-skinne is to bee cut off. Deuter. 30. 16.

Secondly, Respectu Dei, in regard of God; that thereby he may shew himselfe to be the Phisition of his Children; yea, and that not onely a wise, but also a just Phisition.

Object. It may here be objected, that God can cure without meanes; and therefore what need hee afflict us? seeing hee can rectifie whatsoever is amisse in us (if hee please) without affliction.

Answ. It is true, that God can preserve life without bread, but yet hee will rather do it by bread: and he can cure and heale us without meanes, but he rather workes by meanes; and hence it is that the Lord afflicts, because it is one of the ordinary meanes whereby he workes: Here observe that the Lord hath a threefold meanes, whereby hee doth convert sinners, and cure sicke soules, to wit,

I. The outward call of his word preached to the eare. And,

II. The inward motions of his Spirit, working upon the heart. And,

III. Afflictions, either corporall inflicted upon the body, or spirituall, upon the soule, by reason of sinne: for sometimes God wounds the body with sorrow, and sometimes the soule for sinne. And therefore this beeing one of the ordinary meanes, whereby God weanes his Children from sinne, he will not sometimes withhold it from the best, and those who are best beloved by him.

Thirdly, Respectu impiorum, in regard of the wicked, that they may bee justly confounded, who enjoy peace, and yet will not obey. When the wicked see the righteous, (who are carefull to please God, and fearfull to offend him) under the rod and subject to some (sometimes sharpe) affliction; and themselves spared; they are left without excuse, and at the day of judgement shall not bee able to answer one word for a thousand; who would not obey that gracious God that dealt so favourably with them, in sparing them, when he punished, and corrected those who were much better.

Fourthly, Respectu vitæ futuræ, in regard of the life to come: because the Crowne of thornes is the way to the crowne of glory; and affliction to felicity, Rom. 8.17. and 2 Tim. 2. 13. Hence wee heare Abel to be persecuted of Cain; Isaac of Ismael, Iacob of Esau, Ioseph of his bretheren, the Israelites of Pharaoh, yea Christ of the Jewes. And therefore reason there is we see that the righteous should bee afflicted, and justice in the afflicting of them.

Quest. 2. How may we know whether wee be righteous or wicked? Children or Bastards?

First,

Sect. 1. First, if the Lord suffer us to runne without a bridle, or with the reines loose upon our necks, and to follow our owne wils, and wayes: then Væ nobis, Woe be unto us; for our portion will be the portion of Dives, and that same dismall and direfull ditty, will resound in our eares, which was founded: Thou in thy life receivedst thy pleasure; therefore now thou art tormented, Luke 16. Such as these have their portion in this life, Psalme 17. 14. there being nothing prepared for them in the life to come, but misery and torment.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if prosperity doe so fill our hearts, that we either lesse perceive, or lesse follow the motions of the Spirit; then certainely it is dangerous, that we are bastards and no sonnes.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if we are sensible of affliction, but yet remaine hard hearted, never a whit softned nor suppled by affliction; then certainly we are no sonnes, but bastards. Affliction, (as was said before) is but a meanes, or instrument of conversion; and therefore not all, who are sorely afflicted, are surely converted; affliction & conversion not being Termini convertibiles.

Quest. 3. What is required of us in affliction, and the Crosse?

Answer. Wee must not decline, or refuse the Crosse; but rather rejoyce, (when with Iohn Baptist) wee suffer for Christ, or the truth, Iames 1.2,10. that being the crowne of life, Iames 1.12. We must labour to learne our Christs Crosse, and bee instructed by our afflictions; learning thereby: First, in generall, to be humbled under the mighty hand of God, (1 Pet. 5.6.) acknowledging his hand in our afflictions.

Secondly, more particularly, wee must learne by affliction, to be bridled from sinne, and our owne will; to abstaine from evill and our owne wayes. And,

Thirdly, we must labour under the Crosse for a certaine union, and conjunction with Christ in the covenant of love and mercy.

§. 2. The workes of Christ.

Sect. 2. Quest. 1. What workes of Christ did Iohn heare of, and how did he heare of them in prison?

Answ. Saint Luke doth plainely shew, Chap. 7. For, First, hee raised a young man from death unto life, verse 12. &c. with the admiration of al that heard of it, verse 17.

Secondly, Iohns Disciples bring him word of this unto the prison, verse 18. whence hee sends two of them backe unto Christ, verse 19.

Thirdly, some thinke, these things are to bee applied to the present time: As if this our Evangelist would say; Iohn hearing, that even now Christ wrought many great miracles, laid hold of this fit, and seasonable time, to send unto Christ, both for the confirming of his Disciples, and the people also, that Iesus was the Christ: But of this afterwards.

Wee may here observe, that Christ wrought many things, and great miracles, before Iohn was cast in prison, which the Baptist heard not of, being distracted, or encumbred, with his owne worke of preaching and baptizing: but now being in prison, and not suffered publikely to preach, he hath leasure to heare of the workes of Christ: To teach us;

That the prison doth administer time to hear of Christ; or affliction doth afford opportunity unto spirituall duties: when men are (as Iohn now was) cast into prison, or deprived of their sight, or disinabled through sicknesse or weaknesse to worke; they have the more time, and leasure to pray, and meditate, and examine themselves, and the like: As appeares thus. Observ. 1. Psal. 119. 67. 71.

First, affliction takes away the quiet of the flesh, and presseth us downe, and constraines us to complaine, and makes us sensible of Gods hand, Psalme 30.6.7, 8. And therefore ministers unto us, occasion and opportunity of doing good, and of humbling our selves before the Lord.

Secondly, affliction removes carnall impediments from us; as for example. I. If we be deprived of riches, then we have the lesse molestations, and distracting cares. II. If we be deprived of health, that wee cannot labour; then wee have the better opportunity to reade, heare, pray, and the like: It had beene well for Martha, if shee had beene sicke; for then shee would have had leasure to have heard Christ; but being well, shee was troubled about so many things, that shee had no time to heare. III. If wee be deprived of liberty, then with Iohn, wee have more leasure to heare of Christ.

Quest. 2. How may wee know, whether affliction bee profitable for, and unto us, or not?

Answ. 1. First, if it drive us unto Christ, as unto our onely Provider, Protector, Physician, and safeguard, it is then an argument, that it is good for us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if leasure and opportunity being given, for the performance of spirituall duties, and religious exercises, wee doe not use it unto vaine and foolish pleasures, or idle thoughts, or wicked plots, or the like; but to heare of Christ, and to serve him, and to be more and more renewed in the inward man: Then we may confidently hope, that wee are better by affliction; and that affliction is good unto us.

Wee may observe hence againe: Iohn being in prison, was excluded, and shut out of the presence of Christ: hee could not now come unto him, but he could heare from him; and although hee were caged and hindered from comming abroad, yet not from the hearing of the Gospel, for that penetrates the prison: When he was in prison, he heard of the great workes of Christ. To teach us:

Observ. 2. That the Gospel penetrates into the most close, and hidden places. The word (wee see) comes to prisons, (Act. 5.19. and 16.26.) the word penetrates into the hearts of those, who deride and mocke it, Act. 2.37. the word comes to Neros Palace, Philip. 1. And divideth betwixt the marrow and the bones, Hebr. 4.12. yea, it flies through the whole world, Rom. 10. And is the mighty power of God unto salvation, Rom. 1.16. Psalme 45.4.

Quest. 3. How may this History of Iohns incarcerating be profitably allegorized?

Answ. If we consider this literall History Allegorically

60 cally, it is an exemplar of our Conversion: For First, by nature we are free from Christ, Rom. 6.18. Then,
Secondly, we are imprisoned under the Law, and spirit of bondage, Rom. 8.15. being deprived of all true comfort. Then,
Thirdly, wee heare of Christ by the heare, Iob 42.5. In a darke speaking, 1 Corinth. 13. Then Fourthly, wee receive a message of comfort, 2 Cor. 3.18. being assured by the Spirit, that Christ is our Lord, and our God.

Sect. 3. §13. Hee sent two of his Disciples.

Quest. 1 What two were these, whom Iohn sent unto Iesus?

Answ. 1. First, they are no where named, and therfore hard to define, or positively to name.

Answ. 2 Secondly, it matters not much to know, what their names were.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but because some name them, and affirme these two to be the same, which are mentioned, Iohn 1.40. I answer, that certainly, these two were not those two: The two mentioned there, are Andrew and his companion, which could not be these two sent from Iohn to Christ, as appeares evidently thus. I. These two, (at least one of them) remained with Christ, and were his Disciple. And therefore; II. They could not doubt of Christ, which followed him. And III. The great rumour and report of Christs miraculous workes (which is judged to be the cause of the sending these two Disciples unto Christ) was long, after Andrewes departure unto Christ, Iohn 3.26.

Quest. 2. Why did Iohn send these two Disciples unto Christ?

Answ. Many reasons are given hereof, which may be reduced unto these three heads; namely,
First for his owne sake. II. For his Disciples sake. III. For Christs sake.

First, Iohn sent (when he was in prison) unto Christ, Suâ causâ; for his owne sake, or in regard of himselfe; and that either,
I. Because hee was ignorant, whether hee of whom he heard so great things were the Messias, and Christ, or not; for although he knew, that the Messiah was now to come, (yea was already come) yet hee did not know him by his face, neither could particularly point at the person, untill by the Spirit, hee was taught which was hee, Iohn 1.31.33. Thus Tertull. & Iustin. answer. But to this I answer, that Iohn could not now be ignorant of Christ, because the Spirit had shewed him which was he, Iohn 1.31.33. and 3.29. And hee that was a Prophet, yea the Prophet of Christ in the wombe, could not bee ignorant of him, after hee had published, and proclaimed himselfe unto the world. Or,
II. Because now being in persecution hee was fearefull: Nam Spiritus sanctus post quam auctus in Christo, a Iohanne discessit, (Tertul.) For the Spirit of God had departed from Iohn unto Christ; or at least, the more Christ increased in Spirit, the more Iohn decreased: according to his owne words: Hee must increase, but I must decrease, Iohn 3.30. To this I answer these things: to wit,
First, If wee (even all the faithfull) have received, and doe daily receive of his fulnesse, (Iohn 1.16.) then the Spirit is increased (being increased in Christ) rather then diminished, or decreased: and therefore it followes not, that because the Spirit was increased in Christ, therefore it was decreased in Iohn.
Secondly, the Spirit was given to David, and taken away from Saul; not ab penuriam Spiritûs, for any want or defect in the Spirit, (as though it could not have inspired them both, and that sufficiently and abundantly) but because Saul was rejected: Now I know the Reverend Father, and Father which I reverence, will not say that Iohn was so.
Thirdly, Iohn was not incarcerated, or cast into prison, for the profession of Christ, but through the hatred that Herodias bare unto him: And therefore there was no need that he should feare persecution, for the confessing and acknowledging of Christ.
Fourthly, if Iohn had feared persecution for Christs sake, then certainely hee would never so openly have sent his Disciples on this message unto Christ, seeing it must needs be every way as dangerous, and full of perill, as to confesse him. Or:
III. Because hee did doubt, whether Christ were hee that should offer himselfe to death, or whether hee would send another. Many of the Ancients run this way, saith Maldonat. s. But is rejected, even of the Papists themselves. Or,
IV. Because being now in prison, pressed with affliction, griefe, and sorrow, he desireth to nourish, and increase, and strengthen his faith, by more testimonies then yet he had of Christ; And this of all the rest I conceive most likely, to bee most true. Whence we may learne.

That we must labour so to nourish our faith that it may be increased, 2 Cor. 10.15. Colos. 2.7 and 1 Thes. 4.10. and 2 Thes. 1.3. Observ. 1

Why must we be thus carefull to nourish and increase our faith? Quest. 3

Firſt, because so long as we are in this life, we are but In augmento, non statu, in a growing age, not come unto our full growth: our perfection here being respective, not absolute. Read for the proofe hereof, 1 Cor. 13.9. Ephes. 4.12. and 3.19. and 2 Cor. 3.18. Answ. 1

Secondly, because this worke (to increase in faith) is imposed upon us by God, Matth. 13. Phil. 2.12. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, because the impediments of faith will arise daily; for without are distractions, and within are doubtings and cares; and therefore wee had need labour to overcome these, and having removed them out of the way to increase our faith. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, because it is the nature of true faith, to hunger, and thirst, and desire a greater measure, and increase of faith; the truely faithfull alwayes crying (with the Apostles) Lord increase our faith, Iohn 6.34. Answ. 4.

Secondly, Iohn Baptist sent (when he was in prison) his Disciples unto Christ, Discipulorum causâ, for their sakes, and that either:
I. To stay their murmuring: for they seeme to to tell Iohn the great workes, which Christ did, with some disdaine or indignation against Christ. He (say they) whom thou baptizedst, now baptizeth himselfe, and all runne after him, Iohn 3. 26. Whence I might observe: That there will bee emulations in the Church of Christ, and that among the godly: but I passe this by. Or,

II. Iohn sent them by Christ, that they might be instructed in Christ: He was now shortly by death to depart from them, and to leave them; and therefore he sends them unto Christ, that they might adhere unto, and follow him. To teach us:

Observ. 2. That the nearer any approach unto death, the more careful they should be to bring theirs, (that is, those who are under their care and charge) unto Christ: Iacob blesseth his before his death, Gen. 49. and Isaac, Gen. 27. Because they knew, that they must give an account of those who were committed unto them.

Quest. 4. Must we not take care of those who are under us, till a little before our death?

Answ. Certainely, wee must, and ought alwayes to say with Ioshua: Let others doe as seeme good in their owne eyes, but we and our houshold will serve the Lord: Yet here two things may be distinguished and observed; namely,

First, wee must prepare, and instruct them; and this is alwayes to bee done, 2 Corinth. 11. 2. As Abraham taught his children, (Gen. 18.) and family, the feare of the Lord. And the sooner this be done, the better it is, Prov. 22. 6. Eccles. 12. 1.

Secondly, to deliver some particular directions, and instructions to those, who are under our care and charge; and this is to be done at, (or a little before) our departure out of this life. Thus David did, both to Solomon his sonne, and to his people, 1 Chron. 28. and 29. Chap. When a Father, or Master of a family, can no longer remaine with their children, or servants, it is the Christian-like done, to administer holy, and religious counsell, and advice unto them, and to take the best care for them, that possibly they can: For herein we shall imitate our blessed Lord and Saviour, who when hee was to depart, recommended his Mother to Iohn, and his flocke (the people) to Peter, Iohn 21.

Quest. 5. Who are here justly to be taxed?

Answ 1. First, those who instead of breeding their children up to Christ, bring them up to the devill; and that either: I. By teaching them to sinne; as poore people often teach their children to steale; and others their children and servants to lye; and others to revenge injuries, and to put up wrongs at no mans hand; and others to slight, and neglect the word, and to bee careless of all religious worship. Or, II. By giving wicked examples unto them; either of drunkennesse, or whoredome, or prophanenesse; or the like. Or, III. By soothing them up, and suffering them in their sinnes. And this good old Eli could not wash his hands of.

Answ. 2 Secondly, they are faulty here, who provide for their families, but doe not teach them; whereas we should teach them perpetually, Deut. 6. 7. yea, have more care of their soules, then of their bodies; more care to teach them, then to feed them; and not like some, who fat up their children, and teach their cattle, thus inverting the order, both of nature and religion. 61

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they are here to blame, who teach their children, but neglect their servants, or the rest, who are under their tuition and care: These must looke upon the fift Commandement, and from thence remember; that the King must give account of his people, the Pastor of his flocke, the Master of his family, the In-keeper of those, who eate and lodge within his gates.

Quest. 6. What is the best meditation, or worke wee can take in hand, when we have cause to expect, and looke for the approach of death?

Answ. Our best worke is, to doe as Iohn Baptist here doth, to bring our children, and family unto Christ.

Here observe, that certainely, our first care is to commit and commend our owne spirits into the Lords hands: as David did, Psalm. 31. 5. But this work the godly man doth, long before his death: Age dum sanus, tum securus. August. Men are wont, when they begin to thinke of death, to set their house in order, and to take in hand these things: namely;

First, to cast up their estates, to prize all, and then to draw their estate to a totall summe. Then

Secondly, to appoint such and such legacies, to such and such persons. Then,

Thirdly, if their children be marriageable, to take care for the disposing of them in marriage: Thus wee all should doe indeed, with a little change, viz.

I. Let us cast up our accounts, and render a reckoning unto our God, how many talents wee have gained; that is, how many children; or how many servants have wee brought in our life time unto our Lord Christ?

II. Let us dispose, and appoint our Legacies; give Christ unto thy family, and give thy family unto Christ: Remember, that hee promised to give unto thee himselfe, and his Father, and his love; now therefore (before thou goest away) assigne all these over unto thy children.

III. Let us marry our children (before wee goe) unto the Lord; oh it is an excellent work, and earnestly to be taken in hand; for what is dearer unto a man, then his children? what should a man care for more then his children? wherein can a man better shew his care for his children, then here, in marrying them unto the King of Kings, and the Lord of Lords; yea, unto the Lord, and King of heaven and earth? The Papists take care to get their daughters into Nunneries, and their sonnes into Abbies; but our care should be to get them entred, and admitted into the Free-Schoole of Religion, before wee die, and then both we and they shall be happy. Hereunto three things are required of us; to wit:

First, to pray daily unto the Lord for them, and that hee would season and sanctifie their hearts with saving grace. And,

Secondly, to instruct, exhort, teach, and admonish

62 moniſh them, ſo long as we are with them: but principally, and moſt pithily, and vehemently, when we are to depart from them; For the laſt words take a deepe impreſſion in the hearts of thoſe, who have any grace at all. And,

Thirdly, let us bee lights and patternes unto them; both of piety, and purity in life, and of courage, cheerefulneſſe, patience, and conſtancie in death.

Thirdly, Iohn being in priſon, ſends his Diſciples unto Chriſt, Causâ Christi, & totius Eccleſiæ, in regard of Chriſt, and his Catholike Church: And that either:

I. That hee might congratulate with Chriſt; as wee are wont to ſay (by way of rejoycing) to our friends, when they are returned, after a long abſence, and expectation of them; Veniſtine? What art thou come? Anſwer, I dare not ſubſcribe to this particular, and that,

Firſt, becauſe if this be the meaning of the Interrogation, then theſe words (or ſhall we looke for another?) are idly added. And,

Secondly, becauſe Chriſt would not have returned an anſwer, if a queſtion had not been intended by Iohn. And therefore the cleare fountaine of the word, is not to bee troubled with the clay of mans inventions; nor the fictions and fancies of our braine, to be mixed with ſacred truths. Or,

II. That hee might give an occaſion, to publiſh to the whole Congregation, that Jeſus was the Chriſt, and true Meſſias. Whence learne; Obſerv. 3 That it is the office of a true Prophet, to make Chriſt knowne unto all his people, Rom. 10. 18. and 15. 17. 20. For, for this end, was both the Goſpel, and the Fore-runner ſent, Eſa. 40.

Queſt. 7 What is the end of preaching?

Anſw. It is not enough to hold out an houre, or to diſcourſe ſo long as the Glaſſe runs; but to teach Chriſt. Now here a double worke is to be done; namely,

Firſt, Chriſtus docendus, Chriſt is to be taught, and this in the principles, and grounds of religion, 1 Cor. 2. 2. Phil. 3. 8. Iohn 17. 3. Miniſters muſt be carefull, to build up their people in ſaving knowledge, and ſound doctrine.

Secondly, Chriſtus imprimendus, Chriſt is to be imprinted in the heart, and ſoule, Gal. 4. 19. and 2. 20. Miniſters muſt labour to bring their people unto Chriſt, and to bring Chriſt unto their ſoules, that hee may dwell with them, and live in them, and continue amongſt them for ever and ever. For this is the greateſt, and beſt work of all, to have Chriſt live in us, and abide with us: Aliud eſt Chriſtum ſequi, aliud tenere, aliud mancipare, Bern. It is one thing to ſeeke Chriſt, or to follow him; (for a man may ſeeke that he cannot find) it is another, to lay hold of him (for a man may lay hold upon him, and yet not bring him home to his houſe, as the Church did, Cant.) it is another thing to eat him, to enjoy him, to be made Partakers of him, to remaine and abide with him, and to have him living within us: And this is that which we muſt principally labour for, Epheſ. 3. 17. Iohn 14. 23. and 2 Cor. 6. 18.

5. 4. Or ſhall we looke for another. Sect. 4.

What was Iohns ſcope in this interrogation? Queſt. 1.

Firſt, Iohn himſelfe did not doubt, whether this were the promiſed Meſſias or not. But Anſwer 1

Secondly, his Diſciples doubted of it. And Anſwer. 2

Thirdly, the world much queſtioned the truth of it. And therefore his ſcope here was.

I. To taxe the blockiſhneſſe, ſtupidity, and ſlackeneſſe of the Phariſees. And Anſwer. 3

II. To confirme and fixe the minds of his own Diſciples. And

III. To declare and make knowne unto the whole world, that now they muſt no longer expect or wait for the promiſed Meſſias, but take notice of his comming, and learne to know him by his mighty workes, and embrace him, and his doctrine, without which there can be no ſalvation. Acts 4. 12.

VERS. 5. The blind receive their ſight, and the lame walke, the Lepers are cleanſed, and the deafe heare, the dead are raiſed up, and the poore have the Goſpell preached unto them. Verſe 5, 5. 1. The blind receive their ſight. Sect. 1.

Before I come to the particular handling of this verſe, I will propound a generall Queſtion or two.

Quæ & quot in Chriſti reſponſo animadvertenda. Queſt. 1.

Duo vtr. Reſponſa Chriſti

- Relatio generalis; ubi tria. — Dixit illis non rejicit, licet malè affectos. Ite renunciate. ubi 1. Non affirmat. II. Remittit amplius docendos Quæ audiſtis & vidiſtis: ubi refert ſe ad opera ſua. Anſw. 1
- Partes quarum altera reſpicit. — Quæſtionem, Se ipſum: In quâ probat ſe eſſe Meſſiam; Tum ex — Operibus miraculoſis, utpote, Cæcos, Claudos, Leproſos, ſanando, & mortuos excitando: Verbis id eſt prædicatione Evangelij.

Quærentes, Diſcipulos Iohannis, Beati qui non offenſi per me, ſeu qui non ſcandalizabuntur in me.

What was the end of Chriſts Miracles, or Chriſts end in the working of his Miracles? becauſe every naturall Agent Agit propter finem, propounds ſome end unto himſelfe in all the actions which he performes; and therefore much more Chriſt. Queſt. 2.

First, the end of Chriſt Miracles was to demonſtrate his perſon, or to ſhew that he was the Chriſt & promiſed Meſſias. Becauſe (ſaith he) I doe the works which no man by his owne power can doe; therefore beleeve that I am the Sonne of God. Iohn 15. 24. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, another end of Chriſts miracles was to confirme his doctrine; of which elſe-where. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, another end was to ſignifie Chriſts ſpirituall operations and workes. Anſw. 3.

Whether

Quest. 3 Whether doth our Saviour in this verse speake of corporall, or spirituall operations? of curing and recovering those who were corporally blind, Lame, Leprous, Deafe, dead? or of those who were spiritually thus diseased, namely, who were blind in understanding, deafe in hearing of the word of God, lame in their affections, leprous with sinne, yea dead in sinne?

Answ. 1. First, Iunius (Lib. 1. Paral. 29.) saith, this verse is to be taken historically, and literally, and he gives these reasons for it, namely,

I. Because we must not flee unto Allegories, when the Text will admit, and beare a true literall sense, and interpretation.

II. Because the Prophets are wont to insert and mingle histories with Types, for the greater assurance and confidence.

III. Because the nature of the Types is to be otherwise spoken of, and predicated, then squares or suites with their natures. And

IV. Because those passages of receiving the Gospell, and taking offence thereat; are necessarily to be taken in a literall sense.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Calvin s. Non dubium, quin dicatur de spirituali à malis liberatione. Without doubt our Saviour speakes here of a spirituall deliverance, and freedome from evill; and Tremellius (s. Esa. 35. 5.) confesseth that there is an Hyperbole in these words; Quia Christus agit tam in animis, quam corporibus: because Christ is conversant both about soul, and body, and operative also in both.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, there are three sorts of Prophesies; namely,

I. Some meerly Typicall; as I will send Elias. Malach. 4. 5. And they shall serve David their King, whom I will raise up unto them. Ierem. 30. 9. Now this kind of Prophecies,

Are either
- First above nature, as those who are spoken either of
  - God, Humanitus, after the manner of men: As whē we are told of hands, eyes armes, and feet.
  - The creatures against their nature, as the wildernesse shall rejoyce Esa 35. And the beame out of the Timber shall testifie against them. Habac. 2. 11. Now these are above nature, and therefore meerly Typicall.
- Secondly, besides the dispensation of grace; As, my people shall sinne no more: For this grace is not given in this life, the best sinning in many things, so long as they live.

II. Some Prophesies are meerly historicall, as Senacherib shall not come into this Citie, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield &c. 2 King 19. 32. So, set thy house in order, for thou shalt dye and not live. Esa. 38. 1. 2. And many the like.

III. Some Prophesies, and predictions are of a mixt nature, and these are two-fold; viz. either.

First, mixt secundum partes, when one part is Allegorical, another Historicall; as Mat. 24. where somethings are spoken of the destruction of Ierusalem, some things of the generall judgment Or else,

Secondly, secundum totum, when the same words may be taken in either sense: As, I will establish the Kingdome of David my servant. Psalm 89. 34. This may either Historically be understood of David; or Typically of all pious, and religious Kings. So the Lord saith of Salomon, If hee sinne, I will chasten him with the rods of men, but my loving mercy will I never take from him. Psalm 89. 30. 31. This may either literally, be understood of David, or figuratively of all the Children of God. So Hebr. 13. 5. I have said I will never faile thee nor forsake thee: which is spoken Historically of Iosua Chap. 1. 5. But the Apostle understands it Typically of all the children of God. Now of this nature is this present Scripture; for these things were Typically fulfilled in them, and shewed forth unto us for an example (1 Corinth. 10. 11.) As appeares thus: Iohns Disciples desire to know whether Christ bee the true expected Messias, or not; Christ proves that he is, Because.

I. He cures and heales the bodies of men, both of blindnesse, lamenesse, deafnesse, deadnesse, and Leprosie: yea all these both historically, and Allegorically, And because

II. He enlightens the minds of men by the Gospel. Christ cured their corporal maladies; for the blind received their sight &c. Here observe,

First, I confesse, that these things have an Hystoricall truth, that is that Christ did truely and really cure corporall blindnesse. as Iohn 9. 29.

Secondly, that the Prophesies concerning Christ, doe in part speake of the same, as Esa. 35. 5. It is foretold that the Messias should open the eyes of the blind, and the eares of the deafe, &c. yea otherwise our Saviours Argument were nothing. They desire to know whether hee be the Christ or not? He saith he is, and proves it thus. The Messias shall heale the lame, blind, deafe, and leprous, and shall raise the dead. Esa. 35. 5. 6. But I doe, and have done all this; Therefore I am the Messias.

Thirdly, withall wee must confesse, that the Prophet Esay in that place doth look higher then these, ayming at spirituall graces, as well as corporall benefits, and cures. If the learned Reader doubt of this, let him Reade Tremel. s. Esa. 35. 5. 6. and Musculus and Hyper. s.

Fourthly, therefore it is lawfull for me to ascend, or to proceed from the body unto the soul. In this place then we are admonished, that it is Christ who doth enlighten the eyes of the minds who purgeth us from the Leprosie of sinne, who frees us from death &c. Gualt. s.

Two things are very observable in this text namely,

I. What we are by nature; Deafe, blind, lame, Leprous and dead. And

II. That all these maladies are removed, and cured, and that onely by Christ: of these therefore in this order.

The blind receive their sight, here two things are considerable viz.

64 Firſt, that by nature wee are blind.

Secondly, that by Chriſt, wee are illuminated and enabled to ſee.

Obſerv. 1: Firſt, by nature we are ignorant, blind, and blockiſh in ſpirituall things. 1 Cor. 2. 14. Epheſ. 4. 18.

Queſt. 4. What is required unto true ſpirituall ſight?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, for anſwer to this Queſtion, I referre my learned Reader, unto Antonium, part 1. Titul. 3. Cap. 3. §. 1. 2. 3. &c. where many rare things are taught concerning ſpirituall ſight.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, for the ſatisfaction of the vulgar Reader, wee will adde ſome things, and anſwer, that unto ſpirituall ſight, many things are required; To wit, Firſt, the purity of the eye: For if the ſpirits of the eye be perverted either by Melancholly, or anger, or the Iaundice, then all things will ſeeme yellow, or greene, or the like. Thus Malo mens, Malus animus. If the mind be corrupted then the man is corrupted, for Mens cujuſque eſt quiſque, the mind is the man: if the eye therfore be darke, how great is that darkeneſſe, if the underſtanding be perverted, ſo is alſo the judgement and affections. And therefore let us labour for a pure, and ſanctified mind free from the infection and perturbation of ſinne.

Secondly, unto ſight there is required the ſtrength of the eye, that it may perfectly apprehend the object: for a weak ſight apprehends a thing imperfectly; like the man who ſaid, hee ſaw men walking like trees. So when in Religion we ſee In enigmate onely, as in twilight or the dawning of the day, (that is, ſee ſomething but very darkly and obſcurely) wee muſt then labour that our eyes may be perfectly opened, that thereby we may be able to perceive things truely, and as they are in their owne nature, as followes in the next particle.

Thirdly, unto ſight is required the liberty of common ſenſe, that ſo wee may bee able to judge of things that differ. And therefore we muſt not be like children in underſtanding, as the Apoſtle ſaith, When I was a Child, I ſpake as a Child, I thought as a Child, I underſtood as a Child; 1 Cor. 13. 10. We muſt not judge of Religion, or the ſervice of God with a carnall eye, or the eye of naturall reaſon; but with an eye truely informed; that hereby wee may bee able to judge of things truely, and aright. A melancholly man often thinkes men to be Beares; and a mad man, friends to bee enemies, and hence often-times fleeeth in the face of the Phyſitian that deſireth to cure him. Thus in Religion we often thinke the Lord hates us, becauſe hee will not give us that which wee deſire, although it bee as bad as Rats-bane for us, Wee cannot endure reproofe from the Miniſters of God, neither that they ſhould ſpeake unto us, but deſire rather that they would willingly permit us to runne headlong unto deſtruction. And thus ſo long as common ſenſe is captivated, wee cannot judge of things as they are: Wherefore let us labour that our underſtandings may be enlightned, and our judgements truely informed.

Fourthly, unto ſight there is required the light of the Sun, or Moon, or of a candle, for three things are ordinarily required unto ſight, to wit,

I. The Organ that ſees, and takes up the Object.

II. The Object that is apprehended by the Organ. And

III. The Midſt, by or through which the Organ doth perceive, and receive the Object. Although there bee an Object which may bee ſeene, and the Ayre alſo enlightned, yet if a man want eyes, hee cannot ſee that Object. Therefore unto ſight an Organ is neceſſary. If a man could ſee and the ayre were enlightned, yet if the Object were not in ſight, or if we could conceive no object to be objected unto the eye, then the eye could apprehend nothing: Therefore unto ſight an Object is neceſſary.

If there were an Organ, and an Object, that is, if a man could ſee or have an eye, yea that eye were open and awake, yet could he not ſee if either there were no midſt, or if the midſt were darke. For Firſt, if there bee no midſt betwixt the Organ and the Object, then the Object cannot be perceived by the Organ: for Senſibile poſitum ſupra ſenſorium, non facit ſenſationem. Lay any thing upon the eye, and the eye cannot ſee (although it be open) becauſe there is no Midſt to ſee through. Therefore unto ſight it is required, that there ſhould be a Midſt.

Secondly, although there be a midſt, yet if it be darke, the Organ cannot take up the Object. The Egyptians in that palpable darkeneſſe could ſee nothing, not becauſe there was no Object to be ſeen, or becauſe their eyes were put out or blinded; but becauſe the Midſt was obſcured and darkened through which they ſhould ſee. And therefore unto ſight it is required, that there ſhould bee a Midſt, and that the Midſt ſhould bee cleare and light.

Thirdly, although there bee an Object, and an Organ, and a Midſt, yea, and that Midſt bee enlightned, yet there muſt be a true, and equall Intercapedo, or diſtance of place: for ſuppoſe there was as even, and levell and plaine a peece of ground, as could be imagined of a hundred miles in length, and at noone day one man were ſet at the one end, and another at the other end thereof; yet theſe two could not ſee one another, propter interceptionem, by reaſon of the long and unequall diſtance of place. And therefore unto ſight it is required, that the Organ ſhould be rightly diſpoſed, the Midſt rightly compoſed, and the Object rightly Propoſed.

Thus wee cannot truely ſee or perceive thoſe things which are ſpirituall, without the Midſt be enlightned by the Sunne, or ſome other light, that is, without the light of the Spirit from above, naturall wiſedome not being able to take up theſe things. The Philoſopher threw away the Pentateuch as a frivolous Pamphlet, not worthy to bee received, or read. Yea from hence the Fathers ſay, that Philoſophi Hereſiarcha. The Philoſophers were Arch-heretickes: As I might inſtance and prove both by Celſus, Porphyrius, Iulianus, and divers others, but I paſſe them by, concluding this Queſtion with the Apoſtles aſſertion. Romans 8. 6. &c. The carnall mind is enmity againſt God: for it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. And therefore wee muſt labour that we may bee enlightned by the Sunne of righteouſneſſe, or wee are no better then blinde men, who can see nothing.

are

Quest. 5. What must we doe to prevent this naturall blindnesse that is in us?

Answ. 1. First, seeke for, and unto the holy Ghost to be thy Doctour and Teacher. Psalm. 143. 10.

Answ. 2. Secondly, purge the eye and common sense.

I. Purge the eye from all evill humours. And

II. Common sense from all diseases, and sicknesses, that is labour that thy mind, and judgement, and affections, yea the whole inward man, may be purged from all sinne and truely sanctified.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, use the meanes hereunto, there being a necessity thereof, God not working now by Miracles but by meanes. That is, Reade, heare, meditate, and study the word of God, and pray daily unto Christ, thy heavenly Physitian, that hee would be pleased to annoint with eye-salve, and to open thy blind eyes.

Observ. 2 Secondly, by grace, we receive our sight, or Christ gives new light unto those who shall bee saved: Ephes. 5. 14. Luke 1. 79. and 2. 32.

Quest. 6. How doth it appeare that our eyes are opened by Christ? or that wee receive spirituall light and knowledge, onely from him?

Answ. appeares thus.

I. First, the world is darke, yea full of blindnesse. Reade Luke 11. 38. John 12. 35. and 3. 19. Esa. 60. 2. Luke 1. 79.

Secondly, as the world, so we are dark: For

I. Partly wee are sleepie, and drowsie, Ephes. 5. 14. And II. Partly we are blind. Ephes. 4. 18. and 5. 8.

Thirdly, true light is onely in Christ, and therefore all comes from him. John 1. 5. 9. and 8. 12. Acts 26. 18. Ephes. 1. 18.

Quest. 7. How manifold is light?

Answ. Twofold, namely,

First, internall, and passive, of the mind, And Secondly, externall, and active, of the life and conversation. Now this is never called the Eye, but the former; and therefore I will treat only of that a word or two.

The light of the mind is rightly resembled to an eye in many regards, viz.

First, the eye is the most Noble part of the body, and most profitable for the body. Matth. 6. 22. So knowledge and the true illumination of the mind is most profitable for the soule, and of great excellency and worth.

Secondly, there are two eyes, a right eye, and a left. Mat. 5. 29. So the mind being enlightned judgeth sinisterly of all evill wayes, and lookes upon the wicked world with the left eye: but upon the wayes of God, and all goodnesse, with the right Eye, and with a dexterous opinion.

Thirdly, the best sight is, when both the eyes looke upon one and the same thing: for otherwise wee are squint-eyed. Man looked thus when hee was first created, but hath looked asquint ever since, or else lookes with both the eyes upon a wrong object. Man in his first creation looked with both his eyes stedfastly upon God; and happy had man been if he had so continued; but by the fall of Adam man was so corrupted in his sight, that now both his eyes are commonly set upon evill, and hee is but squint-eyed at the best. The nearer man comes to his first estate, the better hee is, now when the mind is truely enlightned, then wee beginne to withdraw our eyes from vanity, and to lift them up to the hills, where our hope, and helpe, and happinesse is.

Fourthly, the left eye being shut, the right eye seeth the more, and contrarily; So the more earnestly we looke with the right eye of the Mind and understanding upon spiritual things, the more wee see and discerne of them, and the lesse of carnall, and mundane things. On the other side if we looke with the left eye upon the world and wickednesse, then it is but small insight we shall have into spirituall things, but into corporall and carnall much.

Fiftly, it was disputed of old, whether the eye saw, intromittendo, or retromittendo: so now adayes it is disputed, whether man bee saved by an active or passive faith: But I will not dispute it, only let the Reader reade and marke, Ephesians, 2. 8.

Sixtly, the eye is accurately, and most carefully defended, both by a fore-head, which hangs over it, and eye-lids, which hang before it, Oculus dicitur ab occulendo, Varro, because it is covered, wrapped and veiled with many folds, and fine coverings; yea, it stands in need of all, because it is so tender a part, and so quickly endangered. Thus the mind and soule had need bee kept with watch and ward; because a little thing hurts, endangers, and ruins it. The tongue that speaks proud words, destroyes the soule. Polluted thoughts destroy the soule, Jerem. 4. 14. And the least evill thing shall not goe for nought, but shall endanger the poore soule; and therefore it had need carefully to be looked unto.

Seventhly, the act of seeing comes from the spirits, which are in the eye; and neither from that watery, or glasse, or christaline humour that is therein, nor yet from the nerves thereof, these being but only the conveyers, and conduit-pipes of the spirits: So the knowledge, wisedome, and spirituall understanding which wee have, comes not from our selves, or from any naturall faculty, or power within us; but from the alone illumination of the blessed Spirit.

Eightly, the diseases of the eye, proceed not from the spirits, but from the humours, or at least, from the absence of the spirits, In toto, vel vel tanto: So the depravations, corruptions, and errours of the mind, proceed not from the spirit of God, but from the naturall imperfections of the mind, or at least from the absence of the blessed Spirit from the soule.

Ninthly, the eye cannot behold the Sunne; not because the Sunne is contrary to the eye, (for nothing is more delectable thereunto, or more desired;) but because the Sunne is too too excellent, and bright, for the eye to behold: And therefore, seeing the eye cannot behold it in his full bigneſse and beauty, or greatnesse and glory, 66 it doth therefore behold it in a cloud, or in the water, or in the Raine-bow; or through some cracks, or trannie, or clift, or hole of a wall. So the soules chiefest happinesse, is to see God, Mat. 5.8. But because with Moses, wee cannot see him in his glory, therefore wee looke upon his Picture, and contemplate; and behold him in his creatures, in his workes, in his word, in his Christ, and in all his Attributes.

Quest. 8. How may we know, whether wee are enlightned, or not? and whether Christ have opened our eyes, or not?

Answ. Examine seriously these things; viz.

First, whether can wee discerne, betweene those things that differ, and judge of those things which are most excellent? yea, so discerne them, that we desire, and hunger; and long for spirituall graces, before all temporall things; Psal. 4. 6. and 51. 11. Ephes. 3. 19.

Secondly, whether have we a true, and watchfull faith; or doe wee but sleepe and dreame? that is, are wee so assured of the presence, and good worke of Christ within us, that the remembrance, and assurance thereof, produceth joy and peace, Psal. 4. 8.

Thirdly, whether is our conversation holy, and unblameable, or not? are wee zealous for the glory of God? are we filled with the fulnesse of God? is there true life, and strength of grace in us, 1 Iohn 1. 6. Thus we must examine, whether we have light in our understanding? whether we have light and brightnesse in our faith? and whether we are light andbright in our lives, and conversations?

Fourthly, whether doe we hunger after that glorious light, which is reserved in the heavens, or not? Phil. 1. 23. and 3. 20. Revelat. 6. 10. and 1 King. 19. 4.

Quest. 8. How, or by what meanes may this spirituall light be obtained?

Answ. 1. First, seeke it betimes, labour for it maturely, while it may be found, Esa. 55. 6. and doe not, either; I. Preferre other things before it. Or, II. Procrastinate and delay, to enquire after it, Act. 22. 16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, seeke it fervently, and zealously, not coldly, or luke-warmely.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, seeke it truely, and aright. Here observe diligently these three things.

I. God enlightens the mind, 1 Iohn 1. 5. that is, God the Father, Iames 1. 17. God the Sonne, Iohn 8. 12. and God the Holy Ghost, Ephes. 3. 16. 18. And therefore wee must desire God the Father, to enlighten our minds and understandings by his holy Spirit, for his Christs sake. Thus David did, Psalme 13. 4. and thus Paul would have us to doe, Ephes. 1. 18.

II. The Ministers of the word, enlighten by the Gospel, 2 Cor. 4. 4. 6. and Eccles. 3. 5. And therefore wee must bee diligent in hearing the word, marking best what doth most concerne our selves, and remembring that carefully, and practising it sincerely, and diligently.

III. I may adde, that the godly doe enlighten by their godly conversation: And therefore prophanely, perilously, and blasphemously is the holy for his holinesse, derided and scoffed, (Psal. 119. 51.) this not being the way unto illumination, but a meanes to keepe us still blind, and darke. Wherefore they who desire, that their minds may be enlightned, must 1. Pray unto God, to anoint the eyes of their understanding, with the eye-salve of his Spirit: Then 2. They must heare the word of God diligently, and desire that the Lord would make it a meanes of illumination unto them: And 3. They must delight in the society of the Saints, they must contemplate, and observe diligently their sanctity, and integrity of life; and they must labour to imitate their vertues.

§. 2. The Lame walke. Sect. 2.

What is the meaning of these words? Quest. 1

First, Ambulare, to walke, is commonly understood of the life, and conversation, as Mat. 7. 5. Luke 1. 6. and Act. 14. 16. Answ. 1.

Secondly, Via, the way, signifies the practise of life; as it is said of Iohn, He walked in the way of righteousnesse, Matth. 21. 32. And therefore most properly these words follow the former, and the Lame, the Blind; because we must Walke, whilst wee have light, Iohn 12. 33. In these words, as in the former, wee have two things to consider of; namely: I. What we are by nature, and without Christ. II. What we are by grace in Christ? Answ. 2.

First, by nature wee are lame; or so long as wee are naturall, wee cannot worke the workes of God, nor walke in his wayes, Psal. 14. 1 & 3. Esa. 60. 4. Rom 7. 18. Observ. 1:

How doth this appeare? Quest. 2.

Because the impression of concupiscence within us, is: Answer.

First, universall, and generall; that is, is seated and placed in all our affections, and desires.

And:

Secondly, it is vehement, and strong, and of great power, Rom. 7. 5. and is therefore called Lex membrorum, a law of the members, Rom. 7. 23. Yea;

Thirdly, it is so deepely rooted in us, that it cannot be removed by us: and therefore by reason thereof wee are made, and become truly miserable, Rom. 7. 24.

§. The Lepers are cleansed. Sect. 3.

By Leprosie is meant sinne, because this is the poliution of the soule, as that is of the body: And herein also we have two things to observe: viz. I. That by nature wee are defiled with the leprosie of sinne. II. That by Christ wee are purged from the pollution of sinne.

First, our naturall estate is here worth observing: As wee are blind in our eyes, and lame in our feet, so we are leprous in our whole man. Or, All men by nature are polluted, and defiled with the leprosie of sin, Gen. 6. 5. and 8. 21. and Rom. 5. 12. and Ephes. 2. 1. 3. Psal. 39. 5. and 116. 11. Observ. 1

How doth this appeare? Quest.

First, it appeares thus, because it is the punishment of sinne: As Gehezi and Miriam, were smitten for their sinnes with leprosie: so al mankind were punished with the leprosie of sinne, for Adams transgression, 1 Cor. 6. 10. &c. Ephes. 4. 17. &c. Tit. 3. 3. Answ. 1.

Se-

Answ. 2. Secondly, this pollution of sinne, is propagated to posterity; sinfull man begets children in his owne likenesse; and man that is borne of a woman, and begot by a man is impure, and polluted (Iob 14.4. and 15.14. and 25.4.) Psal. 51.7. And therefore it is evident, that all men are defiled.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this further evidently appeares, by the consideration of parts: For I. The Body, is but a dead Organ, except only as it is quickned, and enlivened by the soule. II. All our senses, are both direct Traytors, letting in temptation into the soule; and also the servants, and handmaids of lust and concupiscence. III. The bruit part of man, is wholly set upon evill, and runs after, and pursues nothing else: that is, both θυμὸς καὶ ἐπιθυμία, the Irascible, and concupiscible parts or faculties. IV. The Imagination doth continually present some evill or other unto the soule, Ephes. 4.18. V. The will of man alwayes (naturally) assents to the worse part; Video meliora proboque: deteriora sequor:

I see what's best, but oh accurst;
I follow still what is the worst.

This was the bitter plaint of blessed Paul: The evill which I would not doe, I doe daily, Rom. 7.15. VI. Naturall reason, and carnall wisedome, are enemies, and opposite unto God, and averse from him, Rom. 8.7. VII. νοῦς, the mind it selfe (which the Platonicks thought, did partake of the divine nature) stands in need of reformation, and renovation, Ephes. 4.23. Rom. 12.2. And thus wee see by an Induction of parts, how the whole man of all mankind is corrupt.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it will most evidently appeare, that we all naturally are contaminated with sinne: if we consider the nature of the leprosie, and together therewith the resemblance of sinne thereunto.

I. Leprosie is an universall disease; it begins, and breeds first in the humours, then breakes forth in the skin; and within a while overspreads the whole man: Thus sinne seizing first upon the soule; by and by, corrupted and tainted, both soule and body. And therefore wee should consider, how necessary it is that wee should be changed, and renewed, who are thus corrupted and defiled. We are easily perswaded to confesse, and acknowledge, that a change is necessary, but very difficultly perswaded to goe about the worke, being (herein especially) enemies to innovations: wherefore wee should so much the more earnestly, and industriously undertake the taske; by how much the harder, and contrary, to our naturall affections it is.

II. Leprosie is hereditary (as was shewed before: Chap. 8.) And so is sinne, derived from the father to the sonne.

III. Leprosie is an uncleane disease: For

First, the humours in Lepers are intemperate: And,

Secondly, altogether corrupt, and poisonous: so that the humours in the Leper, and in him, who is taken with the French (or Neapolitane) disease, are much like. And,

Thirdly, it is an infectious disease; and therefore by the Leviticall Law, Lepers were to live alone. Thus sinne doth pollute, and infect our selves, and endangereth others: And therefore why should we presume thereof? Let us rather, remember that I. Sin cast us out of Paradise. And, II. Brought death upon Christ, who knew no sinne in himselfe; neither deserved any death, or punishment at all, for any offence of his owne. And III. Hinders our prayers from being heard; for God heares not sinners, Iohn 9. And IV. Hinders the Lord from saving us, because it is contrary to his Iustice, to save sinners. Yea, V. Is of that nature, that one sinne is enough to destroy us: yea, the whole world: as we see in the sinne of Adam, Achan, Saul, David, Ionas, Hezekiah; yea if Christ had but broken the least commandement, hee could not have saved us.

IV. The Leprosie leaves its scarres, and markes, and relickes, behind it. So sinne leaves its remainders, and a proneneſse unto concupiscence behind it, and a certaine weakneſse, and inability in nature, to do the will and worke of God.

V. Hence, the Leper (although he be cured of his Leprosie, and pronounced clean) is prone to relapse, and fall into this disease againe: So by reason of the remainders and relickes of sinne in us, wee are prone to relapse, and fall into sin, even after our regeneration. And therefore wee must be watchfull, and circumspect over all our wayes, standing alwayes upon our Watch-Tower, and labouring, and praying, that the Lord would sanctifie us throughout, both in body, soule, and spirit, 1 Thess. 5.23. And thus we have heard, that wee are by nature polluted with the leprosie of sinne. It remaines now:

Secondly, to shew that by Christ wee are purged from sinne: Or,

Observ. 2. That those whom Christ receives, hee cures from the pollution of sinne. This wee have handled before; and therefore I will adde but one Question to what hath beene spoken, and proceed to the next Section.

Quest. How may wee know, whether we be cleansed from the leprosie of sinne?

Answ. Examine seriously these five things, viz.

First, whether doe wee strive and struggle against our owne proper sinnes, or not?

Secondly, whether doe we hate all sorts and kinds of sin whatsoever, or not? whether great or small? whether publike or private? whether beloved or not beloved?

Thirdly, whether have wee strength to walke in the wayes of God? have we received health, and strength, and new humours from the Lord; in so much, as now we can serve the Lord in purity of heart?

Fourthly, whether have wee tender consciences, and awakened consciences, or not, which will not endure the least touch of sinne, but carefully watch against all?

Fiftly, whether doth the Watch-man of Israel, which neither slumbers nor sleepes, preserve and keepe us: that is, both watch over us himselfe, and also excite us to bee watchfull over our selves. Certainely, if we find these things in us, we may then be confidently assured, that the Lepers are cleansed. And therefore enquire diligently, whether, 1. We hate all sinnes in generall? and 2. Strive more particularly against our owne sinnes? And 3. Are afraid to commit any, and watchfull against all? And 4. Perceive the holy Spirit, to prevent us from sinne, and to helpe us forward in the performance of what is good? And 5. Find new strength in our bones and joynts, to serve the Lord? For by these wee may know, whether we be freed from the pollution of sinne, or not?

Sect. 4. §. The deafe heare.

First, wee must here consider the estate of nature. And then,

Secondly, the state of grace.

First, by nature wee are deafe, untill wee bee cured.

Quest. 1. How many sorts and kinds of deafenesse are there?

Answ. Deafenes is twofold: to wit, either of the - Body; of which I here speake not. Or,

- Mind, & it is an incapacity of things; either,
  - Naturall: but we heare the clamours of nature, which desire meat, drink, sleep, rest, health, pleasure, and the like. Or,
  - Morall; but wee can learne worthy wisedome, and crafts, & the like. Or,
  - Scientiolum, of things belonging to Arts, & sciences; but the naturall man can learne liberall arts, and sciences, & professions, yea, even the most deep & profound arts. Or
  - Spirituall: Now these things are understood: either I. In others; & here our eares are open enough to heare, & judge, and proudly to censure others, Mat. 7.1. Rom. 2.1.
  - II. In our selves; and here we are truely deafe: being not able to heare the Lord, or his word: And this deafenesse I here speake of.

Observ. 1. Observe then hence: That it is a disease incident to all by nature, not to heare the voice, and word of God, Ierem. 11.10. and 13.10.

Quest. 2. What doe men ordinarily refuse to heare, out of the word of God?

First, naturally, we refuse to heare the threatnings of the word. 2 Chron. 36. 16. Esa. 5. 19. Ierem. 17.15.

Secondly, we stop our eares against the promises of the word Malach. 3. 10, 14. and 2. Peter 3.4.

Thirdly, we are careless of the call of the word Prov. 1.24. &c.

Fourthly, we regard not the commands of the word: Esa. 30.9. &c. Ierem. 7. 23. &c. Ezech. 20. 8. Audire to heare is ordinarily taken for obedire, to obey, in the booke of the Proverbes: ye would not heare: that is, ye would not obey. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, we will not listen to the Doctrines, and instructions and lessons of the word; Ierem. 32.33. Answ. 5

Now the meaning of the proposition I observed is this, Although the Lord call, yet naturall men will not heare: although hee command, yet they will not obey; although he teach, yet they will not learne; although he threaten, yet they will not feare; although hee promise yet they will not beleeve.

Doe none at all all heare the word of God? are all men deafe? Quest. 3

All men are deaf, but not al after the same manner, or in the same measure, or malice: For Answ.

First, some directly deny and refuse to heare the word, Ierem. 44.16. and 7.26. and 11.8. Zach. 7.11. &c. Mat. 23.37. This might be applyed to those who are refractory, who say, who is the Lord that we should obey him? (Exod. 5.2.) and our tongues are ours, who shall controll us? Psa. 12.4. But this belongs not to the present institution properly, and therfore I omit it.

Secondly, some doe not onely refuse to heare the word, but over and above deride it, as 2 Chron. 30.10. and 36. 16. and Acts 17.32. This may be applyed,

I. To those who deride the Professours of the word Psalm 119. 51. And

II. To those who scoffe, at the preaching of the word. And

III. To those who taunt at Religion it selfe: As the story saith of the Thiefe, who bid spare him till the day of Judgement, and then he would take all. But these being particular faults, and I having to treat of the generall disease and deafenesse, passe these over.

Thirdly, some (yea all naturall men) are insensible of all true feare, and understanding, having eares but heare not. Psalm 115.6. Ierem. 5. 21. Ezech. 12.2. Mat. 13. 13. &c.

Fourthly, the meaning therefore of the Proposition observed is this; The naturall man cannot so heare or receive the word (given for his salvation and conversion) in his affection, internall sense, and conscience, that it workes in his heart conversion unto God.

How doth this appeare? Quest. 4.

This, because Nature is opposite to God in two things, namely Answ.

I. In Goodnesse, for he loves not that which is good, although he doe in part understand it to be good: For every rule of Religion is hard. Iohn. 6. 60. And wordly wisedome is enmity against God. Rom. 8.7. yea hence naturally we love not Christ (although of all others, and other things most worthy to be beloved) Esa. 53,2. But will rather leave him, then embrace such hard lessons as hee teacheth. Iohn 6. 65. Nature being altogether averse both from God and good.

II. In truth, for hee cannot understand spirituall things.

Against

Obiect. Against this it will be objected:

Naturall men understand many things: for they feare, and are enlightned, and reformed, and have a taſt of good things. Mark.6.20 And therefore are neither ſo blind nor deafe, as we would make them to be.

Answ.1 First, in the naturall man there is a rude and confuſed hearing, but he can diſcerne nothing plainly, but all onely in a darke ſpeaking. 1 Cor 13. 12.

Answ.2. Secondly, the naturall man doth ſomething by grace: Now grace is two-fold, viz.

I. Generall: and this grace can doe much, both towards humiliation, from the law, and illumination; for a man may bee humbled with legall terrours; a man may be ſo farre enlightned, that he may pray with much ſhew of underſtanding, and fervour, and ſenſe; yea have a taſte of faith, and the good word of God; and all from this generall grace.

II. Particular, and effectuall, unto converſion, and regeneration: Now thoſe who are deprived of this Grace, can doe nothing as they ought to doe nor heare the word as they ought to heare. For

First, the end of Preaching is to teach men the knowledge of God; yea that knowledge which is life eternall. Iohn 17. 3. And

Secondly, ſo to teach them the beauty, & ſweetneſſe, and goodneſſe of God, that they may love him, and long for him, and cry after him, before all other things. Pſalm 27. 4. And

Thirdly, that through this love of God, wee might be conſtrained to obey him, and that both in heart, and life, 1 Corinth. 6. 20. But

Fourthly, nature is not capable of God, or ſpirituall things. 1 Corinth 2. 14. Acts 16. 14. Eſa. 48.8. Here this phraſe, or word Hearing is worth obſerving. For thereunto three things are required, namely,

First, a voice, or the word preached. 1 Corinth. 1. 18. 21. And

Secondly, the aire, or breath that carryeth the voice to the Eare; and this is the holy Spirit, which imprints the word in the heart with deep and indeleble Characters. And Thirdly, the Organ rightly diſpoſed. Now ſo long as wee are naturall wee have neither of theſe.

Now as much as in us lyeth, we muſt labour to prevent, and remove all theſe cauſes.

Obſerv.2. Secondly, wee have now to conſider the ſtate of grace, and that is Auditus; by Chriſt the deafe heare; or their ſpirituall hearing is reſtored unto them; Or, Chriſt cures in his Children the deafeneſſe of the ſoule. Eſa. 43. 8. and 54. 13. Ierem. 31. 34.

Queſt. 5. How doth Chriſt cure this Deafeneſſe?

Anſw. 1. First, he takes away the impediments, and hindrances; namely,

I. Obſtructions, or the ſtopping of the Eare: Now in the Stopping of the Eare, There are three things to be conſidered, To Wit,

First, the efficient cauſe thereof; and this is the world, who labours to fill our hearts, and take up our thoughts, and bewitch us with the delights thereof. Now Chriſt cures this by ſhewing how fooliſh, and vaine, and tranſitory all the things of the world are (Eccleſ.) yea that they are but ſnares, and wounds, and moſt unconſtant friends. 1. Timoth. 6. 10. and Luke. 12. 20.

Secondly, the ſickely effect; for the Stopping of the Eare workes a hardneſſe in the Eare; and as the humors in the Kidneyes and Bladder, doe ſo harden that they turne into a ſtone, and the ſtopping of the humours in the hands or feete breed thoſe Nodos podagricos, & Chiragricos: So the humours of the Eare beeing ſtopped breed ſuch a hardneſſe, that it begets both paine in the Eare, and duls the hearing. Now Chriſt cures this, by taking away our hard and ſtony hearts, and giving us hearts of fleſh. Ezech. 11. 19. Acts 2. 38.

Thirdly, there is the infirmity it ſelfe, or deafeneſſe; this Chriſt cures, by opening, and boring our Eares (Iob. 33.16. Eſa. 50.5. &c. Acts 16. 14. *Eſa.*55.10.) and enabling us to heare the word of God with joy and comfort.

II. The next impediment of the Eare which Chriſt takes away, is dryneſſe, or want of moyſture in the Eare: This hee cures by ſending rain, and watring our hearts with the deaw of Heaven, and with the grace of his holy Spirit. Reade Deuter. 32, 2 Eſa. 30. 20 &c. and 44. 3. and 55. 10.

Thirdly, the ringing, and tinckling in the Eare, hinders the heareing; this is blind zeale, and is cured by Chriſt who enlightens our underſtandings, and enformes our judgements, and ſuffers us no longer, through a falſe zeale (with Saul) to perſecute Chriſt, and his members, or in his members, but with Paul to ſuffer, yea to dye (if God require it) for the glory of Chriſt, and the good of his body the Church. Acts 9. 4.

IV. The weakeneſſe of the braine is a great impediment to the hearing: Now this Chriſt cures by enabling us to heare the word of God profoundly, that is, (as he did to Ezechiel) enabling us to hear with our eares, & to receive in our hearts all the words that the Lord ſpeaks unto us: and not like the ſeed in ſtony ground, who for want of depth of roote, and ground withered and died. *Mat.*13.5. Ezec. 3.10

V. Sleepe and Lethargie hinders the hearing: this Chriſt cures by enabling us to heare the word with delight, as Eſay commands us 58. 13. And with joy, as Ieremiah did. *Thy words were found and I did eate them, and they were the very joy and rejoycing of my heart. Ierem.*15.16.

Secondly, Chriſt doth not onely take away the impediments of hearing, but repaires and reſtore the loſſes of the Eare which are principally Life, and Spirit; Anſw. 2.

I. Chriſt gives life unto us. Iohn 1.4. and 14.6. Dead men cannot heare; and therefore he quickens us as follows in the next Section.

II. Chriſt gives his Spirit unto us (*Cantic.*4.16 Ioel 2.28. &c. *Eſa.*44.3.) whereby wee are enabled to underſtand what wee heare, and to practiſe in ſome meaſure) what we underſtand,

§ 5. The

§. 5. The dead are raised up.

Sect. 5. As in the former Section, so also in this, wee have two things to consider of; namely,

I. That by nature we are dead.

II. That by grace we are quickned.

First, by nature we are dead.

Quest. 1. Who are here meant by the dead?

Answ. 1. First, there is a three-fold death: namely, Temporall, Spirituall, and Eternall.

Answ. 2. Secondly, there is a two-fold Spirituall death, viz.

I. A death to sinne, in the Dative case: now this is Mortification.

II. A death in sinne, in the Ablative case. And this is the death here spoken of.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the meaning therefore of these words (The dead are raised) is this, that all men by nature are spiritually dead in sinne; but the children of God are restored unto life by Christ: Now of these in their order; and first of the first, the state of nature.

Observ. 1 First, (I say) wee learne hence, that all naturall men are dead in sinne.

Quest. 2. How doth this appeare?

Answ 1. First, from these places, Rom. 3. 23. and 5. 12. Colos. 2. 13. Ephes. 2. 1. 5. &c.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because otherwise Christs death had beene needlesse, Rom. 5. 6. 8. and 2 Cor. 5. 14. but of this by and by in the state of grace.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it appeares plainely, that all men naturally are dead in sin, because all were killed in Adam, Rom. 5. 15. 17. 18. and 1 Cor. 15. 21. 22. For:

I. The Image of God which was in us at first, is now lost, Gen. 2. But is renewed by Christ, Ephes. 4. 24. At first the heart was converted unto God: And the beames of love did inflame and kindle the hearts, to love the Lord above all, Psal. 63. 1. But now we are averse from the Lord.

II. Wee are now guilty of death, 2 Cor. 3. 7. And subject to the Law, which is the Minister of death; and therefore wee are called dead men, because by the Law wee are condemned, and adjudged unto death.

III. Wee are by nature subject to the wrath and anger of God: And his Iustice will not suffer us to goe unpunished, Colos 3. 6.

IV. Our nature is so polluted, that it produceth nothing but sinne, and impurity, Colos. 2. 13.

V. Wee are by nature the servants of sinne, and Sathan, Rom. 6. 20. and 2 Tim. 2. 26. and 2 Pet. 2. 14. And hence the body was called by the Ancients, Tartara, Sepulchrum mortuorum, & Pistrinum animæ [b]. And therefore these things considered, wee may safely conclude; that all men by nature are spiritually dead in sinne.

b Rhod. 287.

Observ. 2 Secondly, wee have now to consider, of the state of grace; Suscitantur, namly:

That Christ frees all those, who are his from the death of sinne, Iohn 5. 24. &c. Esa. 9. 2. and 2 Tim. 1. 10.

Quest. 5; From what death doth Christ free his?

Answ. 1. First, hee freeth them from eternall death, Iob. 5. 24. and 2 Thes. 1. 9 Revel. 2. 11. and 21. 8.

Answ. 2 Secondly, he freeth them from spiritual death; and this is that which is here meant: and is understood, either;

I. Of our fredome, and deliverance from our enemies, Rom. 7. 2. that is,

First from sinne, and the kingdome thereof, Rom. 6. 2. Or,

Secondly, from the Law, and the curse thereof, Rom. 7. 4.

How, or by what meanes may we, or are wee raised from death unto life? Quest. 6.

First, by God, and Christ, Psalme 90. 3. Rom. 4. 17. and 7. 25. and 11. 15. Answ. 1.

Secondly, by the preaching of the Gospel, 1 Pet. 4. 6. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, by faith in Christ, Iohn 5. 24. &c. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, by a spirituall death of sinne, Rom. 6. 2. 5. 8. 11. and 8. 10. and 6. 3. 6. Answ. 4.

Fiftly, by charity, and love; wee know that wee are translated from death unto life, because wee love the brethren, 1 Iohn 3. Answ. 5.

VERS. 7.8.9. And as they departed, Iesus began to say unto the multitudes, concerning Iohn; what went you out into the wildernesse to see? a Reed shaken with the wind? But what went you out for to see? a man clothed in soft raiment: Behold, they that weare soft clothing: are in Kings houses. But what went you out for to see? a Prophet, yea, I say unto you, and more then a Prophet. Verse 7.8.9.

§. What went you out for to see? Sect. 1.

What use is there of an Interrogation? or why are questions asked? Quest. 1.

First, some aske a question, that they may bee instructed; and thus the Disciples propound many questions unto Christ. Answ. 1.

Secondly, some aske questions, for this end; that thereby others may be instructed; and thus our Saviour here interrogates the people. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, some aske questions, to see, or try, whether others know, that which is enquired: And this is ordinary, and frequent amongst men. Answ. 3

Fourthly, some propound Interrogatories, to teach unto others their ignorance: And thus Iohn enquires; Art thou hee that shall come, or shall wee looke for another? not because he doubted himselfe, but that his Disciples might be informed, instructed, and enlightned; and their ignorance expelled by the words, and workes of Christ. Answ. 4.

Fiftly, sometimes Interrogations imply an affirmation, sometimes a negation: that is, Interrogatio affirmativa habet vim negationis, et vice versâ If the Interrogation be affirmative, then the answer is negative: and contrarily, if the question be negative, then the answer is affirmative; as for example: What fruit had yee then in those things, whereof yee are now ashamed? Here the Question is affirmative; and therefore the Answer must be negative, None; or yee had no fruit in such things, Rom. 6. 19. So againe, shall I hide from Abraham, the thing which I will doe? Here the Question is affirmative; and therefore the Answer is negative, I will not. So, if thou dost well, shalt thou not be rewarded? Here the Question is negative; and therefore the Answer is affirmative, thou shalt, Gen. 4. 7. Answ. 5.

Sixtly, sometimes Interrogations include, and imply, objurgations, and reproofes; as for example: What could have been done more to my Vine- yard,

yard, that I have not done in it? Esa. 5.4. So, doe I desire the death of a sinner? doe I not rather desire that hee should turne from his sinnes, and live? Ezek. 18. and 33. So Iohn 8.46. Act. 5.4. Mat. 23.37. In all which places the Question doth import a reprehension, and that with indignation, of an undeniable fault.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, sometimes Interrogations reprove most plainely, and truely, and convince without any controversie: And that sometimes with admiration: As, will a man rob God? Malach. 3.8. And, are yee still ignorant?

Answ. 8. Eightly, sometimes Interrogations are put, for this end, that the thing enjoyned, or spoken of, may take a deeper impression in the mind; as, Peter lovest thou me? Iohn 21.15. And, Shall I take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an Harlot? 1 Cor. 6.15. And, are not the dayes of man, like the dayes of an hireling? Iob 7.1. And in this sense the Interrogation is used in this place.

Quest. 2 What is meant hereby, What went you out for to see?

Answ. Our Saviour by this Interrogation, doth meane this: Remember the time was, when you went out to the Baptisme of the Baptist, and to the preaching of the Fore-runner; and therefore doe not now stagger, or wither, or faile and decay: From whence may be observed.

Observ. That those who begin to bee zealous, in the professing of Religion, are in danger of relapsing, and falling away; let him, (therefore saith the Apostle) that thinkes hee standes, take heed lest hee fall: yea, examples of such we have, Gal. 1.8. and Demas, 2 Tim. 4. and Revelat. 2.5.

Quest. 3 Why must Professors be so carefull of themselves or why are they, or whence is it, that after they have undertaken the profession of religion, they are in such danger of relapsing?

Answ. 1. First, there are so many dangers, and enemies both without and within us, that it is no wonder, if wee be prone and subject to prove retrograde.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we are wont to grow proud of our profession, principally, if it bee accompanied with some outward practise. Stand farre from me, I am more righteous then thou art, (Esa. 65.5.) is an ordinary speech in the mouth of many Professors. The Holy Ghost admonisheth us, not to be high minded, but rather to feare, because a high mind will quickly make us fall. And therefore it is no marvell, if wee be so prone to decline, that are so prone to pride, which is the high way to perdition.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, God in generall grace, leaves us to our selves; and that both;

I. That we might try our selves, and not the grace given unto us: And

II. That wee might be left without excuse, and justly condemned, if wee relapse and fall back. And therefore no wonder, if being left unto our selves, wee fall away.

Sect. 2. 2. A Reed shaken with the wind?

Quest. 1. What doth our Saviour meane by these words?

Answ. 1. First, hereby some understand lightnesse and inconstancie: As if our Saviour would say; when you went out to Iohn Baptist, you went not to one, who was light and idle headed, or cocke brained, or as wavering as the Reed, who shakes to and fro with every blast. 69

Answ. 2. Secondly, some hereby understand a man of a most meane condition, who gives place unto all; yea, is contemned and trampled upon by all, as 1 King. 14.15. Matt. 12.20. and 27.29.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some hereby understand some childish or toyish, or idle thing; or some ridiculous spectacle: And this suites best with the former word Videre, what went you out to see?

Quest. 2 Whether was our Saviours scope in this Interrogation to defend the Baptist, or to taxe the people?

Answ. 4 First, some thinke that this was spoken in the Baptists defence.

Secondly, some hold, that it was spoken by way of reproofe to the people.

First, some are of opinion, that our blessed Lord spake this in the defence of his Fore-runner, yea, in his praise, ver. 9. And expound it thus, Went you out to see a Reed shaken with the wind? that is, a light, mutable, and inconstant man. The phrase seemes to mee to bee borrowed from the Fable of the sturdy Oake, which fell through the violence of the wind, but the Reed shaking, and bending, and yeelding unto the wind, fell not, neither was harmed by the wind: Thus the zealous, and sincere Professors of the word, often suffer by the wind of persecution, when the temporizing Reeds, and Time-servers, wind, bend, and turne with the storme, and comply with the times, and so are not harmed thereby: But Iohn was none of these shaking Reeds.

Observ. 1. From hence then we may note.

That inconstancie becomes no Christians at all, but is most of all unbeseeming for Ministers; both Pastor and people must be constant, in the holding, maintaining, professing, and practising of the truth, otherwise they doe dishonour the truth, Gal. 1.10. Act. 20.24. and 21.13. and 2 Corinth. 1.17.

Quest. 3. Why must all, principally Ministers, be thus constant, and without wavering in Religion?

Answ. 1. First, because our Lord, and God, and Master is constant, and alwayes the same; I the Lord change not, Iames 1.17.

Now we should labour to imitate him herein.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the rule whereby we ought alwayes to walke, is one and the same for ever, and therefore we should be alwayes constant in the observation thereof, and profession of the truth, which is but one, and alwayes the same, Gal. 1.8.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, to be a turne-coat is odious, and of evill report, and therefore if wee love our estimation and credit, wee should be constant, and unchangeable in our profession and practise.

Quest. 4. Whether is all confidence, and constancie in Religion, praise-worthy, or not?

Answ. No, for men may be constant, and confident in errours, and false zeale.

Quest. 5. How is the constancie, or confidence of Ministers to be regulated?

Answ. 1. First, they must teach nothing but the word, and truth, and Gospel, and religion; onely that which 70 which they receive from the Lord, 1 Corinth. 15. Act. 20. 28.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they must herein propound no other ends unto themselves, but only the glory of Christ, and the progresse of the Gospel; not their owne praise or profit.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they must utter and deliver nothing, (at least publikely) either rawly, or undigestedly, or rashly, or inconsiderately, or unmodestly, which afterwards upon sericus, and mature deliberation, they are ashamed of, or repent.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, they must remember, that they serve God, and not men; and that,

I. Hee will protect and defend them, so long as they are about his work, worship & service. Yea,

II. That hee will call them to give account of their stewardship; and if they have beene negligent, then their judgement shall be great. But

III. If they have beene faithfull in the Ministerie, then great is their reward in heaven.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, they must deny the world, and themselves; yea, all things that might hinder and distract them from the faithfull officiating of their great and weighty calling. And in these things the constancie and confidence of Ministers doth consist.

As these words (went you out to see a Reed shaken with the wind?) are referred to Iohn, and (according to the opinion of some) spoken in Iohns defence: So are also these, went you out to see a man in soft raiment? or one who was gorgeously attired as Courtiers use to bee? No, Iohn was no such man, for he lived austerely: Here two things are observable, viz.

Luk. 7. 33, 34. First, Christ lived otherwise then Iohn did; and yet he praiseth Iohn, to teach us, Observ. 2 That others are not to be deprived, or defrauded of their due, and deserved praise; because wee our selves doe otherwise.

Secondly, that an austere life is commendable amongst Christians.

Why is an austere life so commendable, for the Saints?

First, because wee have denied the world, being crucified unto it, and it unto us. Rom. 6. 2. How can they that are dead in sinne, live therein? and how can they that are dead unto the world, delight therein?

Secondly, because a Court-like, fine, feminine, dainty, and soft life, becomes not a Saint.

Thirdly, because how can we perswade others to mortification, if we our selves be contrary?

Answ. 2. Secondly, some imagine our Saviour to have propounded this question; (Went you out to see a Reed shaken with the wind?) by way of reproofe unto the people: and it seemes to incline to both; as if Christ should say, Iohn was no Reed; that is,

I. A contemptible and despicable man, or one who was worthy to be sleighted, Matth. 12. 20. and 27. 29. Yea, although hee was but a meane man, in the eye and estimation of the world; yet the Ministry of the word is not to bee despised for the poverty, or low estate of the Ministers;

II. Iohn was no spectacle, or gazing stock, curiously to bee looked upon, or to bee heard: onely out of a curious and itching desire to heare new things; but out of a desire to learne, and that thereby, both life and soule, might be reformed and renewed.

§. Yea, I say unto you, and more then a Prophet. Sect. 3.

Our Saviour by his authority (Ego dico) doth confirme their judgement, who did so highly esteeme the Prophet; and pronounceth him to be greater then a Prophet, and more honourable then those, who live in Kings Courts. Whence wee may learne:

That it is a greater praise, and commendation to be a Prophet, then to be highly honoured, and favoured in the Courts of Princes, Deut. 34. 10. and 2 King. 8. 15. Observ.

Why is a Prophet so full of honour & esteem? Quest. 1.

First, because hee is the Interpreter, betwixt God and his people. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because they have power to beget children unto God, Michah. 3. 8. and 1 Corinth. 5. whence Kings have called them Fathers. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, because they pray for us, and blesse us: Answ. 3.

Fourtly, because they are inspired from above, and enlightned with a divine spirit, Michah. 3. 8, and 2 Pet. 1. 20. &c. which is most excellent of al. Answ. 4.

What things are requisite in a true Prophet? Quest. 2

First, hee ought to know hidden, and secret things; and that either, Answ. 1.

I. Absolutely, things to come. Or,

II. Respectively, and thus he ought in respect of himselfe, to know things which are remote, or done out of his presence, as Elisa knew of the avarice of Gehazi; or in respect of all, hee ought to know the frame, and temper, and disposition, and secret passages of the heart of man in generall, although he cannot know the secrets of any particular mans heart, without a speciall revelation.

Secondly, he ought to understand, and to bee skilfull in the mysteries of the word, not in the matters of the world. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, hee ought to deliver no message unto the people, but that which he receiveth from the Lord, and that which he receives, that hee must deliver, as the Lords command, not as his owne conceit. Iohn. 11. 51. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, hee ought so to bee taught, that he may understand what is taught him; for otherwise hee is a Seer not a Prophet. Pharaoh, Balthasar, Nebuchadnezzar saw visions, but they did not understand them; and therefore were no Prophets. Answ. 4.

Fiftly, a Prophet ought to be inspired with a Prophetical Spirit, and power; that he may thereby be able both to understand himselfe, and to declare unto others the mysteries of Religion, and hidden things of God. Aasw. 5.

How was Iohn Baptist more then a Prophet? Quest. 3.

First, because hee prophecied in the words, Luke 1. 43. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because he was nearer unto Christ of all the Prophets; the other Prophets prophecied that Christ would come hereafter: this Prophet proclaimed that hee was come already, and was the first Preacher of the Gospel. Matt. 3. 2. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, hence he spake more plainely, and ple-plenarily of Christ, then any (or all) the rest: As He is amongst you, And I stand in need to be baptized of thee; And behold the Lamb of God: And, He must increase and I must decrease and the like.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Iohn is greater then the Prophets, because hee was foretold of by the Prophets, and was partly the Object of the Prophets. Reade Esa. 40. Malach. 4.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, Iohn was Terminus legis & Evangelij: As Iacobs hand held Esaus heele; so Iohn (as it were) with one hand held the Law, and with the other the Gospell; and was the last Prophet, and the first Apostle; yea like the corner stone of the Old and New Testament.

Vers. 10. VERS. 10. For this is hee of whom it is written. Behold, I send my Messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

Obser. Wee may observe hence, That Christ prepares the heart, before he will possesse or inhabit it: Reade Esa. 40. 3. Mat. 3. 3.

Quest. 1. How many things are to be prepared?

Answ. Foure namely,
- First, Vallies, these must bee filled: Now by these Vallies, are meant either feare, and trembling or vacuity of grace.
- Secondly, Mountaines; these must be laid low: Now by these are meant, either humane wisdome, or Rebellion, or trust and confidence in our owne Righteousnesse.
- Thirdly, Crooked waies: these are to be made strait: Now by these are meant, either the waies of errour, or selfe love, or the love of the world.
- Fourthly, sharpe wayes; these are to bee made smooth, and thereby are signified the waies of sinne. See this Question before. Chap. 3. 3. §. 1. qu. 1. 3. where it is amply explained.

Quest. 2. How many things are to bee renewed in us?

Answ. Foure namely,
- First, blindnesse, and hardnesse of heart: For naturally we are slow of heart, and hard to beleeve, and unable to take up and understand spirituall things.
- Secondly, hatred against God, for naturally we love those things which are enmity with him. Iames 4. 4. and 1 Iohn 2. 15. 16.
- Thirdly, uncleannesse and impurity, because our hearts are to bee made Temples of the holy Ghost. 1 Cor. 6. 16.
- Fourthly, impediments, and Remorae: as the employments of the world, our owne weakenesse and inability unto good workes, and the like. Now if we desire that Christ may come unto us, wee must labour to bee renewed in all these.

Quest. 3. What workes are wee first to undertake?

Answ. Wee must observe and follow the Methode of God: who

First, gives his word unto his people: As hee promised. Isa. 30 21. and did Ionah 1. Then

Secondly, he mollifies and softens the heart, by a true sight of, and sence for sinne. Ierem 31. 18. &c. Then

Thirdly, hee reconciles such (as he hath humbled) unto himselfe by infusing his love into their hearts. 1 Iohn 4. 10. and Iudg. 2. 4. 5. 6. Then,

Fourthly, hee extrudes out of the heart those that trouble it (Mat. 9. 25.) That is he mortifies sinne and crucifies the world, and subdueth the affections, and lusts. Then Fiftly, he encreaseth zeale, and corroborates grace, and augmenteth Religion and love thereunto, and to whatsoever is good. Colos. 1. 23. and 2. 6. 7. And therefore wee must highly prize, and heartily professe and practise the word of God as much as in us lyes: And then pray unto God to make his word, a Sword, and Hammer, to breake our hard hearts, and to be reconciled unto us; yea to expell out of our hearts, whatsoever may either hinder us from his service, or spurre us forward to that which is displeasing unto him; And lastly, that hee would bee pleased to fill our hearts with the grace of his Holy Spirit, and to encrease us in all vertuous and Religious workes. For if wee labour thus to prepare our hearts, wee may bee certainely assured that Christ will come unto us at the last, and remaine and abide with us for ever and ever. Revelat. 3. 20.

Vers. 11. VERS. 11. Verily I say unto you, among them that are borne of women, there hath not risen a greater then Iohn the Baptist. Notwithstanding he that is least in the Kingdome of Heaven, is greater then he.

Among them that are borne of Women, there hath not risen a greater then Iohn the Baptist.

Quest. What manner of comparison doth Christ make here between Iohn, and the rest.

Answ. Our Saviour doth not meane that Iohn was greater then all others; but that none that were before him were greater then he. Non major, sed illi non majores. Chrysost. imperf. s. He did equall Iohn with the rest, and not preferre him above them: Others following those praises, which are given unto Iohn as for example.

First, Iohn was called an Angell. Malach. 4. And so also were the Prophets. Acts 7. and Heb. 2. yea Princes, and Magistrates are called Gods. Psalme 82. which is a higher title.

Secondly, Iohn preacheth not of Christs comming in the future, but in the present Tense, hee doth not proclaime that Christ will come hereafter, but that he is come already: Now this also do all the Apostles.

Thirdly, Iohn digito demonstrat, points at Christ with the finger, and saith this is he, (Χς οδε ουτος) So doth also Andrew, and Philip. Iohn 1. and the Samaritane woman. Iohn 4. and Martha Iohn 11. And therefore I conclude this Question, thus

I. Iohn was not greater then all others, but equall unto them.

Against this if it bee objected, that Moses was Object.

greater, because hee was equall to Christ Deuter. 18. 15.

Answ I answer, Moses was not equall unto Christ, but like unto him as is expressed in the place objected; The Lord will raise up unto you a Prophet like unto me, not equall unto mee: But most plainely. Heb. 3. 3. Christ was worthy of more glory then Moses.

II. Iohn is not here by our Saviour compared with those that followed him, but with those who went before him; not with the Apostles of Christ, or all beleevers in generall, but with the Prophets of the Lord, And therefore Pet. Galatinus fights with his owne shadow, and builds upon a false ground, and sandy foundation, when hee would prove from this place the Virgin Mary to be without originall sinne. He argues thus.

Object. 2 Among them that are born of women (that is amongst those who are conceived in originall sinne) there hath not risen a greater then Iohn the Baptist: but Christ was greater then Iohn; therefore it followes that hee was free from sinne; and because the Virgin without doubt was greater then Iohn, therefore it follows also, that shee was without sinne. Pet. Galat. lib. 7. cap. 5. pag. 279.

Answ. 1. First, I grant that the B. Virgin was greater then Iohn. But Answ. 2. Secondly, I deny the consequence, shee was greater, therefore without sinne, followes not.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, our Saviour doth not compare Iohn with Mary, or the beleevers of that time, but onely with the Prophets of the old Testament.

Quest. 2. Wherein, and how was the Baptist greater then the Prophets of the old Testament?

Answ. I. First, because he was called the Messenger of the Lord. Malach. 4.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because the Prophets prophesied of him; Malach. 3. and 4. Esa. 40.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because he prophesied in the wombe Luke 1. as was said before.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Iohn was greater then the Prophets in regard of his office; and this I conceive our Saviour here principally meanes: for

I. Iohn prepares the way of Christ. verse 10. And

II. Doth proclaime and shew that Christ is already come, which none of the Prophets did. And

III He was nearer unto Christ then any, for he was his forerunner; like that Noble-man who walkes next before the King in processions, or when he goes in state: or like Lucifer the day star, who comes next before the Sunne. And

IV. He pointed at Christ with the finger: Behold the Lamb of God.

V. He is almost equalled with Christ in honour. For

First, hee was honoured in the world, when Christ was unknowne to the world.

Secondly, he prophesieth that Christ shall increase, but himselfe decrease, as came to passe by little and little.

Thirdly, his Disciples were offended, because more followed after, and flocked unto Christ, then did unto him.

VI. As was shewed before, he was the corner stone of the Law and the Gospell, of the old Testament, and the new, the last of the Prophets, and the first of the Apostles.

Why doth our Saviour make this comparison between Iohn and the Prophets? would he hereby teach the Baptist to bee ambitious or haughtie? Quest. 1.

Christ doth not teach his servants to seeke honour; but he teacheth others to give due honour unto them, whom the Lord (by grace) hath honoured: To teach us. Answ.

That Christ would have his Children to bee received, and to have fitting honour given unto them: and hence the Apostles were commanded to depart from those places, and persons who did not regard them. Shake off the dust of your feete and depart. Observ.

Why must the servants, and Ministers of Christ be thus honoured? Quest. 4.

First, because if the Doctour be despised, then the Doctrine is contemned: when Iohn was cast into prison, the people grew more cold then formerly they were. Iohn 5 35. Answ. 1.

Secondly, they must not be honoured for any worthinesse that is in their persons, (or at least not principally therfore) but for that grace which they offer, and bring in earthen vessels. 2 Cor. 4. 7. Because in that regard their feet are beautifull. Rom. 10. 17. and 15. 29. And hence the honouring and despising of them, reflects upon him who sent them, and enriched them with this grace they bring. He that heareth you, heareth me; hee that receiveth you, receiveth mee; and hee that despiseth you, despiseth me. Answ. 2.

What is here required of people in regard of the servants and Ministers of Christ? Quest. 5.

First, they must honour all good and faithfull Pastours: (1 Cor. 4. 1. and 1 Timoth. 5. 16, and 1 Thessal. 5. 12. 13.) Because such are called our fathers. 1 Cor. 4. 14. &c. Galath. 4. 19. Deut. 5. 16. Answ. 1.

Secondly, they may preferre those whom God hath enriched and endowed, with more rare, eminent, and singular gifts. Those of most inferiour parts are not to be contemned, and honoured according to their worth: but yet this honour may be graduated according to the measure, and dispensation of graces given by God. Rom. 15. 29 and 1 Thessal. 1. 5. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, they must obey them; this honour principally consisting in obedience. Heb. 13. 17. Answ. 3.

VERS. 12. And from the dayes of Iohn the Baptist, untill now, the Kingdome of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. Vers. 12.

§. 1. And from the dayes of Iohn the Baptist untill now. Sect. 1.

Two Termes are laid downe in this Section; namely.

First, Terminus a quo; vel Initium, and that is from the dayes of Iohn the Baptist, now that is not controverted, but agreed upon by all.

Secondly,

Quest. Secondly, Terminus ad quem, vel conclusio, and that is untill now; Here it may be asked whether this be terminated in that day when Christ spake this or not, as if, untill now bee as much as unto this day?

Answ. No; for this phrase ἕως ἄρτι, untill now is taken:

First, sometimes, Exceptivè, excluding the time to come, or any time after the present.

Secondly, sometimes, this phrase speakes onely of the present time, neither excluding nor including the future. Reade for example hereof. 1 Corinth. 8. 7. and 15. 6. and 1 Iohn 2. 9.

Thirdly, sometimes this phrase (untill now) includes even the future time: My Father worker hitherto, and I worke. Iohn 5. 17. That is, not onely unto the day wherein this was pronounced, but so long as this world lasts. So also 1 Corinth. 4. 13. And thus this Phrase is here to be taken, as appeares most plainely, because it is expounded of the Preaching of the Gospell. The Law, and the Prophets were untill Iohn: and since that time the Kingdome of God is preached, and every man presseth thereunto. Luke 16. 16. The meaning therefore of our Saviour here is, the Gospell was preached by the Baptist, whereby so great happinesse is come unto the world. Whence we may note.

Observ. That the manifestation of the Gospell, is the greatest felicity of men, or of the world.

Sect. 2. §. 2. The Kingdome of Heaven suffers violence.

Quest. 1 What is meant by the Kingdome of Heaven?

Answ. 1. First, it seemes literally to signifie the celestiall glory of the blessed: and thus some understand it: But I dare not subscribe unto it, because the unworthy intrude themselves into this Kingdome: which into that they cannot.

Answ. 2. Secondly, by the Kingdome of Heaven, is often understood the Gospell, which publisheth Christ now already manifested; which is called the Mistery of salvation. 1 Timoth. 3. 16. Or, which is all one, it is taken for grace and salvation published by the Gospell. But violence is not so properly said to be offred to this Kingdome.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, by the Kingdome of Heaven, is here meant the true Church of Christ, which was dispersed, farre and wide through the whole earth, and into which all (that is, all sorts) intrude themselves. Whence we may observe that the Observ. Church of Christians is reputed and esteemed to be the Kingdome of Heaven. Matth. 13. 24. 31. 47. Rom. 14. 17. and 1 Corinth. 4. 20. Colos. 4. 11.

Quest. 2 Why is the Christian Church on earth called the Kingdome of Heaven?

Answ. 1. First, because it leadeth unto the Kingdome of glory: Rom. 8. 17. Ephes. 2. 19. Philip. 4. 22.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because the conditions of this Church and that Kingdome are one and the same viz.

I. To turne unto God, from whom naturally we are averse.

II. To adhere and cleave unto the Lord, and to rely upon him. 73

III. To rejoyce in him above all things. Phil. 4. 4.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because the Kingdome, and King, and Subjects, and Conjunction, and joy, and security are plainly one and the same, of this Christian Church on earth, and that Kingdome in heaven: And they onely differ in place and degree.

Quest. 3. What is meant here by suffering of violence?

Answ. These words may be expounded three manner of wayes, namely.

First, Respectu personarum, in regard of the persons; of old the Gentiles, and world, were excluded: At jam aperta janua Cœli, Ambros. But now the gates of heaven are open. Our Saviour seemes to allude to those things which of old were hidden, and prohibited: as the holy of holyes, whereunto none must goe, save onely the High-Priest, and that once a yeare: But now wee (that is, all the faithfull) have boldnesse to enter into the holiest by the blood of Iesus &c. Hebr. 10. 19. So the Mount must not bee touched. Exod. 19. Heb. 12. 20. But now the faithful are come unto Mount Sion &c. (Heb. 12. 22. 23.) the wall of separation, beeing broken downe. Ephes. 2. And the veile rent in twaine. 2. Cor. 3. Thus as all thrust at the Play-houses, and Theaters, and places of publicke spectacles, desiring greedily (when the dores are open) to see the fights, which are there to be presented; Or as when the gates are beate open, or the walls of a besiedged City broken downe, or a ship of the enemies grappled withall, every man thrusts and strives to enter as fast as hee can: Even so here the kingdome of Heaven, suffers violence; that is, Christ having broken downe the wall of separation, and partition, and rent in twaine the veile, and opened the gate of heaven to all, whether bond or free, Iew or Gentile, Greeke, or Barbarian; hence of all sorts, from all places, many flocke unto the Church of Christ. Iosh 6. 20

Secondly, Respectu ordinis neglecti, in regard of the conditions which now were abolished, and disanulled; namely, Circumcision, legall sacrifices, and that hard and impossible condition, Fac & vives: fullfill the Law and thou shalt be saved by the Law; otherwise thou canst not be saved. Now these being worne out of date and antiquated, wee men runne unto God onely by faith in Christ, hoping thereby to be saved.

Thirdly, Respectu interni roboris, in regard of inward strength, and power: God giving under the Gospell ordinarily a more ample spirit, or measure of his spirit: now of this by and by.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And the violent take it by force.

These words have the force of an exception; As if our Saviour would say, the kingdome of Heaven suffers violence, but yet not all obtaine it, but onely the violent. Violenti rapiunt. Hence then observe.

Observ. That the kingdome of heaven cannot be obtained or gained, without a vehement motion of the heart, and a desire enflamed and kindled with the zeale of faith. Luke 7. 29. 30.

What was required of the Jewes in regard of the Messias.

Quest. 1. Answ. 1. First, that they should earnestly, and greedily expect him: and this they did (Rom. 8. 23.) as appeares by the Proverbe, Vt Iudæi Messiam, and also by Iohn 1. 19. &c. and 4. 25.

Answ. 2. Secondly it was required of them, that they should beleeve Elias, the Messenger, and fore-runner of the Messiah: and by and by seeke out Christ. As Iohn 4. 30. 39. Luke 7. 16.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it was required, that having found out Christ they should follow him with joy, forsaking for his sake all other things, as Mat. 4. 25. and 8. 1. and 12. 15. and 14. 13. and 19. 2. and 20. 29. and Mark 11. 9. and Luke 5. 15. and 12 1. and 15. 1.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it was required of them, that they should embrace and accept of Christ upon any termes or conditions whatsoever, although never so hard to flesh and blood: And not like Agrippa, who was almost perswaded to become a Christian, or like the young man who departed from Christ sorrowfull: but selling all, leaving all, denying themselves, and taking up those crosses as Christ enjoyned them, they should follow him.

Answ. 5 Fiftly, it was required of them, that having once embraced, and accepted of Christ, they should serve him zealously all their daies: And then at the end of their life, they should be crowned with life eternall. Now all these are required of us, and all those who desire to be made partakers of the heavenly Kingdome. For

I. We must above all things long for, expect, and desire, that Christ would come unto our hearts and soules.

II. We must beleeve his Messengers, and Ministers, who bring his word, and declare his will unto us.

III. Wee must obey those directions which are taught us by his Messengers for the obtaining of him: although the Rules prescribed be difficult and contrary to corrupt nature.

IV. Having found out Christ, and obtained him, we must rejoyce in him, yea so rejoyce that we would part with, and forsake all things rather then him.

V. We must then learne and labour to be truely zealous in his service, and for his glory: because this zeale is the fire which mollifies and softens our hearts, and makes them the more easily receive divine impressions. Now these things beeing well weighed, and considered, wee may safely conclude: That heaven cannot be had without zealous desires, motions, and endeavours: because violenti rapiunt, onely the violent take it, and that by force.

Quest. 2. Answ. 1. Wherein is our zeale to be expressed?

First, in the love of Religion; which we can never love too much, or affect zealously enough.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must be zealous in the encreasing of our faith, and desire unfainedly and earnestly to be sealed by the holy Spirit, and thereby to be assured of Christ and salvation Rom. 8. 15. 16. and 1 Iohn 5. 10. Many desire this grace of a true and sure faith, but they seeke it sluggishly, and expect to obtaine it easily. Canus. 3. 1. But wee must be zealous in the search and enquiry thereof, and then we may hope that he whom wee desire should come, will come, and not tarry. Heb. 10. 38.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we must be zealous in our prayers: for this is the most true approbation of the heart. Here observe, that there are two things, which sharpen the edge of zeale, to wit,

I. The sense of our want, or misery, for hee who conceives himselfe or his estate to be miserable, will cry aloud unto God, with a sad heart and a sorrowfull countenance, as we see in the Publicane: whereas the proud Pharisee onely gives thankes, but prayes for nothing. Luk. 18. 11. And therefore wee must labour to be sensible of our sins and wants.

II. A desire of the benefit offred; as Christ said to the woman, If thou knew the gift or grace of God, then thou wouldest aske water of me. Iohn 4. 10. And therefore we must labour to know what spirituall gifts and graces are excellent, and wherin we are indigent, and then hunger, long, and pray earnestly for them; but because the gift and grace of prayer comes from above, and without the assistance of the Spirit, we cannot pray as we ought; we must therefore desire the Lord to give us the spirit of prayer, as also strength, and power to offer up pleasing, and spirituall sacrifices unto him.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, wee must be zealous in obedience of life, and that with humility, and submission of our wils to the will of God. And thus if wee be zealous in the Profession of Religion; zealous in desire and endeavour to encrease our faith; zealous in our prayers, and in the pious practise of our lives and conversations; wee may then be certainly assured, that we shall be made partakers of the kingdome of glory, for Violenti rapium: The violent take it by force.

VERS. 13, 14. For all the Prophets, and the Law prophesied untill Iohn. And if you will receive it, this is Elias which was to come. V. 13. 14

Sect. 2.

§. 1. All the Prophets, and the Law prophesied untill Iohn.

Quest. 1. Answ. 1. What is the meaning of these words?

First, it is expounded, De scopo Prophetarum, thus; this Iohn is he, at whom all the Prophets and the Law aimed, and marked. Thus Calvin. Musculus.

Quest. 2. Why did they level rather at Iohn, then at Christ? or why doth Christ say, they all prophesied of Iohn, and not rather, that they all prophesied of himselfe?

Answ. 1 Because hee will not suddenly name himselfe; If I witnesse (saith he) of my selfe, my witnesse is nothing: And therefore our Saviour doth rather name Iohn; and by and by shewes that he is Elias, the Fore-runner of the Messiah. From hence then we may learne,

Observ. That Christ is the whole scope of the old Testament, and the end of the Law to every one that beleeves: For the scope of the Scripture is faith faith unto salvation; but wee have no other to beleeve in, or to hope for salvation from, but only Christ, Act. 4. 12.

Quest. 3. How, or for what end, or what use must we make of reading the sacred Scriptures?

Answ 1. First, wee must reade, not for curiosity, but unto salvation; whatsoever was written, was written for our learning. Rom. 15. 4. and 1 Cor. 10. And therefore we must so reade, that wee may learne something out of whatsoever we reade.

Answ. 2. Secondly, apply what we reade unto Christ; that is, when wee reade of Shiloh, the seed of the woman, David my servant, a branch of Iesse, a woman shall compasse a man, Israel shall be freed from captivity, and the like; in all these let us understand Christ.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, let us so read that our faith may be increased by our reading; that is, wee must lay hold upon the promises, adhering unto them confidently and constantly: yea, applying them unto us, and making them ours in Christ; because hee is the end, both of Law and Gospel.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this 13. verse is expounded, De limite prophetarum, as if our Saviour would say: All the Prophets prophesied, or there were still Prophets, who prophesied untill Iohn arose, but now they shall prophesie no more. Whence wee may learne:

Observ. 2. That prophesies are not to be expected beyond the time of the Baptist.

Object. 1. It may here be objected: The Prophets prophesied not untill Iohn; for Malachie was the last Prophet they had, after the Captivity. See the Preface that is before Malachie in the great Bible.

Answ. 1. First, it may be, that there were Prophets after Malachie, although they are not expressed in the Canon of sacred writ. Or,

Answ. 2. Secondly, perhaps for the sinnes of the people, there was neither prophesie, nor vision for a long time: That is, if they had continued sincere, and pure in the service of God, the Lord then would have continued his Prophets amongst them, even until the comming of Christ; but because of their impiety, hee deprived them of them, in anger and just wrath.

Objct. 2. But there were Prophets under the Gospel, as Agabus, who prophesied unto Paul, Act. 21. 10. There was a Prophet named Agabus. And therefore there were Prophets after Iohn.

Answer. This was miraculous, and not ordinary.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some expound this 13. verse, De gubernatione ecclesiæ, of the government of the Church: as if our Saviour would say, the Law and the Prophets, were the Governors of the Church, or people untill Iohn, but no longer. Hence then observe:

Observ. 3. That the Mosaicall law doth not rule, or governe, or beare sway under Christ, or the Church of Christ under, and in the time of the Gospell, shall not be ruled or governed by the Mosaicall law: For by Christ wee are freed from it.

Quest. 4. Is this universally true, that we under the Gospell are freed from the law of Moses, and the Prophets, and are now not to be taught or ruled by them?

Answ. It is true with a double distinction: namely,

First, wee must distinguish of the Law: for although the Ceremoniall be abrogated, yet the Morall remaines, and abides for ever: yea, although the Moral law be still in force, and never to be disannulled, yet it is not said to rule and governe, because it neither saves nor damnes, but only directs the children of faith, what fruits of faith to beare and bring forth. 75 Galat. 5. 6

Secondly, we must distinguish of the Prophets, for their writings are not abrogated (because they are morall:) But the Lord doth not now governe his Church by Prophets (as of old time) but by his Sonne, Heb. 1. 1.

Who are meant by Prophets? Quest. 5.

Answ. 1. First, Prophets signifie those, who did foreshew things to come; And these our Saviour here speakes of: and these were proper to the old Testament, at least ordinarily.

Answ. 2. Secondly, by Prophets sometimes are meant those, who explicating the prophesies applied them unto Christ: Now of this sort of Prophets, there were both under the old and new Testament.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Prophets sometimes signifie those, who by, and in the preaching of the word and Gospel, offer Christ unto us: And these are proper to the New Testament, Reade Rom. 12. and 1 Cor. 14.

Quest. 6. How are Christians freed from the Law?

Answ. 1. First, they are freed from the yoke and service of Ceremonies: And,

Answ. 2. Secondly, from the hard condition of the Morall Law: But,

Answ. 3. Thirdly, not from the obedience of the Morall Law; for that shall remaine for ever, as the exact and perfect rule of right obedience.

Sect. 2. 5. 2. This is Elias.

Quest. Why doth Iohn deny that hee is Elias? Iohn 1. 21.

Answ. 1. First, some held that Elias the Thisbite, was to come againe in the flesh; and that Iohn was he; Now this Iohn denies, Iohn. 1. 21.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say that Iohn was Elias in spirit, by a Metempsychosis, or transmigration of the soule (as the Pythagoreans held) As though Elias his soule, had animated Iohns body; but this opinion appeares to be erroneous, by Matt. 14. 2. of which afterwards.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ saith, this is Elias, because Iohn came in the same spirit that Elias did, Luk. 1. 17. and Matth. 17. 12. Here observe, that there was in Elias a double spirit, viz.

I. A spirit of revenge, 2 King. 1. This spirit Christ approves not of, neither doe we reade that it was in the Baptist.

II. A spirit of zeale towards religion, 1 King. 18. This Christ commends, and this was in Iohn.

VERS. 15. He that hath eares to heare, let him hee

Vers. 15.

Quest. Observ. 4. How many sorts of hearers are there, or how many sorts of men are there, in the times and places of the Gospel?

First, some are manifest adversaries; and enemies mies unto the Preachers, and preaching of the word of God; as was Herod, Herodias, and many of the Pharisees.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some out of a certaine Epicureall contempt, regard not the word; and thus many would not vouchsafe to goe out of doores to heare Christ, or Iohn.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some calumniate the persons of the Preachers, when they can find no fault with the word preached. And thus the Pharisees say, Iohn hath a devill, because he came neither eating, nor drinking; and Christ is a friend of Publicanes and sinners, verse 18, 19.

Answer 4. Fourthly, some having a prejudicated opinion, either of the person, or word, either of the Preacher, or preaching, will not receive the doctrine, but stop their eares, and shut their hearts against it: And these our Saviour seemes to speake unto, in this verse, and the former: If yee will receive it, this is Elias, and he that hath eares to heare, let him heare.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, As some went out to heare Iohn, who returned back againe, because his doctrine contradicted their lusts, and opposed their lewd lives: And as many approved of his preaching, when hee reproved others, but were offended with him, when they were taxed themselves: So many forsake the word, because it crosseth their wils; and although they allow Ministers to reprove others, yet they doe not like that themselves should be reproved.

Answer. 6. Sixtly, some in outward shew, would neither seeme to be adversaries, nor contemners of the word preached; but yet in themselves contemned the counsell of the Lord; as the Scribes. So many in heart, despise the Gospel of Christ, who shew no such thing outwardly at all.

Answ. 7. Seventhly. As the Disciples of Iohn attributed more unto him, then unto Christ; yea, ascribed that unto Iohn, which was proper unto Christ. So, some ascribe more to the Instrumentall, then to the Principall, or efficient cause; that is, often times more to the Minister, then to Christ; yea, often sacrifice to themselves, & their own labours & endevours, more then unto Christ.

Answ. 8. Eightly, some have mens persons in admiration, but their doctrine in contempt: Many certainely admired both Iohn and Christ, (as appeares by the applause, never any man spake, as this man speakes) who would not obey the word preached. Now none of all these are worthy our imitation, or commendation, but rather all of them deserve exprobration.

VERS. 18, 19. Iohn came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, hee hath a devill. The Sonne of man came eating and drinking, and they say; Behold a man glutton, and a wine bibber, a friend of Publicans and sinners: But wisedome is justified of her children.

Sect. 1. Quest. 1. §. 1. For Iohn came neither eating nor drinking.

How many sorts of Diet are there in Scripture

Answ. namely, First, Iohn Baptists diet, who came neither eating nor drinking; that is, he ate wild honey, and the coursest things.

Secondly, our Saviours diet, who dranke wine, but yet very moderately.

Thirdly, the Epicures diet, who saith, Let us eat and drinke, for to morrow we shall die.

Fourthly, the scrupulous mans diet, who eateth nothing but herbes, Rom. 14. 2. Now the difference betwixt these is this; Iohn the Baptists diet, and Christs diet, are both vertues; but the Epicures diet, and the Scrupulous mans are the two extreme: For the Epicure taketh God, to bee an indulgent Father to him, in giving him the creatures to eate of them at his pleasure. And the other taketh God to be a niggard, who granteth not the liberall use of the creatures to his children.

§. 2 And they say hee hath a Devill. Sect. 2.

What was the cause that provoked them thus to censure the Baptist? Quest. 1.

Answ. The provoking and incensing cause was twofold; namely,

First, because he preached the Law.

Secondly, because hee was abstemious and temperate.

First, Iohn preached the Law, and the threatnings thereof, he proclaimed them to be a generation of Vipers, Matt. 3. 7. He preacheth that God can raise up children unto Abraham of stones, Matth. 3. 9. yea, that now the axe is laid to the root of the tree, verse 10. And therefore fruitlesse trees shall be cast into the fire, verse 12. Now hence they were angry, and in their rage, said, hee had a devill: To teach us;

That the preaching of the Law is never acceptable to sinners, Nehem. 9. 30. Prov. 1. 24. Act. 7. 54. Esa. 30. 14. Ierem. 44. 5. and 25. 4. and and 2 King. 17. 13. &c. 2 Chronicles. 24. 19. Ieremy. 7. 13.

Quest. 2 How doth this further appeare?

Answ. Because the Law preacheth foure things, opposite to so many humane affections; to wit,

First, the Law teacheth, that our condition by nature, is evill, desperate, and miserable; now this is opposite to the pride, and selfe-love, that is in our natures, when Christ preached upon this head of the Law, the Pharisees cry, Are wee blind also? Iohn 9. 40. Because our proud natures will not brooke this doctrine.

Secondly, the Law teacheth, that punishment hangeth over our heads, and will fall certainely at length upon us, except wee repent. Now this is oppositе to presumption. When Ieremy preacheth this point, the people reply: Thou lyest, Ieremie. 43. 2. They will not beleeve that they shall be punished, although they have grievously offended. So naturally we presume that no evill shall come unto us, and make a covenant with death, (Iob 36. 13. Esay 28. 14.) And therefore cannot endure the menaces and comminations of the law.

Thirdly, the Law exhorts us to repent, (as Causa sine qua non) and telleth us, that without repentance wee must needs be brought to destruction at the last. Now this is oppositе to the love of sinne, which is inherent in our natures, and habituall unto us. And therefore, this doctrine of repentance, is so harsh, and unpleasant sant unto us, as is a prohibition of meat to him that is hungry, or of drinke, to him that is thirsty.

Fourthly, the Law perswades us to repent betimes, speedily, whiles it is said to day, and to defer it no longer: Now this is opposite to that sluggish idleness, that is in our bones, and which makes us from day to day, to cry, yet a little sleepe, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleepe. And therefore the preaching of the law is as distastful unto us, as it is to a sleepy sluggish man, to be awakened, and pulled out of his bed.

Quest. 3. Why may wee not despise, or lightly regard the preaching of the Law?

Answ. 1. First, because the Law is truth: what would it profit a man to dye laughing, or to be deceived? If the Physitian should tell us that our bodies were in no danger; or the Lawyer, that our estates were safe, and secure; when as both are in apparent danger: we would say they were Traytours to our bodies, and possessions. And yet we are angry with the Law, when it telleth us truth, and could wish that it were a Traytor to our soules. The Law telleth us, That for sins sake the wrath of God fals upon the children of disobedience, Ephes. 5. 6. Now although this be an undoubted truth, and that experience doth dayly prove it, yet we had rather not hear it.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must not despise the preaching of the Law, because it is a necessary way: we comming by death unto life: as the sharp needle makes way for the smoothe thred, and as the Prodigall by poverty is brought home unto his Father: we must be wounded before we can be cured, we must be humbled before we can be raised up, yea we must dye before we can live. And therefore seeing the threats of the Law are true, yea and necessary to humble and wound us; we must take heed that we do not slight them.

Quest. 4. What things hinder us from regarding, and loving the preaching of the Law?

Answ. 1. First, self-love, Esa. 65. 5. And therefore we must learn to deny our selves.

Answ. 2. Secondly, presumption: and therefore we must be circumspect; it being a dangerous thing to be deceived in the state and condition of the soul, or to cry Peace, Peace unto our selves, while sudden destruction hangs over our heads.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the love of sin: this is a sweet seeming potion to the body, and a sweet poyson unto the soul. And therefore we must hate sin, as we would hate hell; for, the wages of sin is death, Romans 6. 23.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, idlenesse deceives many, and hinders many from giving a due regard unto the Law; and that both by making them to protract time, and also by quenching and cooling all zealous motions in them. Wherefore we must shake off all delays, and labour carefully to practise the precepts of the Law.

Secondly, the next provoking cause which made them say, that Iohn had a devill, was because he was abstemious and moderate, yea seemed more austeer and rigide than themselves were: and therefore they envie him. Whence I might observe two things: viz.

First, that an Hypocrite hates him that is more holy than himself, Esa. 65. 5. Observ. 1.

Secondly, that an austere life it odious and irksome to a carnall man, 1 Pet. 4. 4. Observ. 2.

Why do carnall men so carp at an austere life? Quest. 5.

First, because thereby Hypocrites and formalists are excelled in glory: and therefore they envie such a life in any, as shall ecclipse their light. Answ. 1.

Secondly, by such a life wicked men are reproached: and therefore they hate such that are so reserved, and chary of their society, that they shun the company of all that are wicked, Ephesians 5. 11. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, such a life condemns the licentiousnesse of flesh and blood, who saith, Let us eat and drink, for to morrow we shall dy, Esa. 22. 13. And therefore all Epicures, belly-gods and intemperate persons, detest and abhor such a life. Answ. 3.

We have seen the moving causes of the peoples censure given of Iohn; namely, because he preached the terrours of the Law, and because he lived a strict life: we may now consider

What the effect of this censure was? Quest. 6.

Rash Judgement: for they say, He hath a Devill. Answ.

Hence two things may be observed; namely,

First, That rash judgement is seldome right judgement; 1 Sam. 1. 13. Mat. 7. 1. Rom. 14. 10, 13 and 1 Cor. 4. 5. Colos. 2. 16. Observ. 3.

Secondly, That there is nothing so good or holy, but malice can deprave, Rom. 1. 30. and 2 Tim. 3. 3. Iohn Baptist (Malice saith) hath a devill; although the holy Ghost say, That he was sanctified in the womb: yea, Christ, the Lamb without spot (they say) is become a friend, and familiar companion of sinners. Observ. 4.

What is here required of all men? Quest. 7.

First, wicked men, yea all men must hate, and forbear all calumny; lest thereby they condemn the generation of the just: Reade Psal. 15. 3. and 73. 15. Luke 3. 14. Answ. 1.

Secondly, the righteous must labour to cut off all occasions; that is, labour so to live, that the wicked may be ashamed to speak evill of them. Answ. 2.

How must we so live, that we may escape calumnies and slanders? Quest. 8.

Saint Peter gives us three remarkable rules to be observed, for this end; namely, Answ.

First, we must abstain from all sin whatsoever, whether against the first or second Table, 1 Pet. 2. 11. do no evill, and then men can have no ground to build an evill report upon. Rule 1.

Secondly, shine before men in the works of holinesse and uprightnesse; let them see nothing but good in us, that they may be able to say nothing but good of us, 1 Pet. 2. 12. Rule 2.

Thirdly, obey Magistrates and Superiours, in those things which are not against God, or his word, or his Law: for this is the wil of God, that thus we should put to silence the ignorance of foolish men, 1 Pet. 2. 14, 15. Rule 3.

§. 3. Christ came both eating and drinking. S. 3.

How, and wherein is Christ opposed to the Baptist? Quest. 1.

First, Iohns Disciples thought that they were Answ. 1.

Corri-

80 Corrivals; but because (that I know of) now none think so, therefore I slip it.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they differed in conversation: because Iohn was abstemious, and more reserved; but Christ was more familiar, that so by all means he might win and gain some.

Observ. 2 From whence we may learn, That Christ tryed all wayes and means for our salvation: for that being the scope of his sending, and coming into the world, and there being nothing that he more deeply desired, than that, he would certainly leave no means unsought for the effecting of it.

Quest. 2 What did Christ do for our salvation?

Answ. 1. First, in himselfe he taught us, he prayed for us, yea when we were enemies, he laid down his life for our ransome, Rom. 5. 6,7. he checked the proud, (Iohn 10.) and cheered the humble, Matthew 11. 28.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in his Apostles, he did much for our salvation: for he sent, and commanded them to preach, he endowed them with gifts, and made them able Ministers; he distributed severall abilities among them, making some sons of consolation, and some sons of thunder: yea he inspired them with his Spirit, for the writing of the Scripture, the rule of Truth.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, in his Ministers he shews his care over us, and his desire of our salvation: for he hath left a succession of Ministers for the gathering together of the Elect: and as Paul became all to all men, so the Lord hath given us Ministers of all sorts, that so we might be left without excuse: he hath given us ancient and grave Ministers; he hath given us solid & learned Ministers; he hath given us meek and milde Ministers; yea he hath given us Ministers of our nation, and not strangers only, and the like. And thus he hath given us Pastours according to our severall dispositions, yea some who can change themselves, or take unto themselves any form (in indifferent things) for the winning of all sorts unto Christ, 1 Cor. 9. 20, 21, 22.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ, and the Baptist, differ in preaching; for Iohn preached the Law, and wrath, (Mat. 3. 7, 11.) unto repentance: Lugubria. Gualt. s. But Christ preached, or proclaimed the sweet messages of the Gospel, Mat. 3. 28. Iob. 7. 37, &c.

Observ. 2 From whence we may learn, That there is a double preaching necessary unto salvation; viz. Threatnings and Promises, the Law and the Gospel; thus we see Samuel did, 1 Sam. 12. and Esa. 1.

Quest. 3. Why is it necessary, that both Law and Gospel, Promises and Threatnings should be preached?

Answ. 1. First, because there are divers sorts of men: as for example: I. Some hearers are soft and mollified, and of tender eares and hearts; some are hard and obdurate, which stand in need of a sharp wedge to rend and tear them. II. Some sinners are bashfull, some shamelesse and impudent, 1 Corin. 5. and 2 Corin. 2. And therefore the shamelesse must be shent and shamed. III. Some sin openly and apparently, some secretly and covertly. And therefore one strain, or way of preaching alwayes, will not so well sute with all dispositions.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is necessary, that both Law and Gospel should be preached, because divers and sundry works are to be wrought in one and the same elect vessell: for I. He must be humbled with the Comminations of the Law. Then II. He must be raised up by the promises of the Gospel. And then III. Sealed by the Spirit of Promise, Ephes. 1. 13.

Quest. 4 Who are here to be blamed?

Answ. They who expect nothing, or brook nothing (in the preaching of the Word) but onely promises, allurements, and sweet Musick. As Rachel was fairer, but Leah more fruitfull; so Promises are more pleasing, but threatnings more profitable, in regard of our corrupt nature. For I. In the beginning there are many Remore, and lets which must violently be shaken off, and trampled under feet; which without the Comminations of the Law, we shall hardly be induced to do. And II. In our journey we shall be subject to sleep and drowsinesse, and therfore we must be rouzed, and excited with Legall terrours. III. In our progresse there wil be pull-backs, & relapses; sometimes in action, sometimes in affection; we being like unto the Sea, who hath both her Ebbe and Tides. And therfore these things considered, we must not always expect promises, and sweet blandishments from the Word of God.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Christ and Iohn differed not in the end, or scope, which was to call men unto salvation. Whence note, Observ. 3 That all the divers gifts of the Ministery tend all to one and the same scope. The Prophets threaten, but for this end, that we may live, Ezek. 18. The Apostles gently perswade and admonish (Gal. 4. 19.) that so Christ may be planted in our hearts.

Quest. 5. What did the people, or Pharisees blame in Christ and Iohn?

Answ. 1. First, in generall they blame all, they do; Iohns severity, and Christs familiarity, are both alike taxed: to teach us, Observ. 4. That the naturall man blames and dislikes every good thing. For I. There is a perverse nature in man, which (like wanton or peevish children) will be contented, and pleased with nothing. Yet II. There is in them a desire of contentment, but it is in those things which cannot content, or satisfie humane desires. Yea III. There is in naturall men a particular hatred of God and the Gospel. And therefore they tax and blame every thing that is good.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the people blame the Ministers of the Gospel, namely, Christ and Iohn, in whom they saw no evill at all, save onely their diligence and industry in preaching the word.

Observ. 5. From whence we may learn, That Ministers are often calumniated and taxed for their zeal, and industry in preaching the word, Acts 7. 52.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Wisdom is justified of her children.

For the propagation of Learning, Colleges and Schools, were in divers places erected for the Prophets: and their Schollers were termed

Filii

Filij Prophetarum, Children of the Prophets. 2 King 6. 1 unto which phrase our Saviour here alludes, wisdome is justified of her Children.

Vers. 20. VERS. 20. Then began he to upbraid the Cities, wherein most of his mighty workes were done, because they repented not.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Tunc. Then began hee to upbraid the Cities.

This voyce Then, doth denote the time to bee the same with the former, or that this verse and those which follow were spoken at the same time with the verses foregoing, and upon the occasion of them. As if the Evangelist would say, after that Christ had spoken these things (from verse 16. &c.) in generall, hee applyeth them particularly, whence note:

Observ. That the most profitable preaching, is to apply generall Doctrines to particular persons. Reade for the proofe, and Apostolicall practise hereof. 1 Corinth 3. 1. &c. and 5. 1. and 6. 10. and 10. 6. &c. and 15. 8. &c. Galath. 3. 1.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Wherein most of his mighty workes were done.

Quest. 1. What is the sense and meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. First, the word here used (δυνάμεις) signifies neither Miracles, nor Workes, but Vertue, and Power; which he shewed more amongst them, then others, more there then elsewhere.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the meaning therefore is, they are more worthy of anger, and punishment, then others, because they have plainely and evidently seene, that there was divine vertue and power in Christ: but others might thus excuse themselves, wee know not whether he be from heaven or of men: yea we know, that he is Joseph the Carpenters sonne, and that his Mothers name is Mary, and therefore none of the Elders will beleeve on him. John 7. 47. But now unto these cities he shewed his divine power; and therefore they were inexcusable.

Quest. 2. What vertues doth the Evangelist here understand, Christ to have shewed forth in these Cities?

Answ. 1. First, his miraculous workes: If I had not done among them the workes which none other man did, they had not had sinne. John 15. 24. These Cities saw that hee was stronger then the Devill. Luke 11. and how he commanded with authority the uncleane spirits, Mark 1. 27. They saw how the winds and Sea obeyed him. Matth. 8. 27. Luke 8. 25. And how hee loosed Lazarus, from the fetters of death. John 11. 44.

Answ. 2. Secondly, his vertue was shewed in the Preaching of the Gospell: for he taught with power, and like one that had authority, and not as the Scribes, Matth. 7. 29. and 9. 6. Now these Cities saw Christs power both in his miraculous workes, and in his powerfull preaching; and therefore a deeper woe is denounced against them. Hence they observe.

Observ. That those to whom the power of Christ is more revealed, shall be most grievously punished if they relapse, and fall away. John 3. 19. If light come into the world, and be contemned by the world, the condemnation of the world is greater. So Rom. 2. 4. If the riches of Gods mercy be offered, and the offer thereof despised, the wrath of God then will bee the more swiftly, and sharply revealed. 81

Quest. 3. Why shall those be more severely punished, to whom the power of Christ is more revealed, if they relapse and fall away?

Answ. 1. First, because the Revelation of the power of Christ opens the gate unto salvation. Præmonitis, præmunitis, forewarned, forearmed; and therefore Sciens vivus videnſque perit: he perisheth willingly, wittingly, and deservedly, who sees the danger, and yet will runne into it, who seeth the gate of heaven open, and will not enter therein, who seeth the way that leads unto life, and yet walkes in those paths that lead unto death.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because such contemne great grace and mercy: for those who see the power of Christ, and yet turne backe againe unto folly, doe cast away Christ, reject the Holy Ghost, and extinguish that light which God hath given them, and therefore shall be more severely punished. A sluggish servant will sleep in the morning; but if a servant bee often called, and awakened, and yet sleepes againe, it is then no longer negligence, but contempt. So those who relapse after a Revelation of the power and vertue of Christ are guilty.

I. Of sinne. And

II. Of infidelity. And

III. Of the contempt of Christ, the Holy Ghost, and the word of God. And therefore shall be the more grievously tormented.

Quest. 4. How, or wherein is the power of Christ manifested, or revealed?

Answer 1 First, in judicijs in his judgments. Ezech. 25. 13 and 30. 19. Exod. 7. 5. Psalm. 105. 3. Esa. 26. 9. Ierem. 5. 3. The Lord sometimes corrects, afflicts, and punisheth us, that wee, (seeing his power) might learne to amend, sometimes he makes his power knowne upon others, that his owne people might observe his judgements; and powers forth his wrath and fury upon the disobedient, that wee might tremble and learne to obey; as the Dog is beaten before the young Lyon, to make the Lyon obedient, or the Condisciples of the young Prince, to make him feare. 1 Cor. 10

Answer 2 Secondly, in Benedictionibus, in blessings, and mercy: Gods power is revealed in favours, and good things, as Esa. 26. 10. And great is the judgement of those who despise these. Reade Ezech. 16 Esa. 5.

Answer 3 Thirdly, in prædicatione verbi, his power is rather revealed in the Preaching, and publishing of the word; that beeing the power of God unto salvation. Rom. 1. 16. and 2. 4. and 1 Thessal. 1. 5. And therefore those who enjoy the preaching of the word, and despise it, heape up unto themselves wrath against the day of wrath.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the power of Christ is principally shewed there, where the Spirit is powerfull in the heart. (1 Cor. 12. 7. Hebr. 6. 6. &c.) by any generall of particular grace. And therefore they who 82 who are enlightned by the Spirit must take heed of relapsing: for as they have despised and slighted a great grace, who doe thus, so they doe incurre a great judgement and condemnation eternally.

Exil. 3. §. 3. Because they repented not.

Our blessed Saviour doth not upbraid them, because they did not admire his Miracles, or because they did not entertaine or feast him; but because they repented not; yea the other they did, but not this: they wondred at his wonderfull workes, and many entertained him; but all was nothing without repentance. Whence we may note,

Observ. That where repentance is wanting, there all other duties are nothing worth: It is not sufficient for a man to heare the word with reverence, or a shew of love, or a forme of obedience, (for these were in Herod. Mark 6. 20.) except we seriously repent and in sincerity obey, these onely being the blessed ones. Luke 11. 28. Iohn 13. 17. Ierem. 4. 4. Psalm 34. 14. Matth. 7. 21. It is not enough for a man, to make a Profession of Religion but he must indeed strive and study to eschew evill, and doe good (which is the nature of true Repentance) if hee would bee pleasing and acceptable unto God.

Quest. 1. How doth it appeare, that all wee doe in Religion is of no esteeme with God without Repentance?

Answ. 1. First, it appeares Authoritate, by a threefold authority, namely,

I. Of the Baptist, who preacheth Repentance. Matth. 3. 2. And

II. Of Christ, who preacheth repentance. Mat. 4. 17. Luke. 24. 47. And

III. Of the Apostles who preach the same doctrine. Acts 2. 38. and 3. 19. and 26. 18.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it appeares Scopo by the Scope of Christ.

Now the scope of Christ in his comming was: I. To reduce men from their errours; And II. To free them from their sinnes, Luke 1. 75. and Titus 11. 2. &c. And therefore hence it appeares, that without repentance all is nothing.

Quest. 2. Why doth not our Saviour rather upbraide these Cities because they beleeved not, then because they repented not, seeing wee are saved by faith, and Lutheri Tenet. Omnes damnari ob infidelitatem, that all are damned for infidelity?

Answ. Certes, salvation is of faith, but repentance is the way unto faith, yea (Causa sine qua non) without repentance there can be no faith, for those who never repented them of their sinnes, never had the least sparke of saving faith.

Quest. 3. Who ought to repent?

Answ. All who either

First, desire to be redeemed, from Sathan and death. Or Secondly, who are in a miserable estate and condition. Now

I. Such are all men before repentance. Rom. 3. 23. and 5. 12. And

II. All that doe not truly repent.

Quest. 4 Who doe not truly repent?

Answ. 1. First, those who abide in their sinnes, not repenting them at all of their iniquities.

Secondly, those who by a fained and counterfeit repentance deceive their own soule Answ. 2.

Thirdly, those who repent key-coldly, and wash themselues with adulterate teares. Answ. 3

Fourthly, those who seeme both to others and themselues, seriously to repent, but afterwards relapse with the dog to his vomit, and with the Swine that was washed to the wallowing in the mire. 2 Peter 2. 22. Answ. 4

Quest. 5 How must we repent?

Answ. There are two parts of Repentance, namely; μετανοια, ὁμοιωσις. Dedisce, Discere, dammare, amare.

First, Resipiscere, quasi re-sapere, to bee wise againe, or to condemne our former wicked life and actions. Rom. 12. 2. And therefore unto true repentance it is required, that wee should seriously lament and bewaile what is by-past, and for the time to come, labour to be weaned from these things, to wit,

I. From all our former sinnes. 2 Peter 1. 9. and 2. 20. Galath. 5. 24.

II. From the love of the word. Psalm 127. 2. Iames 4. 4.

III. From the contempt of the word; because it is a dangerous thing to despise the word, and so long as we doe so, we cannot truely repent: Reade 2 Chron. 36. 16. Proverb. 1. 24. Iohn 3. 19. Acts 19. 9. Ezech. 33. 32.

IV. From despising of the blessed Spirit; that is, from greeving him. Ephes. 4. 28. or extinguishing his good motions. 1 Thessal. 5. 19. And therfore that we may avoid, and beware this the better, let us remember how many calls we have neglected, and how many good motions we have smoothered.

V. From the neglect of salvation, wee must remember, how formerly we preferred pleasure and profit, yea, and all things before this, & learn both to repent, deplore, and amend it.

Secondly, Conversio, to be converted and turned unto God; or to direct an averse heart unto him, and to labour, that hereafter our whole life may be directed and guided unto a new marke. And in these two, [To repent of, and turn from what is by-past, and amisse; and to amend our lives, and turne unto the Lord our God; and whatsoever is good, for the time to come] doth regeneration consist. Now this second part of repentance doth consist in these things; namely.

I. In a desire and endeavour, to bee ingrafted into Christ, the true and living Olive; and this wee are by faith. Iohn 15. 1. Rom. 11. 22. And

II. In an earnest endeavour to walke in faith, and to approve the truth thereof, by our workes of new obedience, and true sanctification. Gal. 2. 19. &c. and Iames 2. 18 and 1 Tim. 6. 18. And

III. In a true contempt of the world, 1 Iohn 2. 15. that is, although we may make use thereof (as of an Inne for a night) yet we must neither serve it, nor love it, nor delight in it. 1 Cor. 7. 30. And,

IV. In a true deniall of our owne wils and wayes. Matth. 16. 24. and an earnest desire to know, what the good and perfect will of God is is, Rom. 12. 2. Ephes. 5. 10. And,

V. In a serious labour to fructifie, & increase daily in every good worke: Reade Rom. 12. 1. and 2 Corinth. 5. 15. and 1 Tim. 6. 18. And therefore we should diligently examine our selves by these things, whether ever we truely repented us of our sinnes, or not; seeing that without it, all our other labour in religion is lost.

Quest. 6. By whose aid and helpe must we repent?

Answ. By the aid and assistance of God; for he circumciseth the heart, Deut. 30. 6. And he converts and turnes us, Ierem. 31. 18.

Verse 21. 22. VERS. 21. 22. Woe unto thee Chorazin, woe unto thee Bethsaida; for if the mighty workes which were done in you, had beene done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long agoe in sackcloth and ashes. But I say unto you, it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgement, then for you.

Sect. 2. §. 1. If the mighty workes which were done in thee, had beene done in Tyre and Sidon

Quest. 1. Who were these men of Tyre?

Answer 1 First, they were Gentiles, not Iewes; yet,

Answ. 2. Secondly, in the times of David and Solomon, they were friends to the Israelites, as appeares by 2 Sam. 5. 11. and 1 King. 5. 1.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, it was a place of singular traffick and trading, Zach. 9. 2. 3.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, they were sometimes enemies to the people of God, Psal 83. 7. Ezech. 26. 2.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, they were a people, whom for their sinnes God had menaced, and threatned to punish, Esay 23. 1. &c. Ierem. 27. 2. Ezech. 26. and 27. and 28. and 29. 18. Amos 1. 9. Yea, they were captivated seventy yeares, and yet returned unto their fornication, Esa. 23. 16. their sinnes were divers, viz.

I. They were the enemies of the Israelites, as was shewed before.

II. They trusted to their wisedome and riches, Zachar. 9. 2. 3.

III. Being returned from their long captivity, they turne againe to their former fornication, Esa. 23. 16.

IV. Tyre thought her selfe, and boasted of her selfe, as a God, Ezech. 28. 2. and 27. 1. &c. And yet if the mighty workes which were done in Corazin, and Bethsaida, had beene done in her, shee would have repented in sackcloth and ashes. Whence we may observe:

Observ. 1. That there are none so wicked, but they may be converted by the Gospel: Christ came into the world to save sinners, and by his preaching Publicanes and Harlots were reduced to his Dominion: yea, the Gospel is a generall Antidote against all infection of sinne, and a general salve for all sores; it is the Elixar of life, and nothing is incureable, in regard thereof, it being the power of God unto salvation, Rom. 1. 16. that is, the preaching of the Gospel, 1 Cor. 1. 24. And therefore nothing is impossible unto God, neither can any thing at all hinder him. Here observe, that there are two things which hinder a Physician from curing; namely,

First, the time; many diseases being taken in time, are easily helped, but being let alone a while, they become incurable. This cannot hinder the Lord, for Nullum tempus occurrit Deo, he cals men to the gates of death, and then hee saith; Come againe yee sonnes of men; yea, at what time soever (whether at the first, or third, or ninth, or eleventh houre) a sinner repents, he shall find mercy, Ezech. 18. And therefore the length of time, or continuance in sinne, cannot let the Lord from healing.

Secondly, the kind of the disease and malady; some diseases are incureble unto man; but nothing is impossible unto God; for hee can pardon all our sinnes, Ezech. 18. 22. He can heale all our infirmities, Psalm. 103. 3. yea, although our soules were as red as blood, by reason of the pollution of sinne, yet hee can make us as white as the driven snow, Esa. 1. 16. 18.

Quest. 2. How were these of Corazin worse then they of Tyre, or what is the end of this comparison, which our Saviour makes betwixt them?

Answ. 1. First, it is usuall with the Lord, to shame some sinners, by the example of others, as Mat. 12. 41. 42. where our Saviour reproacheth them with the Ninivites, and the Queene of the South; and againe, verse 19. taxeth their pride, by the example of Infants; and elsewhere reproveth the rich, by comparing them with the Widow, who cast in two mites into the treasury. But in these examples, hee compares them with those, who did well; but in the Text, with those who did wickedly. Now it is no wonder, if these of Corazin and Bethsaida, were worse then the good; but how were they worse then the Infidels, and Gentiles?

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Galileans were neere to the men of Tyre, and the luxury, and unbridled life of the Tyrians was knowne, unto the Galileans, and hated, and condemned by them; and for this their wickednesse were despised of them. Therefore our Saviour compares the Galileans, with the men of Tyre, that they may know, in how great danger they are, and how they are as bad, and worse as they are, who in their esteeme deserve to be hated, and contemned for their wickednesse, and ungodly lives.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but how were the Galileans worse then the Tyrians? because they of Tyre sinned ignorantly, but these of obstinate malice. Whence note, Observ. 2. That the sinnes of Christians (after they have knowne, and received the Gospel) are worse then the sinnes of Heathens and Infidels, who are not taught by the preaching of the word: And as their sinnes are greater, so shall also their punishment; For hee who knowes his Masters will, and doth it not, shall be beaten with more stripes.

Quest. 3. Why are the sinnes of Christians, worse and greater, then the sinnes of Heathens?

Answ. 1. First, because Infidels have only the law of nature, but Christians the law of God, and the Gospel. Here Chrysostome compares the Galileans with those of Tyre, for these had only the law of nature to leade them; but those besides, and above

84 above that had the Law of God, and the Gospel and the Miracles of Christ; and therefore the Galileans sinned against the whole blessed Trinity: For,

I. Christ spake, and preached unto them. And

II. The Holy Ghost, by some generall notions did cooperate with the word. And,

III. God the Father did confirme the word preached by Christ, with signes and miracles: And therefore great was their sinne, in contemning this word, and in shutting their eyes against this cleare light.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in Infidels there is an invincible ignorance (the naturall man not being able to understand spirituall things, 1 Cor. 2. 14) but in Christians, a vincible, because they are taught by the Gospel, which is the meanes of knowledge.

Quest. 4. What is required of us, and all those who injoy the Gospell.

Answ. 1. First, wee must take heed of contemning the Gospell, after once it hath been embraced and received: for it had been better for us never to have knowne the waies of God, then after the knowledge thereof to relapse and fall away. 2 Peter 2. 22. like the Galathians who began in the Spirit,

Answ. 2. and ended in the flesh. Gal 3. 3.

Secondly, we must take heed of sins of knowledge; whether

I. In generall, after illumination, and a knowledge, that God is an enemy unto, and a swift witnesse against all sinnes and sinners: for it is dangerous for such a one to sinne. Or

II. In particular, we must principally beware of those sinnes which we know; The time, and sinnes of ignorance the Lord easily passeth by. Acts 17. but after a man is brought to the sight and knowledge of his sinne, it is dangerous then to continue any longer in it. Some follow drunkennesse, and ignorantly thinke it to bee but only good fellowship, and not sinne, or if sinne then no great one, neither much offensive to God. But woe be to him, who knowes it to be a great sinne, and odious unto God, and therefore blusheth and trembleth to commit it, and yet notwithstanding proceedeth to act it: For such a one.

First, sinneth against the whole ever blessed Trinity as was said even now. And Secondly, against his owne knowledge. And Thirdly, against his owne tongue, wherewith. I. He hath often asked pardon and forgivenesse at Gods hands: And

II. He hath often promised to leave it, and to become temperate and sober. And Fourthly, against his owne conscience, whom God in some measure hath circumcised and awakened. And Fiftly, against the holy Spirit of God, who hath often admonished and checked him: And therefore let all such consider, how neare they come to incurable apostacy.

S. El. 3. §. 3. They would have repented.

Our Saviour commends those of Tyre for good hearers; that is, if they had had the word, they would have been more affected with it then the Galileans were. To teach us, Observ. That that onely is good hearing which works Repentance; or the good hearer is onely he who is perswaded by his hearing to repent him of his sinnes. Reade Matth. 3. 3. and 4. 17. and Acts 2. 38. and 3. 19.

Quest. 1. Why is that hearing onely good which works Repentance?

Answ. 1. First, because Repentance is the condition of mercy and Remission: we cannot be assured of mercy or forgivenesse of our sins, untill we have truely repented us of them; and therefore all our hearing is vaine, and fruitlesse, so long as it hath not wrought true repentance in us. Reade Luke 3. 3. and 24. 47. and Acts 11. 18.

Answ. 2. Secondly; the scope of man is the glory of God, for that wee should seeke in all things, and above all things: but wee cannot glorifie God (but rather dishonour him) so long as we have not by unfained Repentance turned from all sinne: And therefore untill Repentance be wrought in our hearts, al our hearing is unprofitable unto us.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Repentance is the scope of Preaching (as appeares. Acts 26. 18. and 1 Thessal. 1. 6. 10.) And therefore good hearing workes conversion.

Object. But there are other scopes and ends of Preaching; and therefore Repentance is not the Scope thereof.

Answer. There are other scopes of preaching besides Repentance, but they are al conjoyned with this, yea end here; as for example.

First, one end of Preaching is knowledge; Christ gave his word that men might be brought from darkenesse to light. Acts 26. 18. But knowledge is vaine without practise. John 13. 17.

Secondly, another end of Preaching is that men might fear, and tremble at the word of God: Esa. 66. 2. because it is good to feare. Proverb. 28 14. But yet this feare and trembling is onely so farre good, as it leades unto Repentance, and no further.

Thirdly, another end of the word is that men might reverence it, and receive it as the word of the Almighty God, and not of a weake man. Acts 10. 33. But reverence is to be perfected in obedience.

Fourthly, another end of Preaching is to work faith in the hearers. Rom. 10. 15. But Repentance is partly the inchoation and beginning of faith, and partly the fruit thereof.

Fiftly, another end of Preaching is sanctity and new obedience. Ierem. 4. 4. Luke 1. 75. Now this is no other thing then Repentance it selfe: And therefore all the severall ends and scopes of preaching are conjoyned with this of repentance, and end in it.

Quest. 2. How manifold is Repentane? or how many sorts thereof are there?

Answ. Repentance is threefold, namely. First, fained, and counterfeit. Secondly, Temporary, which lasts not long. Thirdly, true, and unfained. Which Quest. 1. Which are the parts of true Repentance?

Answ. The parts of Repentance are these, viz.

First, an acknowledgement of misery by reason of sinne.

Secondly, the deprecation of pardon for the sinnes committed.

Thirdly the leaving and forsaking of all sinnes for the time to come.

Fourthly the circumcision of the heart. (Deut. 30. 16.) or a tender conscience which cannot endure the least touch of sinne.

Fiftly, the Baptisme of the Holy Ghost. And Sixtly, the washing, and quickning of Christ. 1 Cor. 6. 11. Galath. 1. 20. And therefore we should examine our selves by these, as by so many essentiall signes and infallible tokens of true Repentance, for every one who is truly converted, is brought to a sight of his sinnes, to a sense of his misery and danger through sinne, to an earnest desire, that his sinnes were blotted out, and pardoned, yea is baptised with the Holy Ghost and with fire, and washed with the blood of Christ, and water, and endued with such a soft heart and tender conscience, that hee feares to commit, yea hates all sinnes whatsoever.

Sect. 4. §. 4. They would have repented Iam pridem, long agoe.

The meaning of our Saviour here by long agoe, is in the beginning of preaching: as if he would say, If the word had been preached to Tyre, and Sidon they would have repented at the First;

Sect. 5. §. 5. In sackcloth and ashes.

Quest. 1. What use was there, or how manifold was the use of Ashes?

Answ. The use of Ashes was two-fold, namely,

First, Philosophicall, and this was two-fold, namely, either

I. Naturall, which was either. Ad abstergendum. Plin. qu. conviv. Or Ad corroborandum, Alex. ab Alex. Or

II. Morall, and so signifies either baseneſſe, or mortality. Iob. 30. 19. And hence both Iewes and Gentiles were wont to sprinkle themselves with ashes, and to wallow in them [d].

[d] Stuckius 144.

Secondly, Religious, and this was three-fold, namely.

I. Heathenish, for the Gentiles used Ashes in their Religious performances; or in holy things, that is.

First, the honourable amongst them used Ashes in their sacrifices, Ad lustrandum, Purgandum, & Deos placandum. Stuckius rit. gent. 144.

Secondly, they used to keep Ashes in Pots or Pitchers, which were either the ashes of their Children, or kindred, or of Noblemen, who were burnt to Ashes after they were dead, and thus reserved. Or

II. Leviticall, and thus the Apostle saith: The ashes of an Heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the puryfying of the flesh. Heb. 9. 13. Or

III. Spirituall, which is two-fold, to wit, either.

First, hypocriticall; as Esa. 58. 5. and 2 King. 6. 30. Or

Secondly, sincere, as Iob. 42. 6. Cilicium inventum ad corporis afflictionem, & mentis humiliationem. Reg. Basilij. Cap. 69. Now this sincere spirituall use of Repentance is two-fold, namely,

I. For the expression of sorrow and mourning. And

II. For the expression of repentance. But these two are one; for neither is repentance visible without mourning, nor mourning profitable without Repentance: and therefore true repentance must be outwardly expressed.

Observe hence, That true repentance ought to bee externall, as well as internall. Ionah 3. 5. &c. and 1 Samuel 7. 6. and 2 Sam. 12. 16. and Ioel 1. 13. and 2. 12. &c. Observ.

Quest. 2. Why must true repentance bee outwardly expressed?

Answ. 1. First, because the outward expressions and signes, doe expresse the affection of the heart.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is a good example and encouragement to our bretheren; that is, when others see our outward sorrow, and humiliation, it makes them both feare to fall into the like sinnes, and if they have fallen, learnes them so to humble themselves.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, because the outward expressions of sorrow do helpe our affections; and therefore they are conjoyned together. Hest. 4. 1. 3. 16. and Daniel 9. 3.

Quest. 3. How many signes of sorrow were there, or how many sorts of outward expressions of mourning?

Answ. The signes or expressions of sorrow were six, viz.

First, to humble the heads; and this was done three manner of wayes, namely, either,

I. Velando, by covering of it: as 2 Samuel 15. 30. Hest. 6. 12. Or

II. Deijciendo, by hanging of it downe, as Lament. 2. 10. Or

III. Radendo, by shaving of it. Esa. 22. 12. Ierem. 48. 37. Ezech. 7. 18. and 27. 31.

Secondly, Ashes, and this signe was three-fold, to wit,

I. Sometimes they sprinkled themselves with Ashes, and sate on the ground. Nehem. 9. 1. Lament. 2. 10. Ezech. 27. 30. And

II. Sometimes they sate in the Ashes. Lament. 2. 10. Luke 10. 13. And

III. Sometimes they wallowed themselves in the Ashes. Ezech. 27. 33. Ierem. 6. 26. and 25. 34. And hence Ashes is sometimes taken for mourning it selfe. Esa. 61. 3.

Thirdly, to goe bare-foot: as 2 Samuel 15. 30.

Fourthly, to change the apparell; and this was also three-fold; For

I. Sometimes they would put on no better attire then they ordinarily wore, which was a kind of expression of sorrow, as we see Exod. 33. 4. And.

II. Sometimes they rent the garments, they had on. Gen. 37. 34. And

III. Sometimes they put on sackecloth upon them, 1 Sam. 3. 21. and 1 King 21. 27. and 2 King 19. 1 and Ioel 1. 13.

Fiftly, to draw water, and to poure it forth 1 Samuel 7. 6.

Sixtly, to wound themselves; as Ierem. 48. 37. and 1 King. 18. 28. which practise is forbidden for the dead. Levitic. 19. 28. and 21 5. Deuter. 14. 1.

Quest. 4. How many things are required unto true Repentance?

Answ. 1. First, in generall there are these two things required, namely,

I. Fasting as Nehem. 9. 1. and 2 Chronic. 20. 3. Psalm. 69. 10. Ioel 1. 14. and 2. 12. Ionah 3. 5. 7.

II. Teares, Iob 16. 16. Psalm 69. 10 Ioel 2. 12. Ionah 3. 8.

Answ. 2. Secondly, more particularly three things are required, to wit,

I. The outward worke of fasting and Teares. And

II. The inward adjuncts; which are foure, viz.

First, compunction and sorrow of heart, Psalm 102. 9. and Ioel 2. 13.

Secondly, the hatred of sinne.

Thirdly, conversion unto God. Ierem. 3. 1. 12 Zach. 1. 3.

Fourthly confusion and shame of heart. Daniel 9. 7.

III. The daily practise and use of all these. Psalme 102. 9.

Vers. 23. 24. VERS. 23, 24. And thou Capernaum which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought downe to Hell; for if the mighty workes which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodome, it would have remained untill this day. But I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodome, in the day of judgement, then for thee.

Sect. 1. §. 1. If the mighty workes which have beene done in Capernaum, had beene done in Sodome.

Our Saviour doth not compare Capernaum with Tyre and Sidon; who for the present florished, and (it may be) for the time to come, were to be called and converted; but with Sodome, who for the hardnesse of heart, and maturity of sinne were cast into hell, there for ever to be tormented.

Quest. 1. Why doth our Saviour compare Capernaum to Sodom, and not to Sidon?

Answ. 1. First, because it was agreed upon, on all sides, that the Sodomites were most desperate, and deplorable sinners (by much, and farre worse then those of Tyre and Sidon.) And therefore the Capernaites may know, and learne hereby, how Christ doth reputeof them, who equals them, or rather makes them worse, then these most wicked Sodomites.

Secondly, because these Sodomites were long since condemned and punished, and without all hope of mercy; (for Ab inferno nulla redemptio:) And therefore if by chance these Capernaites should despise the last judgement, by presuming of mercy; yet this (or the like) judgement they might feare, and know that they should be made as miserable, or more miserable, then they, in as much as they enjoyed greater mercies and meanes, and despised them. Now from these two conjoyntly (viz. that they were for the present most grievous sinners, and were hereafter most grievously to be punished, for the contempt of the Gospel) will arise this Observation; namely; Answ. 2.

That the Contemners of the Gospel, are most grievous sinners, and shall most grievously be punished, Esay 30. 9. 10. 14. Ierem. 9. 12, 13. Proverb. 1. 24. 28. and 28. 9. Matth. 21. 43. and 2 Thes. 1. 8. and 2. King. 17. 19. &c. & 2 Chron. 36. 15. &c. Observ.

How doth it appeare, that the contemners of the word are great and grievous sinners, and shal be sharpely, and severely punished? Quest. 3.

It appeares by these particulars, viz.

First from the Author of the word, and Gospel, which is God and Christ, Deut. 18. 19. Act. 3. 23. Luke 10. 16. and 1 Thes. 4. 8.

Secondly, from the excellency of the word in it selfe, and in regard of its effects, Ier. 15. 16. Ezech. 3. 3. Revelat. 19. 15.

Thirdly, A signo, because it argues a most hard heart, to contemne the word, which is of that force, that it is called a sword; yea, fire, and a hammer. Reade Esa. 49. 2. Ephes. 6. 17. Hebr. 4. 12. Ierem 5. 14. and 23. 29. Now looke upon all these together, and see if he be not a great sinner, and worthy of great torments, who dare despise the word of the great King; yea, such a word as is sweeter then honey, and more precious then gold, and able to beget him, and nourish him unto salvation; yea, to anatomize his heart, and to lay it open before his eyes.

Why must we not, or may we not contemne the word of God, or Gospel of Christ? Quest. 3.

First, because wee shall give account thereof, and answer for it, before the Lord, when we shal not be able to answer one word of a thousand, Heb. 2. 3. and 11. 25. Answ. 1

Secondly, because it is so odious unto God, that he hath commanded his Ministers to shake off the dust from their feet, for a testimony against such, Luke 10. 10. Act. 18. 6. Answ. 2

Thirdly, because it is a sin, that the Lord hath threatned heavie to punish, Ierem, 11. 21. and 13. 10. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, because they are happy and blessed, who receive, reverence, and embrace it, Esa. 96. 5. Answ. 4.

Whence comes the destruction of Cities, and Nations? Quest. 4.

From hence, because the word is contemned and despised: For the Lord never calls off a people, neither pronounceth against a nation, Loammi, untill they reject him, and sleight his word. Answer.

What are the fruits of the contempt of the word? Quest. 5.

First

These foure, viz.

First, it blinds and hardens the heart, Iob 36.12.

Secondly, it leads into errours, 2 Thessal. 2.10.

Thirdly, it brings temporall judgement upon a Nation, Citie, or particular person; yea;

Fourthly, it casteth the contemner into everlasting fire. And therefore we had need be extraordinary fearefull to contemne the word.

Sect. 2. §. 2. It would have remained.

Observ. Our Saviour here directly teacheth us; that the reason why a kingdome flourisheth and continueth, is, because the word is rightly used unto repentance. Or, if a Citie, or Nation, desire to continue, and flourish, the only way thereunto is, to heare, and use the word of God. Reade Esay 3.10.11. and Psalme 37.

Quest. 1. How doth it appeare, that a Citie, and Common-wealth shall flourish, so long as they heare the word, for this end, that thereby they may be brought to repentance, and new obedience?

Answ. 1. First, it is cleare from the Lords owne promise, Esay 65.2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is evident from the end of preaching: For the appointed and ordained end of preaching, is, that by preaching wee might bee brought to repentance, and by repentance unto faith, and by faith unto salvation.

Quest. 2. How may a Citie, Nation, or Commonwealth, avoid and escape destruction?

Answ. The true way is to be converted by the preaching of the Word; as Niniveh was: Here observe.

First, it is not enough to heare the word, or to be present at the preaching thereof. Nor,

Secondly, to suffer the word of exhortation, and reprehension patiently, Heb. 13.22. For this they of Chorazin did, for any thing wee reade to the contrary. Nor,

Thirdly, to reverence the Preachers of the Word; for this Herod did, Marke 6.20. Nor,

Fourthly, to shew some certaine humiliation, by reason of the Comminations of the Word; for this Ahab did, 1 King. 21. But we must seriously repent, and turne unto the Lord, in new obedience, and true sanctification, as they did, Act. 2.37. Yea, Fiftly, neither is it sufficient, that this be done of a few, but of many, when the Common-wealth lieth at the stake; for although God spares often for a few, Gen. 18.25. &c. Yet hee will remember those who repent not in the day of vengeance, Exod. 32.34. Numb. 14.21.

Sixtly, neither is the endeavour of the inferiour, and vulgar sort sufficient, without the conduct of the Nobles, Peeres, and Princes of the Realme: and that,

I. In true humiliation of heart: And,

II. In an exemplary reverence and practice; for they are the Wethers and Leaders of the flocks: now noble Captaines never say, Ite, sed eamus, goe yee and fight, but come let us goe. And therefore in the time of a publike danger, both Prince and people, noble and ignoble, high and low, Pastor and flocke, must

First, assemble together to the house of God, to heare his word. And,

Secondly, the hearers must endure the Preacher to admonish and reprove; neither contemning him, nor his message, but reverencing both; the one as the message, and the other as the Messenger of the Lord of hoasts. Yea,

Thirdly, all must humble themselves, and tremble at the threatnings of God; for the beasts must quake, if the Lyon roare. And, Fourthly, those who are called Gods, must labour by their command, and humiliation, and godly practice, to move and excite others to unfained repentance; as that Patterne of Princes, the King of Niniveh did, Ionah 3.2,3.4. For God hath promised to be gracious to that nation, that thus seeketh him.

VERS. 25.26. At that time, Iesus answered and said, I thanke thee O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise, and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight. Verse 25, 26.

§. 1. Iesus answered. Sect. 1. Quest.

Why doth the Evangelist here say, Iesus answered, seeing no man asked him any question?

First, Saint Mathew was an Hebrew, and this phrase was usuall amongst the Hebrewes, in the beginning of a speech, Calvin, Beza. Answ. 1.

Secondly, it may bee, that the Apostles said something (which is not mentioned) to which our Saviour here replies, Beza. But, Answ. 2.

Thirdly, I rather thinke that it arose from this meditation. Answ. 3.

I. Christ sees and observes the successe of his preaching, how that it is received, and embraced, by men of an inferiour ranke.

II. Hee sees this to be the worke of God, to reveale his word and will to them.

III. He admires this decree of God, to blind the eyes of the wise, and to give knowledge, and understanding unto the simple.

IV. Hence (as though God were present, and saying unto him, Ego feci, I have done this) hee breakes forth, as it were in answer hereunto: Father I thanke thee, &c.

§. 2. I thanke thee. Sect. 2.

Observ. Our Saviour here by his joy and thankesgiving, would have us learne: that hee rejoyceth in the good successe of the Ministery. Reade Luke 12.49. Matth. 22.7. Marke 3.5. and there we shall see how desirous Christ is, that the Gospel should be propagated and received, and how angry he is when it is contemned.

Quest. 1. Why is Christ so desirous, that the Gospel should be published, and so delighted with the successefull enlargement, and preaching thereof?

Answ. 1. First, because it is his worke, the Ministers being but his Messengers, Embassadors, and servants, (2 Cor. 5.19.) hee making them fishers of men, and able Ministers: And therefore hee rejoyceth, when the worke of the Ministery goes well forward.

Answ. 2. Secondly, he is the Head of the Church, and 88 therefore rejoyceth in the successefull preaching of the word, because his body is edified thereby, Ephes. 4. 11. 12.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, by the powerfull preaching of the word, Sathan, the enemy of Gods children is overcome: and therefore Christ rejoyceth in the good successe of the Ministerie.

Answ. 4 Fourthly, Christ is delighted with the powerfull and profitable preaching of the Word; because God is glorified by the life and conversation, of those who are converted thereby, Matth. 5. 16. and 1 Pet. 2. 12.

Quest. 2. What is required of us, in regard of the word, and the preaching thereof?

Answ. That we should promote it as much, as in us lies. Ministers, Magistrates, and people should all labour, and strive to edifie, and build up the kingdome of Christ; and that not only by a desire, or endeauour,

First, that the word may be preached. Or,

Secondly, that it may be heard. But,

Thirdly, that the seed of the Word may bee received. And,

Fourthly, that it may grow up, and increase, and become truely fruittull.

Quest. 3. Whether should a Minister be grieved, when hee seeth his Ministery unprofitable amongst a people, and that his Ministerie is like to prove the savour of death unto them?

Answ. Without doubt he should be grieved: for Ieremie wished, that his head were a fountain of teares (Ier. 9. 1.) that hee might weepe for that people: And Christ himselfe wept over Ierusalem, Mat. 23. 37.

Object. Against this, this place will bee objected, Christ himselfe gave thankes to God his Father, that hee had hid these things from the wise of the world, and revealed them unto babes.

Answ. Christ is considered two wayes; namely,

First, as he was the Minister of Circumcision. And,

Secondly, as he was Mediator of the new Covenant. Now as hee was the Minister of Circumcision, and sent to teach the Iewes, no doubt it was a great griefe to him, when hee saw them so hard hearted, that they would not beleeve. But againe, if wee consider him as Mediator, looking up to Gods wisedome, and decree, he giveth God praise for passing by some, and chusing others; Paul looking to his charge, wished that the Iewes might be saved; but (when in a second consideration) hee looketh up to Gods will, and seeth that his preaching was to make fat the hearts of that people, as was the preaching of Esay, then he resteth in this, and rejoyceth that God is glorified. Although the Spheares have their owne particular motions, yet they all follow the motion of the first mover: So, although Christ and Paul be sorry at first, for the hardnesse of the Iewes hearts, yet they must follow the motion of the first mover, God himselfe, and rejoyce when he is glorified.

Quest. 4. From the Text it may be demanded, who can come unto the knowledge of this saving truth, which Christ here saith is concealed from the wise, and revealed to babes?

Although men are by the Gospel called to the knowledge of the truth, yet onely the Elect doe attaine unto the same: and that because they are effectually called by the Holy Ghost. When I say that all men are called, I meane by an outward calling, which is especially by the publike preaching of the Gospel; for by this no man is excluded from the knowledge of the truth, but are rather, both generally all, and severally each singular person, invited thereunto: But by that inward calling, which is by the Holy Ghost, and therefore effectuall, I say that only the Elect are called, according to the Apostles golden chaine, Rom. 8. 29. Whom he hath predestinated, them (even them alone) hee called (by an effectuall calling:) And this is that which our Saviour here saith, I thanke thee Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise (that is, of this world) and revealed them to babes; that is, onely the Elect which are contemptible in the sight of the world. See to this purpose, verse 11. and 13. of this Chapter, and Iohn 12. 38. and 17. 6. and 1 Corinth. 4. 3. and 2 Timoth. 3 7. Only therefore the Elect come to the saving knowledge of the truth; who for that cause are said to bee of the truth, and to heare the voice of Christ; and onely the Church is called the Pillar, and foundation of the truth; for they onely retaine the truth, and of them only doth the Church consist, and so only must know the truth. Hill. lib. 3. pag. 237. of the true knowledge of God.

§. 3. Oh Father! Sect. 3.

Why doth our Saviour turne his speech unto God? Quest. 1.

First, because his speech is a thankesgiving, and thankes are to be given unto God. Answ. 1.

Secondly Christ directs his speech unto his Father, to shew that he is the directer of the world, and Church: Arcana Dei judicia sustinet, ut in eorum admirationem alios trahat. Calvin. s. Christ admires the secret judgements of God, that hee may draw others to the like admiration. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, our Saviour converts his speech unto his Father, that hee may excuse the meannesse, and low condition of his servants; and that both, Answ. 3.

I. In regard of the Pharisees, and world, who despised them for their low estate: And also,

II. In regard of themselves, who were discouraged by this contempt: For hereby hee would have them both to know, that this proceeded of, and from the Lord; as followes in the next verse; Even so Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight.

Why doth Christ call God Father? Quest. 2.

That he may shew how great reason hee hath to congratulate, or rejoyce together with God, when he is conjoyned in so neere, and strict a relation unto him; as if hee would say, I rejoyce that God is thus glorified, for he is my Father. Hence then observe. Answer.

That none can truely rejoyce in God, except he be joyned unto him by a new Covenant of filiation, Rom. 8. 17. Gal. 4. 7. and 1 Iohn 1. 3. and 1 Corinth. 1. 9. Hos. 1. 10. Rom. 5 2. and 1 Pet. 1. 8. And examples hereof wee have, Rom. 8. 15. Gal. 4. 6. and 1 Iohn 3. 1. Observ.

How

How doth the truth, & evidence hereof appear?

It appeares by these three particulars, viz.

First, the promises are not given by name to Peter, Iohn, or Andrew: but only to those, who are received into the fellowship of sonnes, and called the sonnes of promise, Rom. 9. 8. Galat. 4. 28.

Secondly, God professeth himselfe to be an enemy to the enemies of his children; and therefore he is not the helper of all, but only of his, (Psalm. 8. 13. &c.) And consequently, none can rejoyce in him, but those only who are assured, that by a new Covenant they are made his.

Thirdly, naturally we hate the Lord, and his Law; the Commandements of God, being as bonds and chaines unto us, which restraine us from doing that which wee greedily desire: And therefore wee desire to cast off this bond and yoke; and had rather the Lord would suffer us to walke in our owne wayes, though the end thereof be death, then constraine us to walke in the pathes of this Commandements, which leade unto life: Wherefore untill by a new Covenant, we be united unto the Lord, we cannot rejoyce in him, or his service.

Quest. 4. How may we bee made the children of God, that so we may rejoyce in him?

Answ. 1. First, Pacem operando, by making peace, and appeasing jarres, and composing strife betwixt man and man, brother and brother. Blessed are the Peace-makers, for they shall be called the children of God, Mat. 5. 9.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Benedicendo, by blessing those that curse us, &c. Love your enemies, blesse them that curse you, doe good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully hate you, and persecute you: That you may be the children of your Father, which is in heaven, Mat. 5. 45. 46.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Orando, by praying unto God, to give us that evidence and testimony of his Spirit, that we may be enabled to call him Father, Rom 8. 15.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Patiendo, by suffering and enduring patiently, whatsoever afflictions the Lord layes upon us, Heb. 12. 8.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, Verbum audiendo, by hearing and obeying the word of God, Iohn 17. 13.

Answ. 6 Sixtly, but our filiation principally consists in two things: namely,

I. Credendo, in faith in Christ, Iohn 1. 12. Gal. 3. 26. And,

II. Obediendo, in obedience unto God: for those who would approve themselves to be the sonnes of God, must put off the workes of darknesse, and the old man, and putting on the new man, walke as becomes the children of light, Ephes. 5. 8. and 1 Thess. 5. 5. And therefore if we desire to be made the children of God, we must,

I. Be Peace-makers, and Lovers.

II. Wee must love our enemies, and do good unto those, who doe evill unto us.

III. We must pray daily unto God, to sealeou adoption in us, by the evidence of his Spirit.

IV. We must patiently undergoe whatsoever the Lord layes upon us.

V. VVe must love, reverence, and prize the preaching of his word.

VI. Wee must labour to apprehend, and apply Christ unto our selves, by a lively faith. And, 89

VII. Wee must devote our selves wholly unto the service of God, in a sincere, and sanctified obedience.

Why doth Christ ascribe that unto God which hee did himselfe? Quest. 3.

First, negatively, not to deprive himselfe of all power (Chrys.) for he saith afterwards, All power is given unto me of my Father. But, Answ. 1.

Secondly, affirmatively, to shew that his Father was not moved by the importunity of others, but that of his owne free grace and goodnesse, he enlightned those who were of small account in the world, and revealed these saving truths unto them, Chrysost. Answ. 2.

§. 4. Because thou hast hid these things. Sect. 4.

What is meant here by hiding, or how doth God hide, or blind the eyes? Quest. 1.

First, God is said sometimes to blind the eyes, and harden the heart; as Exod. 4, 21. and 7. 3. and 9. 12. and 10. 1. and 14. 4. and Esa. 44. 18. But Answ. 1

Secondly, this is not so to be understood, as though, the Lord did shut up open eares, and make blind seeing eyes, or change a mollified heart into a hard one. Nor Answ. 2.

Thirdly, onely by permitting us to harden our selves; But Answ. 3.

Fourthly, by detaining of his grace from us, whereby we should be softned, or by denying to give that eye-salve unto us, without which wee cannot see. Revelat. 3. 18. Answ. 4.

From whence wee may note, that the Lord blinds and hardens wicked men, not by changing them from better to worse, but because he changeth them not from worse to better, that is, hee doth not harden, by infusing or inferring any wicked quality into them, which before was not in them; but because he doth not give better qualities unto them, then by nature they have in them. Reade. 1 Sam. 20. 2. and 2 King. 4. 27. Gen. 18. 17. For they were evill before, yea altogether evill. Genes. 6. 5. and 8. 21. And therefore must not blame the Lord for their obduration or destruction (because he made them no worse then they were, but onely made them no better then they were, which he was not bound to doe) but lay the fault onely upon themselves. Observ. 2.

How can the Lord blind some, and not others, seeing he is equall to all, and hath professed himselfe to be no respecter of persons? Quest. 2.

God doth not respect outward things, as honour, or riches, or beauty, or comelinesse of person; he doth not preferre Eliab before David, nor Esau before Iacob. But he looks upon inward things as piety, iniquity, pride, and the like: and therfore the cause of Gods blinding some will appear by the examination of the persons blinded. For who were blinded? the Wise. Who were these wise-men who were blinded? Pharisees; who Answ.

First, sate in Moses chayre. Matth. 23. and were Doctours of the Law, and yet,

Secondly, could not discern of Christ, but contemne and despise him. Iohn 7. 47. Luk. 16. 14. and 90 laugh at him, yea persecute him. Iohn. 8.37. and 3.32. And slander him, calling him a Samaritane, and Beelzebub: And therfore because they despise the salvation of the Lord sent unto them, and offered unto them in the Messias; God hides himselfe from them.

Obsrv. 2. From whence we may learne, that God for pride and hardnesse of heart takes away from men the saving light of his word, and of the knowledge of God, leaving them in palpable blindnesse. Reade Esa. 6.10. Iohn 12.40. Rom. 11. 18. This is but that lex Talionis, which God hath promised to observe. Proverb. 1. 24. &c. Because

First, I have called. And	Therefore	Yee shall call. But I will not heare. But Laugh at your destruction.
Secondly, yee have not heard But
Thirdly, despised, and derided my message.

The Lord leaves none but those who first left him; hee hardens none but those who are already hardened; he despiseth none, but onely despisers: as is plaine from 1 Sam 2.30 Esa. 66.4.

Quest. 3 How doth the Lord hide himselfe from these?

Answer Two manner of waies, viz.

First, detinendo by keeping back, or taking away the word, and by letting out the vineyard to other husbandmen. Reade Amos 8. 12. Acts 13.46. and 19.9. Matth. 21.41. The word is the fire which melts, the dew which mollifies, and the hammer which breakes the hard heart: And therefore needs must the heart grow hard, when the word is taken away.

Secondly, Non benedicendo; by not blessing the word: the word without the Spirit is but a dead Letter; and therefore when the Lord doth not speake to the heart, as well as the word to the eare, no wonder if the heart remaine hard and obdurate: for if the word preached bee not mixed with faith (which is simply, and only wrought by God) in the hearers, it is heard and Preached in vaine. Heb. 4.2. and 1 Cor. 3.7.

Quest. 4. Why is the Gospell and word preached hid from so many of the hearers thereof?

Answ. 1. First, because Sathan stops the eares, and shuts the eyes, and hardens the heart of many.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because many despise and contemne the word. And Answ. 3. Thirdly, because God gives them over to a reprobate sense. Romans 1.24,26,28.

Quest. 5. How is the word contemned and despised?

Answ. The word is despised by many, many waies viz.

First, some despise the word for the meannesse, and poverty of the Ministers: and thus did the Pharisees. Iohn 7.47. yea because this is every where usuall, our Saviour therefore doth comfort his servants with this; that the contempt of them reflects upon himselfe, & those who despise them, despise him, and as contemners of the Lord shall certainly perish. Luke 10.16.

Secondly, some deride, and scoffe at the word. 2 Chronic. 30. 10. and 36. 16. Acts 13. 41.

Thirdly, some hinder the Preaching of the word. Amos 2. 12.

Fourthly, some have no spare time or leasure to heare the word. Luk 14. 18.

Fiftly, some heare the word, as a pastime, or a jesting matter. Ezeck. 33.32. And not (as they ought) as a meanes to worke in them godly sorrow, Eccles. 7.4.

Sixtly, some will not be reproved: salt bites, and therefore they will not be rubbed with salt reproofs. Amos 7.12. & 1 King 13.4

Seventhly, some heare the word, but absolutely and desolutely, refuse to obey it. Jerem. 44.16 and 32.33.

Eightly, some would obey the Gospell, but they procrastinate it, and put it off from day to day, as Nehem. 9.29. 30 and 2 King 17 14. Now all these are contemners before God, and, as such, shall bee punished by him.

What is the condition of those who are blinded and obdurate? Quest. 6.

Miserable, and wretched; For Answer.

First, the time will come when they shall give account unto God, for all the time misspent, for all the meanes of grace misused, and for every sermon they heard in vaine.

Secondly, such are justly deprived of the knowledge of Christ, and made strangers unto him. Ephes 4.18.

Thirdly, such are deprived of God the Father; for no man knowes the Father, but the Son, and hee to whomsoever the Sonne will reveale him, verse 27.

Fourthly, such are cut off from all hope of salvation. Iohn 3.17. yea

Fiftly, they heape up unto themselues wrath against the day of wrath, for their contumely and contempt against the Spirit of God. Rom. 2, 5. And therefore without doubt such are truely, and deplorably miserable.

What are the causes of this obduration, and hardnesse of heart? Quest. 7.

First, a selfe-conceit of selfe-wisedome and goodnesse. He who is perswaded that he is wise enough, learned enough, and good enough, hardens his heart against all good Lessons, whether of admonition, instruction, or reproofe. And Answ. 1.

Secondly, a love of sinne. He who is captivated, and enthralled in the chaines of sinne, and would not be awakened, would not be untied, would not be enlarged, but desires so to continue, hardens his heart against all meanes of deliverance. And Answ. 2.

Thirdly, a Lethargie of insensibility; for hee that is not sensible of his sinne, like the mad man sets himselfe against all remedies. Answ. 3.

What are the remedies against hardnesse of heart? Quest. 8.

First,

Answ. 1. First, we must wash our soules with the teares of Repentance for our sinnes.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must meditate daily of our small time, and great danger; Our lives at the longest are but short, and our danger is infinite, if wee should be prevented by death, from preventing the punishments by repentance which we have justly deserued.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, pray we daily unto the Lord to take from us our hearts of stone, and to give us hearts of flesh; mollified, and softned hearts.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, let the word of God have his perfect work in us: and let us nourish all the sparkes thereof with the blasts of the Spirit, and frequent meditation.

Sect. 4. §. 4. From the wise and prudent,

Quest. 1. How is Wisedome and Prudence distinguished?

Answ. 1. First, some say they are distinguished in objects, because Sapientia wisedome consists in Sciendo in knowing, but Prudentia, prudence consists in Vtendo, applicando, in using, and applying that which we know unto the good either of our soules or bodies: And thus wisedome respects the speculative part, and prudence the practica l

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say they differ In modo acquirendi: because Wisedome is infused, but Prudence is acquired: Wisedome is freely given by God, but Prudence is procured and obtained by industry, paines, experience and observation.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some in a manner make them both one; saying, that Prudence is in the inquiring after truth; but wisdome in the acquiring of truth a Prosp. de vitâ contemp. Cap 29. & Cavis. 592. Hæ duæ virtutes (veritatem prudenter quærere, & sapienter invenire) ita sibi implicatæ sunt, & unitæ, ut una sine altera esse non possit[a]. These two vertues (prudently to seeke after truth, and wisely to find it out) are so involved one in another, and so close knit one unto another, that the one cannot bee without the other.

Quest. 2. How is Sapientia Wisedome, here held, accounted, or esteemed as an evill thing? doth not the wise man say, that the wise man feares, and departs from evill? (Proverb. 14. 16.) And blessed is he that finds wisedome (Proverb. 3. 13) because she is better then rich Jewels. Prov. 8. 11 &c. Eccles. 2. 13. and Iob. 28 28. Proverb. 2. 3. &c.

Answ. 1. First, the scope of our Saviour here is to shew, that the cause of election is not our wisedome, or Prudence, but the good will, and gracious pleasure of our God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, there is a double wisedome, namely,

I. Divine: this is praised by Solomon, and St. Iames. 3. 17. Flumen ex Eden in partes quatuor divisum, significat quatuor virtutes: prudentia contemplationem veritatis. August. de grat. cont. Manich. 2. 10. Est fons vitæ, fons gratiæ spiritualis, fons virtutum cæterarum ad vitam æternam. Ambros. de parad. Cap. 3. Wisedome is the fountaine of life, of spirituall grace, yea of all vertues necessary unto salvation: And therefore this wisedome our Saviour doth not account as evill.

II. Humane and carnall; or the wisedome of the flesh, now this is condemned, and doth not commend us unto God.

But it may be objected, that humane wisedome, and prudence is commanded, and commended: Be wise (saith our Saviour) as Serpents, Mat. 10. 16. Yea, Solon, Lycurgus, Thales, Socrates, and divers others, are highly extolled for their wisedome. Plutarch saith of Fabius, and Marcellus, that they were gladius & clypeus reipublicæ: so may we say, that wisedome is both the sword, and buckler of the Common-wealth. Besides, wise men have spoken many things of God, and that well; as Hermes, the Sybils, Plato, Seneca, and divers others: yea, even humane wisedome was given by God unto Solomon, as a great blessing. And therefore how can it be evill? 91 Obiect.

Answ. There are divers sorts of wisedome, and prudence: to wit,

First, naturall; and this sort of wisedome Solomon exceeded in.

Secondly, Philosophicall; and this is double; namely, either

I. Morall, teaching vertues; and in this wisedome, Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle were famous. Proposition 1.

Or,

II. Politicall, which is two-fold, viz. either, Proposition 2.

First, that which consists in fayning, counterfeiting, dissembling, and supplanting. Or,

Secondly, sincere, which consists in governing, preserving, and the like.

Here then these two Positions, as undoubted truthes, I lay downe.

I. Craftie, and deceitfull wisedome, is odious, and abominable unto God.

II. All humane wisedome is unable, and too too weake, to acquire salvation.

From this second Proposition, I will draw my first Observation: namely, Observ. 1. That no humane wisedome can bring us to the knowledge of God, or Christ, or the Gospel. Read Rom. 1. 22. and 8 6. 7. & 1 Corinth. 1. 20. &c.

Quest. 3. Why is all humane wisedome insufficient, to bring us unto the knowledge of God, or unto salvation?

Answ. 1. First, because for the learning of Christ, there is no need of humane wisedome, but of divine faith. Hee that desires to come by Christ unto glory, must labour for faith, not humane wisedome; for the simple ones of the world may be saved; and therefore worldly wisedome is not necessary, but without faith none can bee saved; and therefore that is simply necessary.

Answ. 2. Secondly, humane wisedome onely understands, perceives, and takes up humane things, and not divine, (1 Corinth. 2. 14.) for flesh and blood cannot reveale spirituall things unto us, Matth. 16, 17. But the knowledge of God and Christ is true wisedome, Iohn 17. 3. And therefore carnall wisedome cannot bring us to the knowledge of God, or Christ, or the Gospel. The Philosophers understood something of the creation of the world, and of the immortality of the soule, and of the dignity and excellency of the minds; but they were wholly ignorant of the fall of Adam, and of the sacrifice of Christ, and the like Theologicall truthes; Wherefore unto the knowledge of Divinity more then humane wisedome is requisite.

Third-

Thirdly, humane wisedome makes men proud, and puffes them up, 1 Tim. 3. 6. But those who Answ. 3. would be saved, must be humble, and learne to deny themselves, Mat. 16. 24. And therefore humane wisedome, is so farre from bringing us unto heaven, that it is a meanes to debarre, and keepe us from thence; as followes by and by.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, humane wisedome makes men more undocible of spirituall things; those who are great Schollers in humane learning, are ashamed to be taught divine lessons, of those who are inferiour unto them in knowledge; and therefore in this particular, as well as in the former, this carnall wisedome doth us more hurt then good, and doth rather hinder, then further us unto salvation.

Quest. 4. What doth our Saviour intimate, or aime at in these words: Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent?

Answ. 1. First, our Saviour declares here who are called, and who are rejected: Et hic simpliciter accipitur pro tali statu, non pro vitio ponit, Calvin. ſ. And by wise and prudent, are meant simply such, without any relation to the maliciousnesse, or obliquity of humane wisedome. And therefore worldly wise men should not flatter themselves; for all their knowledge and wit, is too weake to bring them to heaven. Here observe two things, viz.

I. All wise men are not rejected: the Apostle saith, Not many wise are called, 1 Cor. 1. 26. by which he would meane, that the sentence is not generall, which our Saviour here pronounceth, that the knowledge of Christ is hid from the wise: but ὡς τὸ πολὺ, for the most part; or that it is not revealed to many wise men. But yet,

II. All wise men are detained, and kept back from this knowledge, so long as they trust in their wisedome: And therefore here our Saviour principally speakes unto the Pharisees, who trusted in their learning and knowledge.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our Saviour here teacheth us, what we should be, if wee would be elected and called: that is, we must not be high minded, or puffed up with knowledge, or smell with a conceit of our owne wit, or wisedome; but wee must bee humble like children, Psalme 131. 1. 2.

Observ. 2. Our Saviour in saying, that God hath hid these things from the wise, would teach us,

That God hides the knowledge of the Gospel from those, who swell great with humane wisedome, [b].

[b] 1 Cor. 1. 20. &c.

Quest. 5. How can God justly hide, or blind the eyes? is hee the Author of sinne and evill? Indeed many phrases we have in Scriptures, that sounds this way, but can they truely, or justly have place in God. He is said:

First, to give some over to a reprobate sense, Rom. 1. 28. And,

Secondly, it is said, that he hardens the heart, Rom. 9. 18. And,

Thirdly, that he prepares men for destruction, Rom. 9. 22. And,

Fourthly, that he layes a stumbling stone, and rocke of offence before some, Rom. 11. 9. And,

Fiftly, it is said sometimes that hee blinds, and gives the Spirit of slumber unto men, Romans, 11. 8.

God is said to doe these things two manner of wayes; namely,

Answ. First, Passivè, Passively, by permitting them, and by not withstanding, gain-saying, and contradicting of them. The Lord hath said, that his Spirit shall not alwayes strive with man, Gen. 6. 3. And therefore he endures, or suffer the vessels of wrath, Rom. 9. 22.

Secondly, Activè, Actively; for God is nevermeerly passive, but a pure agent (Thom.) Now the Lord is active in reprobates.

Obdurando, excecando, by hardning their hearts, and blinding their eyes; and this may bee done one of these foure wayes: namely; either,

First, by working hardnesse in their hearts, or by making their hearts hard immediately: and that either,

I. By infusing malice, or a greater measure of wickednesse in the heart: Or,

II. By compelling the partie to the committing of some wicked thing. These two God neither hath done, nor will doe, for hee tempts no man, Iames 1. 14. neither is hee the Author of evill. Or,

Secondly, by sending an evill spirit (as a judgement and scourge) unto an evil man, as the Lord did unto Saul, 1 Sam. 16. 14. Or,

Thirdly, by permitting Sathan to tempt, 1 King. 22. 22. Offendiculo ponitur, non ponit: God suffers stumbling stones to bee laid in mens wayes, but himselfe layes none. Or,

Fourthly, by withdrawing, or withholding his grace, and gracious aid, and assistance. As Rom. 1. 24. He further hardens those who were obdurate before, as Exod. 3. 19. Hee doth not send a Lethargy unto men, but hee doth not beale it, and therefore sinne prevailes. Now this last is most proper & peculiar to our present purpose, and institution.

Quest. 6. How can carnall, or humane wisedome (which is not simply vicious, or evill) hinder a man from the knowledge of God, and Christ, and the Gospel?

Answ. 1. First, wee need not enquire and seeke, what it is that hinders us from the knowledge of God, (for the corruption of nature, which is both in fooles and wise men doth this) but rather what it is, that moves God to passe by, and refuse to redeeme some from the common destruction, that all men are subject unto by the fall of Adam; and that is his owne glory (Proverbes 16. 4.) Now those whom the Lord denies to helpe or succour by his grace, cannot rescue, or aid themselves at all, by any humane wisedome or knowledge: And this humane wisedome may be said to hinder us from divine knowledge, and eternall glory; because it cannot helpe, further, succour, or enable us to attaine thereunto. And this Calvin thinkes to be the true meaning of the point, and question in hand; that it hinders, because it conduceth nothing unto this spirituall knowledge. But it is something more.

Answ. 2. Secondly, certainely naturall wisedome it selfe, hinders us from the knowledge of God, and and salvation, or that knowledge of God which is salvation, Ioh 17 3. Or we must acknowledge that there is something in the wisedome of the flesh, which hinders from faith: For there are two things in him that learnes; to wit,

I. A simplicity of beleeving: And this is necessary in him that would learne, according to that of Aristotle, δεῖ μανθάνοντα πιστεύειν. Hee must beleeve what his Master teacheth; and with Pythagoras his Schollers, αὐτὸς ἔφα, our Master saith so, must be of great reckoning and weight with him. A Scholler can never learne well, who calleth the truth of that in question, which is taught, or rather, who will not beleeve that which is taught. And herein humane wisedome hinders men from faith; for it will beleeve no more in religion, then is plaine and demonstrative by reason: There is nothing true in divinity, which is either false in reason, or contrary to reason: but yet there are many things in Religion, which are above reasons reach, and therefore are to be beleeved by faith, because they cannot be apprehended, or comprehended, much lesse demonstrated by reason. Now (I say) the naturall wise man will beleeve no more, then he can take up by naturall reason, although it bee taught and confirmed, ἐν τῷ ὅτι, from the word of God. And thus humane wisedome hinders us from beleeving all those saving truths, which the shallow shell of mans braine is not able to containe, or comprehend.

II. In Schollers, who desire to be great and good Schollers, there is a certaine curiosity of disputing, and propounding doubts and queres; now this is commendable in humane learning, but not in divine; although it bee too frequent with those, who are somewhat in humane learning and wisedome: And unto such this is a great impediment, because worldly, or humane wise men despise the simplicity of the Gospel: That great learned man; yea, the Philosopher (Aristotle) rejected the Pentateuch, because Moses did only positively lay downe things, and not demonstrate them from the principles of Philosophy. Hence then wee may observe a third thing, viz.

Observ.3. That the Wisedome of the flesh is an enemy to regeneration, Rom. 8. 6, 7. and 1 Cor. 1. 26. and 2. 3. 18.

Quest. Is all wisedome (as an impediment of faith, and an enemy to a new birth) condemned?

Answ. No, for wisedome is manifold.

First, some say, that there is a five-fold wisedome; namely, Naturall, Morall, Politicall, Diabolicall, and Spirituall.

Secondly, some say, that there is a double Wisedome; to wit,

I. Honest, and harmelesse, And,

II. Crafty, and fraudulent; which (as was said before) consists in dissimulation, and counterfeiting. But this cannot be called Wisedome, being neither Pharisaicall, nor Philosophicall Wisedome.

Thirdly, Wisedome indeed is two-fold, viz.

I. Spirituall, and divine which comes from God above. And

II. Carnall, and humane, or Naturall; which consists partly in a naturall towardlinesse, & ripenesse of wit, and partly in an artificiall acquisition by study, and knowledge.

Quest. How doth this naturall and spirituall wisedome differ, because they seeme indeed both to bee good?

Answ. They differ in the very foundations; For

First, naturall wisedome is built upon reason, and judgement, and our owne understanding.

Secondly, spirituall wisedome is founded upon the will, and word of God. And therefore,

I. Spirituall wisedome is commanded and commended. Deuter. 4. 6. Acts 6. 3. and 1 Corinth. 2. 6. and 12. 18. and Ephes. 1 8. 17. And

II. Worldly wisedome is sometimes permitted, and sometimes praised: Solomon was wise naturally, and Ioseph politickely, and both commendably, 1 King 2. 6. Here observe, that this naturall or worldly wisedome is twofold, to wit, lawfull, and unlawfull, and these two differ not, Ré or Naturâ, indeed, or in the very essence and nature of them, but onely Ratione in subjection unto the will of God: And therefore, if

First, it be subject to the will of God, as a handmaid thereunto, it is good. But c 2 Cor. 10. 5. Secondly, if it will not be subject to the will and word of God, then it is evill.

And therefore humane wisedome is a let unto faith, and a hinderer of regeneration, because it is very difficultly subjected to the will and word of the Lord, For

I. It is not subject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. Rom. 8. 7. And

II. It contemnes, and despises Religion; and that either.

First, because it is but foolishnesse, 1 Cor. 1. 18 21. and 2. 14. Or

Secondly, because it is an abject thing, or a thing below him, and too base for him to stoope unto, because hee is wiser then the simple Gospell.

§. 6. And revealed them. Sect.6.

Observ. We may observe here that our Saviour doth not say, thou hast preached them, but thou hast revealed them: as Galath. 1. 12. and 2. 2. To teach us that it is the Lord, who reveales himselfe fully to his Children.

Quest. How doth it appeare, that the Lord himselfe onely reveales himselfe fully to the righteous?

Answ. It appeares

First, from the texts of Scripture. 1 Cor. 2. 10. and 2 Corinth. 4 6. Ephes. 1. 17.

Secondly, because the knowledge of God is life everlasting. Iohn 17. 3. And therefore wee cannot acquire it of our selues, or by our owne strength.

Thirdly, because the word preached penetrates onely the Eares, and it is the Holy Spirit, who workes upon the heart (Heb. 4. 12) and makes the word profitable. 1 Cor. 3. 7.

Fourthly, the word is equally and alike preach-preached both to the good and bad, both to the wicked and righteous: and the difference is onely within in the Spirit, because without that the word is but a dead-Letter. And therefore it is not man but God, who doth reveale spirituall and supernall wisedome, and knowledge unto us, yea plainely thus, viz.

Fiftly, the Spirit is plainely called a Seedsman or Sower. Matth. 13. And therefore it is evident that all grace and divine knowledge comes from the Lord.

Quest. 2. How many sorts or kinds of Revelations are there?

Answ. There are three sorts, viz.

First, Delusive, or deceitfull; and these come from Sathan, 2 Corinth. 11. 13. and therefore we must not beleeve every Spirit, nor every Revelation, but try them, 1 Ioh. 4. 1. and 2 Thessal. 2. 11.

Secondly, miraculous, and extraordinary Now these I. Were usuall under the Law to the Prophets, and Seers. And

II. For a while were retained, or continued to the Apostles, for the planting of Churches: as we see, from 2 Cor. 12. 4. &c. Ephes. 3. 3. But

III. Ordinarily, they are abolished, and out of date. Heb. 1, 1.

Thirdly, Ordinary; and these belong unto the Children and sonnes of God; and may be called the Revelation of the Gospell. Now this Ordinary revelation is the operation of the holy Spirit in the heart, revealing unto the heart the certainty & assurance of Christ, First offered in the Gospell.

Quest. 3. How many things are there observable in this Revelation?

Answ. Three, to wit,

First, the workeman, which is the blessed Spirit, and promised Comforter Iohn 14. and 1 Corinth. 2. 10. and Ephes. 3. 5. And

Secondly, the meanes whereby he works, which is the word. 1 Peter 1. 5. 13. And Thirdly, the Revelation it selfe, and that is a particular worke, whereby our hearts are confirmed in a full assurance of faith. Rom. 1 17. Ephes. 3. 13. Heb. 10. 22. and 1 Peter 1. 5.

Quest. 4. How must wee so use the word, that we may hope for the operation of the Spirit thereby?

Answer The word teacheth perfectly, both what is true in Doctrine, and also what is sure and certaine in, and unto faith: but wee cannot understand these things, except wee be taught by the holy Ghost, both what is true in the understanding, and what is certaine, and sure in faith, and the promises of the word. And therefore if we desire so to heare and reade the word of God, that thereby the holy Spirit may teach us within in our hearts; then these three things are required of us: namely,

First, we must adhere and cleave closely and diligently to the word of God, as to our Schoole-Master remembring that it is a seed to beget us, and milke to feed us, and a candle to enlighten us, and a sword to defend us, and joy to cheere us, and a companion to associate us, and life eternall to crowne, and rejoyce us.

Secondly, we must hope for and expect, the blessing of God in the hearing of the word, according to his promise: that is, we prizing, valuing, and loving of the word of God, and frequenting the Preaching and reading thereof, for this end that we might be taught thereby; wee may then rest confidently assured, that the Lord will blesse his word unto us, because hee is faithfull in his promises, and the word is powerfull in its operation. Heb. 4. 12.

Thirdly, to this esteeme of the word, and hope of the Spirit wee must joyne prayer; that is, beg at the hands of God this blessing, that he would come unto our hearts by his Spirit, and teach us. Psalm. 143. 10. And then wee may comfortably rest assured, that he who is most faithfull in all his promises, and whose eares are alwaies open to the prayers of his Children, will in his good time grant our requests, & with his Spirit fill our hearts with joy unspeakeable, and glorious. Rom. 5. 1. and 14. 17. and 1 Peter 1. 8. Philip. 4. 7.

§. 7. Unto Babes. Sect. 7.

How, or in what sense are they called Babes? Quest.

First, they are not Babes in understanding (Rom. 16.) Or spirituall knowledge. But Answ. 1.

Secondly, in humility; and that either by an acknowledgement of their folly, or weakenesse And Answ. 2.

Thirdly, in a dependance upon God their Father, to feed them, and nourish them by his word. Answ. 3.

§. 8. Even so Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight. Sect. 8.

We see here how our blessed Saviour (whose action is our instruction) neither gives, nor seekes, for any further cause of Gods actions, then his owne good pleasure; that we might from him learne to rest therein; and in all the decrees of the Lord, to make that our Non ultra, or Herculean Pillar, beyond which we dare not, nor desire to goe. For if it be demanded.

Why God doth not bestow upon some those corporall or spirituall, those terrestriall, or celestiall graces, which hee doth bestow upon some others? Quest. 1.

Wee answer that the true and principall cause is the good pleasure of his heavenly will. And therefore the Pelagians are confuted, who doe teach, that the will of God was moved to elect some, and to reject others, because he foresaw the good workes of them, and the bad workes of these, flat against the Apostle, who saith of Iacob and Esau, that before they were borne, when as yet they had done neither good nor evill, not of workes &c. Rom. 9. 11. And to confirme this Proposition Christ saith that his Father hid the Gospell from the wise, and revealed it to Babes? Why? because it was his good pleasure. Where we see, that his pleasure is the cause that hee did not reveale, Answ.

a Hil. the know: of the true God. pag. 287.

reveale, as well as that hee did. And therefore from hence we may learne. That we must not enquire of God a reason of his actions, but rest in his will. Rom. 9. 20. Thus did good old Eli 1 Samuel 2. 18. and holy Iob 1. 21, 22. And the blessed Apostles of Christ. Acts 2. 23. and 3. 18. and 4. 28. and 13. 27.

Quest. 2. Why may we, or must not we demand a reason of Gods actions?

Answ. 1. First, because God is a debter to no man: Who hath given first unto him? Rom. 11. 35. And therefore he saith in the person of that Master of the vineyard, who was not so liberall to one as to another, Can I not doe with my own as I will? Psalme 50. The Lord shewes that all things are his, and therefore none can give ought unto him: yea he hath despoticall and absolute rule and power over all creatures: For

I. They had all their beginning of and from him And

II. They all are ruled and governed by him. And

III. They all are ordained for him: according to that of the Apostle? For of him, and through him, and to him are all things. Romans 11. 36. And therfore who shall dare to call the great Judge, and King of all the world, to the Barre, to render a reason why he hath done this or that?

Answ. 2. Secondly, the judgements of the Lord are a great deepe, and who is able to search or sound the bottome of them? Romans 11. 33. &c. and 1 Corinth. 2. 16. Esa. 40. 13. The judgements, waies, and workes of the Lord, are alwaies just; but yet man is often forced to say with Mary: How can these things be? Luke 1. 34. and 18. 27. And therefore in such a case we must confesse the blindnesse of our reason, and not dare to summon God to give account unto us, of what he doth.

Quest. 3. Who are here guilty of blame?

Answ. Those who dispute of the justice of Gods actions: It is dangerous swimming in this Foorde, for we may easily sinke, or be dasht a peeces. Non ad discussionem operum Dei, sed ad honorandum Deum (Musc.) conditi sumus d. We were created for the worship and service of God, and not to discusse, dispute of, or censure the actions of God. Non Iudices actionum, sed imperio subditi. Chrys. imp. s. Wee are the Lords vassalls, and not Judges of his actions. Non ferenda morositas, non tribuentium Deo justitiæ laudem, nisi quoad sensus eorum pertingit; Great and intolerable is the insolency of those, who will not acknowledge the Lords justice any further, then they can see reason for it. Musculus s. We see how our Saviour doth apply this reason (taken from the will of God) to the hardening of some, and to the illumination of others; As if he would say, it proceeds not from any impotency in God, that all obeyed not the Gospell, but because it otherwise pleased the Lord Calvin. s.

Observ. 2. Hence then wee may learne, That the predestinating of some unto life, and of others unto death, doth depend absolutely upon the will of God. He drawes, and then we runne after him. Cantic. 1. 3. He addes unto the Church daily such as he will have saved. Acts 2. 47. namely, such as were ordained unto life. Acts 13. 48. Rom. 11. 7. Non precibus flexus, sed sponte sua communis fecit. Chrys. super. Hee was not moved to save us, for, or by our prayers, but of his owne free will. Declarat non aliunde quam ex Dei arbitrio pendere discrimen, quod sapientes excutiant, & idiotæ capiant. Calvin. s. Our Saviour produceth no other reason but onely the Lords will, why the wise are blinded, and the simple understand the Gospell.

How doth this appeare? Quest. 4.

First, this divine Revelation, and spirituall knowledge of the word, is not granted to any for their merits, neither can be acquired by study. Chrysost. s. The Gospell is not apprehended, or clearly taken up by any humane wit, bnt onely by the illumination of the blessed Spirit. Calvin. s. and hence the Apostle saith. The spirituall man (and he onely) knowes all things. 1 Corinth. 2. 14. 15. And againe, God hath given us his Spirit which searcheth all things, even the deep Mysteries, and hidden things of God, 1 Cor. 2. 10. 12. And therefore if wee cannot understand spirituall things without the Spirit (as is most true because no man knowes the things of God, but the Spirit of God, and he unto whom the Spirit will reveale them) And that no man can merit, deserve, or procure the presence of the holy Ghost, by any thing he doth, but that he is given freely of God, to whom he will: Then predestination unto life and light, must needs proceed from the free will, and good pleasure of the Lord. Answ. 1.

Secondly, it further evidently appeares that this hiding of the Gospell from the wise, and the revealing of it to the simple, proceedeth from the meere will of God, thus; Because there is no difference in the Object at all; as is cleare thus. Answ. 2.

I. All by nature are so blinded, and corrupted (Psalm 14. 1. &c. Rom. 3. 23.) that none can now save themselves, or their owne soules. And

II. Although it should be granted, that sufficient grace is given unto all (which will be hard to prove) yet here there is no difference in the Object neither: and therefore the difference will be either.

First, in the corroborating and strengthening of the minds of men, against the temptations of the flesh, or world, or Divell. (And this without controversie is the gift of God and a gift not given unto all neither) Or else

Secondly, in that further grace (whereby wee cannot fall, finally or totally. August de cor & grat) which is given onely to the Elect. And therefore this grace and strength whereby wee come unto salvation, must needs come from the Lord, and that not of or for our merits, but onely of his owne free grace and love.

Thirdly, it is cleare, that election, and rejection, or predestination unto life, and preterition proceed meerely from the will of God, thus: because the will of God is the first, and the great transcendent rule of all his actions. For Answ. 3.

I. The glory of God regulates his will. And

II. His will doth dispose of his decrees. And

III. Ac-

96 III. According to his decrees follow his actions: and therfore his actions proceed from his εὐδοκία & good will: as our Saviour plainly expresseth in the text: Thou hast concealed these things from the wise and revealed them unto Babes And why? Because it seemed good in thy sight: or because thou wouldest. So elsewhere the Lord saith, I will doe what I will. Esa. 46. 10. And againe, the Lord workes according to his owne will. Daniel 4.32. Reade further these plain places. Roman 19. 15. 18. 22. Iames 1. 18. and Ephes. 1. 11.

Quest. 5. What doth God here require of us, or what is our duety herein in regard of God?

Answ 1. First, we must not demand or seeke a reason of Gods decree, but rest wholly upon his will, which is alwaies holy, and just, and good: For when a man asketh God a reason of his actions, or decrees, or why he doth thus or thus, it is as much as if the Clay in the hand of the Potter should say, why wilt thou make me such or such a vessell, or of such and such a fashion, as is now in thy heart to doe?

Object. If it be here objected, that the Potter hath reasons why he will, or hath done thus and thus, which the clay or pot cannot understand. I answer.

Answ. 1. First, if the Potter have reasons why hee will make the pot of such or such a fashion, or for such and such an use; those reasons are in his owne will, and deliberation, and not in the difference of the clay.

Answ. 2. Secondly, none denies but the Lord hath his reasons, why the doth hide his Gospell from some and make it knowne unto others, but these reasons are neither revealed unto us, nor to bee enquired of by us, neither are wee able ever to find them out; as is plaine from. Rom 11. 33. &c. And therfore here I conceive that Aristophanes his Proverbe is worth observing; who saith: ἐπὶ δὲ συνέχεσθαι κρεῖττον ἢ συσχεῖν κακῶς That it is better for a man to sit still, then to rise and catch a fall; better not to enquire and search into the profound and hidden Judgments, and secret decrees of God, then to search, but never be able to finde them out, especially when there is no need at all of that investigation, or possibility to alter the least particle of any of Gods immutable decrees, although we could find them out; but yet more especially, when this kind of search is condemned, and forbidden, at least implicity, and by necessary consequence. And therefore this is the first thing which is required of us in regard of the judgements, decrees and actions of God, not to demand a reason of them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee must confesse and acknowledge the Lord to bee most just, in both these decrees, although wee are not able to conceive or comprehend any other cause or reason of them, then his owne will: that is, wee must confesse that the Lord is just in the blinding of the wise, and the enlightning of the simple, in the saving of Iacob, and the destroying of Esau, and in the receiving of some, and rejecting of others; although in the διότι, wee know not the reason, why the Lord doth it.

VERS. 27. All things are delivered unto mee of my Father: and no man knoweth the Sonne, but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Sonne, and hee to whomsoever the Sonne will reveale him. Verse 27.

Quest. 1. It is questioned by some, whether God doth most perfectly know himselfe? To which wee answer.

Answ. God doth know himselfe, and that most perfectly, as appeares from this verse; wherein our Saviour saith, that no man knoweth the Son but the Father, neither doth any man know the Father, but the Sonne. Here it is plainely given to the Father, that hee knoweth the Sonne, and to the Sonne, that hee knoweth the Father, Now there is nothing imperfect in God; and therefore the knowledge both of the Sonne in the Father, and the Father in the Sonne is perfect.

There are two things from this verse objected against the Holy Ghost, which I will briefly and severally answer, although in effect they bee but one.

Object. 1. God knoweth the Sonne, the Holy Ghost knoweth not the Sonne; (For no man knoweth the Sonne but the Father:) Therefore the Holy Ghost is not God.

Answ. 1. This place excludeth no person of the blessed Trinity, but only creatures, and false gods: And the meaning is this, None, that is, no creature or Idoll god, knoweth the Sonne of God, but only the Father: And this opposition is made to exclude creatures, not to exclude the Holy Ghost.

Object. 2. Although the Holy Spirit be God, yet is he not Omniscient, one that knowes all things, for hee knowes neither the Father nor the Sonne: the Father only knowing the Sonne, and the Sonne only knowing the Father.

Answ. This Objection is in a manner the same with the former; and therefore the like answer will suffice for it: I say therefore, that is a Sophisme, or Fallacie, A figura dictionis, because this Particle εἰ μὴ, doth onely exclude creatures, and not the blessed Spirit, who perfectly knowes God, 1 Cor. 2. 10.

Quest. 2. What knowledge doth our Saviour here speak of, when he saith, None know the Father, or Sonne?

Answ. 1. First, Calvin thinkes that he speakes of that spirituall and divine knowledge, which is communicated to the creature.

Answ. 2. Secondly, others suppose, that he understands that infinite knowledge, or comprehension of the infinite God, which is only in God.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, our Saviour himselfe is his owne best Expositor, in this verse; None know either the Father, or Sonne, save only those to whom God reveales them. To teach us, Observ. That none can know God without God, Exod 33. 20. and 1 Cor. 21. Iohn 1. 18. and 1 Iohn 4. 12 Except God please to reveale himselfe to men, they cannot know him; as our Saviour often objected to the Pharisees, yee know not the Father.

Quest. 3. Why cannot men know God, except he please to to reveale himselfe unto them?

Answ. 1. First, because hee dwels in that inaccessible light, that no eye can attaine unto, 1 Tim. 6.16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because he is incomprehensible by nature, Chrys. imperf. s.

Quest. 4. Who are blame-worthy in this particular?

Answ. 1. First, those who thinke, that they can attaine unto the knowledge of the Father without the Sonne.

Object. 3. Here it may be objected, that there is a naturall knowledge of God (Rom 1.19.20.21.) and therefore a man may know God without Christ.

Answ 1 First, there is a double knowledge of God; namely,

I. Theoricall, and Dogmaticall: and here perhaps they know something. And,

II. Experimentall; and here naturall men are ignorant, and know nothing, because they have not seene God. Our Saviour saith, Blessed are they that see God, Matth. 5. 8. because this sight begets an experimentall knowledge of him: And therefore natural men, who never had this sight, can never have this knowledge.

Answ. 2 Secondly, the Dogmaticall knowledge of God is manifold: For the proofe hereof observe, that the knowledge of God is either,

I. Perfect and plenary: and that either,

First, absolutely, to know Quantus, Qualis est, how infinite hee is, and absolutely to comprehend, and perfectly to know whatsoever is in him. And thus only God knowes himselfe. Or,

Secondly, respectively, when a man knowes God fully, according to the capacity of the vessell. And thus all the Saints in heaven know God, Mat. 5.8. [e]

[e] 1 Cor. 13.12.

II. Imperfect, and this is either,

First, cleare, and bright, and is wrought by the preaching of the Gospel, and the operation of the blessed Spirit, 2 Corinth. 3.18. Or,

Secondly, cloudy and darke, and is begot, and bred in naturall men, by the relickes, and sparkes of naturall understanding. And this knowledge is all that a naturall man can have.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they are extreamely too blame, who will judge of God, without the revelation of him by Christ, Cæcus non judicat de coloribus. The blind cannot judge or discerne of colours, and yet many who are spiritually blind, will undertake to judge and discerne of God, although Christ never revealed him unto them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they are not guiltlesse, or free from blame, who being altogether ignorant of God, dare yet trust in him: For how can a man truly trust in him, whom hee knowes not?

Answ 4. Fourthly, and lastly, they are here blameworthy, who presume to pray, and offer up in sacrifice the Calves of their lips, with the Athenians, To an unknowne God, Act. 17. 14. For with what comfort or confidence can we pray, to him whom wee know not? Rom. 10. 14.

Vers. 28. Vers. 28. Come unto me all yee that labour, and are heavie laden, and I will give you rest.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Come.

Our Saviour doth not say, buy or procure this grace and consolation with infinite sufferings and labours, but only Venite, Come, a most meane prize: To teach us. 97

Observ. That the condition unto life, faith, and salvation is most easie, Esa. 55.1. we must buy it, but without money, or money-worth, Ephes. 2.5.8. Titus, 3.5.

Quest. How doth the truth of this appeare?

Answ. Thus; namely,

First, because we are saved by faith, and not by workes, Ephes 2.5,8. Tit. 3.5.

Secondly, because Christ hereby would magnifie his grace, Ephes. 1.6. Rom. 4.16. Galath, 2.21.

Thirdly, because Christ workes in us, that which hee requires of us, Heb. 8.8. (from Ierem. 31.31.) and Heb. 10.16. Esa. 54.13. Rom. 11.27. from Esa. 27.9.

Fourthly, we must doe nothing as a cause of our salvation, Rom. 11 6. and 10.6. Psal. 81.10. &c.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Vnto me.

Observ. Two things might hence be observed: to wit,

First, that there is no way or meanes to come unto salvation, but only Christ, Act 4. 12. But of this elsewhere.

Observ. 2. Secondly, that the summe and top of our happinesse, is to enjoy Christ, and to bee brought unto him.

Quest. How is the truth hereof apparent?

Answ. It appears most plainely by these three particulars; namely,

First, because hee is able, and willing to save those who come, or are brought unto him, Heb. 7.25. Qui vult & potest, pater omnipotens est: Hee that can and will save us, is an Almighty, and all mercifull God, Musculus upon these words saith; That there are three things in Christ, viz. Δύναμις, ἕξις ἀγαθότης, καὶ φιλανθρωπία.

I. Δύναμις, He who would help others, had need be Potent, able to helpe; and therefore Christ who promiseth to helpe all that come unto him, had need be able (and is indeed most able) to succour, releeve, & helpe, those who doe come.

II. Ἕξις, In this thing, of helping others, there is not onely required Potentia, ability to helpe, but also Legitima potestas, that is, that hee who helpes hath received free power from God, to save whom hee pleaseth: Now this also is in Christ, for hee saith in the former verse, All things are delivered me of my Father; and Chap. 28.20. hee more plainely saith, All power is given unto me in heaven, and in earth.

III. Ἀγαθότης καὶ φιλανθρωπία: Hee that promiseth to helpe, save, and succour all that come unto him, must not only bee able to performe his promise, or have free power granted unto him to doe it; but hee must have also a readinesse, and willingnesse of mind, to helpe all such, as hee hath promised to succour: Now who can be more willing then Christ is? who doth not only refresh, and give rest to all, whosoever come unto him; but over and above doth invite, and call those who delay and procrastinate to come: saying, Come unto me.

Secondly, because he workes good things in us; that is,

I. He roots, grounds, and setles us in the most holy faith, Colos. 2. 6, &c.

II. He reveales his will, his love, himselfe, and his Father unto us; from whence wee have full and compleate joy. Read Iohn 17. 3. Ephes. 1. 18. and 3. 17. &c. and 1 Iohn 1. 1, &c.

III. He guides and directs our feet in the wayes of God, and in the pathes of grace, [e].

Thirdly, because of all other things, hee is the best, and most profitable for us, Luke 10. 42. [f].

e Gal. 2. 20. &c.

f Philip 3. 8.

Sect. 4. §. 4. All ye that labour, and are heavie laden.

Quest. 1. Whom doth our Saviour meane here by labourers?

Answ. 1. First, those who in the Ceremonies of the Law, or traditions of men, or the workes of the Law, seeke (with great labour, difficulty, and sorrow) the grace of God, the peace of conscience, salvation, and eternall life. These Christ cals unto him, that in him they may find rest, because in those things they can never. Chrysost. in.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who were burdned with their sinnes, and sensible of the wrath of God, for their sinnes: Now of these by and by.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who being pressed, both with inward and outward afflictions, and griefes, doe not fall to impatiencie against God, or to blaspheme his name, or become more obstinate and obdurate thereby; but more humble, patient, meeke, and submissive to the will of God: Now these also Christ cals unto him, and promiseth to afford comfort unto them.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Laborantes & onusti, labouring and heavie laden, are one and the same: for κοπιῶντες, yee that labour, signifies not only to labour, but to be weary with labour, and spiritually is to be understood of the labour of sinne: πεφορτισμένοι, yee that are heavie laden, signifies not onely to carry a burthen, but also to be pressed, and depressed therewith: and Metaphorically is to be understood of a thing troublesome, odious, and grievous. From hence then we may observe.

Observ. That without humiliation there can bee no comfort, or none shall bee comforted by Christ, except onely those who are wearied in mind, and depressed and burthened in conscience, by reason of their sinnes. Read 1 Peter. 5. 6. James 4. 10.

Quest. 2. How manifold is Labour?

Answ. Two-fold: First, of the body, and such sleep sweetly, Eccles. 5. 11. This is not here spoken of.

Secondly, of the Mind, and this is two-fold: namely, when a man labours.

I. In affection; and that either,

First, because hee desires that which hee cannot obtaine, or attaine unto: Or,

Secondly, because he feares that which he cannot flee from, or avoid: Or,

II. In sense, when a man grieves and mournes under some burden, which is not pleasing, but painefull, and odious unto him. Now of this more by and by.

Why shall none be comforted by Christ, but those who are laden with the burden, sight, and sense of their sinnes? Quest. 3.

First, because untill wee be truely wearied of our sinnes, and humbled for our sinnes, we cannot seeke Christ, or regard him, or desire him as wee ought. A man will never seeke to the Physician for helpe, untill he find and feele himselfe to be sicke: neither will sinners seeke to Christ (the Physician of their soules) untill they bee sensible of the wounds of sinne. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because Christ came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance; hee was not sent but to the lost sheepe of Israel, and to those who were sicke, Mat. 9. 12. Hee was sent, (not to comfort those, who stood in no need of comfort, but) to comfort those who mourne, Luke 4. 18. Answ. 2.

Who are here to be reproved, and taxed? Quest. 4

First, those who rejoyce in the world: Christ is so farre from comforting these, that hee denounceth a woe against them, Luke 6. 24. Answ. 1

Secondly, those who place their felicity only in the world; not in the Lord. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, those who deride the threatnings of God in his word, and are not humbled by them. Reade Psalme 94. 7. and 2 Pet. 3. 4. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, those who are not sensible of their sinnes, nor grieved with the burden of them. Now these are either, Answ. 4.

I. Those who doe not thinke themselves to be sinners, as Esa. 65. 5. but proudly boast of themselves, Luke 18. 11. and in comparison of themselves contemne all others: yea, condemne others as sinners, but not themselves, 1 Iohn 1. 9. These are either hypocrites, and proud Pharisees, or morall, civill, honest men. Or,

II. Those who through a blockish stupidity, and insensibility, perceive nothing; neither examining at all, how miserable their estate and condition is, nor what the end of them will be. Or,

III. Those who would not heare, or see their sinnes; and therefore hate the word of God, (instead of being humbled) for reproving of their sinnes: Or,

IV. The Papists who instead of feeling the burden of their sinnes, brag of their workes and merits.

Fiftly, those are here faulty, who hypocritically faine themselves to be sinners, but thinke better of themselves then so; who pretend sorrow and humiliation outwardly in their countenance, but their hearts have not the least sense or touch of their iniquities. Answ. 5.

Sixtly, those who are not wearied with labour, who would fight, but not unto blood, Heb. 4. 12. who would worke the Lords worke, but not so as to tyre or weary themselves; who are content to be lazie servants, and idle worke-men, but not painefull labourers: Christ will not com-comfort theſe, becauſe God hath curſed them, Ierem. 48.10. And therefore if wee deſire conſolation from him, wee muſt labour, and that unto wearineſſe.

Queſt. 5. Are all thoſe who labour, and are weary, or who are weary with labour, happy and bleſſed, or aſſured of comfort and reſt from Chriſt?

There is a double labour; namely,

Anſw. 1. Firſt, mundane, and worldly; and this is two-fold: namely; either,

I. Innate, naturall, and ordained: For,

Firſt, all things are full of labour, Iob 5.7. And,

Secondly, God hath ordained, that man ſhould labour, and get his bread with the ſweat of his browes, Gen. 3.16. And,

Thirdly, men can expect no bleſſing without labour, neither obtaine any by their owne induſtry, except the Lord bleſſe their labour. Now this labour and paines was impoſed upon, and injoyned man as a curſe; and therefore theſe Labourers are not ſimply happy, neither (as ſuch) have any promiſe of comfort, eaſe, or reſt from Chriſt.

II. Acquired; and thus.

Firſt, ſome labour, and take much paines in ſinne: And,

Secondly, ſome beſtow much care and diligence, and labour in the acquiring of riches, and the gathering of the thicke clay of this world together. Now neither are theſe Labourers happy, except they feele their labour, and grieve for it, and labour to eaſe their ſhoulders of the burden thereof.

Secondly, ſpirituall, in mind, and this is two-fold; to wit, either,

I. Vnjuſtly impoſed; and that either,

First, by Doctors, which are either, { Phariſaical, loving to lay heavie (and unneceſſary) loads of Ceremonies, upon mens ſhoulders, Matth. 15.14. &c. h. Or. } Acts 13. 10.

Or, { Papiſticall, teaching men to labour, to obtaine ſalvation by the merits of workes, and not by the grace of Chriſt, Rom. 10. 3. Philip. 3.9. Or, }

Secondly, By the Tempter, Sathan, who accuſeth men, and tempteth them; and by his accuſations & temptations, troubleth and moleſteth them; as wee ſee hee did with Saint Paul, 2 Cor. 12.8. Now theſe Labourers are bleſſed, if they reſiſt Sathans temptations, and wraſtle manfully againſt them, Iames 4.7.

II. Religiouſly conceived; that is, when men are poore in ſpirit, Matt. 5. 3.4. and broken and contrite in heart, Pſalme 51. 17. And theſe are they, whom our Saviour principally ſpeakes of, and to: And therefore if we deſire to bee made partakers of the reſt and comfort promiſed, we muſt ſtrive thus to labour, and groane under the heavie burden of our ſinnes.

Queſt. 6. What muſt wee doe to attaine unto this labour, which hath a promiſe of reſt and comfort?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, we muſt labour to know what our eſtate and condition is; and not deceive our ſelves by falſe perſwaſions, or deſtroy our ſoules by flattering preſumptions.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, wee muſt labour to condemne our ſinnes, and our ſelves for our ſinnes, 1 Cor. 11.29. Here:

I. Wee muſt be carefull not to extenuate our ſinnes. And,

II. Wee muſt urge the certaintie of deſtruction (unto our ſelves) for our ſinnes, except wee repent us of them, 1 Cor. 6.9. Gal. 6.7. For if wee would but preſſe our conſciences, and caſt our ſoules downe unto hell, it would be a meanes to make us riſe the ſooner to comfort, and ſpirituall conſolation.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, wee muſt labour to be freed from the chaines of ſinne: wee muſt pray, and cry inceſſantly, untill the Lord heare, and anſwer us.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, we muſt ſeeke for Chriſt, and that earneſtly; for an unfained deſire of him, and a faithfull enquiry and ſearch for him, will make us mourne, and lament, untill we find him. Here two things are implied: namely,

I. Wee muſt ſeeke for Chriſt: For,

Firſt, Wee are commanded to doe it, Eſa. 55. 6. And in many places.

Secondly, the Lord promiſeth, that thoſe who ſeeke him, ſhall find him, Ieremie 32. 41.

Thirdly, the Lord and Chriſt compla ine upon thoſe, who will not ſeeke him. Reade Ierem. 2.13. and 32,33. Rom. 10. 21. And therefore, if wee deſire either to pleaſe our God, or to bring comfort unto our owne ſoules, wee muſt ſeeke Chriſt.

II. Wee muſt ſeeke him ſeriouſly, and earneſtly; wee muſt hunger and thirſt after him, Eſay 55.1. Iohn 7.37. Becauſe, if (with the Church) wee ſeeke him in our beds, we cannot find him, Cantic. 3.

Queſt. 7. How many burdens are there, becauſe Chriſt here promiſeth to eaſe thoſe, who doe groane under their burden, and are overladen with it?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, there are temporall burdens: namely,

I. Want, which is either abſolute, when men ſimply are poore, wanting many neceſſary things, or reſpective, when mens deſires are not ſatisfied, although they have food and raiment ſufficient. And,

II. An uncertainty of poſſeſſing, keeping, and enjoying what we have: Many trouble themſelves with this thought and care, that all they poſſeſſe will bee like graſſe upon the houſe top, which quickly withers, fades, and dies: and that it may be, their land, riches, friends, children, and all will be taken away from them. And,

III. The burthen of worldly cares, and of labouring and toyling for the world: of which Gregory ſpeaketh (and that not amiſſe) That it is a rough yoke, and a hard burden of ſervitude, to bee under temporall things, to ſeeke after earthly things, to ſeeke to hold theſe fading things, and to feare to loſe, or leave theſe tranſitory things.

100 Secondly, there are corporall burthens, namely of afflictions; and hence when Judgements to Anſw. 2. come upon any country were ſpoken of by the Prophets, they were called burthens, as the burthen of Edom, and Moab, &c.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, there are legall burthens, to wit, the burthen of the ceremoniall Law; for this St. Iames calleth a burthen, which neither we nor our forefathers were able to beare. Acts 15.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, there are ſpirituall burthens; and theſe are either,

I. For our ſeparation from God, or the abſence of God from us. Pſalm. 42. 4. and 51. 11. 12. Or

II. For ſinne the cauſe of this ſeparation. And that either.

Firſt, for ſome ſinne already committed, this was Davids burthen. Pſalm 51. and 38. 4. Or

Secondly, for the daily practiſe of ſinne: this is the burthen of all the faithfull, who grieve daily for their daily tranſgreſſions, whereby their Father is offended. Or

Thirdly, for the remainders of ſinne, or the ſtrength of internall concupiſcence in the heart, this was St. Pauls burthen. Romans 7. 23. 24. Or Fourthly, for ſome ſtrong temptation, which lyeth upon a man, and which hee is not able to remove: this likewiſe was the ſame Apoſtles burthen. 2 Corinth. 12. 7, 8, 9.

Where hee ſaith, that there was given unto him a thorne in the fleſh, the Meſſenger of Sathan to buffet him, for the which hee beſought the Lord thrice, (that is often,) that it might depart from him. And yet hee did not by his prayer remove the burthen, but onely obtained the grace of God ſupporting him under it, the Lord onely aſſuring him, that his grace was ſufficient for him. Or Fiftly, for an impotency, and inability to reſiſt the aſſaults of Sathan: and this is the burthen of thoſe, who are taken captive of the Divell at his will. 2 Timoth. 2. 26, and who cannot ceaſe to ſinne. 2 Peter 2. 14. and this burthen lieth upon the backes of many, and although it bee a very heavy and greevous burthen in it ſelfe, yet they feele it not.

Queſt. 8. How muſt wee beare the burthen of our ſinnes.

Anſw. Not joyfully, or contentedly, but with teares, and ſorrow, and griefe of heart: Hereunto two things are required, to wit, Firſt, we muſt know our moleſtations, and cauſes of griefe; and that either.

I. Temporall which we may ſee in one kinde or another, in our ſelves or others. Or

II. Spirituall, which are thus to be diſcerned, and knowne, viz.

Firſt, from the Law, we may know what diſpleaſeth and offendeth the Lord. And Secondly, from our owne conſciences wee may know, wherein wee are guilty. Then

Secondly, we muſt humble our ſelves: And that

I. That we live in ſo wicked a world, wherein we are ſtrangers from all true happineſſ. Corinth. 5. 1. 8. And

II. That we are thus prone and ſubject to ſinne, and to tranſgreſſe the Lords will.

Some may here Object, this mourning, weeping and griefe for the burthen of our ſinnes, is perillous, hurtfull, yea and leads unto deſperation. Object.

It is not ſo, but rather contrary, For Anſw.

Firſt, it is neceſſary, becauſe we have ſinned againſt an infinite God, and for our tranſgreſſions, have deſerved infinite torments, which wee ſhall certainly undergoe, except we repent and turne from our ſinnes; now ſinne hath taken ſuch ſtrong and deepe roote in our hearts, that it cannot without labour (& that unto wearineſſe) be expelled and overcome.

Secondly, it is ſafe and ſecure for a man thus to mourne, and humble himſelfe; becauſe God hath promiſed that hee will not breake a bruiſed reed. Eſa. 42. 3. And Chriſt hath invited ſuch to come unto him, with a promiſe of mercy. Come unto mee all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will refreſh you.

What muſt wee labour principally for? Queſt. 9.

In regard of our ſelves we muſt labour for ſalvation. Anſwer

How muſt we ſeeke for ſalvation? Queſt. 10

Firſt, we muſt deny our ſelves, and all merit of ours, confeſſing (with the Publicane) that wee are unprofitable ſervants, Luke. 18. 13. Phil. 3. 9. yea that we are but unprofitable ſervants, in our beſt ſervice, Luke 17. 10. Wee muſt not finde any comfort in any thing we doe, as it is ours, but ſeeke reſt and conſolation in ſome other. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, we muſt ſeeke for this comfort in Chriſt alone; as Cornelius did. Acts 10. 2. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, we muſt weary our ſelves in this labour and enquiry, and that alwayes. Anſw. 3.

Muſt we not reſt, and be quiet after wee are come unto Chriſt, or when we are ingrafted into him? Queſt. 11

Indeed if once we were truly made partakers of Chriſt by faith, then our worke ſhould bee changed, although not taken away: for as hee who buyes a Mannour doth not feare to looſe it, but yet hath a greater care to adorne, build, hedge, wall, plant, and beautifie it, then hee had before, becauſe it is his. So thoſe who are brought truely to Chriſt, although they feare not finally to looſe him, yet they are frequently carefull to live and walke as becomes members of Chriſt, and to adorne that profeſſion, which they have undertaken, by labouring daily more and more to put off the old man, with the deceitfull works thereof, and to cloth themſelves with that new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſſe, and true holineſſe. Epheſ. 4. 22, 23, 24. Anſw.

§. 3. Ego I. Sect. 5.

We may learne hence, that Chriſt gives the onely true comfort. Pſalm. 50. 16. Prov. 9. 5 And therefore we are commanded only to heare him. Obſerv. Deuter.

Deuter. 18. All power was given to him. (Esa 9.6, 7. Iohn 3. 35. and 17. 2. Colos 2. 3. Ephes. 1. 21. &c.) yea hee was ordained, given, and sent for this end, viz. to comfort those who mourne in Sion. Esa. 61. 1. &c. And therefore all things are to be gathered together in Christ, Ephes. 1. 10. There being salvation in no other but in him alone, Acts 4. 12.

Quest. Who may receive and reape comfort from this doctrine?

Answ. 1. First, those who are pressed, depressed, and oppressed in the world for Christs sake. Iohn 16. 33

Answ. 2. Secondly, those also who are not onely oppressed in their estates, but likewise persecuted in their bodies for Christ. Certainly both these shal bee refreshed. Psalm 69. 7. Rom. 8. 37 Heb. 11. 35. &c.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who desire and long to learne the way of salvation. Acts 2. 37, and 10. 33. Crying out: Men and brethren what shall wee doe to be saved? Certainly great joy doth belong unto these, and doth attend upon them. Acts 8. 8. 39. and 13. 48.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, those may reape comfort from hence who are oppressed, and burthened with the sight, and conscience of their sinnes; who see

I. Their sinnes to be greevous. And

II. Gods anger to be great. But

III. See not the pardon of their sinnes, neither how to flee from sinne or the wrath to come. For

First, we sinne boldly, yea with greedinesse. Ephes. 4. 19. Like Ahab who sold himselfe to work wickednesse. (1 King. 21. 25.) And yet feare nothing. But

Secondly, at length sinne appeares: As evill juyce, or moysture, or sickly humours lurke long in the body, and are not perceived, untill they come into the ventricle; but then being once there, there is nothing but sickneſſe, and vomiting, and a desire, and a forcing or straining to eject it, and expell it out of the body: like a Drunkard when he hath overcharged his stomacke, never leaves untill hee have discharged it. Or as Theeves or Murtherers, beeing once apprehended, and convicted, are dejected, and mourne, and despaire of mercy: So sinne when it appeares in his true & lively colours to the conscience, workes in the sinner a horrible, and fearfull expectation of wrath and punishment. Heb. 10. 27. As we see in Cain, Genes. 4. 7. And that sinner Luke 7. 38. &c. Then

Thirdly, if the conscience being thus fearefully amazed by reason of the sight of sinnes committed, a man should teach the sinner a way how to escape wrath, and to enjoy mercy, would hee not then embrace it? If the Prince should promise to a Thiefe, Murtherer, or Traytor, yea sweare unto him that he shall not perish; would hee not flee unto him, and cleave close unto him, least the avengers of blood, or the justice and rigour of the Law, should attache and apprehend him? Certes, those Cities of refuge were Types of Christ; who brings this comfort unto all his, and all those who come unto him; that

I. There is no condemnation unto such, Romans 8. 1. And

II. That not one of them shall be excluded or debarred out of heaven. For of al those who were given unto him, not one was lost. And 101

III. That (Nullum tempus occurrit Deo) at what time soever they turne unto him, and come unto him, let their burthen bee what it will, they shall find ease, and peace. Ezech. 18. 21. Acts 17. 30. And hence David runnes and confesseth his sinne, Psalm 32. 5. and Paul 1 Timoth. 1. 13. And they finde mercy though their sinnes were great. It is a poore satisfaction for a Subject when he hath offended his Soveraigne, to say Pœnitet, I am sorry for it, and I repent me of what I have done: And yet Christ requires no more but this in truth: And therefore great joy awaits those who are truely sorrowfull in soul, and oppressed with the sight & sence of their sinnes. For Christ here promiseth to give them rest and joy.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, they in like manner may hence be comforted, who are sensible of, and sorrowfull for, the insultings of lust, and heate of internall concupiscence; as was Paul. 7. 5, 15, 19, 23. For

I. We beginne (ordinarily) to correct some things in our outward life, although but slowly, and that onely in more grosse sinnes; and yet wee thinke it no small matter we have done.

II. But when we encrease in the knowledge of God: then we shall learne.

First, that God is most exactly pure, and perfect, and that not only by nature (in himselfe,) but also in his will towards us. 1. Peter 1. 15. Hee is diametrally opposite to all sinne, and hates all with a perfect hatred. In toto genere. And

Secondly, that it behoves us to perfect our obedience in al things: not suffering or admitting of any sinne, but esteeming all as poyson, Treason, Rebellion, Murther, or the like things, which are of this nature, that one of them once committed makes a man guilty of death. We must remember that one small spoonfull of poyson will kill, and one chaine captivate and enthrall; and therefore be carefull that no sinne at all raigne or remaine within us. Romans 6. 12. Yea Thirdly, then wee shall know, that it is our duety to give our very hearts up unto God. (Proverb. 23. 26.) and to conforme them unto the purity, and pure wil of God, nor suffering a wicked thought to lodge or abide there. Ierem. 4. 14. but labouring to mortifie all carnall and corrupt affections. Hence

III. The further on wee proceed and go in the way of sanctity, and the greater the measure of our knowledge of God doth encrease; the more sensible we become of the power and strength of sinne, within us: which daily strives and warres against us: Insomuch as,

First, we are not able to prevent or preserve our selves from the temptations and assaults of sin Yea

Secondly, we are not able so to withstand temptations; and snares, but that they daily overcome us, and leade us captive unto sinne. Yea

Thirdly, we are often seduced, and ledde aside of our owne lusts, and concupiscence, which in us rebels against us. Iames 1. 14. Galath. 5. 17. Rom. 7. 23. Yea 102 Fourthly, hence we beginne to feare that wee are evill, and corrupt trees: Matth. 12. 34. Because we can neither.

I. Cheerefully and freely, performe any thing that is good. Nor

II. Take heed of, or avoid spots, and blemishes, and staines, in the best workes wee doe. Nor

III. Suppresse our own inherent lusts and concupiscence. Hence

Fiftly, at least we grieve and mourne, that wee thus daily offend our good God with David. Psal. 120.5. and Paul. Rom. 7. 24.

And hence unfainedly, and frequently desire a new heart, Psalme 51.10. &c. These may be comforted with the Lords promise unto Paul; My grace shall be sufficient for thee, 2 Corinth. 12.9. And with our Saviours here, who hath given his word, that hee will ease and refresh them, and give comfort unto them: yea, when they are thus sicke, hee will be a Physician unto them, Mat. 9. 17. For either,

I. Hee will take away concupiscence and lust from them: the meanes whereunto, are fasting, prayer, labour, and taming and bringing under the body, 1 *Cor.*9.27. For by these, many temptations are overcome. Or,

II. Hee will give strength to resist them, and his Holy Spirit which shall strive against them, *Gal.*5.17. For conscience often doth put a bridle upon concupiscence; in so much as it cannot, when it would prevaile against it. This victory is most excellent; and undoubtedly the Saints never sinne, Totâ & plenâ voluntate, without some struggling and reluctancie of Spirit, when they are first informed, that the thing they are tempted unto, is sinne. Or,

III. If our owne lust or concupiscence should traiterously assault us; then at least Christ will bridle, and restraine us from the act of sinne; and will either hinder it by cutting off the occasions, or by interposing some lets and remoraes; as 1 Sam. 25. 32. hee hindred David (by Abigails comming) from killing of Nabal. Or,

IV If wee should fall into any sinne, as the best of the Saints have done, then he will pardon all our sinnes, and so take them away, that they shall never separate betwixt him and us, 1 John 2.1,2. And thus wee see, who may draw full buckets of comfort from Christ, this living and ever springing Well.

Sect. 6. §. 6. Refocillabo, I will give you rest.

The carefull Physician, doth desire and endeavour to heale, and recover his sicke patient; but he dare not assume, or arrogate thus much to himselfe, that hee will heale and cure him; but our Saviour doth, peremptorily affirming, Refeillabo, I will give you rest.

*Observ.*1. Hence then observe: That in Christ there is a certaine assurance of comfort. Reade John 7.37. and 3. 16. and 13. 28. All his promises are yea, and Amen, 2 Cor. 1. And therefore seeing hee hath promised consolation, hee will also performe it. Wherefore let us labour above all things for Christ; for if we have him, we have all, 1 *Cor.*3. 21. Here observe:

Christ promiseth unto the faithfull these things, viz.

First, confort against Pressures, and oppressions of the world; and that either,

I. By taking them away, and delivering his children from them: Or,

II. By facilitating of the affliction; and making it either short or light. Or,

III. By giving greater things; that is, peace of conscience, a full assurance of faith, a cheerfull confidence, and perfect patience to undergoe all oppressions and persecutions whatsoever, *Rom.*8.37,38. Or,

IV. By crowning, and rewarding their sufferings with eternall glory, 2 Cor 4.17.

Secondly, pardon of all their sinnes; both in regard of the evill of sinne, and punishment, 1 John 2.1.

Thirdly, Balme of Gilead; hee hath promised to bee our Physician, to cure all our sinnes, and to preserve us in the state of grace, and sanctification, untill hee bring us unto glory. Reade Psalme 103.2.3. *Rom.*14. 4. and 1 John 3.9.

Fourthly, peace of conscience, and spirituall joy, *Rom.*5.1,2. and 14. 17.

Fiftly, Protection, and direction; he will be a companion in our journey, and a Copartner of our bonds: oh, who would not long, and desire such a Guid, and Convoy, as will not suffer a man to erre, but lead him into the truth nor to be heavie, & heartlesse, sad and sorrowfull in his journey, but will cheere up his spirits, and make him merry? Oh who would not desire this Comforter; and Lord, who can afford unto us every thing that is good, and preserve, and defend us from all evill?

Our blessed Saviour by this promise of giving rest, unto all that come unto him, would teach us; That all that seeke him shall bee rewarded, or shall find him, *Matt.*7.7. Luke 6. 24. Hee was sent to those who mourne, Esa. 61. 2.3. And hence his mercy is glorified, that he freely gives to those who seeke, not to those who buy grace, or purchase Christ with a price, Esay 55.1.2. *Observ.*2.

What doth this Rest, or Refreshing import, or imply? *Quest.*1.

First, Corpus æstuans, a hot, and burning body; as appeares by Psalme 66. 12. Ierem, 6. 16. and Act 3. 19. Thus the soule inflamed with the fire of lust or pride, is refreshed and cooled by Christ (Rom. 7. 5. 23. 25. and 2 Corinth. 12. 9.) who doth allay, and cause to freese this scorching heate. Answ.

Secondly, Corpus morbidum, a diseased body: a man sicke of a palsie, cannot walke or worke, but onely lies in bed: now it were a great comfort and refreshing for him, to be inabled to rise, and to walke into the fresh aire. Thus when wee are not able to walke in the wayes of God, or to worke his work; when the good which wee would doe, wee cannot, Rom. 7.15.19. Then God wil give us power to runne the race of his Commandements, and to worke his worke; and to obey his from the body, and transferred unto the soule, and doth respect a four-fold body, viz.

his will in some measure (Esay 58. 13.) yea, them will our Christ refresh us, by giving us that anointing which is holy, and by which wee may be able to doe all things, 1 Iohn 2. 20.

Thirdly, Corpus lassum, a weary body; principally tired with the troubles and molestations of this life, Esa. 28.12. Whether it be,

I. For those things which wee love and enjoy. As Bucer s. thinkes. Or,

II. For those things which wanting wee seeke for. Or,

III. For the labours which wee undergoe, and endure in our particular callings.

Quest. 2. It may here be demanded, whether temporall labours shall be refreshed?

Answ. 1. First, there is a labour which is disallowed, and disliked; (They labour in the wind:) Therefore this shall not be crowned, or rewarded with the promised Rest.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but those who are sensible of their labour, and burthen, shall be refreshed: that is, not by supplying, and satisfying of their thirst, but by taking it away. He who thinkes to take away the drought of a man sicke of a Dropsie, by giving him as much drinke as hee desires, will sooner kill him, then cure him: and therefore to such, drink is not to be given (according to the appetite of the sicke party) but the desire of drinke is to bee abated, and taken away. So the Lord will not satisfie the desires of his children in temporall things, but moderate their love, and desire unto them. Certainly Eccles. 2. Alexander, Cræsus, Xerxes, Cæsar, and Solomon, were never quiet, so long as they sought for content in temporall things: And therefore those that labour in the love of them, or for them, are to be refreshed by abating, not by satisfying of that love, and desire.

Fourthly, Corpus sitiens, a thirsty body, or a body wanting the peace of Christ: Iohn 16. 33. Coloss. 3. 15. Philip. 4. 17. Now these Christ will refresh, by giving unto them that peace of conscience, which passeth all understanding. Reade Iohn 7. 37. and 2 Tim. 1. 16. and joy unspeakeable and glorious, 1 Peter 1.8. This is like that Iem, which to procure and purchase, wee should sell all wee have, Matth. 13.44,46.

Quest. 3. Who are they that shall not bee refreshed by Christ?

Answ. 1. First, those who being drunke by with a perswasion of their owne righteousnesse, and merits, dreame that they can satisfie the law of God, and that they doe not lye under the burthen of the Law, or of sinne.

Answ. 2 Secondly, Epicures, who neither care for sin, nor feare the wrath of God, but securely contemne and despise both, Ephes. 4. 19. The Apostle cals these ἀπηλγηκότες, men who are past feeling.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who are so buried, and overwhelmed with the pleasures, delights, and allurements of the world, that they doe not see nor acknowledge their misery, and miserable estate wherein they are, by reason of their sinnes committed against God, and of Gods judgements which hang over their heads for their sinnes; neither once seriously thinke, either of spirituall grace, or eternall glory.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, those who being humbled, and brought to the gates of hell, through a sight of their sinnes, and a sense of the wrath and anger of God for their sinnes; will not come unto Christ, but despaire of mercy, as Cain and Judas did. Now all these are excluded from this promise of rest: and therefore all they who desire to bee made partakers thereof, must take heed, that they be neither proud Pharisees, nor prophane Epicures, nor blind worldlings, nor contemptuous despairers of mercy, [1].

VERS. 29.30. Take my yoke upon you, and learne of me, for I am meeke, and lowly in heart; and yee shall find rest unto your soules. For my yoke is easie, and my burden is light. Vers. 29. 30.

§. 1. Take my yoke upon you.

Christ cals all to come unto him, and promiseth that hee will refresh those who come: But lest wee should thinke, that hee requires no conditions on our part; hee now addes, that the yoke is to be taken upon us, and that we must be taught of him: For as hee shewes himselfe to be unto us a Governour, and a Doctor, so hee requires that wee should be, 1. Subjects. 2. Disciples. Sect. 1.

First, wee must be subjects, and take our Saviours yoke upon us: The phrase is borrowed from the wood of oxen, or which is worne by them, when they plow; and it signifies rule and government, absolutely binding, governing, and restraining: As if our Saviour would say, think not with your selves, that you are called unto liberty, or unto an Anarchy; but unto my obedience and service. To teach us, Observ. That it behoves all those who hope in Christ, to submit themselves to his rule, and government, Deut. 10. 12. and 13.4. and Ierem. 5.5. and 28.13. Lament. 3.27. and 1 Pet. 2.16.

Quest. 1. Why must all, who hope for rest from Christ, submit themselves unto his service?

Answ. 1. First, because we were redeemed by him, for this end, that we might serve him in righteousnesse, and true holinesse, Luke 1 74,75. Titus 2. 14. and 2 Corinth. 5.15. and Heb. 9. 14. and 1 Peter 2.24.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because this is the scope of our profession, to serve Christ, 1 Thessal. 1.9. Rom 6. 18. 22. and 8. 14. Hence comes obedience to be the fruit of faith, Heb. 11. 7. &c. because faith subjects the heart unto Christ, Gal. 2. 20. and 2 Cor. 10.5.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because this is the end of all preaching, that people might obey Christ, Rom. 1. 5. and 16.26. and 1 Pet. 4.6. and 2 Cor. 10.4. &c.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because this was the end of the promises of blessings: Many gracious promises are made are made in the word, and all for this end that people might be more stirred up thereby unto obedience. Exod. 23.23,25. Deuter. 11.13. Levit. 26 Deuter. 28.

Quest. 3. How manifold is the yoke of Christ?

Answ. Two-fold, namely,

First, of Discipline, and correction; for the Lord chastens every sonne whom hee receives. Heb. 12.8.

Secondly, of Doctrine or obedience. Now true Religion doth bind us to the obedience of those things which are to bee done, and which are to be beleeved. For

I. It obligeth the consciences of men, so that they dare not sinne, or disobey God: Hence the feare and service of God are sometimes conjoyned together. Deut. 10.12. And therefore the phrase (of Serving) is evilly understood, for some sort of worship or for voluntary obedience, according as we list, and when we list: but wee owe unto God the debt of obedience, and therefore there is a necessity of service: we must not serve God, as one Neighbour helpes another, who will lend when they please, but will not acknowledge any debt: but we must confesse our selves to bee the Lords Servants, and bound to doe more then we are able, & therfore when we have done all we must confesse our selves to bee but unprofitable servants. Omne tulit punctum, he doth understand his Masters will aright, who hath learnd to conjoyne these two together, Servire liberè & ex officio; to serve God with a free, ready, willing, and cheerfull heart, with a filiall affection, and without any servile compulsion: and yet in thus doing confesse that it is his duety to doe what hee doth.

II. It obligeth the outward life, as well as the conscience: For we must not live to our selves, but to Christ. 1 Peter. 4.2. Rom. 14.7. &c. and 6. 11, 13. and 12. 1.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Learne of me.

As we must be Subjects, (as was shewed in the former Section) so wee must bee Disciples, as comes now to be considered, wherein we must observe that,

First, Christ teacheth unto us the necessity of learning; we must be taught. And

Secondly, he shewes that he is the onely true Doctour and Teacher: opposing himselfe,

I. To the Pharisees, who taught salvation by the Law, without Christ. And

II. Perhaps to the wisedome of the flesh, and humane reason. And

III. To the Doctrines of the flesh and world. But

IV. Most certain it it, is, that Christ here is opposed, to all other Teachers, as weake and invalide in regard of him, who onely is able to teach us the truth truely. Matth. 23.8.10.

Observ. Hence then learne, That we must bee made the Disciples, and Schollers of Christ; and submit our selves to be taught by him. Esa. 54. 13. Ephes. 4.21. Iohn 6.68.

Quest. 1. Why must we be made the Disciples, & Schollers of Christ?

Answ. 1. First, because it is necessary that we should be taught: no man is borne learned (neither is any borne holy, in corrupt nature,) the Philosophers who were most learned had Children born unto them who were most ignorant of all literature. For Nature gives us two things, but the third it cannot, namely, it gives,

I. Strength of body. And

II. A towardlinesse, and readinesse of mind. But

III. Learning it cannnot give; that beeing obtained onely by study. And therefore wee being naturally borne ignorant, it is necessary that wee should be taught.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is necessary that we should be taught by Christ, none else being able to teach us; as is cleare; in a fourefold regard; namely

I. Respectu Doctrinæ, in regard of the Doctrine, which is the knowledge of God. Iohn 17.3. But this onely Christ teacheth, and knoweth Luke 10. 22. Iohn 1.18.

II. Respectu subjecti, in regard of the Subject, for wee are not onely to be taught in our eares (for so man could teach us) but also, and principally in our hearts, and so onely the Lord of the Spirits teacheth us. Ierem. 31.33. and 32. 40. Luke 24.32.

III. Respectu Officij in regard of his Office; for Christ was ordained to preach. Luke. 4.18. Deuter. 18.15. Iohn 3.2.

IV. Respectu gratiæ, communicatæ & impressæ, in regard of grace communicated, and imprinted, for knowledge is a light. 2 Cor. 4. 6. And Christ and his Father are the light, and the givers of light; as appeares by Luke 2.32. Iohn 1.9. and 1 Iohn 1.5. and Iames 1.17. and Iohn 5.35.

And therefore seeing Christ is onely able to teach us the true knowledge of the true God, and alone able to teach the heart, yea ordained and appointed by God his Father to preach unto us, and to communicate unto us spirituall light, and knowledge, it is then necessary that we should be taught by him.

Quest. 2. How many wayes doth Christ teach us?

Answ. 1. First, hee teacheth us by the preaching of the word. Heb. 1.1. whence

I. It is called a light, to guide and direct our paths Psalme 119.105. And

II. We are directed, and sent thereunto. To the Law, to the Prophets. Esa. 8.20 And

III. We are commanded to seeke the sence and meaning of the Law of the Ministers; God himselfe endowing them with knowledge, and sending us then unto them. Malach. 2.7. Yea

IV. It is hence called the mighty power of God unto salvation. 1 Cor. 1.18.21. And therefore if we desire to know, whether wee be taught by Christ or not; let us seriously, and heartily examine, whether wee bee good hearers of the word or not. viz.

First, are we reverend hearers; doe we tremble in the hearing of the word, because it is Gods & not mans? Esa. 65.2. or doe we sleight and despise it?

Secondly, are wee industrious hearers: hearing daily, and treasuring up in our hearts what wee heare? Matth. 13, 51.52. Or are we sluggish hearers hearers, who heare, but carry nothing away of all that we heare.

Thirdly, are we profitable hearers, not onely remembring what wee heare, but practising carefully what we remember? Luke 8.15. Or are wee obdurate, and perverse hearers, who will neither learne, nor practise what is taught?

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ teacheth us by his holy Spirit in our hearts, thereby converting us unto himselfe. 2 Corinth 3.16. and without this our hearing is unprofitable Heb 4.2. And therefore St. Paul prayes for the Spirit of Revelation. Ephes. 1.18. But this wee cannot hope to obtaine, except we deny our owne hearing, and the worke of the Minister, and expect spirituall light and knowledge onely from the Lord, by the operation of his blessed Spirit. Some hope to be taught by the word, although in the hearing thereof they look no further at all, then either to their owne diligence in hearing, or ability, and capacity of understanding and taking up what is delivered, or to the faithfull, and powerfull delivery of the word by the Minister: now these cannot expect to be taught by Christ, because both our hearing, and the Ministers preaching will bee like water spilt upon the ground without the operation of the Spirit of God: for except he give the encrease, Pauls preaching, and Apollos watering will bee fruitlesse. That Noble Souldier and godly Centurion certainly was convinced of this truth, when he said and that unto Peter himselfe: Wee are all present here before God, to heare all things that are commanded thee of God. (Acts 10.33.) whereby he intimates that the word is Gods, the work is Gods, the message is Gods, the direction is Gods, yea the blessing that comes by hearing is Gods also And therefore if we desire to know, whether wee be taught by Christ or not, let us examine these three things. viz.

I. Doe we desire with our hearts and Spirits (when we come to heare the word,) that we may be taught by the holy Spirit of God? or doe we trust to our own hearing, or the Ministers preaching, not thinking at all upon the operation and assistance of the Spirit?

II. Doe we in our hearing lay aside all respect of the man who speakes unto us, contemplating and beholding onely the Lord in his word?

III. Whether are we sensible of internall light within in our hearts, Or are wee yet in darkenesse?

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ teacheth us by his workes, either towards us, or our brethren, or others: And thus he teacheth us two manner of wayes, namely,

I. Afflictionibus, by his judgements, and afflictions, he teacheth us to know sinne. Micah 7.9. and to see the plague in our owne hearts. 1 King 8.38 And therefore if wee desire to know whether wee be taught by Christ or not; let us examine whether our afflictions, or the afflictions of others, have reduced and brought us home unto him, and that,

First, by the examination of our consciences. And Secondly, by the hatred of our sinne. And Thirdly, by the operation of reconciliation with God. And Fourthly, by the corroborating of our resolution to lead a new life. And Fiftly, by an augmentation in sanctity, and uprightnesse.

II. Beneficiis, by his mercies, and blessings; and thus he doth excite our love and thankfulnesse unto himself, and proves, whether we know how to use these aright or not? And therefore let us examine.

First, whether do we use temporall blessings as servants, or as Masters, and Lords? Many are slaves unto their riches, and possessed by their possessions.

Secondly, whether are wee thankefull unto God for his mercies, shewing it by our Liberality and good workes? 1 Timoth. 6.18. Many care for nothing, but that their estates may encrease: but Sic crescere est macrescere, thus to increase is indeed to decrease, and thus to grow fat in body or estate, is to grow leane in soule, like the Israelites who had Quailes and Manna, but leannesse within; their bodies were stalled and their soules starved. But if we desire to approve our selves to be taught by Christ, we must labour daily to increase the fruits of righteousnesse and Religion; like good Trees, who bring every yeere more fruit then other.

Fourthly, Christ teacheth us, by his example: Answ. 4. Christi actio, nostra instructio, and therfore if we be the Disciples of Christ we must labour to be like our Master. Luke 6.40. yea to be like minded. Philip. 2.5. and to walke even as hee also walked, 1 John 2.6. And to learne of him, in this verse. Hence two Questions spring up viz.

How many sorts, or kinds of imitation are there? Quest. 3.

Imitation is fourefold to wit, either,

First, φυσικὴ, Naturall; this is a counterfeiting or imitating of nature, and is the chiefest part of the art of Limming, or painting; for the Painter doth imitate in all things the same variety, which nature doth, although hee cannot infuse life into his Picture, as nature hath done in the party pictured. For the painter can goe no further then colours, and as farre as they will goe he will imitate nature very neare. Answ.

Secondly, τεχνικὴ, Artificiall, which doth not so much imitate nature, as art, and cunning workemanship; and of this kinde are the endeavours, and imitations of wit and learning in any Art. Thus many strive not to imitate the life of Virgill, or Cicero, or Livy, or to draw their pictures, but to imitate their Poetry, eloquence, and stile.

Thirdly, Mixt of the other two, which is an imitation partly Naturall, & partly Artificiall: when somethings are derived from nature, some from Art, as the Painter often doth.

Fourthly, ἠθικὴ, which is an imitation of vertue, and piety, as also of the profession & kinde of life: thus the Posterity of Iacob followed a Pastorall life as hee did, and the

Rebek-

106 Rechabites followed their Fathers customes in abstaining from wine: And unto this particle belongs the imitation of the Saints.

Quest. 4. Wherein must wee imitate Christ?

Answ. 1. First, some of Christs actions are Miraculous: as to fast 40. dayes, to turne water into Wine, to walke upon the Sea; to restore unto life, and the like; now these are not to be imitated. But because some are of opinion, that Christs Miracles are to be imitated, I therefore confirme our assertion thus.

I. Every imitation should be undertaken in a possible thing; but it is impossible to expresse the Miracles of Christ, or to performe such miraculous workes as he did; Therefore Miracles are nor to be imitated.

II. That which is unprofitable, and whose successe is desperate is not to be undertaken; but to imitate the Miracles of Christ is such (for what profit or good can a man reape by undertaking a thing, which he knowes he can never accomplish, neither will ever be able to bring to passe) And therefore the Miracles of Christ are not to be imitated.

III. that which is wicked should not bee undertaken, But it is wicked thing to imitate the Miracles of Christ: Therefore they are not to be imitated. Christ by his Miracles, separated and differenced himselfe from all mortall men, as the true Messias promised to the Fathers; as was shewed before Verse 4, 5. where Christ shewes to Iohns Disciples, that hee is the true promised, and expected Messias, and proves it by his Miracles: because he did those great workes which were only proper unto the Messias to doe. And therefore it is a great diminution of Christs glory, for man to imitate that, which is onely proper for the Messias to do by his owne power. Indeed Christ gave power to his Apostles, and some holy Martyrs, to worke some Miracles: but yet this is but a rotten foundation, to build an ordinary imitation of Christs upon: For

First, that power was extraordinary; and therefore no rule for an ordinary imitation.

Secondly, that power was given unto them by Christ, they had it not of themselves: and therefore these Miracles are not to bee imitated by those who will confesse, that no such extraordinary, and speciall power is given unto them by God, or Christ.

Thirdly, we have presidents, and examples, that the Apostles and some of the holy Martyrs wrought Miracles; but we have neither power to doe so, nor precept to strive to doe so.

Fourthly, although we reade of some Miracles, which were done by these, yet we no where reade that either Apostle or Martyr did undertake any such thing of himselfe, or of his owne free accord; that is, would worke Miracles when they pleased, and how they pleased, or of what sorts they pleased: For certainly in the working of Miracles they were directed, moved, and stirred up by the holy Spirit; and therefore their action is but a bad ground, or proofe for those who ordinarily will imitate these extraordinarie Miracles.

Secondly, some of Christs actions are agreeable to his calling; he was not made a Iudge here, nor a King; and therefore hee would not call for fire from heaven. Wherefore such actions doe not conclude for other vocations: As for example, Christ was not a temporall King, or Iudge; therefore amongst Christians, there must be neither King nor Iudge; follows not. For in the Church and Common-wealth are Kings, and Magistrates, and great men; and it is necessary that there should bee such. Christ was poore, and yet substance, possessions, and riches are sometimes requisite (ad decorum:) And therefore it is an errour for any, to enjoyne poverty upon all; and grosly false, that all men are equall in a Christian Common-wealth, as the Anabaptists hold. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, some of Christs actions were Morall, and some admit of of a Morall application, and all these are to be imitated by us: As, Answ. 3.

I. Christ was a Lambe without spot, not tainted with any sinne at all, either in action or affection. Thus wee should labour to cleanse our selves from all pollutions, both of the flesh and spirit, 2 Corinth. 7.1.

II. Christ devoted himselfe wholly up unto the service of his Father; yea, offered up himselfe unto his Father for us: So wee should labour to offer up our selves, as a living and acceptable sacrifice unto God, Psalme 40.7.

III. Christ patiently endured the Crosse, and under-went the shame, Heb. 12.2. So wee should patiently beare the Crosse for Christs sake, Mat. 16.24.

IV. Christ after hee was dead rose againe: So wee should labour to rise to new obedience.

V. Christ ascended into heaven after his Resurrection: So wee should labour to ascend in our hearts, and affections, setting them upon heavenly things, Colos. 3.1. Philip. 3.20.

VI. The life of Christ was generally holy, and repleni shed with all vertues, 1 Iohn 3.3. And herein wee should labour principally to imitate him. He was meeke (in this verse) so should we be. He was humble, Philip. 2.5. so should wee be. He was patient in adversity; he was beneficiall, and helpefull unto others; hee was loving unto all; he was constant in the preaching, and profession of the truth; hee pardoned his enemies; hee prayed for his Persecutors; hee was subject to his earthly parents, and obedient to his heavenly Father, even unto death: In a word, there is no vertue, either Morall, or Theologicall, but wee have the example of it in him. And therefore, there is great reason, that we should bee carefull to obey this his Precept, and learne of him.

§. 3. For I am humble and meeke. Sect. 3.

Why doth Christ propound his humility, and meeknesse unto us? Quest. 1.

First, for our example; because as was shewed before, hee teacheth us by his example. Hence I might observe: That Christians should labour (by Christs example) to be meeke, and humble: Answ. 1.

But

But I passe this by, entreating the Reader onely, to marke what was said before, Chap. 5. vers. 3. and 5.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ propounds his humility, and meeknesse unto us, to teach us his nature in teaching: Or, that hee is a Doctor, meeke and gentle; Observ. for he was humble two manner of wayes, viz.

I. In his life and conversation. And,

II. In his Doctrine, Ne deterreamur præconio Majestatis, Gualt. s. Now that Christ was a gentle and meeke Doctor, appeares thus. He was meek,

First, in his Doctrine which he taught. The Gospel which he preached, was a Proclamation of free mercy; hee exhorting men to come, and to buy, and that without money, or money-worth, Esay 55. 1. Hee desired, but that men would feele themselves hungry, and thirsty, and then come unto him, and he profered, and promised, to feed and refresh them, John 7.37.

Secondly, hee was meeke in his manner of teaching; for hee besought sinners to be reconciled to their Father, and his Father, 2 Corinthians, 5. 19.

Thirdly, hee was meeke in the using of his Disciples and Schollers; for hee laid downe his life for them, and in his life had a great care of them.

Fourthly, he was meeke in his Person; for he under-went all that was laid upon him. Reade Esay 53.

Quest. 2. How many degrees of Humility are there?

Answ. First, it is a great degree of Humility, for a man to humble himselfe to his superiour, and better. It is a greater for a man to humble himselfe to his equall; but the greatest of all is, for a man to humble himselfe to his inferiour and unequall; for this hee learnes of Christ, and herein imitates him, who submitted himselfe to John.

Secondly, it is a great degree of Humilitie, for a man to be humble in his words; It is a greater for him to bee humble in his workes; but the greatest of all, is for a man to be humble in heart. Now in all these we imitate Christ, and all these wee learne of him: For he was humble in his words, Psal. 22.6. Hee was humble in his deeds, as appeares by his washing of the Apostles feet, John 13. He was humble in heart, as in this verse.

Thirdly, it is a high degree of humility, when we repute our selves to be as we are, or no better then we are; but is a much more high degree, to repute our selves to be such, as wee should be; if the Lord should leave us unto our selves.

Fourthly, it is a great degree of Humility, for a man to be humbled for the evils and sinnes, which he hath committed; it is a greater for him to bee humbled for the good workes and duties omitted: But the greatest degree of all, is for a man to bee humbled for the perturbations, distractions, coldnesse, and infirmities which attend upon him, and molest him in the performance of good actions.

The degrees of Humility are many, but the principall are these, viz.

Fiftly, it is a very high degree of Humility, when a man is humbled for his defects, weaknesses, and wants in spirituall things; it is a much higher degree, to bee humbled for an abundance of vertues, and a great measure of grace (as a tree who stoops the lower, the fuller and better loaden with fruit it is) But the highest degree of Humility is, when a man humbles himselfe, according to the example of Christ, John 13, 14, 15. that is, although eminent and great, both in place and vertue, yet he thinkes no office of love too base, or meane, to doe for the least Christian, though never so much inferiour to him. 107

§. 4. For my yoke is easie. Sect. 4.

How many sorts of yokes are there? Quest. 1.

First, there is Jugum Sathanæ, & peccati: The Answ. 1. yoke of Sathan and sinne; this is a heavie yoke, and unto this all men are subject, untill they come unto Christ, and take his light yoke upon them, Luke 11.22 and 2 Timoth. 2.26.

Secondly, there is Jugum hominis, the yoke of Answ. 2. man; and this is two-fold, to wit,

I. Pharisaicall, which was contrary to the Gospel. And this Christ promiseth (verse 28.) to take off from all those, who feeling themselves burdened therewith, would come unto him: For there is an Antithesis betweene the yoke of the Gospel, and the Pharisaicall yoke of Traditions.

II. Papisticall, which is contrary to Christian liberty, and consists in Ceremonies, and Traditions; whereof there are three sorts; namely,

First, Mala illata, things which are simply evil, and yet brought into the Church: as Invocation of Saints, and adoration of the Eucharisticall bread.

Secondly, Adiaphora corrupta, things which being indifferent in themselves, are corrupted by them, and so corrupted imposed upon the Church; as Confession, the use of the Crosse, and Marriage, which must be beleeved to be a Sacrament.

Thirdly, Necessaria depravata, things which are necessary in themselves, but polluted and corrupted by them; as the Sacraments, good Workes, Prayer, and Fasting.

Thirdly, there is Jugum Dei, the Lords yoke; Answer 3 and this is two-fold, viz.

I. Afflictionis, the yoke of affliction; now this God hath promised to take from the necks of his children (Esay 9.4. & 10.27. & 47.6.) And to put it upon the necks of the wicked; that those who will not beare the yoke of obedience and service, may beare the yoke of correction and punishment, Ierem. 28. 13.

II. Legis, the yoke of the Law; and this is two-fold; namely,

First, Ceremoniall, this was to continue only untill Christ came, and by his death was abolished; for when (giving up the Ghost) hee cried, Consummatum est, It is finished, then was the Law of Ceremonies abrogated; And Act. 16. the Apostles shew, that wee are free now from this yoke.

Secondly,

108 Secondly, Morall, which must continue for ever, Psalme 1.19. And herein are two things, viz.

I. The matter of this yoke; namely, Obedience. And,

II. The manner of this yoke, namely, In the feare of the Lord; that is, wee must not onely labour to doe whatsoever the Law enjoynes, and eschew what it prohibits, but wee must doe it with a filiall, and religious reverence and feare.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, there is Iugum Christi, the yoke of Christ: and this the Text speakes of.

Quest. 2. How manifold is the yoke of Christ?

Answer. Two-fold; namely, Crucis, legis, the yoke of Affliction, and Evangelicall obedience: For Christ requires these two things of all, that belong unto him; namely,

I. That they should suffer all, that hee laies upon them. And,

II. That they should doe whatsoever hee requires of them. And both these are included, in Matth 16. 24. where our Saviour commands us, To take up our Crosse, and follow him.

Quest. 3. What yoke doth our Saviour here speake of?

Answ. 1. First, some say, that he speakes, De jugo legis, of the yoke of the Law only.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say, that he speakes, De jugo Crucis, of the yoke of the Crosse only.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, I conceive that Christ speakes directly, and immediately, of the yoke of the Law, and Obedience; and implicitely of the yoke of the Crosse; because hee both assists us, in doing that which he requires, and in bearing of that which hee imposes, as followes by and by: And therefore wee are commanded (verse 28.) to submit our necks to both these yokes; and in this verse (for our comfort) our Saviour pronounceth them to be both light.

Quest. 4. Why doth our Saviour call the yoke of the Law, and Crosse, his yoke; for my yoke is easie?

Answ. 1. First, hee cals the yoke of the Law his, for these causes; namely,

I. Because he did co-operate, and concur with the Father, in the giving of the Law, Opera Trinitatis, ad extra sunt indivisa: And therefore without doubt, Christ had a hand in the promulgation and pronouncing thereof; and so in that regard may justly call it his yoke.

II. Because it was confirmed by him: hee openly protested, that he came not to destroy, or abrogate, but to ratifie the Morall Law, Matt. 5. 17. &c. He came not to free Christians from the obedience hereof, but obligeth them to obedience thereunto: For his will is his Fathers will, and his Commandement, his Fathers Commandement; and therefore in this regard it may be called his yoke.

III. Because it was borne by him, and absolutely performed and kept by him: Take my yoke upon you, &c. As if hee would say, the yoke that I have borne my selfe; for it is easie, I having perfectly kept, and obeyed it. And thus also it may be called His.

IV. Because he tooke away the rigorous, and impossible conditions thereof: It was said (before his comming) Fac hoc & vive, doe this and live, and without the full and perfect obedience thereof, yee shall not live; but Christ hath mitigated this rigorous Law, and now assured us, that for his sake God will accept of the will for the deed. And therefore for this his mitigating, and dispensing of the hard conditio s of the Law, it may be called his yoke.

V. Because he gives us power, (in some measure) to obey and observe it. For my yoke is easie; as if he should say, the yoke of the Morall Law which was imposed upon you by my Father, and confirmed by my selfe, is an easie yoke to you, because I will enable you to beare it; and that which therein you cannot doe of your selves, I will doe with you, and for you. It is my yoke, because I beare the greatest weight of it; and therefore refuse not you to undertake it; for what with that which I beare my selfe, and what with the strength I endue you withall, your burden is but easie, and your yoke light: And thus also it may be called Christs yoke, because hee beares one part himselfe (as followes by and by) and gives us grace and strength sufficient to beare the other part, with joy and comfort.

VI. It may justly be called Christs yoke, because he rewards the obedience thereof: As is most plainely laid downe in the two former verses, where he promiseth to refresh, and to give both spirituall and eternall rest, to all those who submit their necks to this yoke; and labour constantly and perseverantly, to performe absolute, perfect, and universall obedience to this Law. And thus we see in what regards our Saviour cals the yoke of the Law his yoke, for these causes, viz.

Secondly, our Saviour cals the yoke of the Crosse and Affliction, his yoke. Answ. 2.

I. Because the crosses and afflictions which wee suffer, are imposed upon us by his will and permission; For without that no enemy, or calamity could touch us.

II. Because we beare the Crosse by his example; therefore it is called his yoke.

III. Our Saviour cals our crosses and afflictions, his yoke, that thereby a difference may be observed, betweene the scourges of wicked men, and the crosses of beleevers; for these are his yoke, but not those.

IV. The Crosse is called Christs yoke, because he hath sanctified this yoke by his owne body, which on earth was subject to crosses, afflictions, and persecutions for us.

V. Because our Saviour doth so moderate our afflictions, and crosses, by the aid, assistance, and comfort of his holy Spirit, that they become light unto us: therefore they are called his yoke.

How doth our Saviour say, that his yoke is easie and his burden light, seeing that he saith, Matth. 7. 14. That strait is the gate, and narrow is the way that leads unto life: and therefore, verse 13. commands us to enter in at the strait gate: And againe, in the 12. verse of this Chapter, hee saith: That the kingdome of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent only take it, who strive to enter therein by force: And Marke 10. 25. hee saith, that it is easier for a Camell to goe through the eye of a needle, then for a rich Quest. 5.

man to enter into heaven?

Answ. 1. First, to the last place I answer, that it is said to bee impossible, for a rich man to enter into heaven; not because riches are evill in themselves, but because the perverse and corrupt nature of man doth so use (or abuse) them, that they become an impediment unto them, and hinder them from submitting of their necks to Christs yoke, and from bearing joyfully and willingly his burden.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Chrysostome. s. answers, that the way to heaven is hard Ignavis, only to idle, and sloathfull men; and not to those who are industrious and painefull: A sluggard thinkes a light burden heavie, but a laborious man makes nothing of a hard taske.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but the Objection simply is true, that the way unto life eternall is hard, and full of labour, and cannot be walked in, much lesse, walked through, to the end, without toyle and travell, as is plainely expressed in the places objected, Matth. 7. 14. and 11. 12, and appeares evidently thus: Wedlocke is a sweet bond, where both husband and wife draw in one yoke: but yet a bond, it is a pleasant burden, Conjugium a Jugo, it is no other then a yoke, and full of thorny cares, and labours; although so delightfull, and pleasing, that neither husband nor wife would desire to bee freed from that bondage. Thus howsoever the faithfull may (and doe:) thinke this yoke of Christ sweet and pleasant, (as followes by and by) yet in it selfe it is full of labours; yea, and so full, that the righteous are hardly saved. For,

I. The way that leads unto heaven is very obscure, and therefore hard to finde, and easie to loose, yea it is very slippery, and therefore except we be carefull, and heedfull of our steps, we may easily fall.

II. The burthen that is laid upon our backes to beare, is heavy, and (which addes to the weight thereof) we must beare it long, even so long as we live; for otherwise we beginne in the Spirit, and end in the flesh, and so come short of our reward.

III. The workes of Religion, and the duties required of us, both in regard of God, and our brethren, and our selves, are very hard and heavy, as every one will find that undertakes the taske.

IV. Our Spirits are naturally both weake and dull, except they be awakened, and quickned by a continuall and renewed worke of the holy Ghost, yea

V. Our enemies are both many and strong that labour to pul us out of this yoke, & leade us aside from this way. And therefore these things considered, we must needs confesse, that the way of active and passive obedience which leades unto heaven, and this yoke of Christ, is in it selfe, heavie, and hard.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, our Saviour doth not say that his yoke is easie and light to all, but onely to those who learne of him to be humble and meeke, and of Saint Paul, to want and abound, and in every estate and condition to be contented.

Fiftly, one and the same thing may bee easie and hard, light and heavy, to one and the same man in regard of a divers time; that is, the yoke and burthen of Christ, may seeme (and be) heavy to a fresh water Souldier, and new beginner, who is not yet acquainted with that spirituall joy and inward comfort that attends upon the righteous who are strong in the Lord: but in time, it becomes pleasant, delightfull, and light, by exercise, and practise, by a growth and encrease in knowledge, grace, and strength. For it is most true, that nothing is more difficult to flesh and blood, than to bear the yoke of obedience, and affliction; yea nothing is more miserable, than a Christians life, if we look upon the present condition, (1 Corinth. 15. 19.) But yet this double yoke seems sweet and easie to the spirit of the true beleever, and strong Christian, by reason of that gracious operation of the good spirit of God, who doth so form and fashion the regenerate unto the obedience of the will of God, that when once they have had a taste and rellish of Christ, then nothing seems hard or difficult unto them, which is imposed by him. 109

Answ. 5.

Answ. 6. Sixtly, the commandements of God, and yoke of Christ, are in themselves, and in their own nature sweet and delightfull (as follows by and by) but in regard of our frailty, and proneneſse unto evill, they are difficult and unpleasant.

Object. 1. But against the Text it will be objected, By the yoke of Christ we are brought into afflictions, and subjected unto them: and therefore it is Jugum grave, a heavie, not a light yoke.

Answ. 1. First, the yoke of Christ doth subject us to no greater evils, than are naturally, and daily incident to all (the life of man in generall being full of calamities.) And therefore the crosse that attends the yoke, doth not prove it to be simply heavie; seeing it induceth no greater miseries to the righteous, than Nature it self doth to the wicked.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those evills & calamities which Nature subjects wicked and worldly men unto, are very heavie, grievous, and evill unto them: but the afflictions of those, who undergo the yoke of Christ, shall be changed into glory, and recompensed with a glorious reward: and therefore they are not heavie, Mark 15. 21.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the crosses of the servants of Christ shall be so mitigated, that they shall not hurt them, 1 Cor. 10. 13. And therefore they are not heavie.

Object. 2. But it will be objected again, If it be a Yoke, and a Burthen, then how can it be light? and if it be light, then how is it a Burthen?

Answ. 1. First, the speech is figurative, and the phrase borrowed from a yoke, and naturall burthen.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our Saviour by this phrase, doth neither conceal the burthen, nor silence the sweetnesse of it; but conjoyns them both together, calling it both (Jugum & Suave) a yoke, and a sweet yoke. Onus apposuit, & leve adjecit. Chrys. He no sooner telleth us, that it is a burthen, but he adds withall, that it is but light. Men joyn Oxen together with a yoke, and Camels with a bridle or halter, that they may be as burthens.

110 But we must note, that there are two sorts of men who impose these burthens; to wit, I. Some put a yoke upon others, and oppresse them under the yoke: As the Spaniards do with the Indians, and as Pharaoh and Reboboam did do. Now Christ is no such imposer of a yoke. II. Some have a care of those who are under, or in the yoke, that they may not be oppressed, but have rest and comfort. And thus did God, Exodus 23. 12. and Deuteronomy 5. 14. and thus doth Christ, who promiseth to refresh them under the yoke, and ere long to give rest, and freedom from the yoke, verse 28, 29. And therefore although it be a yoke, yet it is neither heavie, nor hard.

Object. 3. The nature and condition of this yoke, prove it to be both heavie and hard; for hereby we are taught to hate all sins (although some be as dear as hands and eyes unto us) yea to forsake all to follow Christ, Luke 14. (although riches be the good blessings of God:) yea to take up our crosse, and bear it patiently, (though never so great) yea to be humble and meek (although our humility sharpen the pride and cruelty of others against us.) And lastly, this yoke injoyns us to deny our selves, Matth. 16. 24. which deniall begets in us mourning and sorrow, and deprives us of all joy and solace. Wherefore, how can this yoke possibly be said to be light, that hath these five sharp properties and conditions in it? viz. First, a hatred of all sins whatsoever. Secondly, a renouncing of all temporall things whatsoever, if they hinder us from Christ. Thirdly, Patience in all afflictions and crosses whatsoever. Fourthly, humility and meeknesse, though we be therefore contemned by others. Fiftly, self-deniall, and an absolute devoting of our selves up to the will of Christ.

Answ. Notwithstanding these harsh seeming conditions, and tart qualities of this yoke, we say that it is light (according to the word of Christ in this verse) and that in many regards: viz.

First, it is light, in regard of our duty; because it is our duty to perform the office of servants unto the Lord, and he requires no more of us. Servants will say often (complaining of hard and cruell Masters) that it never grieves nor troubles them, to do what becomes a servant to do, but their Masters impose that upon them, which belongs not unto them to do, and that troubles them much. Now in this regard, the yoke of the Law is light, because Christ therein requires no more of us to do, than becomes us as we are children and servants.

Secondly, the yoke of the crosse is light, in regard of our deserts; short and light, momentary, and mercifull are all our afflictions, in comparison of that which we have deserved. Thirdly, light is the yoke, both of the Law and Crosse, in regard of that yoke which the Lord might have laid upon us. The Lord hath despoticall and lordly power over us, both in regard of our Creation and Redemption, in which regards he might have imposed upon us, (if he had pleased,) far heavier burthens, and more insupportable yokes, than he hath done. And therefore do but compare, what the Lord commands us to obey, and to bear with that which he might have imposed, in respect of his absolute and transcendent power over us, and then we shall confesse, that his yoke is easie. Iohn the Cardinall de Medicis, who afterwards was Pope Leo, being restored unto Florence, by the force and power of the Spaniards, having been before 18 yeers in exile, invented this device: His Impresse was a Yoke, which Oxen use to bear, and the Motto, Suave; signifying thereby, that he was not returned to tyrannize over his Country, nor to revenge the injuries done him of his enemies, and factious Citizens; but rather to shew that his government should be gentle with all clemencie. And thus in regard of Christs great power over us, and gracious and milde governing of us, we may safely conclude, That his yoke is easie, and that he rules us with a soft and an easie hand.

Fourthly, Christs yoke is easie, both in regard of the Ceremoniall and Morall Law, imposed by God. I. In regard of the Ceremoniall Law, and the multitude of Ceremonies, and Legall Traditions contained therein, the yoke of Christ is light and sweet. II. In regard of the Morall Law, Christs yoke is easie: Here observe a difference between the Law and Gospel; for although they be both yokes, which Gods puts upon our necks to bear, yet they are thus differenced, that Iugum Legis, the yoke of the Law is importable, or so heavie, that it cannot be born, Acts 15. 10. but Iugum Euangelii suave, the yoke of the Gospel is sweet, facile, and light. The Law requires perfect obedience of man, and that by his own proper strength, and threatens with a certain curse, him that shall transgresse the least of all the commandements. But the Gospell doth conferre the holy Ghost upon the Elect, by whose power and gracious operation they are enabled cheerfully to obey the Lord; and doth also cover all their defects and failings with the perfect obedience of Christ. And thus that, which is impossible to flesh and blood, becomes easie to the regenerate, by the aid of that good Spirit, by whom they were regenerated, as follows by and by.

Fiftly, the yoke of Christ is easie, in regard of the Doctrine thereof. For I. The Doctrine of Faith doth teach us to be saved by free grace, and that we need not seek for many Mediatours, or by the multitude of laborious Ceremonies to come unto salvation, (as the Law did) but to seek unto one Mediatour, and to lay hold upon salvation by him. And therefore in regard of this Doctrine, Christs yoke is easie. II. The Doctrine of Charity doth teach onely to love one another: Now is not this easie? Certainly, love facilitates and makes all things light: and therefore seeing Omnia vincit amor; That love overcomes with ease, the greatest difficulties; Et nos cedamus amori; let us yeeld to this Euangelicall Doctrine of love, and then we shall think Christs yoke to be but easie. III. The Gospel teacheth us, that Christ by himself, without either help, or price, or merit from us, purchased our Redemption, Iohn 1. 12. and 8. 36. Rom. 8. 2. and 1 Iohn 5. 3, 4. Now to be freed and delivered out of the captivity of Satan freely by another, without any ransome paying of our own, own, is certainly a pleasing Doctrine; and therefore in regard thereof, Christs yoke is easie. IV. The Doctrine of obedience teacheth nothing but that which Nature it self teacheth to be good; and therefore in this regard also, Christs yoke is easie. To leade a vertuous life, flying from all sin and wickednesse, is a thing that may easily be born by any man: for what grievous thing doth he impose upon the necks of our Mindes, (saith Gregory 4. Moral) who commandeth to shun every desire that troubleth, who admonisheth to decline the laborious journeys of this world, and to abstain from drunkennesse, murder, theft, anger, rebellion, and the like, which the light of Nature condemns as great vices? Nay, what can be sweeter than this yoke, and lighter than this burthen, (saith Hilary, Can. 2.) or more to be approved, than to abstain from wickednesse, to be willing to do good, to be unwilling with evill, to love all, to hate none, to obtain things eternall, and not to be taken with these transient things? And thus Christs yoke is easie, in regard of the Doctrine thereof; which, although it be grievous to Nature, yet it is agreeable to the light of Nature, and easie in regard of Grace.

Sixtly, Christs yoke is easie, in regard of the yoke of sin and satan: vita vitiosa gravior. Chrys. A vitious life is more laborious and burthensome than a vertuous. There is no burthen heavier than the conscience of sin, and none lighter than a good conscience: there is no punishment greater than the punishment of sin, neither any reward greater than that which shall be conferred upon those who bear Christs yoke: A man can serve no worse Master than Satan, nor better than Christ: and therefore how great is the folly, and madnesse of those, who refuse to bear Christs yoke, and in the mean time willingly submit their necks to Satans. Thus Chrysostome saith that the yoke of Christ is light, sweet, and easie, compared with the yoke of sin, which is born by wicked men, (Chrys. s.) And he proves it thus: I. Because sin is a most heavie burthen; according to that of the Prophet David, Mine iniquities are gone over my head; and as a heavie burthen they are too heavie for me, Psalme 38. 4. And Zachary, chap. 5. verse 7, 8. saith, The burthen of sin is like a Talent of Lead, which presseth a man down to the ground, and will not suffer him to rise. II. Because Christ is a most sweet and gracious Lord: and therefore David exhorts all, but to taste and see how good and gracious he is, (Psal. 34. 8.) and then they will never refuse to submit their necks to his yoke. III. Because the sweet pleasures of sin, and delights which carnall and wicked men finde in the service of satan, will all vanish away as a dream in the night, Wisdom 5. 6, 7, &c. But the sweetnesse of Christs yoke endures for ever; for the bearers thereof shall have peace of conscience, and internall joy here on earth, and eternall felicity and happinesse in the kingdom of heaven. IV. Because the end of wicked workers is death and destruction, Rom. 2. 4. and 3. 6. and 6. 23.

Seventhly, the yoke of Christ is light, in regard of his example, for he hath born it himself: Ordinarily a man doth not think his own burthen so heavie, as he would think another mans: that is, a man carrieth with more ease and willingnesse, that which is his own, than that which is anothers: and to take a great deal of pains for our selves, is not so troublesome or irksome unto us, as to do the like for another. Now Christ bare the yoke and burthen for us, and that willingly, thinking it (out of his love to us) to be but light and easie, and therefore we should not think it hard, to bear our own burthen, or unwillingly submit our necks to that yoke, which in duty we ought to carry. Besides by Christs bearing of this yoke, it is become more easie unto us: For I. We see that it is a yoke which may be born, because our Christ hath born it. And II. It is made lighter unto us, by Christs bearing thereof. The yoke that cattell do bear, is very heavie when it is new and green, but when it is dry, and somewhat worn, it is more soft to be suffered, and more light to be carried: And therefore our blessed Saviour would not incontinently after his birth burthen us with the yoke of his Law, but first did carry it some three and thirty yeers himself, that it might become seasoned, and more light unto us. For what hath Christ commanded us to do, that he hath not first done himself? what yoke hath he cast upon our backs, that he first hath not born upon his own shoulders? If he commanded us to fast, he fasted: if he commanded us to pray, he prayed: if he commanded we should forgive, he pardoned: if he commanded us to love, he loved: if he commanded us to dye, he died. And therefore let us look upon Jesus, the Author and finisher of our Faith, and think that we saw him with this yoke upon his own neck, and this burthen upon his own back, bearing and carrying them for our sakes and examples, that is, bearing them himself, that so they might become easier unto us; & that seeing he carried them, we may not refuse to bear them, but be incouraged to undergo thē, because if the Master did carry them, then well may the servant; if he did bear them for our sakes, then we may wel bear thē for our own. And thus the yoke becomes easie unto us by Christs bearing of it.

Eightly, Christs yoke is easie in regard of the short, small and momentary time that it lyeth upon us. A Porter thinks a heavie burthen light, if he be to carry it but to the next dore, or a little way off. No man thinks much of great toil, and travell, if it be but of short continuance. And therefore in this respect, Christs burthen is light: The yoke of the Crosse is but momentary, (as Paul himself saith) our light afflictions, which are but for a moment, (2 Cor. 4. 17.) where the second is an Exegesis of the first. Was Pauls afflictions light? No, but very heavie, as appears most cleerly by the 8, 9, and 10 verses of that same Chapter. Then why doth he call them light, if they be heavie? Because Magna brevia, they were but short and momentary. The life of man is like the Day of an hireling (saith Iob, 7. 1.) And therefore who will think either the yoke of the Law, or the burthen of the Crosse, to be heavie, seeing they are to bear them but a day, yea (in regard of eternity) but a moment? Life is short, & our labour is of the same length & 112 Laſt; for when once the night of death approacheth, then all tears ſhall be wiped off from our faces, then our yoke, and burthen ſhall be taken off, and we ſhall be made happy and bleſſed, by the enjoyment of eternall reſt, Rev. 14. 13.

Ninthly, the yoke of the Law is light & eaſie, in regard of the purity thereof; for the Law of Chriſt is pure, and all his Commandements are holy and juſt, and good. Moſes Law did allow of Divorcements, and Vſury: Pharaoh granted to the Egyptians by a Law to be theeves. In Lycurgus his Lawes, man-ſlaughter was not chaſtiſed. By the Law of Solon Solonius, Adultery was diſſimuled: Numa Pompilius held it lawfull for a man to conquer, as much as he could take, although hee could pretend no other colourable title at all unto it, then the purchaſe by dint of ſword. The Lydians uſed no other Marriage then this; that he who firſt could allure a maid unto folly, and entiſe her unto fornication, ſhould bee her husband. The Baleares commanded, that the Bride ſhould not be given to the Bride-groome, before the next kinſman had uſed and defloured her. Theſe and ſuch like Lawes wee may juſtly ſay, were hard, heavie, and grievous; but the holy and ſacred Law of Chriſt, is ſo right in the things it doth admit, and ſo pure and ſincere in the things it doth permit; that it doth neither ſuffer vice, nor conſent to the vicious man. And therefore may be called light in this regard.

Tenthly, Chriſts yoke and burden is light and eaſie unto the faithfull, in regard of that love which they beare unto him; for love (we know) makes all things light, the propertie thereof being to turne the rough into plaine, the cruell to gentle, the bitter to ſweet, the unſavourie to pleaſant, the angry to quiet, the malicious to ſimple, the groſſe to adviſed, and alſo the heavie to light. Hee that loveth, neither can murmure at them, that anger him; neither deny that they aske him; neither reſiſt when they take from him; neither anſwer, when they reprove him; neither revenge if they ſhame him; neither yet will be gone, when they would ſend him away. What doth hee forget, that doth love with all his heart? what leaveth hee undone, that knoweth not but to love? whereof doth hee complaine, that alwayes doth love? In a word, the heart that loveth entirely without compariſon, much more is that pleaſure that he taketh in love, then the travell that he paſſeth, or taketh in ſerving, [k].

[k] Guevara, pag. 48. Familiar Epiſtles.

Eleventhly, Chriſts yoke is light and eaſie, in regard of the ſweetneſſe thereof: for there is ſuch a change wrought in the affections of the faithfull, after they are once brought unto Chriſt, that they thinke his word no longer to be a har ſaying (Iohn 6. 60.) but rather as honey unto their taſte; delighting more in the ſervice of Chriſt, then ever they did in the ſervice of ſinne, the joy of the one being ſolide, the other light and vaine.

Twelfthly, the yoke of Chriſt is eaſie, in regard of the helpe wee have to beare it; although without this aſſiſtance the yoke be heavie. If a Father ſhould command his child, to take up ſome great blocke, and carry it in; he would anſwer that it is too heavie for him to beare; but if the Father take it up, and bid him to ſupport, and beare up the end thereof, then the child wil ſay, that it is light; becauſe his Father carries the greateſt weight by much.

Thus our bleſſed Saviour doth not compare his bleſſed Law to Timber, Stone, or Iron; but onely to the yoke, becauſe all thoſe things may be carried by one alone: but to draw the yoke, of neceſſitie there muſt be twaine: To teach us, that even at the preſent houre, when the good Chriſtian ſhall put downe his head under the yoke to carry the ſame; forthwith on the other part, Chriſt puts himſelfe to helpe him. None calleth Chriſt, whom he doth not anſwer; none commend themſelves unto him, whom hee doth not ſuccour; none doth travell, or labour for him, whom hee doth not helpe; For hee who commandeth us to take up this yoke, he himſelfe doth helpe us to beare it. With ſuch a Guid as this, who can loſe his way? with ſuch a Pilot as this, who feares drowning? with ſuch a Captaine as this, who deſpaireth of victory? with ſuch a Companion as this, what journey can bee tedious? with ſuch a Copartner, and Fellow-helper as this, what yoke can be heavie? If any ſhould ſay, ah, but Chriſt is now in heaven, and hath left us to beare the yoke alone: I anſwer, wee are not alone, for hee hath given unto all thoſe, who willingly ſubmit their necks unto his yoke, a bleſſed Comforter, even his ever-bleſſed Spirit, to be with them; who,

I. Strengthens, and enables them to beare the yoke of obedience, and in ſome meaſure to performe acceptable ſervice unto the Lord. And,

II. Corroborates, and ſtrengthens them with patience, to beare the yoke of the Croſſe, making a way for them to eſcape out of all afflictions, and laying none upon them, which is above their ſtrength to beare. And,

III. Affording unto them ſuch a meaſure of peace, joy, and ſpirituall comfort, in all their doings and ſufferings, that nothing can deject or caſt them downe; but in all theſe things they are more then Conquerors, through him that loves them, Rom. 8. 37. &c.

Laſtly, our Saviours yoke is eaſie, in regard of the reward, Duo ſunt quæ faciunt opus facile: Primo affectus operantis. Secundo pretium rei adipiſcendæ. Iacob. de Val. Pſal. 118. That is, two things make a worke eaſie: to wit,

I. The affection and love, which the Workeman hath unto the worke; as was ſhewed before.

II. The excellency, and worth of the thing, which we deſire to obtaine, or the greatneſſe of the reward which ſhall be conferred upon us for the worke: If a Porter ſhall be deſired to carry a heavie burden; yea, and ſomething farre, yet he refuſeth it not, neither is diſcouraged with the weight thereof: but rather thinkes it light and eaſie, if his reward therefore ſhall be extraordinary: Now we know, that great is the reward which ſhall bee given to all thoſe, who faithfully and cheerfully beare this burden (as is plaine from 2 Corinth. 4. 17. and Hebr. 11. 26. and 12. 2. and Luke 22. 28. &c. and 2 Tim. 2. 12. and Act. 5. 41. Rom. 5. 3. and 8. 37.) yea, that there is no comparison betweene the worke and the reward: For what comparison, or proportion is there, betweene a corporall worke, and a spirituall reward, a temporall worke, and an eternall reward, an earthly worke, and an heavenly reward, a momentany worke, and a perpetuall reward, an imperfect worke, and a perfect reward, a finite worke, and infinite reward, a corruptible worke, and an incorruptible reward? And therefore in all these regards, wee may say with our Saviour, in the Text, that his yoke is easie, and his burden is light. 11.

is

Reasons of the Authors brevitie, in the following Chapters.

CHRISTIAN READER, I thought good to give thee notice, that when (at least, to mine) I had finished the eleventh Chapter, I heard (which I professe I knew not before) that both Calvin, Musculus, Marlorat, and Gualter, (which thou maist see, I made some use of) were in English, with divers others (which I never saw) upon this Gospel. And therefore this is one cause, Reason 1. why I have left my former Method (which was more long) and given thee only some few Notions upon some few verses of every Chapter, which followes; for the most part omitting more verses, then I have touched upon; and in those which I have pitched upon, being very short; sometimes raising but one Observation, or solving some one Question, or answering some one Objection out of a whole verse.

Againe, my intent at first, was to imitate and follow D. Mayer, who hath observed some speciall things out of every Booke of the New Testament, in some Chapters opening but three verses, in some sixe, in some eight, in few or none at all above ten; leaving thus elbow-roome enough for whosoever shall come after. Thus (in imitation of him) I have also done, touching upon halfe a score, or a dozen verses, or there-abouts, in every Chapter, taking only up a few gleanings after him. S. Augustine saith, this is a reason of writing, and printing Bookes, and consequently of reading them: Vt sic bonæ notiones, quasi virgulis limatis figantur, ne ut aves avolent; that so good notions may be held, as it were, with Lime-twigs, and not like birds flye away, as they often doe, when a man only heareth them. Reason 2.

This was another cause of my printing these short Collections, and Observations upon this Gospel; that so those things, which in my reading and study I met with all, and which (in my weak judgement) were worthy of observation, might not be lost, but rather be made (by publishing them to the world) publikely profitable. Reason 3.

CHAPTER XII.

Vers. 5. VERS. 5 Or have yee not read in the Law, how that on the Sabbath dayes the Priests in the Temple prophane the Sabbath, and are blamelesse?

Quæst. WHether is it lawfull to worke, or not, when the case stands so, that either we must worke, or there is a morall certainety, that the fruits of the Harvest will receive a sensible hurt, to the prejudice of our life or livell-hood?

Resp. In this case it is not only lawfull, but also our dutie to work, and we breake the Sabbath, except we breake it: Christ here saith, That the Priests, labouring in the Temple, did prophane the Sabbath, and yet were guiltlesse. How so? prophane, and yet guiltlesse? Because those their Temple workes, (had it not beene on such occasions) would have beene a prophanation of the Sabbath. The sense of a Law, is the Law; now according to the Letter of the Law, the killing of sacrifices, and other Temple-workes, were to see too, a profanation of the Sabbath; but in the true meaning they did sanctifie, and not prophane it. Right so: In case of necessitie wee prophane the Sabbath, except we prophane it: For both necessity herein hath no Law; and besides it doth adde a new relation to the worke wee doe; not a new Ens, but a Modus entis. And there is not the greatest toyle in the world, but in this sense, it is a keeping of the Sabbath holy: For the Sabbath was made for man; (that is) not onely for the very being of man, but for his wel-being: and therefore whatsoever by necessitie, without fraud, or covin, is to be done on that day for the com-

114 comfort of man, that now is turned into a very Sabbath worke: If any desire to see this Question discussed thorowly, I referre him to Mr. Pembles obscure places explained, Chap. 18. pag. 375. I conclude that no understanding Christian will (I thinke) make question, but that upon some urgent occasions, and enforcing necessities, a man may worke: as for example; if a fire should breake forth upon the Sabbath day in divine service, or Sermon time, it were undoubtedly lawfull to labour to quench it, although it could not be done without paines, and also without taking us off, and from the religious duties of the Sabbath. If those who live in a fenny country, should have a Wall, or Banke breake upon the Sabbath day, through which the water entring, both Cattell and houses should be in imminent danger to be lost and laid waste, without present and speedy helpe: In such a case, certainly a man may work; yea, if they doe not, they neither understand our Lords will, nor performe the duties of the Sabbath.

Vers. 7. VERS. 7. But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltlesse.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Volo, I will.

Question What is meant here by I will?

Answ. 1. First, Volo misericordiam ostendere (Hier.) I will shew mercy. From whence I might observe, that salvation proceeds from the meere mercy of God: But I passe this by.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Volo ut misericordiam ostendatis inter vos (and thus the most expound it) I will have you to be mercifull one towards another. Hence observe:

Observ. That true obedience is to bee performed according to the will of God, Matth. 6.10. and 7. 21. and 12.3. Rom. 12.3. Ephes. 5.10.15. and 1 Thessal. 4.3.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Volo misericordiam, I will have mercie.

Observ. Wee may learne hence, that mercy is the best Religion, Iames 1.27.

Quest. 1. Why doth not the Lord say, Volo justitiam, I will have justice?

Answ. 1. First, lest hee should seeme to seeke himselfe, and not us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because Iustice in it selfe doth convince the conscience.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because many would have justice, and not mercy; and therefore that we might learne of our Father to be mercifull, hee saith, I will have mercy.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because mercie doth both approve, and regulate Iustice.

Quest. 2. Why must we be mercifull?

Answ. 1. First, because Deus vult, God will have us mercifull, and his will must rule us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because Charitie is the summe of Religion, Matth. 22.39. and 1 John.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because herein wee imitate our Father, who is a God of mercy, Luke 6.36.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because wee have obtained mercy from our Father; therefore we must be mercifull to our brethren, Mat. 18.22.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, because otherwise, we neither can bee assured of mercy from God or men, Matth. 5.7. and 7.2. and James 2.13.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And not sacrifice.

Quest. 3. What is the meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. First, some understand them Absolute, simply and absolutely; of a negation and rejection of sacrifices: but God is not contrary unto himselfe, abrogating sacrifices, before Christ (the Antitype) came.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand these words respectively; and that either,

I. Comparative comparatively, as if he would say, I desired mercy rather then sacrifice, and knowledge rather then burnt offrings, Hos. 6. 6. Or,

II. Exceptive as if hee would say, I covenant for sacrifice without mercy, Esay 1.11. &c. These two last interpretations in generall, differ but little; but particularly they may be thus distinguished: to wit,

First, in the sacrifices of the Jewes, the former expositon seemes to approve of sacrifices, although mercy bee better; as the worke of Martha was good, but Maries was better, Luke 10.4. As if the Lord would say, I approve of your sacrifices, but yet mercy is better then sacrifices: but this interpretation is not now to be admitted, because Christ being come, all the sacrifices are ceased.

Secondly, the latter exposition rejects all things where charity is wanting: As if our Saviour would say, in the commanding of sacrifices I would have mercy, because this is the end, that is but the meanes. Hence then note.

Observ. That the outward worship of Religion, without faith and charity, is not pleasing and acceptable unto God.

Quest. 2. What duties of Religion doth the Scripture expresse to bee unpleasing unto God without faith and love.

Answ. 1. First, without these, the sacrifices were not pleasing, Esay 1.11.15. and 66.3. Ierem. 6.20. and 7.22. Hos. 9. 4. Amos 5.21. Mich. 6.6. &c. Psalme 50.8. and 51.16. and 40.6.

Answ. 2. Secondly, fasting without these is not pleasing Esay 58.3. &c. Zach. 7.5.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, all our prayers are ineffectuall without these, Prov. 15.8.29. and 28.9.

Quest. 3. Why will not outward worship alone please God?

Answ. 1. First, because God being a Spirit, hee must bee worshipped in spirit, and in truth, John 4.24.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because a man may performe outward duties, and externall worship, and yet in his life and conversation disobey God (1 Sam. 15. 22.) But none are pleasing unto him, but those who labour sincerely to obey him.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because our sinnes doe so pollute our best actions, that nothing is pleasing unto God, so long as our sinnes are not purged by faith, Hag. 2.15. Prov. 21.27.

Quest. 4. Who are here to be blamed?

Answ. 1. First, those who trust in the worke wrought,

or

or in the bare performance therof: for this may be done both without faith and love.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who perform outward profession, without inward subjection; who will both pray and hear, and yet not submit their wils unto the will of God, but continue to walk after their own hearts lusts.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who make a profession of Religion, and in the mean time hate, envie, injure and oppresse their brethren, Abak. 2. 4. Esa. 61. 8. Many think to hide their oppressions, & wrongs done under a pretence of Religion, like the Pharisees, who made longs prayers, that they might the more unsuspectedly prey upon poor widows.

Vers. 10, 11, 12. Vers. 10, 11, 12. And behold, there was a man which had his hand withered; and they asked him, saying, Is it lawfull to heal on the Sabbath daies? that they might accuse him. And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep; and if it fall into a pit on the Sabbath day, will he not lay hold of it, and lift it out? How much then is a man better than a sheep? wherefore, it is lawfull to do well on the Sabbath daies.

From these three verses, two or three generall Questions may be considered of.

Quest. 1. Why did the Lord appoint a Sabbath, or day of rest; and that too upon the seventh day?

Answ. 1. First some Jews are of opinion, That the Sabbath being the seventh day, was appointed to be kept holy, because it is Saturns day, which is evill and unlucky to begin any work in. But this is a heathenish superstition, to seem to worship those things for fear, which are thought to hurt; as Tullius Hostilius, the third King of the Romans made the Quartane Ague, and Fear and Paleneſſe, Goddesses. The Lord taught his people otherwise, that they should not be afraid of the Stars of heaven, nor worship those things which God had given for the service of men, Deut. 4. 19.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the speciall reason why the seventh day was kept holy, was grounded upon the Lords example, that rested upon the seventh day, after the works of the Creation were finished.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, divers Reasons may be yeelded, why it was necessary that a day of rest should be appointed for the people of God; namely,

I. This day was appointed and given, ad destructionem erroris; for the destruction of errours, because the Lord did foresee, that divers in the world would make question of the beginning, and creation thereof; as they which say, (2 Pet. 3.) Where is the promise of his comming? for convincing their errour, the Lord commanded this day to be kept as a monument of the Creation.

II. It was given to instruct us in the faith of our Redemption, to signifie that Christs flesh should rest in the Grave, according to that, My flesh shall rest in hope, Psalm. 16.

III. It was given to prefigure the truth of the Promise, both in our spirituall rest from sin, (Damasc. de orthodox. fid. lib. 4. cap. 24.) as also in our everlasting rest in the Kingdom of God, Cyril in Ioan. lib. 4. cap. 51. Now in heaven we look for rest from three things, (according to Thomas) namely, First, A laboribus hujus vitæ, from the labours of this life. Secondly, A tentationum concussione, from the trouble of temptation. Thirdly, A diaboli servitute, from the service of the devill. 115

IV. It was ordained Ad inflammationem amoris, to inflame our love, that being free from worldly labours, we might the better attend upon God.

V. It was given, Ad opera pietatis, for the works of piety: for otherwise some would be so covetous, that they would never leave working for gain. (Thom. in opuscul.)

VI. This day was ordained, that the bodies should be refreshed by this rest: for some through their unsatiable greedinesse, could scarse have afforded any rest unto themselves, especially unto them, who were at the command of others, as children and servants; Simler. ſ. Exod. 20.

What things in the Sabbath were Ceremoniall, and Temporall; and what Morall, and Perpetuall; and what Mysticall? Quest. 2.

First, these things in the Jewish observation of the Sabbath, were Ceremoniall, namely, I. The prescript of the day, The Seventh day. II. The manner of keeping it, with the sacrifices, oblations, and other rites. III. The strict prohibition of all kinde of works, even concerning their meat, as in gathering, and preparing of Manna, (Exod. 16.) yea it was not lawfull upon that day, to kindle a fire, Exod. 35. 3. and that under pain of death; for, he that gathered sticks, was stoned, Num. 15. 4. The Sabbath was a shadow of our spirituall rest in Christ, and of Christs rest in the grave. In all these respects, the Sabbath was Ceremoniall, and bindeth not us now. Answ. 1.

Secondly, these things also in the Sabbath are Morall, and Perpetuall; namely, I. The rest and relaxation of the creatures from their ordinary labour; which was not the chief and principall, but Accidentalis finis, the accidentall end of keeping the Sabbath, that so they might the better attend upon the service of God. Calvin. II. The Sabbath was instituted specially for the service of God; for the remembrance of his benefits; the setting forth of his praise; and the meditating upon his works: as the Creation of the world, the Redemption, and Resurrection of Christ; Simler. ſ. Exod. 20. III. Conservatio Ecclesiastici Ministerii, the conservation of the Ecclesiasticall Ministery, was not the least, or last end of the Sabbath: that there should be in the Church ordained, and so preserved, Pastors and Doctors, who should divide the word of God aright, instruct the people, and exhort them to Repentance. Bastingius. Ursinus. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, Thomas maketh the Sabbath Ceremoniall, in these four respects; namely, I. In the determination of the day. II. In the Allegoricall signification, as it was a sign of Christs rest in the grave. III. In the Morall sense, as it signifieth a cessation from every act of sin. IV. In the Anagogicall signification; as it prefigured our rest in the Kingdom of Heaven[1]. But I rather with Ursinus, take this spirituall Sabbath, which is begun in this life, in ceasing from the works of sin, and perfected in the next, to belong unto the Morall, Answ. 3.

[1] Thom. 2. 2. quæst. 122. Art. 4

116 Morall, and internall part of the Sabbath, than to the Externall and Ceremoniall. The two first indeed are Ceremoniall in the Sabbath; the other two are not properly Ceremoniall, (seeing they are perpetuall) but rather Morall, Spirituall, and Mysticall.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, As the Sabbath was unto the Israelites, Typicall and Ceremoniall (in shadowing forth first Christs rest in the grave, and our spirituall rest in him) so now also it is Mysticall, in shewing our spirituall rest and cessation from the works of sin, as the Prophet applieth it, Esa. 58. 14. teaching us how to keep the Sabbath, in not doing our own works, nor seeking our own will. Besides, it is Symbolicall, in being a pledge unto us, of our everlasting rest in the Kingdom of God; according to that of the Apostle, There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God, Heb. 4. 9.

Quest. 3. What works were permitted to be done upon the Sabbath under the Law; and are allowed unto us under the Gospel?

Answ. 1. First, there was a great difference among the Jews in the observation of their festivall daies: for the Sabbath was more strictly kept, than the rest, they being therein forbidden to prepare or dresse, that they should eat, (Exod. 16. 23.) or to kindle a fire, (Exod. 35. 3.) But in the other solemn daies, as in the first day of the Pasch, those works are excepted, which were about their meat, Exo. 12. 16. and they onely are restrained from all servile works, Lev. 23. 7. And the reason hereof was, because the Sabbath was a speciall figure and type of our spirituall rest in Christ: and figures are most exactly to be kept, for the more lively shadowing forth of that which was figured. And therefore we have now more liberty in keeping of the Lords day; wherein it is lawfull to provide for our food, and to do other necessary things, because the figure and shadow is past, and the body is come[f].

[f] Tostat. f. Exod. qu. 13.

Answ. 2. Secondly, notwithstanding the strict injunction of bodily rest, certain works were lawfull to be done by the Jews, even under the Law; and much more by us under the Gospel. As

I. Opera necessitatis, works of necessity, which could neither be conveniently be deferred, nor yet prevented. Of this kinde is the necessary defence against the invasion of enemies; as 1 Mac. 2. 40. So Iosua with his company, compassed the wals of Iericho seven daies together, of the which number, the Sabbath must needs be one: It was also lawfull for them to leade their Oxe or Asse to the water, (Luke 13. 15.) and if their Beasts were faln into the pit, to help them out, Luke 14. 5. and in this place. And it was lawfull to save their Cattell, or their other substance, if any sudden casualty did indanger them: as if an house were set on fire, to quench it; if their Corn were like to be lost in the field, to preserve it; yea they might also in case of necessity, seek for their food upon the Sabbath; as the Apostles plucked, and rubbed the ears of Corn on the Sabbath, when they were hungry, and in so doing, are extused by our Saviour, verse 1, 2, 3, &c. of this Chapter.

II. Opera charitatis, the works of mercie and charity might (and still may) be exercised upon the Sabbath day, as to visite the sick, to cure and heal the diseased, or for the Physician to resort to his Patient. Thus we see our Saviour cures on this day, verse 13. of this Chapter, and Luke 13. 11. and Iohn 5. 8.

III. Opera pietatis, religious works, or works tending to piety, were not inhibited, but allowed to be performed upon this day; as the Priests did slay the sacrifices, and offer them, & did other bodily works which belonged thereunto: and therefore they are said to breake the Sabbath, and to be guilty, verse 5. Not that indeed the Sabbath was broken by them, but this our Saviour spake in respect of the vulgar opinion, that thought the Sabbath violated, if any necessary worke were done therein, Tostat. f. Exod. 20. qu. 14. Thus the Sexton may ring the bels to call the people to Church, and the people may walke to their Parish Church, though somewhat farre off: and the Pastor, and Minister may goe forth to preach; yea, study and meditate of his Sermon, although this bee laborious unto the body; because all these being helpes for the exercises of Religion, are warrantable and lawfull.

IV. Opera voluntaria, workes of pleasure and recreation: Now as for these we have Permission to use them, as they shall be no lets, or impediments unto spirituall exercises, as publike prayers, the hearing of the word, the meditating therein, and such like: otherwise they are not so be used. Willet. Synops. fol. 498. Initio.

VERS. 18. Behold my servant whom I have chosen, my beloved, in whom my soule is well pleased: I will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall shew judgement to the Gentiles. Vers. 18.

Wee have all the three Persons of the blessed Trinity lively expressed in this verse; but I will speake but only of the third.

How is the Holy Ghost distinguished from the Father and the Sonne? Quest. 1.

First, hee is distinguished from them by his name; For this Person onely is called the Holy Spirit, and neither the Father nor the Sonne. Answ. 1

Secondly, hee is distinguished from them by office, for he is sent by them: God the Father sends him; as in this verse, and Iohn 14. God the Sonne sends him, Iohn 15. and 20. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, the true propriety which distinguisheth this third Person from the first and second, is this; that he equally proceeds from the Father and the Sonne. How this is wrought is not revealed, except only that Christ once blowing, or breathing upon his Apostles, gave the Spirit unto them, Iohn 20. Answ. 3.

What names are given to the Holy Spirit in the Scriptures? Quest. 2.

First, sometimes hee is called only Spiritus, a Spirit, as Mat. 4. Hee was led into the wildernesse of the Spirit, and Iohn 3. That which is borne of the Spirit, and Iohn 7. The Spirit was not yet given. Answ. 1

Secondly, sometimes some Epithets are added thereunto; as Spiritus Dei, Mat. 9. Hee saw the Spirit Answ. 2.

Spirit of God deſcending. And verſe 28. of this Chapter, If I by the Spirit of God caſt out devils, &c.

Anſwer 3 Thirdly, ſometimes hee is called Spiritus Patris, the Spirit of the Father, Matth. 10. 20. and that,

I. Tó diſtinguiſh him from all created ſpirits. And,

II. To ſhew that he proceeds, and is ſent from the Father, or is of the ſame ſubſtance with the Father.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, ſometimes he is called Spiritus ſanctus, the Holy Spirit; as Matth. 1. That which is borne is of the holy Spirit; and ſo verſe 3.32. Whoſoever ſpeaketh againſt the Holy Ghoſt. Now hee hath this name given unto him in a double regard, viz.

I. In regard of his ſubſtance, becauſe that is moſt holy. And,

II. In regard of his office, becauſe hee is the Fountaine of holineſſe, bringing remiſſion of ſinnes, and working holy motions in the hearts of the faithfull.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, ſometimes hee is called the Spirit of truth, as Iohn 14. and 16. And this name he hath alſo from his office; becauſe hee keepes the true Doctrine of the Lord, and leads the ſincere Miniſters of the Church, and the faithfull people unto all truth; yea, becauſe hee dwels in thoſe places and breſts, where heavenly truth raignes, and beares ſway; but abſents himſelfe from all that love lyes, and errours.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, ſometimes hee is called Paracletus, the Comforter; becauſe he ſuſtaines the heart of the faithfull in affliction; by comfort, faith, patience, perſeverance, and hope of eternall glory, Iohn 14. and 15. and 16.

Queſt. 3. What are the offices, operations, and workes of the holy Spirit?

Anſw. They are many, and reſpect either the Prophets, or Chriſt, or the Apoſtles, or Miniſters, or the faithfull, and Elect people of God.

Firſt, the workes of the Spirit reſpect the holy Prophets, whom he governed, inſpired, and taught, enflaming them with the knowledge, and light of the true Meſſiah, and of things to come: Thus David in Spirit called Chriſt Lord, Mat. 22. And Zacharie, and Elizabeth, and Simeon, are taught many things by the Spirit, which they foretell of Chriſt, Luke 1. and 2.

Secondly, the operations of the Spirit reſpect Chriſt; for he helped the conception and nativity of the Meſſiah; The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, &c. Luke 1. and Matth. 1. Before they came together, Mary was found to be with child of the Holy Ghoſt: yea, the Spirit was given unto Chriſt by God out of meaſure; Iohn 1. and Luke 4. Ieſus being full of the Holy Ghoſt, &c. and Luke 10 He rejoyced in ſpirit; although this may be underſtood of the internall motions.

Thirdly, the operations of the Spirit reſpect the Apoſtles and Evangeliſts: hee inſpired them when they were to write the Scriptures, 2 Pet. 1. 19. Hee led them in the truth of their preaching, and brought thoſe things into their minds, which before Chriſt had taught them; He made them able Miniſters, enduing them with the gift of tongues, and the power of Miracles; and with all graces befitting ſuch a calling.

Fourthly, the works of the Spirit reſpect the Miniſters and Miniſtery of the word of God; for he makes them able Miniſters, he cals them to the work of the Miniſtery, yea he is the Governour of the Miniſtery, who doth conſerve, deliver, and propagate the true Doctrine, and that by means, viz. the ſincere Doctors of the Church, whom he hath promiſed to direct.

Fifthly, the operations of the Spirit reſpect the faithfull elect children of God: for

I. He regenerates them, Iohn 3. Except a man be born of water, and of the holy Ghoſt, &c.

II. He quickens the hearts of men, and doth excite and inſpire ſpirituall motions therein.

III. He comforts and cheers ſorrowfull ſouls, and raiſeth up thoſe who are dejected in ſpirit; from whence he is called the Comforter.

IV. He leads them the right way; They ſhall hear a voice behinde them, ſaying, This is the way, walk in it.

V. He excites and provokes the minde unto an ardent invocation of God, teaching the faithfull to pray in the Spirit.

VI. He gives to the faithfull, an aſſurance of their Adoption, and Glorification, Rom. 8. 15,16 And therefore, if we deſire to be made partakers of theſe graces and bleſſings, let us labour for the Spirit by faithfull, fervent, and frequent prayers unto God.

VERS. 20. A bruiſed Reed ſhall he not break, and ſmoaking Flax ſhall he not quench. Verſ. 20.

What is meant here by Flax? Queſt. 1.

The word in the Originall is λινον, and hath di- Anſw.
vers ſignifications; namely,

Firſt, ſometimes it is taken generally for any threed.

Secondly, ſometimes more ſtrictly, for a linnen threed.

Thirdly, ſometimes for the ſtring of a Harp.

Fourthly, ſometimes for a Fiſhers line, which is made of threed.

Fiftly, ſometimes for ſails.

Sixtly, Syrus reads, & lucernam crepitantem non extinguet; he will not quench the crackling lamp; becauſe when a lamp is ready to dye, or go out, it makes a creeking or crakling noiſe. And Tremellius for linum, flax, puts lucernam, a lamp, whoſe match or wick is made of flax: and who ſmokes, and makes a noiſe, as if it were ready to dye; and yet this Chriſt will not quench. Hence then obſerve;

That there is a weak Faith, which yet is true; Obſerv.
and although it be weak, yet becauſe it is true, it ſhall not be rejected of Chriſt, Pſalm 103. 2.

How doth the truth of this appear? Queſt. 2.

It is evident from hence, becauſe Faith is not Anſw.
created, ſimul & ſemel, perfect at the firſt, as Adam was, but is like a man in the ordinary courſe of Nature, who is firſt an imperfect birth, and then an infant, then a childe, then a youth, then a man: or like a grain of Muſtard-ſeed, Mat. 13. 31,33. and 1 Pet. 2. 2. for Faith groweth and encreaſeth

118 creaſeth unto perfection, as is cleer from theſe places, Prov. 4. 18. Epheſ. 4. 13. and 2 Pet. 3. 18. and 1 Corin. 1. 7. and 2 Corin. 1. 7. and 10. 15. and 2 Theſ. 1. 3.

Queſt. 3. Who are here to be reproved?

Anſw. Thoſe who tax, condemn, and contemn the weak children of God, Mark 9. 24.

Queſt. 4. Muſt we ſow cuſhions under mens Elbows? muſt we cry peace, peace unto them? 1 Theſ 5. 3. muſt we not reprove them for their weakneſſe of Faith? muſt we be blinde leaders of the blinde, and not tell them of their faults?

Anſw. Extreams are here moſt carefully to be avoided: for as we muſt not lull them aſleep, ſo we muſt not be ſnares unto them; ſome ſing a ſecure man aſleep, and others choke a half dead man; we muſt neither be beds of Down unto them, nor ſharp Knives; we muſt neither be ſoft Cuſhions for them, to reſt themſelves ſecurely on; nor yet to choke them withall. And therefore three degrees are to be obſerved; namely, Firſt, ſome utterly reject all weak ones; and tax all weakneſſe (in Faith) of hypocriſie. Certainly theſe are either proud, or cruell men.

Secondly, ſome comfort, and eſtabliſh thoſe who are weak; ſaying, Be quiet, thou haſt Faith and Grace enough, and thou art good enough, thou needeſt no more, neither muſt thou be too righteous, Eccleſ. 7. Theſe are ſoft, but not ſafe Cuſhions, theſe are fawning flatterers, and not faithfull friends.

Thirdly, ſome comfort, and exhort; ſaying, Be of good cheer, he who hath begun a good work, will alſo finiſh it in you, Philip. 1. 6. and therefore pray that his Grace may abound in you, verſe 9. yea do not ſit ſtill, but go forward, and march on in the way of the Lord, Heb. 6. 1. Now this is the ſafeſt and beſt courſe: for three things are to be acknowledged; namely,

I. That the maturity of Faith doth conſiſt in the perfection thereof, Rom. 8. 38. and 2 Cor. 5. 6. and 2 Tim. 1. 12. and Heb. 10. 22.

II. That doubting is not blameleſſe; for a wavering, ſtaggering, and doubting Faith is every where taxed: as Epheſ. 4. 14. Iames 1. 6. Heb. 10. 23.

III. That it is every mans duty, perpetually to encreaſe, and to labour to abound in Knowledge, Love, Faith, Spirit, and in all graces, and vertuous qualities, 2 Pet. 3. 18. Rom. 15. 13. and 1 Cor. 12. 7. Coloſ. 2. 7. And therefore to conclude this Queſtion, I ſay, that there are two things principally here neceſſary: viz.

Firſt, the truth of the fire, or of the life of Faith. And

Secondly, an encreaſe unto victory: as in this verſe, The ſmoking flax ſhall be not quench, till he ſend forth judgement unto victory. Here we muſt obſerve, That there is a great difference between life and power, between a faculty and ſtrength, and whoſoever hath Faith without ſtrength, lacks one of theſe; either,

I. Truth: for an Ape ſeemes to have Reaſon, by his imitating of Man; and the Devill is Gods Ape, counterfeiting of a falſe Faith often for a true, as was in thoſe who were alwaies learning, but never came unto perfection, 2 Tim. 3. 7. S. Iames ſaith plainly, That every Faith is not true, there being a falſe Faith as well as a true, Iames 2. And therfore, thoſe who are long weak in their Faith, perhaps want truth and life therein. Or

II. Age: Infants have true life, and yet no ſtrength, Heb. 5. 12. So a man may be one of Chriſts little ones, and tender babes, and yet be weak for a while: but theſe may be of good comfort, for Infants in time become ſtrong men, and the weaklings of Chriſt by little and little will attain unto ſtrength. Or

III. Health: vapours often diſturb and hurt the brain, and this is very dangerous: And therfore we muſt alwaies ſo hope in the mercie of God and Chriſt, that we endeavour ſtill with all our might and ſtrength, to encreaſe in age and health unto perfection.

Queſt. 5. What is here required of us?

Anſw. To prove and examine the truth, and life of our Faith; and therefore let us try Firſt, whether we be Infants or not? Now in Infants there are theſe two properties, to wit,

I. They ſuck: and therefore examine whether we deſire the ſincere milk of the Word, that we may grow up thereby? 1 Pet. 2. 2.

II. They encreaſe: for if they be alwaies children, they are dwarfs, and monſters in nature; wherefore we ſhould try our ſelves by our ſelves, what we were a moneth, a year, or ſeven years ſince, and what we are now; and ſee how we have encreaſed in light, and knowledge, and Faith, and zeal, and hatred of ſin, and ſtrength in the ſervice of God?

Secondly, whether are we ſick or not? The properties of ſome ſick men, are theſe, namely,

I. They have no appetite, and therefore examine, what love we have to the Law of God, what deſire, and longing affection we have to the word, the food of our ſouls?

II. They are diſturbed in Minde, and their brain is obſcured: let us try therefore, whether we be not yet ſo blinded in our underſtandings, and ſo polluted in our Mindes, that we are ſcarſe ſenſible of our ſins, and we have no deſire to uſe the means appointed for the obtaining, and recovering of health.

III. They deſpiſe counſell, and will not follow the Phyſitians advice: wherefore examine whether we ſubmit our wils to the Lords will, or contemn his word, and walk according to the imaginations of our own hearts luſts?

IV. They ſeldome rejoyce, except it be onely in jeſts, or ridiculous, or childiſh things: ſo we ſhould herein prove our ſelves, and ſee whether we rejoyce more in the world, or in our God; whether in vain pleaſures, or ſolid delights; whether in the waies of ſin, or the works of righteouſneſſe?

Thirdly, whether have we a falſe Faith or a true? Certainly, if we neither ſuck the ſincere milk of the Word, nor grow up in grace, nor deſire the means wherby we may be edified & built up, we have neither true life, nor living Faith.

VERS. 22. Then was brought unto him, one poſ- Vvſ. 22. ſeſſed sessed with a Divell; blind, and dumbe, and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumbe both saw and spake.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Then was brought unto him.

Observ. 1. Two things may be observed from these words namely,

First, that this man comes not of himselfe unto Christ, neither hath any desire to come, that wee reade of, but as careleſse of himselfe is brought by others, to teach us,

That we are naturally careleſse of our selves, and negligent in seeking unto Christ: God loved us, before we loved him: Christ dyed for us, when we were enemies unto him, and hee called us unto him before wee call upon, or desire him.

Object. It will be here objected, that Christ sometimes requires faith of some that come unto him, before he cure or heale them; as we see plainly. Mat. 9. 28. Where our Saviour askes the blind men, if they beleeve in him, before he opened their eyes: And therefore hee doth not alwaies call or cure us, before we desire or seek unto him.

Answ. 1. First, certainly men may repayre unto Christ, yea pray unto him for temporall things, or for freedome from corporall evills, before they bee called by him; because nature teacheth us to love our bodies, and to wish well unto them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we cannot come to Christ for freedome, from spirituall evils, or cure for our soules with a true sence of our sinnes, and sorrow for them, and unfained desire to bee healed of them, before Christ come unto us; for the desires and endeavours come from him who workes insensibly in us, Iohn 3. as followes in the fourth answer.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ requires faith of the blind men, before hee cures them for these ends, viz.

I. That hee might shew the singular faith of the blind men, to those who stood about him.

II. That hee might teach both them and us, that faith is the meanes of obtaining grace: and if any desire favour or mercy from him, they must beleeve.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Christ cures us of his owne free grace, and not for any worke of ours; yea hee begets faith in us selfe in us.

Quest. 1. How many sorts of persons doth Christ cure and heale?

Answ. 1. First, he cures them who pray unto him themselves, and desire to be healed Per se. Thus he healed the blind men. Matth. 9. 28. who prayed for themselves.

Answ. 2. Secondly, he cures those, and grants the request of those, who desire Per alios (by others) to bee healed of him. And thus he cured the Centurions servant, in whose behalfe the Elders of the Jewes were sent (Luke 4. 7. &c.) by the Master.

Answer 3 Thirdly, he answers the request of those who pray pro aliis for others; whether they be brought unto him by others, as this possessed man was; or whether mercy be beg'd in the behalfe of others: as Luke 7. 4.

Fourthly, sometimes hee cures, when he is not at all entreated, or any way sought unto: and thus he restored unto life the Widdowes sonne. Luke 7. 13. 119 Answ. 4.

Observ. 2. Secondly, we see that this poore man, who is brought unto Christ by others findes mercy; to teach us: That those who are by others drawne unto Christ may hope for mercy from him. Read Iohn. 1. 41. 45. Acts. 8. 4. 5. and 11. 19. And besides remember,

First, that wee can doe nothing of our selves: but the whole worke of our conversion is Gods.

Secondly, those who bring us to God, are his Instruments: as wee see in Philip, Acts 8. 29.

Thirdly, it is a dutie imposed upon us by God to help one another, and to labour to build up one another: according to our Saviours speech to Peter: when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren. And therefore it being Gods owne Ordinance that we should mutually strengthen and helpe one another, those may hope for mercy who are brought to Christ, though by others.

Quest. 2. Who are here blame worthy?

Answ. 1. First, those who neglect to bring others unto Christ: Oh remember how great and good a worke it is to save the soule of a Brother from death. Iames 5. 20. And therefore how farre doe they wander from true Christian charity, who regard their Brothers pleasure, or substance, or life, yea his Oxe, or his Asse, more then his soule.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those are to blame, who will not be brought unto Christ, but despise the counsell, advice, instructions, exhortations, and reproofes which are given, either

I. By the Ministers; as they did, Ierem. 51. 9. Or

II. By the Magistrates; as they did 2 Chron. 30. 10. Or

III. By friends and neighbours: as Luke 7. 32. Certainly these will rise up in judgement against such, as would not be wonne, or allured by them to come unto Christ.

Sect. 2 §. 2. One possessed with a Devill.

Quest. 1. Doth Sathan possesse any, or is it onely some Melancholly humour that possesseth men?

Answ. 1 First, certainly Melancholly doth many great and wonderfull things, and produceth very strange effects, representing specters and sights to the imagination, which are not present: for nothing (almost) is more usuall, then for a Melancholly man to thinke, that he seeth that; which he sees not, yea

Answ. 2. Secondly, certaine it is that the Divell is alwayes ready to abuse Melancholly, to the deceit and hurt of the partie so affected.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but it is most certain that sometimes possession is the worke of Sathan, and not the effect of sickenesse; because those who are possessed do things which are above the power and strength of nature to doe. For

I. Such will declare what is done at the present time, in most remote places. And

II. Will

120

II. Will overcome very ſtrong men; yea, breake many and ſtrong coards. This might largely be proved, but that in ſo plaine a thing, it is needleſſe to light a Candle.

Queſt. 2. Doth the Devill care for hurting of the body? Is not he onely an enemy to the ſoule of man?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, certainely the Devill is an enemy, both to the ſoule and body of man; But yet,

Anſw. 2. Secondly, his chiefeſt enmity is againſt the ſoule, the beſt part of man. And hence:

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, he deſires to infeſt, and poſſeſſe the body; becauſe that helpes as a more ready meanes and way, to deſtroy the ſoule: and that,

I. By perverting the ſenſes and imagination. And,

II. By drawing the man ſo poſſeſſed wholly unto his ſervice; for ſuch being not themſelves, are wholly guided and led by Sathan.

Queſt. 3. Are any now a dayes corporally poſſeſſed by Sathan?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome ſay Obſidrinos, non Poſſideri. That men now adayes may bee both corporally, and ſpiritually aſſaulted, but not corporally poſſeſſed.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome on the contrary ſay, that even at this time many are bodily poſſeſſed.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, I conceive that it is enough to ſay; that,

I. There is no certaine rule given, how farre the power of Sathan is reſtrained under the Goſpel.

II. But probably wee may ſay, that ſome things do more agree to ſometimes, then to other: And therefore I ſuppoſe, that this corporall poſſeſſion did belong unto the former ages, and not unto this laſt age of the world. Here obſerve three diſtinct times.

Firſt, before Chriſt came, there were ſathanicall Oracles, where the Devill gave reſponſes and anſwers to thoſe who came unto him; and although ſometimes their anſwers were ſo ambiguous, that they might be interpreted either way; and ſometimes proved apparently falſe (as might be ſhewed by divers anſwers given by the Delphicke Oracle) yet for the moſt part, they were true; and therefore the Devill was honoured as a God.

Secondly, in the comming of Chriſt, the Oracles ceaſed giving anſwers, and became mute: (And yet in heatheniſh places, I meane amongſt the Indians, there are ſome yet) and then the Devill began to rage, and grow cruell againſt the bodies of men; whence corporall poſſeſſions became frequent; and that,

I. Partly from the malice of Sathan. And,

II. Partly for the glory of the Goſpel, Iohn 9.3.

Thirdly, after the Church was eſtabliſhed, And now there being no need of Miracles, the Devill ſeemes to be bound, and reſtrained from the corporall poſſeſſions, which cannot be cured by any naturall meanes, but only miraculouſly, or by meanes above nature.

Here (as in Chap. 11.) wee may ſay, that undoubtedly in corporall evills, ſpirituall are comprehended; and therefore this man teacheth us, what every man is by nature: namely,

That by nature we are al ſubject to the power and dominion of Sathan: as appeares thus, Obſerv.

Firſt, hee is called the Prince of the world: yea, the God of this world, 2 Corinth. 4.4. And therefore, Anſw. 1.

Secondly, it is neceſſary, that either Chriſt free us, and caſt out him, or we can never bee delivered, and ſet at liberty.

§. 3. And the man was dumbe. Sect. 3.

It is worth obſervation, how the enmity of Sathan is principally bent againſt the tongue and ſpeech; that being the moſt excellent member in the body. Reade Matth. 9.32. Marke 9.25. and Luke 11.14.

What uſe ſerves the tongue for, that the Devill is ſuch an enemy unto it? Queſt. 1.

Firſt, in generall the uſes thereof are many; namely, Anſw. 1.

I. With the tongue wee glorifie God, Iam. 3.

II. With the tongue wee diſcourſe with the Lord. As did Adam, Iacob, and Moſes often.

III. Wee expreſſe our minds unto others, by our tongues. Vox index animi.

IV. With our tongues wee utter hidden and ſecret knowledge.

V. With the tongue wee pacifie and appeaſe wrath, Proverb. 15.1. as Iacob did with Eſau.

VI. With our tongues wee give both ſweet comfort, and ſound, and ſafe counſell unto our brethren, which very difficultly would bee expreſſed by ſignes, if wee were dumbe.

VII. It is uſefull for a mans ſelfe; for therewith a man doth complaine of his want and poverty; and therewith a man doth implore help, and ſeeke remedy; and therewith a man doth utter his injuries and wrongs, and deſires redreſſe. It is an admirable thing to conſider, how great variety there is in the tongue; for with that, ſometime wee ſpeake gravely, ſometimes jeſtingly, ſometimes ſharpely, ſometimes lovingly, ſometimes harſhly, ſometimes ſweetly, lingua à ligando (Rhoding) becauſe a man ſeems to have the mind of his brother (as it were) in his hands, or rather in his tongue, to bind or loſe as he pleaſes; for ſometimes with the tongue a man doth incenſe and exaſperate his brother, and ſometimes therewith pacifie him, ſometimes we perſwade, and ſometimes wee diſſwade with the tongue; even as though it were in the power of the tongue, to make our neighbour doe what we deſire.

Secondly, but the more principall, and particular uſes of the tongue are theſe. Anſw. 2.

I. It diſtinguiſheth man from all other creatures. For,

Firſt, the words of Angels are borrowed; they aſſuming ſtrange bodies when they ſpake unto men, which by and by, they laid aſide. But men ſpeake with their owne tongues.

Secondly, the Sea-monſters which have the forme of men, or women in part, ſpeake not, neither are heard to utter any language.

Thirdly, the notes of birds are not called words or ſpeech, becauſe they underſtand not.

II. It teacheth the Goſpel and God, and Chriſt

Christ and the promises of the word; preaching the power of God unto salvation, 1 Corinth. 1. 18. 21. and the meanes to beget faith in us; Rom. 10. 17. But there can be no preaching without a tongue, or speech.

III. By Colloquies, conference, and discourse, both knowledge and grace is increased.

IV. By the tongue we set forth the praises of the Lord, and therewith wee give him thankes for all his benefits.

In the malady of this man wee may further briefly observe two things: namely,

Observ. 1. First, the cause of his dumbnesse; which was the envie, malice, and power of Sathan in his heart. Whence wee may learne: That so long as wee are under the dominion, and power of Sathan, we are mute and speechlesse.

Quest. 2. Who are spiritually dumbe?

Answ. 1. First, those who are negligent, ignorant, and cold in prayer.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who either make no profession of Religion at all, or else but a cold profession.

Answer 3. Thirdly, those who have prophane, and diabolicall tongues, altogether ignorant of all holy communication, or sanctified speeches, Colossians 4. 6.

Secondly, wee may observe here the effect of Sathans malice, and envie; namely, the letting and hindering of their speech. Whence we may observe;

Observ 2. That Sathan principally endeavours to bind the tongue; that being an instrument, both of Gods glory, and our owne good, and our brethrens edification. For,

First, God is glorified, by the prayers, praises, and pious speeches of the tongue. And,

Secondly, wee are helped thereby; the prayers, praises, and pious speeches of the tongue, being meanes to increase our grace, to obtaine blessings from God, and to confirme us more and more in the service, worship, and worke of God.

Thirdly, by the profession of the tongue, we give a good example and encouragement to our brethren; by our prayers for them, wee may withhold judgements from them, and draw downe blessings upon them: by our seasoned and sanctified discourses, we may establish them, and ground them more and more in the most holy faith, and truth of Religion. And therefore Sathan seeing how profitable an instrument the tongue is, both in regard of Gods glory, and our good, and our brethrens edification; doth therefore labour to tie the tongue, worke, yet they deprave the workeman, and that only out of suspition: From whence wee may observe, 121

That it is a most malicious practise, to traduce, or calumniate any, out of suspicion: for charity is not suspicious. Indeed suspicion is a good Examiner, but an evill Iudge. Observ.

Why may wee not censure, and calumniate out of suspicion? Quest. 2.

First, because it is contrary to religion, which teacheth us to passe by that which wee see, and to suppose wee saw that which wee doe not; that is, take no notice of the evill we see, and hope that there is that grace and goodnesse within, which wee scarce can see to appeare without. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because if men might be censured and taxed upon suspicion, then none could be free from blame; for something or other there is in every man, which might serve a judging, censuring, and carping Zoilus, for a ground to build his calumnies upon. Answ. 2.

How manifold is suspition, and whether is all suspition evill and unlawfull, or not? Quest. 3.

First, there is a suspition in evill things; when a man is suspected to have done this or that. Answ. 1.

Secondly, there is a suspition in religious things; when a man is suspected to bee but an hypocrite for all his Religion: Now wee neither learne this of Religion, neither doth religion allow of it. Quest. 4.

Thirdly, there is a lawfull use of suspition; and that, Answ. 3.

I. In civill things; for the finding out of offences and offenders: Men are often suspected, and upon suspition attached, for doing such or such a thing: And by the carefull and prudent examining of them, truth is often brought to light, and murders, and thefts often discovered.

II. In religious things, for the avoiding of danger. Christ wee see would not commit himselfe unto the Iewes, Iohn 2. 24. And why? because hee suspected them. Thus certainely the Lambe may suspect the Wolfe, and the Dove the Hawke; and because they know their cruelty towards them, so suspect them, that they may keepe themselves out of their tallons, and hands.

§. 1. He casteth out devils, by the Prince of the devils. Sect. 2.

Is Sathan cast out by Sathan, or how is he cast out? Quest. 2.

First, some say, that Sathan may bee cast out by Sathan, and they urge experience for it, and that principle also: Ab esse ad posse valet consequentia: The argument is good which is drawne from the entitie, or being of a thing, to the possibility thereof: that is, such a thing hath beene, therefore such a thing may be. Answ. 1

I. Ianswer, that there are many wicked waies to cast out Sathan, as hath beene shewed before.

II. I answer that Sathan seemes to bee able to cast out Sathan, two manner of wayes, viz. Cap. 8. 28.

First, volenter, willingly, that so hee may deceive; he often departs willingly, but as though he were driven out by force; that so he may deceive, or bee honoured; Veritatem dicit ut fallat, (Thom. 1. 64. 2. 5.) The Devill sometimes speaks true, that he may deceive. The Devill seemes to Vers. 24. VERS. 24. But when the Pharisees heard it, they said: This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub the Prince of the devils.

§. 1. But when the Pharisees heard it.

Sect. 1. Why doe the Pharisees envie these good Quest. 1. workes of Christs?

Because hereby hee was extolled, and preferred, both before them, and their Ancestors.

Answ. Wee see, that although they cannot deny the 122 be subject to Constellations, and to the aspect of the Moone; yea, to bee driven away, and cast out, by stones, herbes, verses, and the like; not that indeed he is subject unto them; but,

I. Partly, that he might defame the creatures, by perswading us, that there is a certaine deitie in them. And,

II. Partly, that hee might establish that diabolicall, and wicked art of Magicke, and Incantations. Vide Thom. 1.115.5.o. Vbi plura.

Secondly, Violenter, violently; the Schoolemen thinke, that the superiour devils can by force drive away the inferiour, Thom. 3.43.2. ad 3. But if this be so, then their kingdome is divided; and therefore I rather thinke, that when one devill casts out another, it is done by a secret compact and liking betwixt them; howsoever it seemes otherwise to us: For our Saviour seems directly to deny the Schoole-mens assertion, when he saith, How can Satan cast out Satan? &c. Marke 3.23. &c.

Answ. 2. Secondly, therefore Christ casts not out the Devill by Beelzebub, the Prince of the devils, as is most evident by these reasons, viz.

t Luke 11. 19. I. Because then a kingdome should be divided against it selfe; which is absurd, Luke 11.17.18.

II. Because their children cast him out (as they thought) otherwise then by the helpe of Sathan, t.

III. Because hee being stronger then Sathan, cast him out by the finger of God, Luke 11.20.

IV. Because Sathan scatters, but Christ gathers; and therefore Christ workes not his Miu Thom. 1.91.2.1. & 114.4. 2. racles by the helpe of Sathan, Luke 11.23.

V. Because Christ raiseth the dead unto life, which the Devill cannot doe, Nisi præstigio, v.

Quest. 2. If there bee divine power in Christ over Sathan, then why doth he suffer Sathan to afflict his servants?

Answ. He permits it for our good, to teach us how great the power of Sathan is, if it were not restrained, and limited by the Lord; that knowing it, we may be fearefull to offend him, lest in his anger he should let Sathan loose upon us.

Vers. 27. VERS. 27. And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom doe your children cast them out? Therefore they shall be your Iudges.

Obiect. The Papists stiffely maintaine, that the gift of working Miracles doth yet continue in the Church; and they argue thus: The Church of the New Testament is nothing inferiour to that of the old: But the Iewish Church before the comming of Christ, was the Church of the old Testament, and had the power and gift of casting out devils: Therefore the same remaineth still in the Church. The Minor is proved from this verse, where our Saviour saith: If I through Beelzebub cast out devils, then by whom doe your children cast them out? In which words hee ascribeth this gift unto the Iewes.

Answ. 1. First, some by children here understand the Apostles, who were Iewes borne, and had received from Christ this gift, and power to cast out devils. Now if this exposition be true, yet it makes nothing for the Papists, because the Apostles had it extraordinarily.

Secondly, but I rather with Calvin thinke, that Answ. 2. by Children are meant the Exorcising Iewes, which were before Christs time, who did cast out Devills among them, pretending an ability to doe this worke in the name of God (and so the Iewes did conceive that they did it by the finger of God) whereas in truth they were all flat Sorcerers, and did it by vertue of a league and compact made with the Devill.

Now this practise is still common with the Papists, and was frequent among the Iewes: and we reade of these Exorcists. Acts 19.13,16. Now if any should demand from whence they sprung? Iosephus (Antiq. lib. 4. Ca. 2.) saith, that these Exorcists tooke their Originall from Solomon, to whom God gave an art against Devills for the benefit of men, by certaine inchantments to asswage sicknesses, and by conjurations to put Devils to flight, binding them from returning againe; And this Art Iosephus saith remained untill his time. For he saw one Eleazarus healing those who were possessed, in the presence of Vespasian and his Sons and of divers others: And the manner of it was this, he put a ring to the Nostrils of the man possessed, having under the Seale thereof a root shewed by Solomon, and so he drew the Devil out by his nostrils, who thereupon fell downe. Then he conjured him, giving him Solomons oath never to returne againe, saying a charme over him made by Solomon. And that it might be the more evident that the Devill went out of him, the Exorcist commanded him to overthrow a Bason of water, which was set there as he went out. Now this was effected by meere conjuration: For what vertue can there be in any roote, or hearbe in the world, available to command and enforce Sathan to depart out of a man possessed?

Thirdly, the meaning of our Saviour in this Answ. 3. place, is in effect thus much: If I by the power of Beelzebub &c. that is, you have amongst you sundry Magicians, and Exorcists, who pretend and exercise the gift of casting out Devills, and you thinke they doe it by the power of God; why, then doe you not carry the same opinion of mee also? Or those amongst you who cast out devills you condemne not, neither thinke that they doe it by any compact with the Devill, but rather hold them worthy of all honour, because they are a meanes of so great a benefit unto you. And therefore it is not the thing which I doe, that ye cavill at, but it is my person, against which yee are maliciously bent: wherefore the children of Israell shall be your Judges, because in your approving of them, and upbraiding of me, your malice against me doth evidently appeare.

VERS. 29. Or else how can one enter into a strong Vers. 29. mans house, and spoile his goods, except he first binde the strong man, and then hee will spoile his house.

It is questioned by some, whether Christs blood was given as a price of our Redemption to the Divell, or to God? Now we say that Christ by his death, and the power of his blood hath delivered us from the power of darkenesse, and hell. Colos. 1. 13. which price was paid unto God to satisfie his justice, and not given unto Sathan: for God is the judge, Sathan is the Iaylor, to whom the judge did deliver us because of our sinnes. Luke 12. 38. The debt wherein we stood bound, was unto our Lord and Master, and hee in Justice delivered us to the Iaylor till wee should pay all that was due. Matth. 18. 34. Now this debt Christ paid, and that to God, not to the Devill: and the debt beeing once paid, the Jaylor hath no longer charge nor power to keep us in prison. This our Doctrine amongst other Arguments is proved from this verse thus: Our Saviour Christ is compared to a victorious man, that bindeth the strong man which is the Devill, and entreth by force into his house, & spoileth him of his goods, that is, delivereth them whom Sathan held as his owne proper goods, and captives in prison. Christ entred then by force, not by a price; by assaulting not by assenting; by warre, not by wages: by fettering the strong man, not by feeing him; by loosing our bands, not by giving any thing into Sathans hands. Willet Synops. fol. 1136.

Vers. 31. 32. VERS. 31, 32. Wherefore I say unto you, all manner of sinne and blasphemy shall bee forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Sonne of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.

Sect. 1. §. 1. But the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven.

Quest. 1. Concerning blasphemy against the blessed Spirit, divers Questions will be made, to wit: What is the sinne against the Holy Ghost?

Answ. 1. First, some of the Ancients call it finall impenitency, some hatred of all Christian, and brotherly love, and some, desperation of mercy. But these are improperly called blasphemy.

Answ. 2. Secondly, that sinne whereby the essence and person of the Holy Spirit is hurt, or blasphemed, certainly is not this irremissible sin, and blasphemy: for many Sabellians, Eunomians, and Macedonians, Heretickes, at first spake wickedly of the holy Spirit, and denied his Deity, but afterwards repenting found mercy, and obtained remission of sinnes.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, neither is this unpardonable blasphemy, a simple Apostacy from a knowne truth: because hope of pardon is not denied to these Apostates, neither is the gate of mercy eternally shut against them, if they will but repent. This appeares from our Saviours prayers, Father lay not this sinne to their charge, and yet these for whom he prayes had called him Devill, had said he had an unclean spirit, although they were convinced of his Doctrine and divine workes. I argue hence thus, Those who commit unpardonable blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, are not to be prayed for:

But Christ prayed for those who spake evill of him, and his Doctrine, and workes, against their consciences. 123

Therefore these had not committed that unpardonable sinne; and consequently might have obtained mercy, if they had but repented.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Augustine, (serm. 11. de verbis Apost.) saith, it is Impugnatio finalis agnitæ veritatis, a finall oppoſing or resisting of a knowne truth, Our Divines more largely and clearely define it thus: Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, is an universall apostacy, and totall relapse, inseparably conjoyned with an hatred of the truth. Or thus, it is a denial and opposition of a knowne truth concerning God, and his will, and workes, of which truth the conscience is convicted, and which denying and impugning thereof, is done of set purpose and with deliberation. We have an example hereof in the Emperor Iulian, who was a learned, and an eloquent man, and a professour of the Religion of Christ, but afterwards fell away and turned Apostate (and hence is called Iulian the Apostate) and wrote a Book against the Religion of Christ which was answered by Cyrill Afterwards being in a battle against the Persians, hee was thrust into the bowels with a dart, no man then knew how; which dart he pulled out with his owne hands, and presently blood followed, which hee tooke in his hand (as it gushed forth) and flung up into the Ayre, saying Vicisti Galilæe, vicisti: O Galilean, (meaning Christ) thou hast now conquered me: and so ended his dayes in blaspheming of Christ, whom he once professed w. w Theod. lib. 3. hist. Ca. 25.

Why is this unpardonable blasphemy, called the sin against the Holy Ghost? Quest. 2.

Answ. 1. First, not because the Holy Spirit may bee offended, and the sinne not reflect upon the Father, and Sonne: for he who sinnes against the third person, sinnes also against the first, and second, from whom he proceeds.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is the sinne against the Holy Ghost, because the manifestation of spirituall, and supernaturall truth is a divine worke, which worke is immediately wrought by the Holy Spirit: and therefore although they who wittingly, and willingly oppose this truth, sinne against all the persons of the blessed Trinity, yet after a more singular manner, they sinne against the Holy Ghost: because they blaspheme his proper and immediate worke in their minds, and maliciously impugne and resist his proper grace and power. Thus I say it is called the sin against the Holy Ghost, because it is against the operations of the Spirit, which are three, namely,

I. To enlighten the Minds with the light of the Gospell: and hence it is called the Spirit of Revelation. Ephes. 1. 17.

II. To perswade the Mind to receive and embrace those truths which are revealed by the Gospell; Heb. 6. for this is to receive the knowledge of the truth.

III. To worke in a man a certaine perswasion of the goodnesse of those things, which he beleeves and this is to taste the good word of God. And therefore the sinne against the Holy Ghost is a contumelious, and reproachfull rejecting of the 124 Goſpel, after that a mans mind (by the bleſſed Spirit) is ſupernaturally perſwaded of the truth, and goodneſſe of this word, and will of God, laid downe in the Goſpel.

Queſt. 3 Why is this ſinne againſt the Holy Ghoſt, called unpardonable, or a ſinne which cannot bee forgiven?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, not becauſe it exceeds in greatneſſe, blaſphemy againſt the Father, and the Sonne.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, nor becauſe the Father and the Son, are leſſe then the Holy Ghoſt: For all the three Perſons are coeternall, and coequall.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, neither becauſe the greatneſſe thereof exceeds, either Gods mercy, or Chriſts merit. For both are infinite; the mercy of God is above all his workes; and that λύτρον, or price laid downe by our Saviour, is of infinite value and worth. Neither,

Anſw. 4. Fourthly it is called unpardonable, becauſe it is more difficultly pardoned, then other ſinnes are: For every ſinne is ἀνομία, a breach of Gods Law; and therefore he can pardon (if he pleaſeth) the greateſt as well as the leaſt. Nor,

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, becauſe it is an inexcuſable ſinne; for in many other ſinnes, men are altogether left without excuſe, which yet are frequently pardoned upon their repentance.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, but it is called a ſinne, which cannot be forgiven; becauſe ſimply all remiſſion is denied unto it; neither did any man ever obtaine pardon that committed it, nor ever ſhall. And that for theſe reaſons; to wit,

I. Becauſe ſuch are puniſhed by God, with ſuch a finall blindneſſe of mind, and hardneſſe of heart, that they can never returne, either to themſelves, or unto God, by true and unfained repentance: and therefore being excluded, and debarred of repentance, they muſt neceſſarily be denied remiſſion; becauſe no penitencie, no pardon. Hence Saint Iohn forbids us to pray for ſuch an one, becauſe it is impoſſible for ſuch to be renewed by repentance, Heb 6.5.

II. Becauſe ſuch reject the only meanes of ſalvation; as the ſicke man, who will not be cured: For as that diſeaſe is incurable, which doth ſo take away, or deſtroy the power of nature, that neither the retentive, nor concoctive faculties can doe their duties; So there is no cure for him, who rejects the balme of Gilead, no water to waſh away his ſin, who tramples under his feet the blood of the Covenant, and deſpiſeth that all-healing Iordan, and cleare-purging, and white-waſhing Fountaine; no ſacrifices to take away his tranſgreſſions, who crucifieth unto himſelfe the Lord of glory; and deſpiſeth that ineſtimable ſacrifice offered up by him; yea, there is no name for him to bee ſaved by, who blaſphemes the name of the onely Mediator, and Redeemer, Ieſus Chriſt our Lord.

Heb. 6.4. and 10. 20. and Act. 4.12.

III. Becauſe God in his juſtice will not ſuffer, that his holy Spirit, which is the Spirit of truth, ſhould be taxed with lying and falſhood; which is the direct ſin of thoſe, who commit this unpardonable offence.

IV. This ſinne is called irremiſſible, becauſe it ſo caſts them into the power of Sathan, that they can never returne from that captivity and bondage: For as the Saints, and faithfull have the teſtimony of the Spirit, which aſſures them that they belong unto God, not unto Sathan: So theſe blaſphemous Apoſtates have a certaine teſtimony of their owne hearts and conſciences, that the Devill holds them, and will hold them unto the end: Now that teſtimony given unto the Saints, may bee called the ſeale of the Spirit; and this given unto theſe blaſphemers, the ſigne, or Character of Sathan.

Queſt. 4. How many things concurre to the making up of this ſinne againſt the Holy Ghoſt, or how many things are required in him, who commits it?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, three things concurre to the making up of this ſinne: namely,

I. Abnegatio veritatis, a deniall of the truth againſt knowledge and conſcience.

II. Apoſtaſia univerſalis, an univerſall apoſtacy, and falling away from Chriſt; and not ſome particular ſinne committed againſt the firſt, or ſecond table of the Law.

III. Rebellio, a rebellion, ariſing from the hatred of the truth, conjoyned with a tyrannicall, ſophiſticall, and hypocriticall oppoſing thereof, both in the doctrine, and profeſſion thereof. Hence it appeares,

Anſw. 2. Secondly, that in him who commits this ſin unto death, it is neceſſary there ſhould be theſe foure things: to wit,

I. Hee muſt have a knowledge of that truth which hee oppoſeth: Hence every ſinne (though never ſo great) committed of ignorance is excluded: yea, although it ariſe from a certaine malice againſt the Sonne of man himſelfe, as did that ſinne of Pauls, in perſecuting his members: For blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt cannot be forgiven, but that great ſinne (ariſing from an ignorance of the truth) committed againſt the Sonne of man, was pardoned, 1 Tim. 1.13.

II. It is neceſſary, that this knowledge of the truth doe not onely ſwim in the braine, but ſo ſinke into the heart, that there be a full and deliberate aſſent to the truth: And hence all ſinnes are excluded, which are not committed and acted, of ſet purpoſe, and out of deliberation, againſt the knowne and acknowledged truth; For blaſphemy ſhall never be forgiven, but ſinnes ſuddenly fallen into, may be pardoned; as wee ſee by Davids tranſgreſſions, Pſalme 32. 5. &c. and 51.

III. It is requiſite that this knowledge which is oppoſed, bee not acquired by ſtudy meerely, or by ſtrong and undeniable arguments or principles; but by a ſupernaturall perſwaſion of the Holy Spirit. Hence then all ſinnes are excluded which may be in a Gentile, or any man ſimply Atheiſticall; as the obduration of Pharaoh, the preſumption of Manaſſes, and the finall impenitencie of the wicked: For the ſinne againſt the Holy Ghoſt, preſuppoſeth the operation of the Holy Ghoſt in the heart, and therefore cannot be pardoned: but there may be obduration, preſumption, gloriation in ſinne, yea, finall imimpenitencie in those, who never were made partakers of any such grace, or light, or knowledge, or operation of the Spirit: and therefore if any such would but repent as Manasses did, they should be pardoned as he was.

IV. It is necessary that this perswasion bee not only of the truth of the word, but of the goodnesse thereof also: when wee perswade our selves, that the Gospel is true; yea, that it is good in it selfe, and so good, that happy shall we be, if wee receive and obey it, but miserable if we reject and sleight it. Hence the sinnes of hypocrites, and all formall Professors, (who have onely some knowledge of the truth, and make only some out-side shew of Religion, but are not affected with the goodnesse, and sweetnesse thereof) are excluded from blasphemy, which never can be forgiven; for those may repent and find mercy; but this blasphemer cannot.

Quest. 5. How many things are included in this sinne, against the Holy Spirit?

Answ. 1 First, it includes not onely a contempt, and neglect of the Gospel, but also a rejecting thereof: yea, Answ. 2. Secondly, it containes a contumelious, and reproachfull rejecting of the Gospel, which is called the trampling of the Sonne of man, and the blood of the Covenant under feet, as an impure thing. Now under this particular are comprehended malice, hatred, blasphemy, and persecution; and hence these Apostats are called Adversaries, Heb. 10. 27. From blasphemy then by this particular are excluded, all back-sliding, and denying of Christ, and sinnes of presumption; which arise either from infirmity, or passion: For Peters denying of his Master may be called properly Apostacie, but not properly blasphemy; because it proceeded from weakness, not from malice.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, it includes a contumelious rejection of the Gospel against knowledge, Hebr. 10. 26. whereby are excluded sinnes of malice, which spring from ignorance, as Pauls did.

Answ. 4 Fourthly, it comprehends a contumelious rejection of the Gospel against conscience; which Paul cals voluntarie, to sinne willingly; And hereby are excluded sinnes arising from carelesnesse, or presumption, or a perswasion of impunity, or from a sleepie conscience, as the sinnes of Manasses did.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, it includes a voluntary contradiction, and opposition, of the internall, and supernaturall worke of the Spirit, Heb. 10. 23; for this is to reproach the blessed Spirit, and the grace of the same.

Quest. 6. How doth the greatnesse of this sinne of blasphemy appeare?

Answ. It appeares by a serious consideration, and view of the nature thereof. Here then observe,

First, of all other sinnes this harmes nature most; because none casts men so farre from pardon, as this doth, which utterly takes away repentance, the only way unto salvation: As that is reckoned the greatest sickenesse, which doth not only deprive a man of health, but also debars, and shuts the doore against all meanes unto health.

Secondly, of all other sinnes, this is the most grievous, by reason of the hurt it doth; and of all other the most abominable, by reason of the defect of excuse: For it takes away all excuse from men, and makes them inexcusable: They cannot excuse themselves by ignorance, because their sinne was against knowledge; nor by infirmitie, and weakenesse, because their consciences will tell them, that they sinned out of obstinate, and wilfull malice. And therefore these mitigations, and extenuations of ignorance and weakenesse being taken from them (which other great sinners may plead) their judgement certainely shall be the more grievous, and insupportable. 125

Thirdly, of all other sinnes, this harmes the will, and mind most; for it makes a man unable to worke the workes of uprightnesse, and holinesse. That sickenesse is the most dangerous, which doth so infect, and corrupt the taste, that it makes the sicke man refuse all good meat and medicine: yea, this sinne doth not onely disinable a man from doing good, but makes him decline from the right rule, and disorder, and deprave himselfe more and more: for they sinne not only simply, out of malice, but out of malice, and that de industria.

What are the remedies against this sin, or rather, the meanes to preserve us from it? Quest. 7.

First, let us watch against all sinne; yea, against all beginning of evill, Ephes. 4. 27. Hebr. 3. 11. As those who feare the plague, fly farre from the house infected therewith. Answ. 1.

Secondly, let us highly prize the presence, and grace, and operation of the Spirit; for if wee so doe, then we shall not reject him; neither be rejected by him; but if wee contemne, and despise him, then he will give us over unto strange delusions, 2 Thess. 2. 10, 11. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, let us learne to esteeme and value Christ above all things; and then wee shall not sleight the Gospel, but thinke it a joyfull, and blessed message. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, if (with Peter) wee have fallen, then let us with him labour speedily to recover our selves: As the most deadly poyson becomes not mortall, if it be suddenly evacuated, or purged out, or vomited up: So the greatest sin becomes not damnable, if by and by with teares and sighes, wee repent us of it. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, while our spirits are something soft, and mollified, with the sight and sense of our sins; and while the Spirit of God workes in our hearts by his good motions; let us pray fervently unto our God, to pardon our by-past sinnes, to plucke us out of the dominion, and power of sinne, and Sathan, and to preserve us from all sins for the time to come. Answ. 5.

§. 2. Neither in this world, nor in the world to come. Sect. 2.

Who are confuted by these words? Quest. 1.

The Sadducees, who denied the immortality of the soule, and affirmed, that there were neither Spirits, nor Angels (Orig. contra Cels.) Non agnoscunt se Secutum nisi præsens, that is, they acknowledged not a time to come, when there shall be a Resurrection: Although our Saviour saith here: Answ.

126 Neither in this life, nor in the life to come; whereby is intimated, both the immortality of the ſoule, and the Reſurrection of the body. Hence by the Iewes theſe Sadduces were called Menaim, or Probroſi, contentious, or calumnious: Gabia, the ſonne of Peſiſa, reaſoneth againſt the Sadduces thus, x: Si quod non fuit, id fuit; Ergo, quod fuit erit. That is, if that which was not, was: Therfore, that which was, ſhall be. He meant, if God created, and made the world of nothing, may he not make our bodies of ſomething againe?

x Talm. pheſikra.

Object. Bellarmine ſtrongly preſſeth this place for the proofe of Purgatorie, argaing thus; Blaſphemy againſt the Spirit ſhall not be forgiven, neither in this world, nor in the world to come: Therefore ſome ſins ſhall be forgiven in the next world, by the prayers, and ſuffrages of the Church. But this remiſſion is neither obtained in heaven, nor in hell; Ergo, it is in Purgatory; and therefore there is a Purgatory. Bell. de purgat. lib. 1. Cap. 1. loc. 1. ex novo Teſtam.

Becauſe this objection is abundantly anſwered by our men, I may be the ſhorter in the anſwer of it: I referre the Reader to Ameſius. Bell. enervat. tom. 2. pag. 197. 198. and Chemnitius, exam. part. 3. pag. 135, 136. Arg. 7. and Hill. of the knowledge of the true God, pag. 387. 388. & Parem, ſ. And becauſe this place is urged by the Rhemiſts, upon Matth. 12. §. 6. I therefore referre the Reader to venerable Fulke, and Cartwright upon the place; onely entreating him to obſerve, that this is no Categoricall Argument, but only an Enthymeme, in which the Antecedent is Chriſts (and therefore moſt true) but the Conſequent will appeare to be moſt falſe.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, that which is fully paid, and ſatisfied, is not remitted; But the Papiſts ſay, that by Purgatory paines the debt is paid, and Gods juſtice ſatisfied; and therefore ſinnes are not remitted in Purgatory. It is one thing to pardon an offence, and another to puniſh it: and therefore if ſinnes be puniſhed in Purgatory, as they ſay, then how are they pardoned? It is one thing fully to ſatisfie a debt, another freely to remit it; for how can he be ſaid to remit a debt, which makes the debter pay the utmoſt farthing; as they ſay the ſoules in Purgatory do? Now this place ſpeaking not of a paying, but of pardoning; not of recompenſing, but of remitting (It ſhall ſhall neither be forgiven in this life, nor in the life to come) belongs not at all to their Purgatory, where men ſatisfie Gods juſtice (as they wickedly ſay) to the full; and wherein (for the time) men are extremely tormented; the paines thereof being (as ſome of them ſay) equivalent to the paines of hell, for the time. And therefore by this their Argument, inſtead of raiſing the fabricke of Purgatory, they have razed the foundation; as appeares thus: The ſcope of their Objection is to prove, that the ſinnes of beleevers are remitted in the world to come; now to remit, and to puniſh are oppoſites, as Chryſoſtome, (Hom. de poen. & confeſ.) ſaith, Nemo remittit, qui punire vult; and therefore if the ſinnes of the faithfull be remitted, and pardoned in the world to come (as they would prove from this place) then undoubtedly they are not puniſhed in the world to come. And thus inſtead of confirming, they have confuted, inſtead of planting, they have plucked up Purgatory by the roots; for to deny that ſoules are puniſhed in Purgatory, is to deny Purgatory it ſelfe.

Secondly, by this world, is meant a mans life time in this world, from the birth to the dying day; and it is certain, that in this time ſins may be remitted: the world to come, is after this life is ended; but a mans ſins may be remitted at the hour of death: And therefore by a Synechdoche it may be true, that ſins are alſo remitted in the other; becauſe the hour of death is the beginning of that other world. The ſenſe and meaning of this place therfore is, That the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt, is neither remitted in life nor death: Now according to this expoſition, the place maketh nothing for Purgatory at all. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, or by the world to come, may be meant (as is generally underſtood) the world ſucceeding this: and ſo anſwereth to the world preſent, as Mark 10. 30. They ſhall at this preſent receive an hundred-fold, and in the world to come, life everlaſting. Wherefore, Purgatory being imagined to be now preſent, it cannot be taken to belong to the world to come. And ſo alſo, Epheſ. 1. 21. and Heb. 6. 5. the world to come is taken for the world which ſhal be after this is ended, (Willet Synopſ. fol. 405.) yea the Papiſts, I think, are not able to produce one place of Scripture, to prove, that by the world to come, is meant, the time betwixt death and the day of judgement; but alwaies either for the laſt day, or the eternity which is after that day, Luke 20. 35. And thus Auguſtine (de Civit. Dei. lib. 21. cap. 24.) by the world to come, in this place, underſtands the day of the Reſurrection. And Damaſcene alſo (de orthod. fid. lib. 2. cap. 1.) ſaith, Æterna vita, & æternum ſupplicium futurum ſeculum oſtendunt. And thus, This world, is taken for the diſtance of time, to the end of the world: and, The world to come, for that eternity which ſhall begin after Chriſts ſecond comming. And according hereunto, there ſhall be two times, in which, ſins are pronounced remitted; to wit, this world, by the preaching of the Goſpel to the repentant; and that to come, when Chriſt ſhall confeſſe with his own mouth, before Gods Angels, to whom they are remitted, and by which remiſſion they are made truly bleſſed; for that remiſſion to come, ſhall be a confirmation of this preſent: and thoſe which are not remitted here, neither ſhall there be ſo pronounced. Wherfore, from this ſpeech of our Saviours, this Argument is gathered from the Antitheſis; If the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt, be neither remitted in this world, nor in the world to come, then other ſins are remitted, both in this and the other; or at leaſt, either in this or in the other. But it is not remitted in the other, becauſe it is not remitted in this, as hath been ſaid: It followeth therefore, that other ſins are remitted, both in this, and in the other. Now in this ſenſe, this place doth not onely not make for Purgatory, but alſo repugneth it. For theſe two remiſſions (in this world, and the world to come) are conjoyned, Anſw. 3.

joyned, and one is not ſeparated from the other. Chryſoſtome expounding this place, together with this partition of time, ſaith thus; Amongſt men,

I. Some ſhall be puniſhed for their ſins, both here and there, as the Sodomites.

II. Some onely in this life preſent; as the Corinthian fornicator.

III. Some onely in the life to come; as the rich glutton.

IV. Some in neither, as the Prophets, and Apoſtles. And from this partition he infers, that the meaning of our Saviour is, That the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt is ſo grievous and horrible, that they which commit it, ſhall feel the judgement of Gods wrath, both here, and in the world to come; which hapneth not to all, who commit other ſins. Certainly, they which with a ſet purpoſe deny the known truth, againſt their conſciences, feel a hell of torments in their conſciences in this life, at ſome time or other, if not alwaies; and in the life to come, their pains ſhall be exquiſite, and unſpeakable, in the moſt rigorous manner. And therefore, from this place nothing can be gathered for their Platonicall, rather than Platonicall Purgatory.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, it follows not, the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt ſhall not be remitted in the next world; therefore other ſins ſhall: no more than this followeth, which Chriſt ſaith, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until I drink it with you in my Fathers kingdom, Mat. 26. 29. That therefore he did drink of other things, becauſe he did not drink of the vine. For it is a moſt fooliſh abſurdity, from two Negations to infer an Affirmation: as for example, Saint Peter neither in this life, nor in the life to come, ſhall be made an Angell: therfore ſome Saints in the life to come ſhall be made Angels. Now Bellarmine would juſtifie this Argument, by that example, where Chriſt ſaith, My kingdom is not of this world: And Pilate inferreth thereupon, Art thou a King then? where an Affirmation is concluded out of the Negative. To this Doctor Willet (Synopſ. f. 405.) anſwers, That the reaſon is not alike, except Bellarmine will reaſon as Pilate did, Thy kingdom is not of this world, Therfore thou haſt a kingdom. So, Blaſphemy ſhall not be forgiven in the next world, Therefore there ſhall be Blaſphemy then. Thus he might have concluded truly (and thus he ſhould have concluded, if he would reaſon as Pilate doth) for in hell there ſhall be Blaſphemy.

Anſw. 5. Fiftly, it follows not, ſome ſins ſhall be forgiven in the other world; therefore in Purgatory. For many have thought, that ſins ſhall be forgiven after this life, and yet not in Purgatory neither. Thus Origen imagined, that after ſome long and grievous torments, both the ſins of the devils and of wicked men ſhould be remitted: And the Chiliaſts thought, that after a thouſand years, from the day of judgement, all ſhould be pardoned: yea Auguſtine (lib. 6. contra. Iul. cap. 5.) thought, that in the day of judgement, ſome ſins ſhould be forgiven. And therefore Purgatory is not neceſſarily concluded from the remiſſion of ſins after this life.

Anſw. 6. Sixtly, by this reaſon of Bellarmines, it may be concluded, that mortall ſins ſhall be remitted in the world to come, becauſe Chriſt onely excepts the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt: but this the Papiſts will not grant, and therefore why ſhould we grant the other? 127

Anſw. 7. Seventhly, from a particular Negation (contrary to all Rules of Logick) they infer an univerſall Affirmation. If the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt ſhall neither be remitted in this life, nor in the life to come: Then (ſay they) all the temporall puniſhments of all ſins, which are not here fully paid, ſhall be paid and ſatisfied by the faithfull in the world to come. The meaning whereof is, temporall puniſhments are due unto the faithfull for their ſins, part of which puniſhment they ſuffer in this life, and the remainder in the life to come. The Argument is caſt in the ſame mould with this. Socrates, or Solomon is no fool; therfore all men are wiſe: and he is a fool, and not wiſe; who admitteth of ſuch Arguments. Sadeel. adver. hum. ſatisf. object. pag. 247.

Anſw. 8. Eighthly, Bellarmine argues, A ſubcontrariis, and yet doth not obſerve the Law of Subcontrarieties; from which the force of the concluſion ſhould follow. As for example,

I. Some ſinne is not remitted: Some ſinne is remitted.

II. Some ſinne is not remitted in this life: Some ſinne is remitted in this life.

III. Some ſinne is neither remitted in this life, nor in the life to come.

Some ſinne is remitted both in this life, and in the life to come. Now theſe are contraries, and concluded according to the Rules of Art. But the Papiſts conclude thus; Some ſinne is neither remitted in this life, nor in the life to come. Therefore ſome ſinne is not remitted in this life, but in the life to come. Where the errour is ſo plaine, that a freſh man can tell, that it doth not conclude aright. For to a double negation ſhould be oppoſed a double affirmation; whereas they oppoſe onely one. As if a man ſhould argue or conclude thus.

Some neither love God in this life, nor in the life to come. Therefore

Some ſhall love God in the life to come, which love him not in this life. This followes not.

Our Saviour rather argues thus, Some ſinnes (namely, thoſe committed againſt the Holy Ghoſt) ſhall neither be forgiven in this life, nor in the life to come. But ſome ſinnes ſhall bee forgiven both in this life & in the life to come: that is all the ſinnes of all the faithfull; for they are pardoned here, and they ſhall be pronounced and declared to be remitted at the day of judgment. Scharpius de purg. p. 544.

Anſw. 9. Ninthly, Purgatory being an Article of their faith ſhould not be collected from a certaine oblique kind of reaſoning, but from the direct, plain and expreſſe words of Holy writ, And therefore this place is ill brought for the proofe of Purgatory.

Anſw. 10. Tenthly, our Saviour in this place ſpeakes, De culpâ of the remiſſion of ſinne: And therefore Bellarmine is here guilty of the Sophiſme called Ignoratio elenchi applying it onely to the puniſhments

of

128 of sinne, and that temporall. Christ saith that the sinne or fault cannot be remitted in the world to come. Iohn 3. 18. And the Rommists doe not much oppose it. And therefore this place which speakes onely of the remission of the sinne, is injuriously, produced for the proofe of the Remission of temporall punishment.

In the place alledged, Iohn 3. 18. Our Saviour saith, Hee that beleeveth, is not condemned, but hee that beleeveth not, is condemned already. Upon which place the Rhemists give this note, that he that beleeveth shall not be condemned either at the houre of death, or day of judgment: from which place I reason thus, Every man either dieth in faith or without faith: If he die in incredulity, he is condemned, and there is afterwards no hope: if in faith, hee is freed from condemnation and entred into life, and so consequently delivered from his sinnes: Therefore in this life onely wee obtaine remission of sinnes, because faith is onely of this life, whereby our sinnes are remitted. Willet. Synops. 405.

Answ. 11 Eleventhly, the meaning of these words, shall neither be forgiven in this life, nor in the life to come, is, shall never be forgiven world without end, as is plaine, from Luk. 12. 10. and Mark. 3. 29. He that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost hath never forgivenesse. Marcus alijs verbis eandem sententiam expressit. (Augustin. de verb. Dom. serm. 11.) St. Marke expresseth in other words the selfe same thing that S. Matthew doth: although this Evangelist useth more words for the greater Emphasis, according to the usuall and old custome of the Jewes. Saint Matthew was an Hebrew, and the Hebrewes were not content to say, In seculum for ever, but in Seculum & seculum, for ever and ever, that is, alwaies. So here, neither in this world, nor in the world to come; that is, never as St. Marke expounds it, Mark. 3. 29: yea according to the exposition of St. Matthew himselfe in this place: for verse 31. he saith. Blasphemy shall not be forgiven, that is, at all: and then he addeth in the verse following, neither in this world nor in the world to come; so that not to be forgiven in this world, or the next, is not to be forgiven at all. Bellarmine opposeth that which we say, that Matthew is to be expounded by S. Marke; but I omit his exceptions, entreating my Reader, if he desire to see them both proposed and solved to looke upon Sibarpius de purgat. pag. 544.

Verse 33. VERS. 33. Either make the Tree good, and his fruit good: or else make the Tree corrupt and his fruit corrupt: for the Tree is knowne by his fruit.

Object. The Rhemists object this place for the proofe of free-will thus: It is in a mans owne free-will and election, to be a good Tree, or an evill, to bring forth good fruit or bad: for our Saviour here saith: either make the Tree, and fruit good or bad.

Answ. 1. First, from this place they might as well prove that a man hath wings, to fly whether hee will, as free will to doe what good he will: for the plaine meaning of our Saviour is no more then this, to wipe away the blasphemy wherewith the Pharisees went about to charge him; and declareth by this phrase, that his miracles (as the fruits) being even by their own judgment unreprovable, himself (as the tree) ought not to be condemned: And therefore they should either justifie him with his miracles, or else condemn him and them together.

Secondly, this verse doth not onely not confirm free-wil, but doth also confute it; because it affirmeth that by Nature, we are all corrupt and naughty trees: but this followeth more plainly in the next verse. Answ. 2.

VERS. 34, 35. O generation of Vipers, how can ye, being evill, speak good things? For out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart, bringeth forth good things; and an evill man out of the evill treasure of his heart, bringeth forth evill things. Verse 34, 35.

§. 1. O generation of Vipers. Sect. 1.

What resemblance was there between the Viper, and the Iews, or Pharisees, that our Saviour here calleth them, A generation of Vipers?

Chrysostom (s. Mat. 3.) answers, that they are fitly termed Vipers, in regard of a three-fold property, which is common to them with Vipers; namely, Quest.

First, when the Viper hath bit a man, by and by she runs unto the water: which if she finde not, she dyeth by and by. So the Iews, having committed many great & grievous sins, run unto Baptisme, that thereby (after the manner of Vipers) they may escape the danger of death. Answ.

Secondly, as the nature of the Viper, is to break the bowels of his dam, and so to be brought forth: so the Iews, persecuting daily the Prophets, did therby kill their Mother, to wit, their Church and Synagogue.

Thirdly, as the Viper outwardly seemes faire, and speckled, as though she were painted, but inwardly is full of poyson: So the Scribes and Pharisies did without counterfeit, and faine a shew of holinesse, but did carry within the poyson of maliciousnesse, and the venome of wickednesse.

§. 2. How can ye that are evill, speake good things? Sect. 2.

It is questioned betwixt us, and the Papists, Argum. whether a man can doe any thing that is good of himselfe, and by the power of Free-will, or whether there be in man Free-will, or not? wee affirme the negative, and confirme it from this verse thus,

If any worke, which proceeds from the meere Free-will of man be good, then it will follow that a man may doe some good thing of himselfe. But the latter is false. Therefore also the former. The necessity and truth of this connexion is manifest; for all grant, that to be done by man, which is done by Free-will, and so oppose Free-will to grace. And therefore it is necessary, that that which doth not proceed from grace, should proceed from Free-will; that is, from man by the power of his will.

The Consequence is easily proved, from these two verses, Oh generation of Vipers, how can ye speake good things, when ye your selves are evill? (that is, as Lyranus interprets it) yee being filled with malice malice, and envie against me, cannot speake any good of me:) The good man out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth good things; and the evill man out of the evill treasure of his heart bringeth forth evill things; Anselm upon these words hath this Observation, or Exposition: Quomodo bonus homo non possit proferre mala, nec malus bona; sic non possit Christus mala, nec diabolus bona opera facere: As the good man cannot bring forth evill things, nor the evill man good things; So Christ can doe no bad workes, nor the Devil any good. Reade further for the proofe hereof, Mat. 7.16,17,18,19. and Luke 6.43,44. From whence plainely this Argument may be drawne. No corrupt and evill tree can bring forth good fruit. But every man by nature, is a corrupt, and evill tree (being the child of wrath, and infected with sinne) And therefore, no man by nature, or by the onely power of his Free-will, is able to bring forth good fruits.

Sect. 3. §. 3. A good man out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth good things.

Quest. 1. What is a good thing, or a good worke?

Answ. Good workes are generally thus described: They are actions externall or internall, conformable, and agreeable to the will, and to the Law of God: But from this verse, they may be thus defined: They are workes which flow and proceed from a disposition of vertue: For the good man, out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth good things.

Quest. 2. How many things are required unto a good worke?

Answ. Three things are required, viz.

First, a good beginning, that is, the will well disposed, and working out of true vertue: For goods fruits cannot spring, but from a good tree, verse 33.

Secondly, a good matter, or object; that is, something which is commanded by God: for otherwise, it will bee but will-worship, as Matth. 15.6. In vaine doe they worship me, teaching for doctrines, the commandements of men.

Thirdly, a good end; that is, the glory of God, and those things which tend to his glory, 1 Corinth. 10.31. And thus if we desire to approve our selves to bee good men by our good fruits; we must labour that,

I. Our wils may be rectified, and rightly disposed. And,

II. That our workes may be moderated, according to the word of God, in regard of the matter of them. And,

III. That our end in all our good workes may be, that God may be glorified in us, and by us.

Vers. 36. VERS. 36. But I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speake, they shall give account thereof, in the day of Judgement.

Object. Bunderius a Papist, from this place would prove Purgatory, thus. Men at the day of Iudgement, shall give an account for every idle word which they have spoken. Now which is this day of Iudgement? certainely, that day which comes presently after death; according to that of the Apostle; It is appointed unto all men once to die, and after death comes Iudgement. Therefore, in that day after death, men shall give an account of those things, which have beene culpable, and worthy of reprehension in them, and which must bee expiated by temporall punishments: now in what place can this be but only in Purgatory. His meaning is this: As soone as ever men die, they shall give an account for their veniall, and lesse sinnes, which they have not satisfied, nor suffered for on earth; and those shall be purged by the paines, and penance of Purgatory flames. 129

Answ. 1. First, Sophister-like he concludes, that which hee proves not; or hath that in the conclusion, which is in neither Proposition. For to me hee seemes to argue thus:

Answ. 2. We must give an account for all our small sins at the day of Iudgement: But this day of Iudgement, is the time which followes presently after death. Therefore there is a Purgatorie, perhaps to punish such a Logician (as hee is)

Secondly, wee grant, that by and by, after death, there is a particular judgement of God, wherein every one shall give an account of those things, which he hath done in the body.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, by the day of Iudgement, both Franciscus Lucas, and Gorranus, and divers others understand the last day, and generall Iudgement; and some leave it doubtfull. Sa: Iudicij scilicet particularis in morte, vel universalis; that is, by this Iudgement, is either meant the particular Iudgement presently after death, or the general Iudgement at the last day. Now wee need not greatly care, which of these say true; for if the last day be here understood, then Bunderius his Argument (or Sophisme rather) is absurd; for there will bee no Purgatory after the day of Iudgement: But if wee leane unto those, who hold the place doubtfull, then it will prove but an uncertaine Argument; and consequently not an Argument of faith, nor to build an Article of faith upon, as Purgatory is to them.

Quest. A question may hence be demanded, whether every sinne be mortall of its owne nature, or not?

Answ. Although it be true, that all sinnes are not equall, but one greater then another; and although also it be true, that in a good and godly sense, some sinne may be termed mortall, and some veniall; which yet may more fitly be called sins regnant, and not regnant; yet it is most true, that every sinne is mortall of its owne nature, and only veniall, by way of Gods free acceptation, and mercy, for his owne names sake, and merits of his deare Sonne our Lord Iesus; as appeares by these reasons.

First, because our Saviour here saith, that wee must give a straight account of every idle word, in the generall day of Iudgement; and this is certaine, because every idle word is flatly against the Law of God; and yet these idle words

130 are those sinnes, which they call veniall. And therefore this is a truth, that all sinnes are mortall, that is, against the Law of God.

Secondly, because the Rhemists (Rhem. in 1. Iohn 3. 4.) confesse in plaine termes, that every sinne is a swarving from the Law of God. For doubtlesse, that which swarveth from the Law, is truely said to be against the Law, but not agreeable to the Law.

Thirdly, because the famous popish Friar, and Romish Bishop Iosephus Angles (in 4. sent. pag. 215.) teacheth the same doctrine in his booke, dedicated to the Pope himselfe: His words are these; Omne peccatum veniale est alicujus legis transgressio. Patet, quia omne veniale est contra rectam rationem, & agere contra rectam rationem, est agere contra legem naturalem, præcipientem non esse a regulâ rectæ rationis deviandum. Every veniall sinne is the transgression of some Law. This is cleare, because every veniall sinne is against right reason, and to doe a thing against right reason, is to doe it against the Law of nature, which commandeth us, not to depart or swarve from the rule of right reason. Thus every veniall sin is against right reason, and against the Law of nature, which is given to every one in his creation, or in his birth and nativity. Of this same opinion is Durandus, (in 2. sent. dist. 42. q. 6.) and many of the Schoolmen, Iosephus Angles in 2. sent. pag. 275. and Fisher the Bishop of Rochester, (Rossensis, Artic. 32. adverss. Luth.) and Bellarmine unawares confesseth the same against himselfe. (Bellar. tom. 1. pag. 84.) If the Reader would see the severall testimonies and words of the fore-quoted Authors, and this Argument cleerly handled, let him reade Master Bels Challenge; pag. 81, &c. unto 86.

Fourthly, Gerson (de vita spiritual. lect. 1. part. 3. in 1. corol.) hath these words; No offence of God is veniall of its own nature, but only in respect of Gods mercy, who will not de facto, impute every offence to death, though he might do it most justly. And so I conclude, that mortall and veniall sins, as they be such, are not distinguished intrinsecally and essentially, but onely in respect of Gods grace, which assigneth one sin to the pain or torture of death, and not another. This Gerson (who thus writeth) was a famous Popish Bishop, and a man of high esteem in the Councell of Constance; and if his words be well marked, they are able to confound the Papists, and to confirm the point delivered by us. For

I. He telleth them plainly, that every sin is mortall of its own nature. And

II. That no sin is veniall, save onely in respect of Gods mercie. And

III. That God may (Iustissimè) most justly condemn us for the least sin we do. And

IV. That mortall and veniall sins are the same intrinsecally, and essentially, and differ but accidentally, that is to say, they differ in accident, but not in nature; in quantity, but not in quality; in mercie, but not in deformity; in the subject, but not in the object; in imputation, but not in enormity; save onely, that the one is a greater mortall sin, than is the other.

Fifthly, because the least offence that can be imagined, remaining eternally in respect of the stain and guilt of it, though not in act, as do all sins unremitted, must be punished eternally: for else there might some sinfull disorder, and ἄτακτα remain not ordred by divine justice. Now whersoever is eternity of punishment, there is an everlasting expelling, and excluding from eternall life and happinesse: and consequently every offence that eternally remaineth not remitted, excludeth from eternall glory, and happinesse, and is rightly judged a mortall and deadly sin. Field of the Church, lib. 3. pag. 147.

Sixthly, all sins are mortall in them, who are strangers from the life of God, because they have dominion and full command in them, or at least are joyned with such as have; and so leave no place for grace, which might cry unto God for the remission of them. But the elect and chosen servants of God, called according to purpose, do carefully endeavour, that no sin may have dominion over them; and notwithstanding any degree of sin they run into, they recover that grace by repentance, which can, and will procure pardon for all their offences.

VERS. 37. For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned. Vers. 37.

What is Justification? Quest. 1.

First, some say, Iustificare, to justifie, signifieth Iustum facere, to make just, by a renovation or change of our nature: but this is false, for hereby our Justification, and our Sanctification are confounded, and made one thing; as though to justifie, were the action of God, in regenerating and re-creating us. Answ. 1.

Secondly, to justifie, is the work of God in judging us: and therefore Iustificare, to justifie, doth signifie Iustum pronunciare, that is, to pronounce righteous: and this is manifest by these two reasons; namely, Answ. 2.

I. Because in Scripture, Justification is opposed to condemnation; as in this verse, By thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.

II. Because in Scripture, Justification is sometimes defined, to consist in the remission of sins, sometimes in the forgiving of wickednesse, sometimes in the covering of sin, and not imputing of iniquity; and sometimes it is described by the imputation of righteousnesse. All which do prove manifestly, that Justification is the action of him, who is the Judge of mankinde, in absolving man from sin, and the punishment thereof.

Who is it that justifieth man? Quest. 2.

God alone, as appears by these two particulars; to wit, Answ.

First, the Lord is the onely Judge of all: therefore it belongeth onely unto him to justifie. He is called the Judge of all, Heb. 12. 23. And, Act. 17. 31. it is said, He hath appointed a day, in which he will judge the world in righteousnesse. Of which day also the Apostle speaketh, Rom. 2. 5, 16. And the reason hereof is given by the Apo-

Apostle, Rom. 14. 7, 8. to wit, because he is our onely Lord, to whom we both live and dye, and to whom every one shall give account of himself. Whereby it is cleer, seeing God is the onely Judge of the world, that to justifie, and to condemn, must onely belong unto him.

Secondly, Justification consisting in the remission of sins, and the not imputing of iniquity, it necessarily followeth, that none save God onely can justifie; because none, except the Lord, can forgive sin, as is cleer, Mark 2. 7. Luke 5. 21. and Esa. 43. 25. and 44. 22. and Psal 31. 2. and 2 Corinth. 5. 19.

Verse 38, 39, 40. Vers. 38, 39, 40. Then certain of the Scribes and of the Pharisees, answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee. But he answered, and said to them, An evill, and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign, and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the Prophet Jonas. For as Jonas was three daies and three nights in the Whales belly; so shall the son of man be three daies and three nights in the heart of the earth.

Sect. 1. §. 1. There shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the Prophet Jonas.

Quest. What, and how many things may we learn from this sign, Christ; that is, from his death and Resurrection?

Answ. 1. First, from hence we may learn, how great, and horrible the pollution and guilt of sin is, and how great the severity of divine justice is: seeing that God would rather give his onely begotten, and most dearly beloved Son to death, than let sin go unpunished.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in this sign we may see more than a fatherly goodnesse and mercie in God: for as a father hath pity upon his children, so hath the Lord upon us, Psal. 103. 13. yea he spared not his own, and onely naturall son, but gave him to death for us, (Rom. 8. 32.) that we might be freed from eternall destruction by him.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, from hence also we learn, that there is no other way or means for us to obtain salvation by, than the death, suffering, and satisfaction of Christ, Act. 4. 12.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, in this sign we may see how worthy they are of eternall death and destruction, who do not place all their trust and confidence in the death and Resurrection of this son of God; Chemn. harm. pag. 804. fine.

Sect. 2. §. 2. For as Jonas, so Christ, &c.

Quest. Wherein was Jonas a Type of Christ?

Answ. 1. First, he was a Type of him in his death; and that in these regards,

I. As Jonas was sent out of Judea unto the Ninevites, who were Gentiles, to preach repentance unto them, that thereby they might be delivered from a dreadfull judgement, which hung over their heads: And as hereby he was a publisher and proclaimer of Gods universall grace, which is extended even to the Gentiles, as well as to the Jews. So Christ ought to be a Preacher of the Grace of God, and that not onely unto the Jews, and Israelites, but also unto the Gentiles; for he was sent to be a light unto the Gentiles, and the salvation of the Lord to the uttermost parts of the earth, Isa. 49. 6. Rom. 3. 39. Gen. 22. 18. 131

II. As Jonas (when the sea raged, and the tempest grew impetuous) offered himself to death, that the Mariners, and the rest in the ship, might be preserved from shipwrack; so Christ (when the wrath of God waxed hot against us for our sins) laid down his life for us, lest we should perish for ever, and that by his death we might be saved, Mat. 20. 28. John 11. 50.

III. As Jonas voluntarily, and of his own accord offered himself unto death, when the Mariners would gladly have preserved him: so did Christ lay down his life of himself for us, when no man took it from him, John 10. 18.

IV. As the tempestuous sea was calmed and quieted, when Jonas was cast therein: so Christ by his death, pacified and appeased his Fathers wrath, tamed the madnesse and rage of the world, and the Prince thereof, yea so took away the horrour, and fear, and sting of death, that unto the godly which beleeve in him, it might no longer be φοβερῶν φοβερώτατον, of all terrible things, the most terrible, but rather as a peaceable and quiet sleep, or as a welcome and desired rest.

Secondly, Jonas was a Type of Christ, in regard of his Resurrection. For Answ. 2.

I. As Jonas perished not in the water, but was swallowed of a great Fish, who carried him three daies in his belly, but at length cast him safe upon the dry shore: so Christ did not perpetually remain in the grave (for it was impossible that he should be holden by it, Acts 2. 24.) but death and the devill being overcome, he was restored, and raised up again unto life, Hos. 13. 24.

II. As Jonas (being delivered from the belly of the Whale) preached Repentance unto the Ninevites, and therby brought salvation unto them: so Christ being risen from the dead, by his Apostles did preach Repentance, not onely to the Jews, but to the Gentiles also, that thereby they might be brought, by grace, unto glory.

III. As Jonas, who was cast by the Mariners into the sea, was a means to convert and turn them unto the true God: so Christ by his death, converted many unto his Father, (Acts 2. 41.) who were Authors of his death.

§. 3. As Jonas was in the belly of the Whale. Sect. 3.

Quest. What fort or kinde of Fish was this which swallowed Jonas?

Answ. 1. First, Rondeletius saith, that it was a certain fish which was both in mouth and belly, and in all her inward parts so capacious and large, (and was therefore called ἀνθρωποδύτης) that she could easily swallow a man alive; and in whose belly often have been found men whole, yea sometimes all armed. Basilius saith, that it was a Fish much like to some great hill in bigneſse. And Augustine saith, that in Africa he saw a fish, whose mouth was like some great cave.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Doctor Medcalf (the Hebrew Professor in Cambridge) in his Lectures upon Jonah, doth affirm, That for certain, this fish which swallowed Jonas, was no Whale; he proves it thus, because the Whale hath Lungs, and breaths, and like man hath a wind-pipe, and therefore

132 the passages through which the meat passeth, are so straight, that by no means she is able to devoure a whole man.

Object. But against this it may be objected, that in this verse it is said, that Jonas was three daies and three nights in the belly of the Whale; and the 70 render it, a Whale: and Iosephus (Antiquit.) saith, A cetο devoratum esse Ionam, Jonas was devoured of a Whale.

Answ. 1. First, some say that God created a new Whale for this very purpose, to swallow Ionah, and therfore created him without Lungs, or wind-pipe, and made all the passages so wide, and vast, that it might devoure a man whole.

Answ. 2. Secondly, others better say, that Christ here follows the interpretation of the 70, which as it was vulgar and familiar, so also it was ordinarily quoted of all, whether it were according to the truth of the originall, or not, that is, the Septuagints translation was so frequent amongst the Jews, and of such esteem with them, that they cited Scripture usually as it was rendred by them, never seriously weighing whether their interpretation were agreeable to the Text.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, others yet better say, that the Whale is generally put for every great Fish: for it was ordinary with the Jews, to apply the name of a known Species, to the Genus. Because the Canaanites were principall Merchants, and the Arabians most notable Theeves, and the Chaldeans excellent and singular Astrologers: therefore the Jews called every Merchant, a Canaanite, and every Thief, an Arabian, and every Astrologer, a Chaldean; thus attributing the name of an ordinary Species, to the Genus thereof. And on the contrary, the 70 were wont to give the name of the Genus, to a more known or notable Species: and thus sometimes instead of Nilus, or Euphrates, they would say a Flood. And thus the Greeks cals every great Fish, κῆτος a Whale, and Homer calleth Phocas, Sea Calves, Whales: and Virg. Immania cete, great Whales, for great Fishes: and hence Cetarius signifieth a kinde of Fish-monger, or seller, or taker of great sea-Fish. And from this propriety of speech, our Saviour calleth this Fish a Whale, because (dag gadol) was a great Fish.

Sect. 4. §. 4. So the Son of man shall be three daies, and three nights, &c.

Quest. How is Christ said to be three daies and three nights in the heart of the earth, when he was but one whole day, and two nights in the grave?

Answ. That this may be the better understood, and more cleerly resolved, we will lay down these three things; namely,

First, that divers nations begun their day at divers times; the Babylonians and the Chaldeans reckoned their day from sun-rising to sun-rising. The Astrologians counted the day from noon to noon; from the time that the sun was at his height, untill he returned thither again. The Romans, Egyptians, and the Occidentals, reckoned their day from midnight to midnight. The Athenians and the Hebrews accounted their day from sun-set to sun-set, from whence it came to passe that the night was the beginning of the following day.

Secondly, it was very ordinary with the Hebrews, to put a part for the whole; and therefore a part either of the day or night, was called in their manner, or form of speaking, a Day, to wit, a naturall day, consisting of four and twenty hours.

Thirdly, when they did denote one day, although that which they called a day, were but the least part of a day, yet they did usually pronounce or declare it by parts, thus, The day and the night; from whence, by their propriety of speech, a day and a night was ordinarily called a Day, and a Day by a Synechdoche, was used for a part (yea sometimes the least part) of a day: And hence the answer to the question is manifest, namely, When Christ was buried, it was between the ninth and twelfth hour of Friday, which hours were part of the first day, and by the forenamed Synechdoche, were called the first day and night. Then from sun-set upon Friday, unto sun-set upon the Sabbath (or Saturday) was the second day and night, which were both entire. Then from sun-set upon the Saturday, to the next dawning of the day, was part of the third day, which part was called a day and a night, according to the vulgar wont of the Jews: whose use and custome onely, is the rule of expounding many things of this nature in holy Scripture. And thus Christ is said to lye three daies and three nights in the heart of the earth; because he was crucified between Evenings, at that time when the Paschall Lamb was killed: where the Evening is reckoned for the first day, and the next four and twenty hours are reckoned for the second day, and he arose upon the third morning, and that was the third day, the morning being taken Synecdochicè, for the whole day, and the night following.

§. 5. In the heart of the earth. Sect. 5.

The meaning of the Text is, as Ionas was buried in the belly of the Fish, and reputed dead for three daies, and three nights: so Christ remained in the state of the dead, three daies and three nights.

VERS. 41, 42. The men of Niniveh shall rise in the judgement with this generation, and shall condemne it, because they repented at the preaching of Ionas; and behold, a greater then Ionas is here. The Queene of the South shall rise up in the Iudgement with this generation, and shall condemne it: for shee came from the uttermost parts of the earth, to heare the wisedome of Solomon; and behold, a greater then Solomon is here. Vers. 41. 42.

§. 1. The men of Niniveh. Sect. 1.

What dissemblance, ἀνόμοιον, or disparity was betweene the Ninivites, and the Iewes? Quest. 1.

First, the Ninivites were strangers from the Common-wealth of Israel, and people of God, neither had received his word before this: But the Iewes had received the Law from the Lord, and did boast therein, and yet would not heare Christ, who interpreted, and explained the Law unto them. Answ. 1.

Secondly, the Ninivites had but one Preacher of of the word; namely Ionas, and yet they obeyed him; but although God had spoken unto the Iewes by many Prophets, and by Iohn Baptist: yea, by his owne, and only Sonne, (Hebr. 1. 2.) yet they shamefully, and reproachfully rejected them all.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Ninivites having heard but only one Sermon from Ionah, the servant of the Lord, repented, beleeved, and changed their lives: But the Iewes had heard many Sermons from the Prophets in all ages; and at last heard those Sermons repeated, and confirmed by Christ, the Lord and Master of the Prophets: (And this is that which our Saviour means in these words, but a greater then Ionas is here:) And yet they would not repent, and amend their lives.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the Ninivites heard a stranger, and beleeved him, although he came from a Nation, which they hated and envied: But the Iewes despised Christ, who came of the Fathers according to the flesh, & was no stranger, but a child, and free-borne, amongst them.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, the Ninivites beleeved Ionas without any signe, content with this, that hee had come unto them, for their disobedience towards God: But the Iewes daily saw many signes; that is, Miracles wrought by Christ, and yet persevered in their obstinacie, as though hee had done nothing worthy of faith, or for which they had reason to beleeve in him.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, none had ever fore-told the Ninivites any thing concerning Ionas; and yet when hee came, they beleeved, and obeyed him: But all the Prophets had fore-told the Iewes of Christs comming, and they saw his workes, sute and agree with their predictions; and yet they would not beleeve him, nor amend their lives

Answ. 7. Seventhly, the Ninivites patiently suffered Ionas, although he threatned the miserable destruction, both of their Citie and Kingdome: But the Iewes would not endure, or heare, or obey Christ, although he preached grace, and salvation unto them; yea, did not prescribe any hard, or harsh rules of living unto them, but declared remission of sinnes to every one who would repent, beleeve, and obey.

Answ. 8. Eighthly, Ionas was not derided, and mocked by the Ninivites, although hee fled when God sent him unto them; But the Iewes scoffed, and taunted Christ, who refused not to undergoe reproach, hatred, persecution, and death for them and their salvation.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Shall rise up in the Iudgement.

Quest. What is meant by these words?

Answ. The phrase is an Hebraisme, signifying thus much; that the Ninivites, and the Queene of the South shall stand in judgement, and not fall, compared with the Iewes: Or, shall bee justified before this generation.

Sect. 3. §. 3. The Queene of the South &c.

Quest. What arrithmus, or comparison is there, betweene the Queene of the South, and the Iewes?

Answ. 1. First, shee was a woman, the weaker vessell, (1 Pet. 3. 7.) yea, a person unaccustomed to travell, and yet she came to Solomon: But the Iewes were men, and the more worthy sexe, and yet they are more slow, and sluggish to heare, then she was.

Answ. 2. Secondly, she being a Gentile, came to heare an Hebrew. But the Iewes who were Hebrewes, and nourished in the Law, disdained to heare Christ, who was one of themselves, and came of their Father Abraham, according to the flesh.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, she came along a tedious journey unto King Solomon, although shee her selfe were a Queene: But the King of Kings himselfe comes unto the Iewes, his subjects; and yet they wil not entertaine, or receive him.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, fame and report only moved her to come unto Solomon, although oftentimes nothing is more false then fame; according to the old saying:

> Tam ficti pravique tenax, quam nuntia veri,
> Not only truth, but also lies,
> Vpon the wings of swift fame flies.

But the Iewes saw, and heard many things, which many and great Princes had desired to see (Luke 10. 24.) and yet they contemned both Christ, and them.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, she was at great cost and charges, in comming unto Solomon: yea, brought gifts, and presents unto him along with her: But the Iewes would not embrace Christ, or his doctrine, although hee taught them freely, and by his word offered the gift of salvation unto them, even out of meere grace, and would have sold them wine and milke, without money, or money-worth, Esay 55. 1.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, shee came unto a meere man, and yet judged her selfe to bee a happy woman, that might enjoy the society, and discourse; of one in whom shee perceived the sparkes of divine wisedome: But the Iewes rejected the Sonne of God, which was the eternall wisedome of the Father.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, Solomon only discoursed of plants and trees, from the knowledge whereof, at the most some worldly utility would arise: But Christ declared unto the Iewes, the mysteries of eternall salvation, which were hid from the world, (Ephes. 3. 9.) upon the knowledge whereof did depend eternall life, Iohn 17. 3. And yet they would not receive, or accept him.

Answ. 8. Eighthly, she thought Solomons servants, and attendants happy, who daily heard and saw the wisedome of their Master: But neither the stupendious, and unheard of Miracles of Christ, nor his singular wisedome, grace, and power in preaching, would draw the Iewes unto the love and admiration, of so great and gracious a Lord.

VERS. 43, 44, 45. When the uncleane Spirit is gone out of a man, hee walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and finding none. Then he saith, I will returne into my house from whence I came out: And when hee is come, hee findeth it empty, swept, and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh with himselfe seven other spirits, more wicked then himselfe, and they enter in, and dwell there: And the last state of that man is worse then the first Vers. 33, 34, &c.

134 first. Even so shall it be also with this wicked generation.

By this Parable, our blessed Saviour would shew, that destruction did hang over the heads of the Iewes: And why? because they had received the Law of God; and although they thereby seemed to bee altogether delivered from the power of the Devill, who held all other nations captives, yet they would not observe, nor obey the Law: After this (to adde to the measure of their iniquity, and to make it full) they reject the Gospel, which was brought, and offered unto them by the Sonne of God himselfe, and impugne the knowne truths, delivered by him, and commit blasphemy against the Holy Spirit; as our Saviour had before intimated, verse 31,32. Now what was this? no other thing then wholly to renounce Christ, and to dedicate, and consecrate themselves wholly unto the Devill; even as though a man should decke, and trim up a house, that his enemy might willingly, and perpetually dwell there: For thus doe they, who having knowne the truth; and by the knowledge thereof, having been delivered from the hands of the Devill, doe afterwards willingly, wittingly, and of set purpose oppose it, and renounce it for ever; and adhere, and cleave to the lies, & delusions of Sathan. And this is the plaine, and direct meaning of our Saviour in this place. Melanction, f. 1 Corinthians, 10. folio 45. understands this place of those, who being tempted by a diabolicall temptation, are overcome thereby, and sinne securely, without any feare of God, and consequently out of contempt; which sinne elsewhere he calleth, a sinne against conscience.

Vers. 46 47. VERS. 46,47. While hee yet talked to the people, behold, his Mother, and his brethren stood without, desiring to speake with him. Then one said unto him, Behold, thy Mother, and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speake with thee.

There was a sect, who sprung up in Arabia, and were called Antidicomarianitæ; that is, the Adversaries of Mary, who to extenuate, and eclipse the glory of the blessed Virgin, held, that after the birth of Christ, shee was carnally knowne by Ioseph her husband. This heresie is refuted by Epiphanius, [a] by divers reasons, taken from this place, & some other probable grounds; as namely,

[a] Contra Antidicomarianitas, hæres. 78.

First, because the Epithete of Virgin is given unto her; and therefore she is a Virgin.

Secondly, because from the tradition of the Iewes, it is shewed, that she was not given unto Ioseph, for carnall copulation, but for the avoiding of the imputation of being dishonest, which shee would have incurred, if shee had brought forth Christ, before she had beene given in marriage unto any.

Thirdly, because Ioseph married not Mary for any carnall respects (hee being above, or about fourescore yeares old, when he tooke her unto him) but rather that hee might keepe, and preserve her, shee being of his owne family.

Fourthly, because it would scarce stand with the sanctity, and piety of Ioseph, to use such a holy vessell, after the dispensation of so deepe, and divine a mysterie.

Fifthly, because none can be named, that Ioseph begot of her, neither reade wee of any children he had by her, either before his fleeing into Ægypt, or after his returne, twelve yeares at least, wee reade, that Ioseph lived with Mary; but after Christ was twelve yeares old, no mention is made of him at all; neither doe the Evangelists say any more: That his Father and brethren came unto him; but (as in this verse) Behold, thy Mother, and thy brethren stand without.

Sixthly, if Mary had had either husband, or children, then Christ (when hee was upon the Crosse) would not have recommended her to Iohn: Tradita est autem Iohanni propter virginitatem.

Seventhly, Christ is called a Lyon, (and saith Epiphanius) in the same sense wee call Mary a Lioness: But the Lioness brings forth but one at a birth, and hath but one birth, all her life [Iteratus partus leænæ non contingit:] and therefore was never carnally knowne by Ioseph.

Eighthly, marriage was forbidden to Prophets, and Propheteses: But the Blessed Virgin was a Propheteſſe: Ergo, shee was not carnally knowne of her husband. That Mary was a Propheteſſe, is intimated by the Type, Esay 8. A Prophet shall goe in unto a Propheteſſe; that is, Gabriel unto Mary. So Philip had foure daughters, which were Propheteſſes, and Virgins.

VERS. 48. But hee answered, and said unto him, that told him: Who is my Mother, or who are my brethren? Verse 48.

Apelles did grant, that Christ had a true body, and true flesh, but maintained that he had it not from the Virgin Mary, but from heaven; and thinkes to prove it from this verse, wherein our Saviour saith; Who is my Mother, or who are my brethren? To this tradition (lib. 1. de carne Christi. Contra Apellem. Arg. 2.) answers, that the matter of this speech pronounced, is to be considered: For none would have shewed unto him, that his Mother stood without, who were uncertaine, whether hee had a Mother, or not. Neither can it be said, that this was done to tempt him; for the Scripture expresseth no such thing; and it doth usually, when any such thing is done. The nativity of Christ was never disputed, or questioned; and therefore this could not be said (Thy Mother is without) to tempt him: Therefore it is more credible, that by this enunciation they tempted his divinity, to see whether hee could tell, who were without, or not. Now Christ here taxeth the incredulity of his brethren; Et Mater quoque ejus demonstratur non æquè adhæsisse illi, ut Martha, & Mariæ aliæ. And therefore he denieth his Parents, and his brethren, as hee teacheth us to doe ours for Gods sake, and worke. Object.

VERS. 50. For whosoever shall doe the will of my Father, which is in heaven, the same is my brother, sister, and mother. Vers. 50.

Who-

Sect. 1. §. 1. Whosoever shall doe the will of my Father, which is in heaven.

Quest. 1. Why doth our Saviour adde here, Qui in cœlis, which is in heaven?

Answ. To teach us, that those who are the children of God, must labour & endeavour, that their conversation may be holy & heavenly. Or, that we must Observ. prepare our selves for heaven, by a heavenly life; we must labour that our conversation may be in heaven, Philip. 3.20. And while we live on earth, seeke heaven, and heavenly things, Coloss. 3. 1, 2. For hee that would be a Citizen of that heavenly Jerusalem, which is above, must live like a heavenly Citizen here on earth.

Quest. 2. Why must wee thus earnestly labour for a heavenly life?

Answ. 1. First, because it is the will of God, that those who are called his children, should imitate him their heavenly Father, in a sanctified, and celestiall walking, 1 Pet. 1.14.17.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because wee are called hereunto, (1 Thessal. 4. 4.8.) or wee are made partakers of a heavenly calling. Reade Heb. 3.1. And therefore wee should answer our calling, by a heavenly life.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because wee are made partakers of the divine nature, 2 Pet 1.4. And therefore wee should shew it by a Saint-like life.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because heaven is the end of our hope, and the aime of our expectation; and therefore wee should be still like those, who despise this world, and seeke, and desire another Citie, which is above, Hebr. 11.15. and 2 Cor. 5. 2.9. Hebr. 12.18.22.

Answ. 5. Fist. because our whole life is a certaine time of ripening unto Harvest; so long as wee live, wee must still strive to grow perfecter, and riper in grace, fitting, and preparing our selves more and more, for the inheritance of the Saints, and that heavenly Jerusalem, Rom. 8. 17. Now our preparation consists in these things; to wit, 135

I. In a patient bearing of the Crosse, and suffering of afflictions. b 1 Pet. 3. 11.

II. In a true deniall of our selves, and our owne wils and wayes.

III. In a couragious combating against sinne, Sathan, and the world, and our owne corruptions, b.

IV. In a constant course, and practise of religion, and religious actions unto the end.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Hee is my brother, sister, and Mother.

In these words our Saviour shewes that we must preferre our spirituall kindred; whence it may be demanded.

Quest. Whether did Christ himselfe, as hee teacheth us to doe? that is, whether did he love them best, who were neerest to him in the Lord, or those who were neerest to him in the flesh, or those who were nearest unto him in the flesh, and in the Lord?

Answ. As man he loved them best, who were neerest to him in the flesh, and in the Lord; but as Mediator, he loved them only best, who were nearest to him in the Lord: when some told him here, that his brethren, and kinsmen stood without, he said, Who are my brethren, and my kinsmen? Those who doe the will of my Father, which is in heaven, the same is my Brother, and Sister, and Mother; where wee see he respected those most, who drew neerest to him in the Lord

CHAPTER XIII.

Vers. 3, 4, 5, &c. VERS. 3. &c. And he spake many things unto them in Parables, saying; Behold, a sower went forth to sow: And when he sowed, some seeds fell by the wayes side, and some fell upon stonie places; and some fell among thornes; and some fell into good ground.

Sect. 1. §. 1. He spake unto them in Parables.

Quest. WHy doth our Saviour speake in Parables?

Answ. 1. First, that the truth may bee hid from those, who are unworthy; according to that, Matt. 7.6. Give not holy things to dogs.

Answ. 2. Secondly, that thereby occation may be offered to those who are studious, and desirous to know the truth, to exercise their wits, or to inquire the more diligently into the heart, and depth of the thing propounded.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, that we may learne to understand divine, and spirituall things, by corporall, and sensible. Cartbus. s. fog. 116 6.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Some fell by the wayes side, some in stony places, some among the thornes, and some in good ground.

Our Saviour in this Parable shewes, that both formall, and faithfull Professors heare the word, and that both bring forth some fruits thereof.

Hence a question, or two may be moved, viz.

Quest. 1. What things are common to the Hypocrite, and sincere Professors; or what fruits of religion may an Hypocrite doe, and what not?

Answ. 1. First, they may have a certaine understanding of some divine truths, but they cannot know it effectually; for commonly they come without affection, and goe away without care. And therefore i we must take heed, lest we deceive our selves, and our owne soules, in a bare profession, and light knowledge of the word; and that we hear it with zeale, and depart with care and profit.

II. We must beware of the great subtilty of Sathan, who (like a swift, & ravenous bird) stealeth the word out of unprepared hearts, or as theeves use to take away whatsoever they find loose, or carelessly laid up.

Answ. 2. Secondly, hypocrites, and carnall hearers, may have some kind of delight in the hearing of the word, and a glimse of the life to come; but it is like to a blaze of a fire, and is neither lasting, nor firme, Psal. 4.7. whereas the joy of the godly is solid and sound, and far above that which the worldly man hath in gold & silver, Psal. 119.33, 34. And II. the wickeds delight ariseth from a wrong end and motive; as to satisfie some humorous desire; to know something more then other, &c. whereas the joy of the godly, is to know further, to the end they may practise more.

136 Thirdly, hypocrites may have some care to keepe that they have heard, and yet the thornes
Answ. 3. of covetousnesse, and worldly delights, may overgrow the good seed, and make it unfruitfull: And therefore beware of covetousnesse, and all carnall delights.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, carnall Professors, or wicked men (by meanes of the word) may bee brought to confesse their faults, Exod. 9.29.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, they may be pricked, and wounded in their consciences, with a terrour of their sinnes, Act. 24.25.

Answ. 6. Sixt. they may be sorry for them, 1 Sa. 24.17.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, they may doe many things that are commanded them, as Herod did, Marke 6.20.

Answ. 8. Eighthly, they may desire to die the death of the righteous; as Balaam did, Numb. 23.10. And all these onely for feare of judgement. Whereas the godly confesse their sinnes, and are stricken with remorse, and sorrow for them; because thereby they have offended a living God, and gracious Father, 2 Cor. 7.10. yea, they endeavour not to doe some things, but all, which they are commanded, (Psalme 119.6.) desiring the salvation of their soules for this end, that thereby they may glorifie God, Philip. 1.20.

Quest. 2. How, or by what signes may an hypocriticall hearer be discerned, or knowne?

Answ. 1. First, he is quicke-sighted abroad, but blind at home; he will endeavour to pull out another mans mote, and yet sees not his owne beame. Now on the contrary, the sincere hearer thinkes himselfe (with Paul) to be the greatest of sinners, and the least of the Apostles.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the hypocrite is full of himselfe, and wants nothing, and trusteth unto himselfe; like Paul, who was alive without the Law. Now the intire hearer feares himselfe, and doubts the deceit of his owne heart.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the hypocrite is an unconstant man, (Omnium horarum homo) Iames 1.8. But the righteous is constant, or if by chance he be drawne unwillingly from his right course, like the Adamant, hee never rests untill hee come unto the North.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the hypocrite onely purgeth the out-side of the Platter, Matth. 23.15. but the righteous man taketh his heart to taske, and labours to cleanse that, Ierem. 4.14. And therefore if wee desire to know, whether we are formall, or faithfull hearers, let us examine,

I. Whether wee see more faults in others, or in our selves.

II. Whether wee are full, and abounding with all things, or whether we be poore, naked, or miserable?

III. Whether we bee constant, or unconstant in the practise of Religion?

IV. Whether we are carefull only to keep the outward man unblameable, or the inward also.

Verse 8, VERS. 8. But other seed fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, some an hundred fold, and some sixtie fold, and some thirty fold.

Confession (S. pag. 118.) saith, that they are virgins, who bring forth an hundred fold; widdowes, who bring forth sixtie fold, and married people, who bring forth thirty fold: But hee confesseth, that this is not generally true of persons, but rather of the states of virginity, widdow-hood, and matrimony; and therefore I will not meddle with his exposition; especially, because it is altogether unwarranted by Scripture, and onely the fruit of a humane braine: yea, because if the Scripture doe compare one estate with another, it is not in regard of the estate simply, but of the times and seasons: But principally I passe by the refutation of this exposition, because it is fully answered by Masculus, in fol. 363. b. initio, &c. And by Amesius, Bellarm. enerv. tom. 2. pag. 161.

Whether shal al the Saints have a like measure, and degree of glory in the kingdome of heaven, or an unequall according to the measure of their fruits? Quest.

All shall not have an equall measure, and degree of glory; and that first, because God will crowne his owne workes and gifts in his children, and that as they are in all; but they are unequally in all; as appeares by these places, Matth. 5.18, and this verse, and 25.4. Answ.

Secondly, the Scripture teacheth us, that those who instruct others, shall excell others in glory, Daniel 12.3. And therefore all shall not bee glorious, in one and the same measure.

Thirdly, it is said, that the Apostles shal have a singular degree of glory, Matth. 19.28. And therefore some shall excell others in glory.

Fourthly, in hell there are divers degrees of punishment, Matthew 11.20. according to the quality of sinnes: And therefore in heaven shall be divers degrees of glory, according to the degree, and measure of grace.

Fifthly, it is said, Revelat. 14.13. Blessed are the dead, which die in the Lord; for they rest from their labours, and their workes follow them. Now, why doe their workes follow them? Because they shall be judged, and rewarded (although not for their workes, yet, according to their workes, Roman. 2.2.6. And therefore, as there are degrees of grace, and divers measures of obedience, so shall there be degrees of glory.

Sixthly, in the world to come we shall be like unto the Angels. Matth. 22.30. But there are degrees of Angels, as shall be else where shewed: Therefore also degrees of glory in the Saints.

Seventhly, St. Paul testifieth his assurance of a peculiar Crowne which he knowes is laid up for him in Heaven. 1 Thessal. 2.18. By which is implyed that one degree of glory doth not abide all.

Eightly, these and the like places teach and confirme this truth, that there are degrees of glory in Heaven. Matth. 20.27, and 1 Corinth. 15.14. and 2 Corinth. 9.6. &c.

Ninthly, these degrees of glory shal be given, not for our merits, or the dignity of our persons, or the worthinesse of our workes, but of grace, according to our duties, obedience and sufferings, which God will graciously reward.

Tenthly, the glory of all the Saints in heaven shall be perfect in its degree (for every vessel shall be be filled to the brimme, although some containe more then others) There shal be no lacke of glory to any of the Saints, but the glory of all shall be full according to their capacity: yea all shall be perfectly contented with their portion and measure.

Vers. 11. VERS. 11. He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you, to know the mysteries of the kingdome of Heaven, but to them it is not given.

Sect. 1. §. 1. To you it is given, but not unto them.

Observ. Our Saviour in these words doth teach us, that he doth not reveale himselfe equally, and alike unto all: and the truth hereof appeares,

First, from these places. Iohn 14. 19. &c. Acts 10. 41. Matth. 10. 5, Luke 2. 10. Matth. 17. 1. and 26, 37. Mark 13. 3.

Secondly, from the divers ends and scopes which Christ hath in revealing of himselfe. For

I. His most generall scope is, that the world might be left without excuse; and that God might be justified in all his judgements, Rom. 3. 4. And hence a command is given to preach to all nations. Matth. 28. 19. yea to every creature, Mark. 16. 15. And this command is obeyed. Rom. 10. 18.

II. His more particular scope was, to call the elect unto grace, and salvation. Iohn 17, 6. Acts 2. 47. and 13. 48. Ephes. 1. 18.

III. His most speciall scope was, to fit and prepare for some private and particular work: Thus more especially hee reveales himselfe to his Apostles, in regard of that singular worke which hee cals them unto.

Sect. 2. §. 2. To know the mysteries of the Kingdome of Heaven.

Object. 1. The Papists object this place, to prove, that the Laity ought not to reade the Scriptures in a knowne tongue; they argue thus, Christ saith, it is given to the Apostles to know the Mysteries of the kingdome of Heaven; but to others it is not given. And therefore those sacred Mysteries which are laid downe in the Scriptures, are to be communicated to Bishops and Priests onely, and not to the common people.

Answ. 1. First, it followes not, the mysteries of the Gospell were revealed to the Apostles; and therefore are not to be communicated to the people: For our Saviour speakes there only of the Scribes and Pharisees who resisted him, as many of the learned Papists themselves interpret the place. And therefore from hence nothing can be concluded against the peoples reading of Scripture, but rather against the Priests and Doctours reading, because the Pharisees were Doctours.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it followes not, the Mysteries of the Kingdome of Heaven are hidden from the people of the Jewes, who for their sinnes, and obstinacie, are justly rejected: Therefore also they are hidden from the elect Christian people. For the Papists will not deny, but many of the Laity feare God, yea and are the servants of God: now he reveales his secrets unto his servants. Revel. 1. 1. and unto those that feare him. Psalm 25. 14. And therefore the reading of the Scriptures is not to be denied unto them. 137

We see here, that the Mysteries of the Gospell are revealed by Christ, to teach us, Observ. That Christ is prepared to give the knowledge of God unto all his servants. Reade Matth. 11. 27. Esa. 11. 9. Ierem. 31. 34. and 2 Cor. 4. 6. and Colos. 1. 25. 26.

Quest. 1. Why doth Christ teach the Mysteries of the Gospell to all his Children?

Answ. 1. First, because otherwise they could not be saved. For

I. None can be saved without this knowledge. Psalme 95. 8. Iohn 17. 3. Hos. 4. 6. Ephes. 4. 18. And

II. None can learne this knowledge, except it be taught him by Christ. Matth. 11. 25.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is his office to teach us. Iohn 9. 39. and 17. 6. and 4. 34.

Quest. 2. How are we to be taught the Mysteries of the Gospell, or the knowledge of God?

Answ. There is a double knowledge of God; To wit,

First Naturall. Rom. 1. 19. 20. Psalm 19. 1. Acts. 14. 17. Now this knowledge is sufficient to condemne the contempt of God already knowne (Ierem. 5. 24.) but it is insufficient for the embraceing of salvation by Christ. The naturall knowledge of God will condemne men, because they would not obey, feare, serve, and love him, although they knew him: but it is not able to save them.

Secondly, Supernaturall, and this knowledge is twofold, namely,

I. Extraordinary, and miraculous. Thus Paul was taught the knowledge of God. Galath. 1. 12. And

II. Ordinary; and this knowledge Christ teacheth or worketh by a double meanes. viz.

First, Externall; and this is the word, and the preaching thereof. Rom. 1. 16. and 1 Cor. 1. 18. 21 Acts 8. 35. Ephes. 4. 11, 12. Esa. 11. 9. Colos. 1. 27. And therefore the word is preached, that thereby men may be converted and turned unto God. Acts 14. 15. and 17. 23. and 26. 18.

Secondly, internall; and this is the Spirit. Ierem. 31. 34. Hebr. 8. 10. Now thus Christ plainly and manifestly teacheth us, to wit, by his Spirit. 1 Corinth. 1. 31. Ephes. 4. 21. And hence we pray that he would give us his Spirit, that thereby we may be instructed in the Mysteries of the Gospel, and the knowledge of our God. Reade Psalm 51. 11. and 143. 10. Ephes. 1. 17. Colos. 1. 9. And therefore to the Question propounded, How we must be taught the knowledge of God, I answer,

I. Not by nature, this knowlege not being able to save us. Neither

II. Miraculously, as Paul was; Miracles are now ceased; and therefore miraculous enthusiasmes, and Revelations are not to be expected. But 138 III. Ordinarily, by the instruments and means ordained by God himselfe for this end, and purpose: Now these meanes, as was said, are.

First, the word of God; For now hee teacheth us thereby. 2 Corinth. 4 6. And therefore unto this knowledge, the hearing of the word is necessary.

Quest. 3. What profit may we gaine by hearing?

Answ. 1. First, the word is profitable, for the directing of our obedience (Psalm 119 9.105) To worship God of our owne heads, or by the dictates of nature, is sometimes idolatrous and at the best, but will-worship: But the word teacheth us how to obey God both in regard of the matter, and manner of our obedience.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the word is profitable for the bending and inclining of our affections, unto faith, and love. Sermo Dei est fidelibus, ut pisci hamus; capit quando capitur. August. s. Iohn. As the fish is taken with the hooke, when she takes the hooke; so the faithfull are taken by the word, when they heare and receive it.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the word is profitable for the enlightning of the understanding, by the knowledge of Christ. Si Christus est virtus & sapientia Dei; qui nescit sacras Scripturas, nescit Dei virtutem & sapientiam. Hier. s. Esa. If Christ be the power, and vertue and wisedome, of God; then they that know not the Scripture and Gospell of Christ, are ignorant of the vertue, power, and wisedome of God. 1 Corinth. 1.24.

Secondly, God workes this knowledge in the hearts of the faithfull, by his holy Spirit. For Spiritus monet, movet, docet; Monet memoriam, movet voluntatem, docet rationem. Greg. Mor. That is the Spirit admonisheth, and moveth, and teacheth: he admonisheth the memory, hee moveth the will, and he teacheth the reason.

Quest. 4. How many waies doth the Holy Ghost teach?

Answ. Two manner of wayes, namely,

First, in Doctoribus: in the speakers, and Preachers of his word. Matth. 10.20. For

I. He makes men Ministers. Spiritus sanctus implet pastorem armentarium, & facit Prophetam; implet Piscatorem, & facit Apostolum: implet persequutorem & facit doctorem gentium: implet publicanum & facit Evangelistam. Gregor. s. Ezech. The Holy Ghost can inspire Amos, and of an heardman make him a Prophet; he can inspire Peter, and of a Fisher make him an Apostle: hee can inspire Paul, and of a Persecutor make him the Preacher of the Gentiles; yea he can make Matthew of a Publicane an Evangelist: For it is he onely that cals men truly unto the worke of the Ministerie.

II. He makes them able to speake: The Booke which God gave Ezechiel to eat, was in the mouth of the Prophet as sweet as honey. Ezech 3.3. Dulcis in ore, quia ipsi de omnipotente Deo, sciunt suaviter loqui. Greg. s. Ezech. hom. 7. The Booke was sweet in his mouth, because he knew, how to speak sweetly of God Almighty. And thus as the Holy Spirit makes them Ministers, so hee also makes them able Ministers.

III. He directs them, and teacheth them to speake unto their hearers those things that are fit, pregnant, and profitable for them. Sæpe Deus verbum Doctori tribuit, pro gratia Auditoris: aliàs pro Auditoris culpa sermo subtrahitur Doctori. Greg. Past. oftentimes the Lord out of his love & mercy unto the people, enables the Ministers to speak profitable and seasonable words unto them: And on the other side, the Lord sometimes for the sinnes of the hearers, takes away the Ministers, or the word from them. Cum verbi auditores esuriunt, pro eis reficiendis majora Doctoribus dona tribuuntur. Greg. Past. When hearers hunger after the word, then the Lord (for the refreshing, comforting, and satisfying of them) doth give more Talents, and greater gifts unto the Preachers: But when people grow cold in their hearing, or in their desires to heare, or in their love unto the word; then God often lessens the gifts of the Ministers, or else takes away his painfull labourers, sending Loiterers amongst them.

IV. He blesseth their labours, and gives an increase to their indeavours, 1 Cor. 3.6. Pedes quatuor bestiarum (Evangelistarum, Ezek. 1.7.) ut scintillans æs; ut candens est Prædicatio, & inde scintillæ prodeunt, quia ardent desyderio, & sonant verbo: & corda quæ scintillæ tetigerunt incendunt. Greg. s. Ezech. hom. 3. The Ministers of the Word (according to the Commandement of the Lord) preach to their flocks, and the Spirit of the Lord by their preaching, doth oftentimes inflame their hearts, and kindle their affections, and fill their souls with sanctified desires, and turn them truly unto himself. And thus we see, how the holy Ghost works, and teaches in the Preachers of the Word; he both making them Ministers, and also able Ministers, he both directing them what to speak, and also blessing what they speak.

Secondly, In Auditoribus, the holy Spirit teacheth in the hearers as well as speakers: for he makes their hearts often burn within them, when they hear, as Luke 34.32. Otiosus est sermo Doctoris, nisi Spiritus sanctus adsit cordi audientis. Greg. s. Evang. hom. 30. In vain doth the Preacher speak unto the ears of the Auditours, except the Spirit speak unto the heart. Nisi Spiritus sanctus auditorum corda repleat, vox doctorum ad aures corporis incassum sonat: nam formare vocem exterius possunt, sed interius imprimere non valent. Greg. Mor. lib. 27. Now although preaching be unprofitable without the Spirit, yet seldome doth the holy Ghost fall upon any, or come unto any, but in the preaching of the word: when Peter preached, then many were pricked in their hearts, Acts 2.37. yea, then the holy Ghost fell upon many, Acts 10.44. And in preaching, Lydia had her heart opened, Acts 16.14.

Quest. 5. What is here required of Hearers?

Answ. 1. First, they must pray, when they come unto the Word: and that

I. For themselves, that the Lord would be pleased so to assist them by his Spirit, that they may learn Christ in the Ministery of the Word; yea, that he would give his holy Spirit unto them, and fill them with the graces thereof: this was Davids prayer for himself, Psal. 143.10. and Pauls for the Ephesians, chap. 3. v. 18, 19. and for the Colossians, chap. 1. v. 9. Nulla in discendo mora est, est, ubi Spiritus sanctus Doctor adest. Beda. & Luc. ham. 9. If the holy Ghost be our School-master, then we shall not be Trewants, but good proficients, and a t Schollers. And therefore let us beg at Gods hands, the Spirit of Revelation, Ephes. 1.17, &c. that so we may go away from the Word alwaies bettered; Pray with Augustine (in one of his Epistles) Sanctum opus semper inspira in me, ut cogitem, compelle ut faciam; suade ut diligam; confirma me, ut te teneam; custodi me, ne te perdam. Sanctifie thou, O Lord, so my heart, that I may alwaies think that which is good: strengthen thou so my hands, that I may alwaies do that which is good: perswade thou so my affections, that I may above all things love thee the chiefest good: establish thou me so in faith, that I may hold thee fast: and so keepe mee by thy Spirit, that I may never lose thee.

II. Hearers must pray for the Preachers of the Word, that speech, and utterance may be given unto them, Ephes. 6. 19. that the door of the Word may be wide open unto them, Colos. 4. 3. That they may be permitted & enabled to speak the Word freely, 2 Thes. 3. 1. yea that they may so speak, that their Word may become blessed unto their Auditours, Rom. 15. 29, 30. And hence came that religious custome still practised by our Church, to have Prayers; and that both

First, before Sermons, that the blessed Spirit would be graciously assistant, and present, both with speakers and hearers. And also

Secondly, after Sermons, that the same good Spirit would confirm what hath been spoken, and establish, and imprint it in the souls of the Hearers.

Answ. 2. Secondly, as Hearers must pray for the divine assistance of the Spirit, in the hearing of the Word, by which God ordinarily teacheth the mysteries of the gospel, so also they must be carefull to hear, what the Spirit saith in the Word, reade Rev. 2. 7. Acts 10. 33. Certainly here there is a most lamentable neglect, ordinarily amongst Hearers, and little or no fruit can be expected of their hearing, so long as that remains. Hearers are wont

I. To hear, for fashion sake onely: and not for the feeding of their souls. Yea

II. To absent themselves, or keep themselves from the Word, for the least cause, or upon the smallest occasion that may be. Yea

III. To hear with prejudice, or prejudicate opinions, or imprudent censures: for some hearers deride, some tax and reprove the rudeness, or plainness of the speaker: that he neither shews Eloquence nor Learning in his Sermons. When this is amended, either by him, or by some other; that is, if we hear learned, elaborate, and eloquent peeces, then we praise the eloquence, learning, wit, and quickness of the speaker; in all things seeing, and judging man, and not God: And so long as we look onely upon man, in the preaching of the Word, so long we cannot expect the assistance of the blessed Spirit in the Word: yea, the more we look upon man, the lesse we look for the holy Ghost. And therefore in the hearing of the Word, let us withdraw our ears, and eyes, and minds from men, and look wholly up unto the Lord; remembring that they who preach, are his Messengers, and that which they preach, is his message, and the word preached, is made profitable onely by him: that so we may desire assistance in hearing, and expect a blessing upon our hearing, onely from him, and return all glory, honour, and praise unto him alone. 139

Quest. 6. How may we know whether Christ have taught us the knowledge of God, and mysteries of the Gospel, or not?

Answ. 1. First, certainly he that is uncertain of this, may be most certain that he is ignorant of it: he that knows not whether he know God or not, may be sure that he knows not God. No man disputes, whether there be a Sun or not, except it be hid: for if it shine in his face, he will not question the existence of it. A man often times dreams that he is awake, when he is asleep; but none are so sottish or doltish, as not to know when they are awake, that they are awake. And therfore he that cannot tell, whether Christ have taught him the knowledge of God, or the mysteries of the Gospel, may be assured (to his grief) that he is yet ignorant of them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but because many dream that they are awake, when indeed they are fast asleep: and that they see the Sun at midnight, when there is nothing lesse: I will therefore give some signes, whereby this may be known; and principally such as serve for the convincing of those, who falsly presume that they know God, when indeed they are ignorant of the knowledge of him. Signes of the knowledge of God.

Signe 1. First, if our hearts be inflamed with a desire of God, it is a good signe that we know him, for Ignoti nulla cupido, a man cannot fervently desire what he knows not. Here observe that this desire is two-fold; namely,

I. Inchoate, and begun; and this is an earnest desire to know God, 1 John 5. 20. For God is wont

First, to inflame and kindle the desire. And then

Secondly, to communicate light: we first cry, Draw me, O Lord, and then I will run after thee, Cant. 1. 3. And by and by the Lord in mercie reveals himself unto us. Wherefore, we should here examine, whether this desire of the Lord be in us, or not? do we make the knowledge and fruition of God, that one thing, which we desire before all other things? Psal. 27. 4. do we long for him, as the Hart doth for water? Psal. 42. 1. or the thirsty earth for rain? Psal. 63. 1. Certainly then we may be assured, that God hath begun this heavenly knowledge in us, and Christ is now about more fully and cleerly to reveal unto us the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven.

II. There is a permanent, and continuing desire: which lasts untill the desire be accomplished, that is, when we do not hunger after the knowledge of God, or desire to enjoy him, out of some sudden flash, but out of a solide, and serious affection; and therefore cry earnestly for him, and seek diligently after him, and continue therein 140 therein untill he hath been pleased to come, and reveal himself unto us. A loving wife desires alwaies the presence, and society of her husband, and could wish that he were alwaies at home: so must we continually desire to be present with the Lord, and never be at peace, so long as we are absent from him: for this permanent, and continued desire of the Lord, is an excellent sign of some true knowledge of him.

Object. Against this permanent and continued desire, it may be objected, that Christ hath promised his children, that they shall never hunger or thirst any more, Ioh. 4. 14, and 6. 35. and Rev. 7. 16. And therefore this earnest longing after God cannot stand with these promises, nor become the faithfull.

Answ. 1. First, certainly the faithfull shall not lament, as a widow, who hath lost her husband, irrecoverably, Esa. 47. 9. Thren. 1. 1. Or like one who is ready to perish through thirst, as Sampson was, Iudg. 15. 18. For unto the faithfull shall be given grace, which shall be as a living spring, Ioh. 4. 14. yea as flowing streams, Ioh. 7. 38. and not like a dry well. But yet

Answ. 2. Secondly, they shall thirst through a desire of more; there is such sweetnesse in grace, and in the fruition of God; that the childe of God saith alwaies, It is good for me to draw neer unto God; yea he is my chiefest good, and therefore the neerer I come unto him, the more happy and blessed shall I be. He who knows the sweetnesse of honey, desires it the more; and the faithfull are covetous of God and grace, as the worldling is of gold:

Crescit amor nummi, quantum ipsa pecunia crescit.
Though Dives store of money have,
Yet nought but money he doth crave.
For as his wealth doth daily grow,
Even so his love doth thereunto.

The more grace a Saint hath, the more he desires, for nothing is so good for him as that: The more full sight and knowledge a man hath of God, the more greedy he is of a little more. If God be pleased to talk with Moses, the servant is then so delighted therewith, that he desires further to see his face. If it be a thing so full of sweetnesse (thinks Moses) to hear of the Lord, or to hear the Lord with the ear, then it must needs be a transcendent felicity, to see him with the eye; and therefore, O Lord, let me see thy face. They that once have been made partakers of the bread and water of life, cry, O Lord, give us evermore of this bread, (Ioh. 6. 34.) and this water, Ioh. 4. He that is delighted with Musick, desires it again and again; and he that is taken with the pleasantnesse of wine, drinketh often unto drunkennesse. Certainly the Apostle had an eye unto this, when he said, Be not drunken with wine, but be filled with the Holy Ghost. Ephes. 5. 18. Intimating, that those who have once a true tast of heavenly gifts, will desire a greater measure, and degree of them. The Spouse is sometimes absent, and then the Church mournes. Cantic. 3. 2 and 5. 6. Not because she is uncertaine whether she have a husband or not, or because she doubts of his love; but because she is sicke of love, Cantic. 5. 8. and therefore would perpetually enjoy his presence. And therefore let us seriously prove and examine our selves by this desire of God, which is the first signe and token of his knowledge.

Secondly, examine whether we can cry truely unto God in faith. Abba Father, Galath. 4. 6. For none can be assured that God is their Father, without some measure of true knowledge. Signe 2.

Thirdly, try whether we unfainedly contemn and despise the world or not? are wee exalted in spirit, & heightned in affection? are our thoughts upon heaven and heavenly things, not upon earth and earthly? Colos. 3. 1, 2. Indeed this is not an easie thing to doe; for many say, they care not for the world, when indeed all their care is for it, all their delight in it; Undoubtedly, he that doth indeed despise the world, and weane his affections from it, doth thereby shew that he looks for another world, wherin dwels righteousnesse, and in which a Crowne of glory is reserved for him: and consequently hath some true knowledge of the everliving Lord, and of the Mysteries of the Kingdome of heaven. Signe 3.

Fourthly, we must prove, and see whether wee be humbled or not? 2 Corinth. 10. 5. and 1 Cor. 14. 25. Spiritus sanctus in columbâ & igne; quia igne zeli ardentes, & columbæ simplicitate mansuetos effecit. Greg. hom. The Holy Ghost descended in the likenesse of a Dove, and in fire: because hee makes the faithfull to burne with the Fire of zeale, and to be meeke, and dove-like innocent: For when once Religion, and the knowledge of God enter into the soule, then all our Peacocke-plumes fall, and wee begin to humble our selves before the Lord, as Holy Iob did 42. 6. yea the more our knowledge of God is, the more base, and vile are we in our own eyes. Signe 4.

Fifthly, examine whether we labour and endeavour that we may be transformed into the same Image with Christ, 2 Corinth. 3, 18. And that two manner of wayes, to wit. Signe 5.

I, In the practise of holinesse: doe wee labour to keepe his commandements? (1 Iohn 2. 3) doe we labour to eschew whatsoever is evill, and to doe whatsoever is good? 1 Iohn 3. 6. and 1 Peter 2. 9. and 2 Peter 1. 3. yea doe wee labour to increase in all heavenly knowledge? Colos. 1. 10.

II. In spirituall worship do we labour to worship and serve the Lord in spirit? Iohn 4. 24. yea within to be filled with the fulnesse of God? Ephes. 3. 19. yea are we through a zeale to Gods glory moved to serve and obey him? Then certainly we may be assured that Christ by his word and Spirit hath begun in part to reveale unto us the Mysteries of the Kingdome of Heaven.

VERS. 13, 14. Therefore speake I to them in Parables: because they seeing see not: and hearing they heare not, neither doe they understand. And in them is fulfilled the Prophesie of Esaias, which saith, By hearing ye shall heare Vers. 13, 14.

heare, but not understand, and seeing, yee shall see, and not perceive.

Three things are ordinarily objected from these verses, which I will but briefly touch; namely,

Object. 1. First, by these words, God seemes to be made the Author of sinne.

Answ. Hee is not the Author of sinne, but of just punishment, which he inflicts upon the obstinate, sometimes in a hidden and secret, but alwayes in a just judgement; for the judgements of the Lord are sometimes secret, but alwayes most just.

Object. 2. Secondly, Reprobates seeme here to be excused, because they are so blinded from above, that they cannot see.

Answ. Reprobates are not by this excused, because the Lord blinds none, but onely those who doe not see; that is, those who cannot, and will not see, God by a just judgement doth further close their eyes, that they shall never bee able to see: For God blinds their eyes onely

I. By a deniall of light unto them. And,

II. By a forsaking, and leaving of them in their blindnesse. And,

III. By giving them over to the power of Sathan, and their owne desires.

Object. 3. Thirdly, these verses are repugnant to those Scriptures, which tell us, that God would have all men to repent, and all to be saved.

Answ. Those places, and the like shew, what God universally doth approve, and allow of, not what he will doe unto all, or worke in all. These verses specially shew what God will doe to those, who are contumacious, and obstinate. Now extraordinary judgements are not repugnant to the ordinary meanes of salvation, Pareus, s. fol. 733.

Verse 19. Vers. 19. When any one heareth the word of the Kingdome, and understandeth it not, then commeth the wicked one, and catcheth away that, which was sowne in his heart; this is he which received seed by the high way side.

Quest. That which is called here, The wicked one, is called verse 4. The fowles of the aire; when it may be demanded, why the Devils are called the fowles of the ayre?

Answ. 1. First, for the subtilty of their nature: As the aire is a subtle thing, so are spirits.

Answ. 2. Secondly, for their habitation in the ayre.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, for their inordinate desire to ascend upward; which ariseth from their height of pride. Charibus. s. pag. 127. a.

Verse 20. 21. Vers. 20, 21. But hee that received the seed into stony places, the same is hee that heareth the word, and anon with joy receiveth it: yet hath he not root in himselfe, but dureth for a while: For when tribulation, or persecution ariseth, because of the word, by and by hee is offended.

Our Saviour here intimates five properties in the stony ground; namely, 141

First, Ἀκούων δὲ, he is a hearer of the Word of God.

Secondly, Λαμβάνων δὲ, he is a receiver of the Word which is heard.

Thirdly, Εὐθὺς, he receiveth it forthwith, as soon as he hath heard it.

Fourthly, Μετὰ χαρᾶς, he heareth, and receiveth it with joy.

Fifthly, Πρόσκαιρός ἐστι, yet for all this, he is but a server of the time; applying his Religion and Conscience, to the present condition of things.

Vers. 24. 25. Another Parable put hee forth unto them, saying, The Kingdome of Heaven is likened unto a man, which sowed good seed in his field: But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way. Verse 24. 25.

§. 1. Which sowed good Seed. Sect. 1.

What is meant by this Seed? Quest. 1.

The word of God: as is cleare from verse 19. and Mark. 4. 14. and Luke 8. 11. Answ.

Against this answer, it will be objected, That the good seed is the faithfull, as is expressely said by our Saviour. verse 38. The good seed are the Children of the Kingdome. Object.

By Seed, verse 38. is meant not the seed sown (as in this verse) but the Corn or stalk which springs up: So that in this verse by Seed is meant the root, and in the 38 verse the fruit; for the Children of the Kingdome are begotten by the Seed of the word. Answ.

In this Section we have two things to consider of, namely,

I. That the word of God is a Seed.

II. That the word is a good Seed.

First, the word of God is a Seed: and so called because it is small at the beginning, but encreaseth to be great: By which name our Saviour would teach us to use the word as a Seed; or wee must so heare the word, that we may fructifie and grow up thereby. Luke 13. 19. 21. and 1 Peter 2. 2. And the reason hereof is, because God gives his Talents; and word, and Spirit, and all for this end that wee may profit thereby. 2 Corinth. 12. 7. Observ 1.

How many things are observable in Seed? Quest. 2.

Seed hath these two properties, viz.

First, to encrease and fructifie, one grain of wheat doth not onely produce one grain; but sometimes Thirty, sometimes Sixty, sometimes an Hundred for one. So by one Sermon oftentimes many are converted, yea by one Sermon some thousands have been converted. Acts 2. 41. and 4. 4. Or by this encrease may [and is properly meant,] the divers measure of obedience and degrees of grace in divers hearers of the word of God.

Secondly, to be altered in forme; for from a bare Seed, it comes to have a new body, wherein there is, Answ.

I. Life, this is illumination and knowledge.

II. A root from whence the fruit springs; this this is conscience or love towards God.

142

III. An eare, filled full with good Corne: this is the life and conversation, which is repleniſhed with the good workes of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe; now as one Eare hath often more Corne in it then another, ſo one Child of God bringeth forth more Religious fruits frequently then another.

IV. A ſtalke, and this is conſtancy, and ſtrength, and induſtry, in the worke of the Lord.

Queſt. 3. What fruit muſt we ſhew of our hearing this Seed the word?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, let us ſhew that we have a roote, within, to wit, conſcience of our wayes, love unto God, and zeale of his glory; and that theſe are the wheeles which ſet us on worke; let the world ſee that we eſchew evill and doe good.

I. Becauſe, we make conſcience of the committing of the one, and the omitting of the other,

II. Becauſe we know that God is honoured by the one, but diſhonoured by the other.

III. Becauſe we know that the Lord loves the one, and hates the other; and therefore becauſe we love him above all things, wee deſire to doe that which is pleaſing and eſchew that which is diſpleaſing unto his Sacred Majeſtie.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, let us labour to hold forth a ſtalke; that is be watchfull, and diligent, and laborious, both in ſtriving againſt the temptations of ſinne, and in avoiding the occaſions thereof, and in beating downe of thoſe ſtrong holds, which Sathan builds in our hearts.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, let us labour for an Eare filled with good Corne; that is, labour that our lives and converſations may be pure and Holy as becomes the Children of ſo perfect a Father. And thus much for the firſt Obſervation, namely, That the word is a Seed.

Obſerv. 2 Secondly, the word of God is not only a Seed, but a good Seed alſo; ſo& called κατ' ἐξοχὴν to teach us: That there is no true, good, and profitable Seed, ſave onely the word of God. Or the onely profitable Seed to beget us is the Goſpell Iam. 1. 18 and 1. Peter 1.23.

Queſt. 4. How doth it appeare that the Goſpell is the onely good Seed?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it is evident hence, becauſe all good things comes from thence, namely,

I. Spirituall life; for we are begotten thereby. Iam. 1.18. and 1 Peter 1.23.

II. Food; for wee are fed thereby. 1 Peter 2. 2.

III. Light: For thereby we are directed in our ſpirituall walking. Pſalm 119.105.

IV. Weapons and armour; for therewith doe wee defend our ſelves, and offend our enemies, Epheſ. 6.17.

V. Comfort; for by the promiſes of the word, our hearts are cheered under affliction. Romans 15. 4.

VI. Life eternall; for that is the meanes to bring us thereunto. Act. 28.28. Rom. 1. 16. and Cor. 1.18.12.

Secondly, becauſe all other things beſides the word and Goſpell, are evill Seeds: for they are either Anſw. 2,

I. Fruitfull unto evill; and theſe Seeds are either,

Firſt, internall; as ſuggeſtions, imaginations, thoughts, affections, and the like, Or

Secondly, externall; as occaſions unto evill, and the perſwaſions, and temptations of others: Or

II. Unfruitfull unto good; as vaine Philoſophy, and carnall wiſedome: for theſe rather lead men into errour then truth. And therefore wee muſt carefully be ware of a double Seed, namely.

Firſt, unprofitable Seeds, for what hath the chaffe to doe with the Wheat? Ierem. 23.28. yea the word muſt be ſpoken as becomes the Oracles of God. 1. Peter 4.11. Indeed, Naturall Philoſophy doth explicate, and makes a thing more lively unto us; Morall Philoſophy doth perſwade us: Hiſtories approve the truth of the word: Examples move us; and the Fathers doth ſhew how they aſſent unto us: Now if the word be the Queen, at whoſe becke all theſe are obedient, and upon whom (as handmaids) they attend; we may then uſe them, and embrace them, but wee muſt never make Miſtreſſes of them.

Secondly, wee muſt take heed of evill Seeds: now theſe are either,

I. Internall, namely the love of ſinne, and our owne wils: for from theſe ſeeds comes no good fruit, but much evill, they being fruitfull ſeeds of impiety. Or,

II. Externall; namely,

Firſt, the erroneous opinions of others; as in Vſury.

Secondly, the cuſtome of the world in that, and in lying.

Thirdly, the perſwaſions, and temptations of our companions and friends.

Fourthly, our owne pleaſure, riches, and honour. All theſe are evill ſeeds, and therefore to be avoided; the word of God is a good ſeed; and therefore to be imbraced.

§. 2. In the field. Sect. 2.

What is meant by this field? Queſt. 1.

The field ſignifies the Church of Chriſt; but our Saviour, verſe 38. ſaith, that the field is the world; becauſe all men in the world, are either tares or corne; gold or droſſe, Lambes or Goats. Or, although the Church of Chriſt bee the field, yet our Saviour ſaith, the world is the field: Becauſe his Church is diſperſed over all the world. Whence wee learne, Anſw.

That the Church of Chriſt is generally diſperſed throughout the whole world. Obſerv. 1

How doth this clearely appeare? Queſt. 2.

Firſt, it is cleare from the teſtimonies of Scripture, Matth. 28,29. Marke 16.15. Act. 10.34. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, it is manifeſt from the phraſes attributed, and given unto the Church. For the members of the Church are called, Anſw. 2.

I. Παροικοι Πρωσ, Strangers and Pilgrims, Hebr. 11.13. and 1 Pet. 1. 1. They are called,

II. Διασπορα, Scattered, or diſperſed people,

1 Pet.

1 Pet. 1. 1. and Iames 1. 1. yea, the Church is called,

III. Catholike; for as,

First, the name Militant, doth distinguish it from other universall Churches; to wit,

I. From the Triumphant Church of the Saints in heaven.

II. From the Malignant Church of the wicked on earth. Even so,

Secondly, the name Catholike doth distinguish the Church of Christ, both,

I. From the Iudaicall Church; that being but a Garden, this of ours being a field: the Church of the Iewes being but Particular, this of ours being Vniversall, &c. And also, (Reade Rom. 10. 11. &c. Gal 3. 27. and 1 Cor. 12. 13.) II. From particular Nationall Churches; these being onely members of the Catholike Church, and are called Churches; (as Agellus dicitur Ager) every little close, or enclosure may be called a field.

Quest. 3. Is not the Church of Rome the Catholike Church?

Answ. No; it is but a Particular Church, and therefore not the Universall: it was once a singular member of the Church, but never more, because it is locall; it was never the whole Church, because it was never Catholike, or Vniversall, as the Church of Christ is: Orbis major urbe (as Augustine said) that is, The whole world is bigger and larger, then the greatest Citie in the world: Faith is of things not seene, Fides, quod non vides: And therefore in the Apostles Creed, wee say; that wee beleeve, that there is a Catholike Church, because wee cannot see it: Opus est oculis Angelicis non carneis: hee that would see the Vniversall Church, must have the eyes of Angels, not of men. For Nec Deus videtur, nec Ecclesia, neither can God bee seene with bodily eyes, nor the Church of God, as Ruffinus saith.

Quest. 4. How doe men depart from the Catholike Church of Christ?

Answ. 1. First, not by forsaking any kingdome, or departing from any Nationall Church: A man may goe from Britannia to Virginia; and yet not depart from the Church of Christ; because that is Catholike, and Vniversall: Cœlum non animum mutat.

Answ. 2. Secondly, a man may depart from the obedience of the Church of Rome, or of Constantinople, and yet not depart from the Church of Christ.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, he onely departs from the Church of God, who forsakes the truth of the doctrine of the Church; and leaves this good Seed which is sowen therein: For these God infatuates, 2 Thess. 2. 11. And thus the Church of Rome hath fallen from the pure Church of Christ, forsaking the wholesome truth, & sound doctrine of the sacred Scriptures, & taking heed unto fables.

The Husbandman sowes wheat in the field, that is not in the corners, or in some parts onely thereof, but in all the parts of the field: To teach us;

Obser. 2. That the Gospel is to be communicated, and imparted unto all; and not to bee hid under a Bushel, Col. 3. 16. But of this wee have to speake elsewher and therefore here I omit it.

§. 3. While men slept. 143

Wee see here in generall, that Tares are sowne presently after the word, and good Seed: To teach us: Sect. 3.

That the Gospel being once preached in any Citie, or Land, corruptions, and errours will also by and by creepe in. Our Saviour by his Parable of the divers Seeds in this Chapter; first Wheat in the day, and then Tares in the night, doth teach us; that truth may challenge prioritie of errour, yeelding principality unto truth, (saith Tertullian) and posterioritie unto lying. And so it must needs be, because as there must be, first iron, before there can be rust, which cankereth the iron; so must there be a Virgin-truth, before errour, which is nothing else, but an adulteration thereof. So that Primum, and Verum; that is, primarie antiquitie, and truth are both inseparable twins, begot and bred in the same instant; yet as the first seduction of mankind, did shortly follow the integritie of his first creation; so sometimes the difference betweene errour and truth, in respect of time, hath been no more, then as wheat in the day, and tares in the same night. BP. Mort. Appeal. pag. 511. lib. 4. Cap. 16. § 4. Obser. 1

Quest. 1. Now more particularly wee see, that Tares were sowne, while men slept.

Answ. How many wayes are men said to sleepe?

To this Vincentius (serm. hyem. dominica 4. post octa. Epipha. pag. 289. fine & pag. 291. media, &c.) answer,

That men are said to sleepe three manner of wayes; to wit,

First, Per ignorantiam intellectualem; when men are so stupid, and dull, that they cannot understand, and take up what is spoken, wee say that they are asleepe.

Secondly, Per negligentiam spiritualem, when men are negligent, remisse, careless, or luke-warme in that which they doe, wee say they are asleepe; that is, when they goe about spirituall duties, and the exercises of Religion heedlesly, minding some other thing, more then that they are about.

Thirdly, Per abundantiam criminalem, when men sleepe in their sinnes, and are so over-whelmed with the deluge of their iniquities, that they are no more sensible of their danger, or dangerous condition, then a man asleepe upon the Mast of a ship is. Now sleepe in this place doth signifie, that they did not perceive, when the Tares first began, or they were not aware of the first sowing of them: VVhence wee learne,

That heresies creepe secretly, obscurely, and unseene into the Church; and are not perceived till afterwards; errours are like rust, not perceived at the beginning: or like some secret maladie; which often appeares not till it bee incurable: And not like Ionas his gourd, who growes up suddenly, and at once to his height; but by degrees, and a change scarce sensible. Obser. 2.

Quest. 2. Who are here to be blamed?

Answ. The Church of Rome, who commands us to shew, when their heresies begun? what yeare, what moneth, what day, or by what particular person? This is their common brag, and over worn-

144 worne clamour, as wee may see in Campian (rat. red. Academicis.) and after him, the rule of faith. Kellison, and divers more. To whom wee answer,

First, that wee know not precisely the time of the first seeding of some errours: onely this wee know, that the husbandmen, not regarding the Seed (because it seemed little, and of no danger) neglected it as men asleepe; neither could it bee discerned, untill it did appeare in a blade.

Secondly, the Apostle likewise hath resembled corrupt, and erroneous speeches unto a creeping Canker, 2 Tim. 2.17. which is a disease in mans body, gathering upon a man, by little and little, from joynt to joynt, untill it have corrupted the vitall parts, B^p Mort. App. pag. 509.

Thirdly, there is a foure-fold Sleepe: namely,

I. Conniventiæ, of connivence; when men winke at things, lest they should disturbe the peace of the Church. Sic Ecclesia tenet Origenem pium, licet Scripta venenata (Hier) Thus the Church held Origen to be a good man, although many of his writings were stained with grosse errours; and Tertullian, and Cyprian, to be holy, although they were Montanists; and Iustine, and Irenæus, to be worthy to be placed in the Beadroule of Saints, although they were Chiliastes; and Augustine hath the addition of Saint; although hee seemed to grant a Purgatory. Thus for the peace of the Church, winking at the faults of such famous Fathers.

II. Negligentiæ, of negligence, and thus through the remissenesse of Governours errours have often crept into the Church.

III. Ignorantiæ, of ignorance, when the Priests lips doe not preserve knowledge, Malach. 2.7.

IV. Avaritiæ & superbiæ, of pride and avarice, when men are so transported with these, that they will neither see nor heare any thing which is opposite unto these. And thus errours have crept into the Church, sometimes through the affection of the people to the broachers of the errours; sometimes through the negligence, sometimes through the ignorance, sometimes through the pride and Avarice of the Prelates and Doctors of the Church.

Fourthly, I could name the beginning of some Popish heresies, and so stop the mouthes of those loud Cryers: And I will but onely name one or two; namely,

I. The primacy of the Pope, was not confirmed, concluded, or proclaimed to the world, before Phocas and Bonifaces time.

II. The worshipping of Images was condemned in the Nicene Councell.

III. The Cup in the Lords Supper was never taken away from the people till the Councell of Constance. But because this is amply handled by Bishop Iewel, I passe it by.

Quest. 3. What is here required of us?

Answ. 1. First, Ministers must be extraordinary carefull that errours do not grow, spread, and disperse themselves. Sathan can transforme himselfe into an Angell of light: and therefore they must watch diligently over their flockes, and be carefull for them. Galath. 4.19. And because the word is the good Seed, they must therefore preach in season, and out of season, 2 Tim. 4.2. Heb. 13.17.

Answ. 2. Secondly all must be warie, least corruptions encrease; occasion is a thiefe, and a neglect of watchfulnesse hath been the cause of much evill.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Sowed tares.

The enemy came and sowed ζιζάνια, this should not be translated Tares or Fitches, but evill Seed, for ζιζάνιον is that which we call blasted Corne, or the deafe Eares, which grow up with the good Corne, and cannot be discerned from the good Corne untill the harvest: and then it proveth naught: for Fitches and Tares may be presently discerned, and pulled up; the one signifieth the Hypocrites, and the other the Heretickes. And where it is said, His enemy came and sowed Tares, the parable must be understood thus, that the enemy corrupted that Seed which seemed to be good Seed. Weeme se Exercit Divine. lib. 1. pag. 139.

Vers. 27, 28, 29, 30. So the Servants of the householder came, and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good Seed in thy field? from whence then hath it Tares? He said unto them, an enemy hath done this. The Servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that wee goe and gather them up? But he said, nay: least while yee gather up the Tares, yee root up also the Wheat with them. Let both grow together untill the Harvest, and in the time of Harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather yee together first the Tares, and bind them in bundles to burne them; but gather the Wheat into my Barne.

Vers. 27, 28, 29, 30.

Sect. 1. §. 1. From whence then hath it Tares?

Observ. Our Saviour here shewes the Servants care, to teach us: That Ministers ought to bee watchfull.

Quest. 1. Wherein doth this watchfullnesse consist?

Answ. 1. First, in a daily watchful visiting of their fields and flocks. These Servants went daily into the fields, to see what breaches were made in the hedges, that they might amend them: and how the Wheat grew, and whether any thing hindred it from thriving or not: And thus should Ministers have a watchfull eye over their flockes, labouring to amend what is amisse, to reforme what is abusive, to reclaime wanderers, and to labour to remove whatsoever may hinder the fructifying of the word.

Answ. 2. Secondly, their watchfullnesse consists in a rejoycing when the Wheat thrives, and growes up that is, when they see the Lord to blesse and prosper his owne word, and give an encrease to that which they sow: The plower plowes in hope, and rejoyceth, when by his crop he seeth his expectation answered, Ministers preach because it is Gods owne Ordinance and ordinary meanes to convert sinners, hoping that by their preaching some may be converted: and great is their joy, when their expectation is not frustrated.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the care of a Minister consists in a sorrow for the springing up of Tares. These servants come (and certainely not without griefe) and tell their Master, that there are Tares amongst amongst the Corn: Thus faithfull Ministers when they see errours, heresies, hypocrisie, and formality in Religion, to beginne to spring, and spread it selfe among their flockes, they must seeke unto God, and doe all what lies in their power to redresse it.

Quest. 1. Why must Ministers be thus watchfull and carefull over their people?

Answ. 1. First, because God hath set them over them, and made them watchmen over their soules. And therefore if through their carelesnesse their people perish, their blood will bee required at their hands.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because without this care they never can render an account with joy unto God. This Argument the Apostle useth to perswade the people to be obedient unto the word. Hebr. 13. 17.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because the more sinners they convert, the greater measure of glory shal be conferred upon them at the last day.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because they are their Fathers, and ought intirely to love them: and therefore their love should be shewed in their care for them, and in their joy for their welfare. 1 Thes. 3. 8.

Object. 1. The Papists produce this place, to prove that Hereticks & Apostates are true members of the militant Church of Christ: arguing thus: In the same (which signifies the Church) are three things, namely, Corne, and Chaffe, and Tares, that is good men and bad, Orthodox, and Heterodox, maintainers of truth, and Heretickes. And therefore these are members of the Church as well as those.

Answ. 1. First, I deny the Antecedent, because the field doth not signifie the Church, but the world, verse 38.

Answ. 2. Secondly, I deny the consequence, because it is Captio ab homonymia Ecclesiæ: there is an ambiguity in this word Church, which may signifie either the outward visible, or inward spirituall, and invisible Church.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if they be open Heretickes, that apparently hold any opinion that razeth the foundation of Religion, or any Article of our faith, which is necessary to be beleeved and held unto salvation: then such are not members, no not of the visible Church.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, by Tares are not meant Heretickes (or at least not onely Heretickes,) but Hypocrites, and all wicked livers in the Church.

The Papists, with one consent hold that the Church of Christ is a visible society or company which can never faile: or that it is impossible that the Church of Christ in the earth should so faile, that we could not see it: seeing that it hath promises that it shall be alwaies unto the end so palpably visible, that a man may point at it with the finger, and say. The Church of Christ is there, or in such, or such a place. Now they prove it from this place, wherein we see, that both Wheat and Tares are found in one and the same field; & that they must both so remaine untill the time of the Harvest, that is the consummation of the world; And therefore unto the worlds end this field shall be visible.

Now the Protestants they grant 145

First, in the Church there shall bee alwayes both good and bad; that is, whersoever there is a visible Church or company of professours on earth; there shall be some bad commixed with the good.

Secondly, some visible Churches or congregations may endure to the end of the world; but not in the same outward beauty and splendor, but sometimes in the waxe, sometimes in the waine;

Thirdly, the purity of Religion, and the true Church shall alwaies remaine in the foundation of salvation: but not in the whole outward glorious Ministerie, as the Papists would have it.

Fourthly, this place doth not at all prove, that the Church shal be alwaies visible so, as Bellarmine would have it, namely, that it shall be alwaies visible in a visible head, the Pope of Rome, alwaies conspicuous in the Prelates of the Church, and alwaies indued with outward splendor and pompe: For it will be hard for the Iesuite to pick these out of this Parable. Alsted. de natur. eccles. fol. 158.

§. 2. But he said nay: lest while yee gather up the Tares, yee root up also the wheat with them. Sect. 2.

Quest. 1. Why doth the housholder forbid his servants to plucke up the Tares, and command them to suffer them to encrease?

Answ. 1. First, lest in gathering up them, they should plucke up some of the wheat with them: where we see, that the wicked shall rather bee spared a while, then the righteous shal be endangered. The wicked Sodomites should rather have been spared, then ten righteous should have perished.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because he himselfe hereafter will plucke up the Tares in his due time, and cast them into the Fire, where we see that although wicked men escape mans hand, yet they shall not escape Gods; or although God himselfe spare them for a time, yet he will not spare them alwaies, but punish them at the last.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because the Tares hinder not the Wheat from being gathered into the Garner at the time of Harvest: that is the hypocrites and wicked in the Church cannot by their society, or commixture with the righteous hinder them from Heaven.

§. 3. Suffer them to grow untill the Harvest. Sect. 3.

If the understanding Reader desire to see, how this Section is truely to be understood; and how also it is abused by some, who labour from hence to overthrow all politicall and Ecclesiasticall Discipline, and how their exceptions are fully answered: let him Reade Pareus, in fol. 725. b. calce &c. and Chemnit harm. pag. 863. 864. and Scultetus Idea Concionis, pag. 143. 144. 145. For the English Reader I referre him to Doctor Mayer in f. f. 189, 190, 191.

VERS 34. All these things spake Iesus unto the multitude Vers. 34

146 in Parables, and without a Parable ſpake hee not unto them.

Queſt. How is it ſaid that Chriſt ſpake nothing unto them without Parables, when as at ſometime he taught plainly.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, Auguſtine (qu. Evang.) anſwereth, that although ſome things were at ſometimes ſpoken plainly, yet at no time did he ſpeak ſo plainly, but ſomthing therein was parabolicall.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, others rather anſwer thus, that at this time of histeaching, hee ſpake nothing without parables. Chryſoſt. qu. 3.

Some condemne too much knowledge, and preferre ignorance before it, ſetting up Trophees thereunto: but this is not anſwerable to the precepts and practiſe of Chriſt and his Apoſtles: for S. Paul makes the Goſpell knowne unto the Corinthians, 1 Corinth. 15. 1. It being a light not to be hid under a Buſhell, but to bee held forth, and declared unto all: yea Chriſt, wee ſee, taught openly in the Temple, never ſecretly. Iohn 18. 20. And commands his Apoſtles to goe and preach unto all nations, Matth. 28. 19. And hence Paul ſaith, that the word of ſalvation is ſent to all that feare God. Acts 13. 26. Now againſt this the Papiſts object this place, That Chriſt ſpake unto the common ſort, or peoplein parables and without a Parable ſpake he not unto them.

Obiect.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, with Auguſtine above, I might anſwer that in many things which he taught, although ſomething was difficult, yet there was ſomething eaſie.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, this verſe hath reference to the preſent time, or preſent preaching of Chriſt, not to his preaching alwaies: For in this verſe it is ſaid ταῦτα πάντα, all theſe things ſpake Ieſus unto the multitude in Parables: and without a Parable ſpake he not unto them; that is, at that particular time: for at other times we ſee, hee teacheth them plainly without Parables, as Luke 4. But principally in his Sermon upon the mount. Matth. 5, 6, 7.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, although our Saviour here teacheth in Parables, yet he doth not hereby excuſe ignorance, (much leſſe to commend it) but rather doth accuſe them hereby of obſtinacy and perverſeneſſe: and therefore in judgement teacheth them in Parables and not plainly: for Parables are uſed for the puniſhment of hearers:

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, the principall cauſe why our Savi our ſpake ſo much in Parables, was becauſe hee was not yet glorified: neither had as yet ſuffered. Hence he could not ſend the Comforter to his Apoſtles, untill hee was glorified: but after his glorification he ſent him not onely to his Apoſtles, but alſo by their Miniſterie to others; and taught them, that is, brought to their remembrance what they had heard before, that they might make it knowne unto others. Matth. 10. 17. And therefore Chriſts preaching in Parables is no plea for the excuſe of ignorance.

Verſe 35. VERS. 35. I will utter things which have beene kept ſecret from the foundation of the world.

Concerning Secrets a queſtion or two here may bee made: namely,

What is meant by this word Secret in Scripture? Queſt. 1.

Firſt, ſometimes it ſignifies the Temple or Sanctuary, as Ezech. 7. 22. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, ſometimes it ſignifies a Tabernacle, or place of refuge, as Pſalm 27. 5. and 31. 20. and 91. 1. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, ſometimes it ſignifies Propheſies, Viſions, or predictions of things to come. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, ſometimes it ſignifies the divine will of God, which hee would have obeyed by his ſervants. Anſw. 4.

Fiftly, ſometimes it ſignifies the ſecret will, and hidden decree of God. Anſw. 5.

Sixtly, ſometimes it ſignifies humane counſels; or things committed and communicated by one friend or neighbour unto another. Anſw. 6.

The Lord, Iob. 11. 6. Eccleſ. 10. 20. Daniel 2. 19. Anſw. and Chriſt in this verſe.

To whom doth the Lord reveale his Secrets? Queſt. 3.

Firſt to his Prophets in particular. Amos 3. 7. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, to all his Servants (that is the righteous) in particular. Pſalm 25. 14. Prov. 3. 32. Eſa. 45. 3. Matth. 13. 11. Iohn 15. 15. Examples whereof we have in theſe places. 18. 17. and 41. 39. Numb. 12. 8. Daniel 2. 19. and 5. 11. Anſw. 2.

What is required of us in regard of humane Secrets? Queſt. 4.

Firſt, a man muſt not raſhly communicate or impart a ſecret unto any. Prov. 25 9. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, he unto whom a Secret is diſcovered, or made knowne muſt not reveale it, but conceale and hide it, Proverb 11. 13 Anſw. 2.

Who reveale Secrets? Queſt. 5.

Firſt, they are revealed by wicked men. Proverbs 11. 13. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, Secrets are diſcouered by fooles. Eccl. 19. 11. Anſw. 2.

VERS. 43. Then ſhall the righteous ſhine forth as the Sunne, in the Kingdome of their Father, who hath Eares to heare, let him heare. Verſe 43.

§. 1. Then ſhall the righteous ſhine forth, as the Sunne &c. Sect. 1.

Wee affirmed before verſe 8. that there were divers degrees of glory in heaven: now againſt this, this ver. is objected, then the Righteous ſhall ſhine in Heaven as the Sunne; but there is no greater light then that of the Sunne. Therefore in Heaven there are not unequall degrees of Glory. Obiect.

This is a fallacy A dicto ſecundum quid, ad dictum ſimpliciter: becauſe in this place our Saviour only teacheth, that the glory of the faithfull hereafter ſhall be great; therefore ſimply there ſhall bee no degrees of glory, followes not. Anſw.

§. 2. He that hath Eares to heare. Sect. 2.

This ſeems to be a Synonimum, but it is not, for to heare ſignifies ſomething more then Eares, and the the meaning is: He that hath Eares prepared to heare, let him heare. Whence obſerve, Obſerv. That no man can heare profitably except his Eares be purged and prepared by God. Acts 16. 14.

Queſt. 1. How doth this appeare?

Anſw. It appeares clearly thus, namely,

First, becauſe wee doe not care to heare, till wee deſire to know: And therefore the Lord begets this deſire: and that,

I. By diſturbing and rowſing the carnall peace of the heart: as Acts 2.37. For when men once feele themſelves to bee ſicke, then they ſeeke to the Phyſitian. And

II. By giving a taſte of the ſweetneſſe of the word. Ierem. 15.16.

Secondly, becauſe by nature we are deafe, as was ſhewed before. Chapt. 11. 5. § 4. of our ſelves we can underſtand, and take up nothing, and therefore the Lord helpes us; and that

I. By opening the heart, as hee did the heart of Lydia. Acts 16. 14. And

II. By giving a cleare underſtanding, Coloſſians 3. 16. And thus the Lord awakens our hearts by his word; then makes us to feele ſome ſweetneſſe in the word; then opens our hearts, and enables us to receive, and embrace the word; And laſtly, teacheth us ſo to underſtand it, that wee gaine, and reape ſpirituall profit thereby, and are edified and built up therewith more and more, both in faith, and obedience: And therefore without him wee cannot heare profitably.

Quſt. 2. What is here required of us?

Anſw. We muſt labour and endeavour that wee may be prepared to heare the word of God.

Queſt. 3. How muſt we labour to prepare our ſelves to heare?

Anſw. 1. First, in the Morning, we muſt meditate (when wee are to goe to the Lords houſe) heare whether we are a going? namely, to the King, yea the King of Kings, ſpeake unto us, for our everlaſting welfare, and therefore let us prepare our ſelves for ſuch a glorious preſence, and ſuch a gracious audience, as we are invited unto.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, we muſt pray, that the Lord would vouchſafe, both to prepare us, and alſo to corroborate and ſtrengthen us to prepare our ſelves, yea to teach us how to prepare our ſelves, and to direct us in our preparation.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, we muſt purge the Mind, and empty the ſoule of all thoughts, and imaginations which may hinder us from hearing.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, wee muſt labour to beget in our ſelves, a deſire of learning theſe two things, viz.

I. That wee may perfectly know the ſtate, and condition wherein wee are. And,

II. That wee may learne by certaine ſignes, whether grace live in us, and how grace increaſeth in us.

Whence comes it, that there are ſo many hearers, who are neither changed, nor benefited, nor edified by the word? 147 Queſt. 4.

Anſw. Certainely, it proceeds from hence, becauſe they doe not endeavour to prepare their hearts. For,

First, without meditation before wee come unto the houſe of God, wee can have no true reverence; neither conceive of the word, as the word of God, and injunctions, and counſell given unto us from him.

Secondly, without preparation, there can be no endeavour to profit, by that which we heare, nor labour to digeſt it, and imprint it ſtrongly in our memories.

Thirdly, without prayer, there can bee no hope of the co-operation of the Holy Spirit, (without whoſe aſſiſtance wee can doe nothing) becauſe wee doe not awake, and ſtirre him up, 2 Tim. 1.6. yea, wee are unworthy of his aid, if wee will not begge it; for by a neglect of praier, we ſeeme to thinke that hee is not worth asking for. And,

Fourth. for ſuch a contempt, and neglect, God is incenſed; and in his juſt anger, hardens ſuch a hearer more and more; making the word a meanes to harden, and not to ſoften him.

§. 3. Let him heare,

Sect. 3. Queſt. 1. Why doth not our Saviour ſay, Let him beleeve, or let him obey, or let him devote himſelfe wholly up unto the Lord; but onely let him heare?

Anſw. Becauſe hearing is the meanes unto theſe, and unto all graces. Hence thence obſerve.

Obſerv. That reverend, and religious hearing, is the way unto true grace, Deut. 32.2. Prov. 1.5. Pſal. 34.11. and 45. 10. Examples hereof wee have in the Samaritanes, Act. 8.8. and in the Eunuch, Act. 8.38. And in Cornelius, and his friends, and family, Act. 10.34. and in others, 1 Cor. 15.1.

Queſt. 2. How doth it appeare that grace comes by hearing?

Anſw. It appeares moſt evidently by theſe two Particulars; namely,

First, the Goſpel is the meanes of grace, and that is communicated unto us by preaching, or hearing; for it is the Goſpel which wee preach, Rom. 10.8. and 1. Pet. 1. 25. and Rom. 1.16. the Goſpel is called the power of God unto ſalvation; which is expounded of preaching, 1 Cor. 1.18.21.

Secondly, it is evident from the end of the preaching of the Goſpel, which is to bring us from Sathan unto God, and from darkeneſſe unto light, Act. 26. 18. and 1 Theſſal. 1.10. Now this is done by theſe wayes and meanes, viz.

I. By teaching us the danger wherein we are: for naturally wee are blind, and drowned in ſleepe; yea, drunke and ſenſeleſſe, Proverb. 23. 34. &c. preſuming that all is well with us; but the Goſpel teacheth us, that by nature wee are miſerable, Rom. 7. 23,24.

II. By ſhewing the remedy; that is, by preaching ſalvation by the blood of Chriſt.

III. By giving the light of underſtanding, and enabling us to ſee the truth, 2 Cor.

148

4.6. By nature wee thinke our selves to be wise, and men of understanding; but when grace comes, then wee see that we know nothing, as we ought to know. Capnio thought, the first yeare that he came to Athens, that hee knew something; the second yeare hee doubted of his knowledge; but the third, hee openly confessed his ignorance, and acknowledged himselfe to know nothing. And thus the more knowledge we have, and the clearer our understandings are by grace, the more sensible wee are of our ignorance. As Simonides said to Hierom, concerning God.

IV. By bringing us unto Christ, 2 Cor. 11.3. and by forming Christ in us, *Gal.*4.19. namely, by faith, *Rom.*10.15. And thus we see, that first by the hearing of the word wee are taught. And secondly, we are perswaded: And thirdly, our miserable estate is discovered: And fourthly, the remedies are unfolded: And fiftly, our understandings more enlightned: And sixthly, faith infused, and Christ formed in our hearts, and wee brought neerer and neerer unto him.

Quest. 3. How many sorts of hearers are there?

Answ. Many sorts; namely,

First, unwilling, and constrained hearers, who onely are compelled by the Law to heare, and otherwise would not heare at all.

Secondly, treacherous hearers; who heare that they may learne something, whereby they may intrap him, whom they heare. And thus the Herodians heard Christ.

Thirdly, scoffing and taunting hearers; and thus some heard Paul, *Act.*17, 18, 32.

Fourthly, malevolent hearers; who pervert all things they heare, wresting them to their owne private senses; yea, are angry when the word reproves them, and taxe the Minister with malice, as though all his reprehensions proceeded from spleene, or envie.

Fifthly, blind hearers, who understand no more then Davids Idols, Who had eyes, but saw not, eares, but heard not, &c. Psalm. 115. 6. and 1 Corinthians, 2.14.

Sixthly, proud hearers; who are puft up
Iohn 7. 4. with their owne wisedome, like the Pharisees,
7.1 who thought they knew so much, that Christ could teach them no more then they knew.

Seventhly, sinfull hearers; who are so hindered, and intangled by their sinnes, that they cannot heare any thing which crosseth, or opposeth their sinnes.

Eighthly, sluggish hearers: who heare, but neither,

I. Remember what they heare, as Matth. 13. 52. and 1 *Cor.*15.2. Nor,

II. Practise what they heare: but are inconstant in the duties of Religion, Iames 1.5.7.

Quest. 4. How must wee heare aright, and profitably?

Answ. 1. First, before wee heare, wee must prepare our selves, as was shewed in the former Section, *Quest.*3.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in our hearing many things are required of us, viz.

I. Wee must begin to heare betimes, in our youth, Eccles. 12.1. That is, let us learne to love the preaching of the Word, in our young yeers.

II. Wee must heare it attentively when we doe heare it. Constantine being desired to sit downe, when hee stood to heare a Sermon; answered, Nefas verbum Dei negligenter audire. It was no small wickednesse, to heare the word of God negligently, Euseb. in vitâ Constant.

III. Wee must heare the Word humbly; that is, with feare and trembling, Esay 66.2.5.

IV. Wee must heare the Word with a desire to learne thereby, as was shewed in the former Section, *Quest.*3.

V. Wee must heare seriously; that is, so as that wee may gaine by our hearing. The house of God is like to a shop, full of precious drugs, or rich merchandise; or like a costly, sumptuous, and well furnished Banquet: And therefore wee should never come thither, and goe away againe empty; but still gaine some spirituall grace, and profit: *Non convenimus ut unus loquatur, alius plausibus excipiat, & sic digrediamur: sed ut nos utilia-vos lucremini, Chrysost. 5. Genes. hom.*1. We doe not meet together in the house of God to talke, or conferre, or to applaud what is spoken; and so goe away: but Ministers must labour to preach profitable things, and people must labour to heare profitably.

VI. Wee must heare prudently, and wisely; not imprinting all things (without difference) in the memory which are delivered; but by separating the lesse profitable things, from the more profitable, and retaining these the more surely: Ut apes mel è floribus, sic doctrinas tibi aptas. Chrysost. As Bees gather honey out of flowers, so must wee apply, and lay hold principally upon those doctrines, and truths which are most fit for us; that so wee may bee bettered thereby; that is, wee must chiefly attend unto, and learne those things, which doe most awaken the conscience, and shake off security, and comfort the heart, and refresh the spirits, and direct the life. And,

VII. These things wee must deeply imprint in our memories, *Mat.*13.52 that they may stand us instead in the time of need: As for example; sometimes wee heare instructions, how to behave our selves in the times of temptation, tribulation, sicknesse, losses, crosses, and the like: Sometimes wee heare consolations for all these severall estates and conditions: Now although wee be (when wee heare these) neither tempted, nor tried, nor afflicted, nor weakned with sicknesse, nor in any imminent danger of death; yet we should carefully lay them up in our hearts and memories; that wee may make use of them, when wee are in such case; for all these doe attend those, who belong unto God, at one time or other.

VIII. Wee must heare for this end, that wee may obey; for to obey what wee heare from the Lord, is to follow the Lord.

Thirdly, after our hearing of the word of God, these things are required of us: namely,

I. In

I. In the Church; and there three duties are enjoyned, viz.

First, prayer; and this is not to be neglected; for as before Sermon wee must pray, both for the Minister, and our selves, that the Lord would assist both him in speaking, and us in hearing, and so direct him by his Spirit, that he may speake home to our soules, and consciences; So after Sermon, wee must pray for our selves, and all the faithfull of the Congregation, that the Lord would give a blessing to that which wee have heard, that what we have heard, we may remember, and what wee remember, we may understand; and what wee understand to be good, wee may practise, and be enabled to continue in the practise thereof unto the end. And as wee must thus pray unto God for our selves, so wee must also praise him, for enabling his servant the Minister, to deliver his message unto us.

Thirdly, the blessing is not to bee neglected, as many doe, who goe out of the Church, before the blessing be given.

II. When wee are gone from the Church, we must ruminate, and meditate of what wee have heard. It is not good, as soone as ever wee goe from the Word, to busie, or imploy our selves about something, or other; but to recollect what wee have heard, and to conferre with our families about it, that so it may take the deeper root in our hearts. Blessed are they that thus heare; that is, who,

First, reverence, honour, and esteeme the Word. And,

Secondly, convene quickly, and come betimes to the Lords house, upon the Lords day. And,

Thirdly, labour to heare unto profit, and edification. And,

Fourthly, pray for a blessing, from God upon that which they have heard. And,

Fifthly, doe not neglect, but stay for the blessing of the Minister. And,

Sixthly, meditate, and ruminate after they are gone, of that which they have heard.

Object. The Papists, to prove that justifying faith may bee separated from love, urge this place, where wee have a Parable, of good and bad fish, in one and the same net: Now because they who are in the Church, are faithfull; it will follow, that if they prove wicked, then that faith from whence they are called faithfull, may bee conjoyned with sinne, from whence they are called sinfull, and consequently may be separated from love.

Answ. It is one thing for a man to be in the Church, by an outward profession of faith, and from thence only to be called faithfull: it is another thing for a man to be a true member of Christ; and from thence to bee called just, or a justified man; for that faith which is common, both to the good and bad, doth state a difference betweene Christians, and no Christians; but not betweene those who are justified, and not justified: And therefore that faith is absurdly, and ridiculously called justifying faith; which, while it remaines such, hath neither the act, nor power of justifying. Bp. Davenant. Determin quæst. 38. pag. 172.

VERS. 52. Then said hee unto them; Therefore every Scribe which is instructed unto the Kingdome of heaven, is like unto a man, which is an householder, that bringeth forth out of his treasure, things new and old. Verse 52.

Our Saviour in these words (by a common consent of Interpreters) doth expresse both who are good Preachers, and also who are good hearers; and by an ἀντίθεσις, doth imply, who are bad Preachers, and bad hearers: And therefore I will propound a question, or two of either,

How must wee make true use of that we reade, and remember in the Scriptures? Quest. 1.

How may we come to a right understanding, and use of the Scriptures? Quest. 2.

By the use of these meanes; namely: Answ.

First, learne to feare God; for that is the way unto true saving knowledge, Psalme 25. 14. Prov. 9. 10.

Secondly, labour for humbleness of mind, laying aside all conceit of thine owne wit, Psalme 119. 130.

Thirdly, pray unto the Lord, that he would be pleased to instruct thee in his word; as David, in the Psalme, 119. prayes often.

WHo are bad hearers of the word of God? Quest. 3.

First, those who heare, but remember not what they heare. Answ. 1.

Secondly, those who labour not to understand that which they heare, or remember: For both hearing and remembring are in vaine, without understanding. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, those who use not the word which they heare, remember, and understand aright; that is, not unto edification, and obedience; but only for table-talke. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, those who are so highly conceited of their owne wit, learning, and parts, that they thinke they can make true use of the word, and understand it aright of themselves, and by their owne strength. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, those who in the studying, reading and hearing of the word, neglect praying unto God, for a blessing upon it unto them. Answ. 5.

Sixthly, and lastly, those who are feareless to offend God, and careless to please him: For the end of preaching, is to make us eschew evill, and doe good; and therefore hee is an ill hearer, who doth not learne these out of the word. Answ. 6.

Who is a faithfull, and good Preacher of the Word? or how many things are required in such an one? Quest. 4.

First, the Minister of the Word must be learned; for he that is ignorant cannot teach others, neither can any instruct another, in that which hee knowes not himselfe. And therefore Paul requires in a Bishop, that hee be διδακτικὸς, one that is able to teach, 1 Tim. 3 2. Now if it should be doubted, what learning is required in a Minister? Our Saviour here shewes, that he must be Doctus ad regnum cœlorum, instructed unto the kingdome of heaven; that is, he must not preach Answ. 1.

150 for gaining of popular applause, or for the satisfying of the curiosity of others, or for his owne proper humane profit, but he must preach for this end, that men may be taught the path of true piety which leads unto life.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Minister of the Gospell ought to abound in the knowledge and Doctrine of piety; yea his breast should be like a full fraught Treasury abounding with all Theologicall notions, insomuch as, from thence, he might draw upon any occasion offred a solid knowledge of the Scriptures, and a true and Orthodoxe interpretation of the same, and be able to reconcile places which we seeme to be repugnant, and to confute errours and to answer fitly, and sufficiently all unprofitable questions which might be proposed, And this our Saviour calls things New, and Old.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, in a good Divine there is required a sound judgement, that so he may be able according to the circumstances of time, place, and hearers, to propound those things which are necessary and profitable, and sutable to the time, place, and persons, and which may serve for their edification. For all things are not fit either for all times, or places, or persons. Some hearers stand in need of comfort, some of reproofe, some of admonition, some of instruction, some of Milke, and some of strong meate. And although the substance of a Ministers office be to preach, yet these Circumstances of time, place, and hearers, are not to be disregarded; according to those verses which were given by the Ancients unto the Preachers of the word.

Omnibus tenemini vestris prædicare:
Sed quid, quibus, qualiter, ubi, quando quare;
Debitis sollicitè præconsiderare;
Ne quis in officio dicat vos errare.

Verse. 55 VERS. 55. Is not this the Carpenters Sonne? Is not his Mother called Mary, and his brethren Iames, and Ioses, and Simon, and Iudas?

Christs Countrymen speake here contemptuously of him, and his blessed Mother, and the Evangelist from the Holy Ghost sets it down for their perpetuall disgrace. Whence it may be demanded, Whether is the Virgin Mary to be adored and worshipped, by us or not? Quest.

Epiphanius (Contra Collyridianos, hæres. 79.) answers, Maria non est adoranda: Although all Nations shall call her blessed, yet none must worship her: his reasons are these, Answ.

First, because he is more like a Devill then a man, that will edifie a humane or mortall creature, and set up Images thereof to bee worshipped.

Secondly, because the mind commits spirituall fornication, while she departs from the worship of the only true God, to adore those who by nature are no Gods.

Thirdly, because the B. Virgin worshipped Christ her selfe; and therefore herein is to be imitated by us; but she her selfe is not propounded unto us to be worshipped.

Fourthly, because Christ saith to her, woman what have I to doe with thee? Iohn 2. Where he calls her woman, that none might thinke her to bee more.

Fifthly, because no Prophet hath given any command to worship either any meere man, or woman.

Sixthly, because Iohn Baptist, and Elias, were Virgins, and Thecla was chaste; and yet none of these were worshipped; and therefore neither ought Mary.

Seventhly, because if God will not suffer the Angels to be worshipped, then neither Mary who was borne of humane seed.

Eightly, because Christ did not take flesh of the Virgin Mary, that hee might make her a Goddesse, or that we might offer up our prayers unto her; Because this is due onely unto God; and therfore Christ will not rob his Father of this glory, to give it to his Mother.

CHAPTER XIV.

Verse. 1. VERS. 1. At that time Herod the Tetrach heard of the fame of Iesus.

WEe Reade of three Herods, namely.

First, hee who slew the Infants.

Secondly, hee who slew Iohn Baptist, and was made friends with Pilate; whom Tyberius Cæsar after wards banished to Lyons in France: and this Herod was the first Herods Sonne.

Thirdly, he whom Tyberius Cæsar made the former Herods successour in the Kingdome, after hee was banished; and this Herod was the Brother to the former, (as some say) or rather the Sonne of Aristobulus, who was the first Herods Sonne. Now the first of these Herods was called Ascalonites; the second Antipas, and the third Agrippa: And for the distinguishing of them by their severall bloody Acts one made this distich.

Ascalonita necat pueros, Antipa Iohannem;
Agrippa Iacobum, claudit que in carcere Petrum.

VERS. 2.

Vers. 2. VERS. 2. And said unto his Servants, This is Iohn the Baptist, hee is risen from the dead, and therefore mighty workes doe shew forth themselves in him.

Sect. 1. §. 1. This is Iohn the Baptist.

Quest. 1. What is the sense and meaning of these words?

Answ. This is Iohn Baptist; that is, this Christ which teacheth so powerfully, and worketh such great Miracles, seems to me to be no other then Iohn the Baptist. Now this may be two manner of waies understood, namely,

First, thus, this is Iohn Baptist, that is, in both of them, there is the like pietie, the like Doctrine, the like freedome & liberty in reproving of vices, and their manner of life is not much unlike; and therefore in Christ Iohn may bee lively seene. But Secondly, it seemes rather that Herod by these words was of Pythagoras his opinion, who held the transmigration of the soule, or that the soules of the dead did passe into new bodies. This Doctrine is ascribed to Pythagoras, but Volaterranus shewes that it had other authors before him, from whom Plato learned it; as hee chanced to Travell along with them. Now it is evident Plato held this μετεμψύχωσις from many places of his workes. For (Ad finem lib. 10. τῶν πολιτειῶν, hee tels us, That through the hatred of a woman the soule of Orpheus went into a Swan, and the soule of Thamyrus went into a Nightingall, and the soul of Ajax into a Lyon, and the soule of Agamemnon into an Eagle; with divers other examples. So againe (In fine Timæi Dialogi) he tels us that the soules of unjust men passe into women; and the soule of those who contemne Philosophy, into Cattell; and the souls of men who are wholly given to the world and worldly things, into Fishes. Many examples more hee hath in Phædro, which I omit.

Quest. 2. Whether is this opinion to be embraced & received or not? And if not, then why not?

Answ. 1. First, it is to be exploded because to the production of any creature, whether man, or beast, there is necessarily required a Conjunction or copulation of the Male and Female, of the same kind or Species, that, that is of which is produced according to the old principle. Omne simile gignit sunum simile. Every creature begets his like: And therfore how can the soule of a man goe out of a man, into the body of a Beast?

Answ. 2. Secondly, this Doctrine is to be rejected because they themselves cannot tell, what, or whose soule passeth into the body of a Monster, seeing by reason of the uncouth deformitie thereof no certaine Species can be defined. No living creature (say they) can live without a soule, nor no soule can animate any Body, but the soule of an Individuum, which hath a Species. And therfore seeing there are many monstrous births, unlike to all the severall Species, of living creatures in the world, this must needs be an errour, and as grosly false, forsaken and avoided.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this opinion is not to bee received for the absurdity of it: For if a soule passe from one body to another; then I demand whether it enter into a body already perfect and absolute, or into some little Particle from which the body begins to be formed and fashioned? The first the Pythagoreans dare not avouch, because they know that 151

I. A body cannot come unto maturity and perfection without a soule; neither

II. That two soules can live in one body. Nor

III. Can they tell how that soule which first is in the body, doth depart out of it when the body is perfect, that so a strange soule may come in: because when the soule departs from any body, the body dies.

Now if they say the second, that the soule passeth into the body, when the body is but small, and newly begun to be fashioned; then I would know, how the soule which was even now most ample, in an ample and large body, can be contracted in so small a roome?

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it were a most absurd thing to embrace such an absurd opinion as this is, or to say that of one body are begot many bodies of divers Species: and that one and the same soule can passe into many bodies of divers species.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, if the soule of a wise man, and great learned Scholler passe into another man, it neither reveales to him into whom it is entred, nor remembers any thing it self of those things which it knew so well before: which is most strange that the soule should be so forgetfull; and therefore as a Tenet false and absurd is utterly to be rejected.

Object. Now against this it will be objected, that Christ himself. (Matth. 11. 14.) saith of Iohn Baptist, This is Elias, the same soule which of old was in Elias, is now in Iohn Baptist.

Answ. 1. First, Iohn being asked whether he were Elias or not, answers, no he is not. And therefore from the Scripture this exposition is false.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the meaning of our Saviours words may be gathered from the Angels speech to Zacharie: Hee shall (saith he) convert many of the Children of Israel to the Lord their God, and he shall goe before the Messiah in the Spirit and power of Elias, that he may turne the hearts of the Fathers to the Children. Luke 1. 16. 17. Now it is one thing to have the soul of Elias, and another, to come into the Spirit and power of Elias. Yea it is worth observing that the Angell doth not onely say, that he shall come in the Spirit of Elias, lest some by Spirit had understood the soul, but also in the Spirit and power. Famphylus martyr ex Orig. lib. 7. in Evang. Matth.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, our Saviour in the place objected saith, that Iohn was the Elias which was to come. And therefore there was one Elias who of old preached in Achabs time, & another which was to come in the time of Christ, and which was foretold by the Prophet Malachi.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, how can the soule of Elias be imagined to passe into the body of Iohn Baptist, when the Scripture witnesseth that he laid not aside his soule at all, neither died, but was translated both with his body and soule into heaven: that so to succeeding ages he might be an example or proof of the immortality of the soule, and of a better, yea an Eternall life.

VERS. 3. 4. For Herod had laid hold on Iohn and Vers. 3. bound 152 bound him, and put him in priſon, for Herodias ſake, his brother Philips wife. For Iohn ſaid unto him, It is not lawfull for thee to have her.

Many great cauſes the Baptiſt had to reprove Herod, becauſe many ſins did concur in this one fact of his, in taking his Brothers wife; namely, Firſt, Adultery, in lying with another mans wife.

Secondly, Injuſtice, in rejecting and caſting off an innocent wife; for he was married when he fell in love with his brother Philips wife, and then caſt his own off, and took the other unto him.

Thirdly, Rape, injuſtice, oppreſſion, and tyranny, in ſnatching by force, another mans wife from him.

Fourthly, an inceſtuous habitation with the wife of his brother, who was now alive, and had had children by his wife Herodias. And therefore it was a moſt unlawfull marriage.

Verſ. 7. VERS. 7. Whereupon he promiſed with an oath, to give her whatſoever ſhe would aſk.

Queſt. 1. What is an Oath?

Anſw. It is a lawfull calling of God, to witneſſe the truth of ſomething affirmed, which is in controverſie. Or, it is a confirmation of ſome truth in queſtion, by a lawfull calling of God to witneſſe. This definition is partly taken from Hebr. 6.16. and partly from the third Commandement, Thou ſhalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.

Wherein obſerve theſe four things, to wit,

Firſt, the end of an oath; and that is βεβαιωσις & αληθειας, for confirmation of the truth.

Secondly, the matter moving an oath; and this is ἀντιλογία, ſome difference, or controverſie; that is, when ſome doubts ariſe, which it is neceſſary for us to cleer.

Thirdly, the effect of an oath; and that is πέρας εἶναι πάσης ἀντιλογίας: the putting an end to all ſtrife. For an oath being interpoſed, puts an end to all controverſies amongſt men.

Fourthly, the form of an oath; and that is a lawfull calling God to witneſſe the truth of that which is affirmed, and a deſire that he would puniſh it, if it be falſe. And thus we ſee the principall cauſes of an oath.

Queſt. 2. How doth it appear that it is lawfull to take an oath?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it is evident, from the end thereof: I argue thus;

Hebr. 6. 16, &c. Exod. 22. 8 To confirm the truth, and to put an end to all controverſies, are things in themſelves both good and honeſt.

But the end of an oath, is to confirme the truth, and to put an end to all controverſies: Therefore in it ſelfe, it is a good, and honeſt thing.

Anſw 2. Secondly, it appeares from the Author, and Inſtitutor thereof: I argue thus.

That which God is the Author, and Inſtitutor of, muſt needs be good and lawfull.

But hee is the Author, and Inſtitutor of an oath; as appeares Deut. 6.13. Thou ſhalt feare the Lord and ſerve him, and ſhalt ſweare by his name.

Therefore, there is an oath, which is good and lawfull.

Thirdly, it is cleare from the nature thereof: Anſw. 3. I argue thus.

That which is a part of Gods worſhip, is lawfull and good.

But an oath is a part of Gods worſhip; for when men ſweare by God, they acknowledge him to be the ſearcher of the heart, and the revenger of perjury, and thereby worſhip God.

Therefore, there is an oath lawfull and good.

Fourthly, it is evident, a ſigno: I argue thus; Anſw. 4. that which is a note of the true people of God, is honeſt and good.

But to ſweare by the true God, is a note of the true people of God, Eſay 65.15. Ier. 4.2.

Therefore, there is an oath, which is honeſt and good.

Fiftly, it appeares plainely, Ab exemplis: The Anſw. 5. Argument is this.

That which hath beene uſed by God, by Chriſt, and by the Apoſtles, is lawfull and good. But an oath hath beene taken by God, Chriſt and the Apoſtles.

Therefore, there is an oath, which is lawfull and good

The Minor is evident from theſe places. God the Father ſweares, Geneſ. 22.16. God the Sonne often uſed the forme of an oath, when he ſaid, Amen, Amen; dico vobis, verely, verely I ſay unto you; as thinkes Aretius. exam. theolog. pag. 74. S. Paul ſweares, 2 Corinth. 1.23. and 1 Corinth. 15.31.

Wherein did Herod offend in ſwearing? Queſt. 3.

There are two things required in an oath, viz. Anſw.

Firſt, Vt ritè fiat, that it be lawfully taken.

Secondly, Vt ritè ſervetur, that it be lawfully obſerved, and kept. Now Herod offended againſt both theſe. For,

I. Hee ſinned againſt the firſt, becauſe hee tooke an oath, in a vaine, and fooliſh thing, without any neceſſitie; when as he ſhould have feared an oath; yea, feared leſt the Maiden ſhould aske ſomething, which was contrary to the will of God.

II. He ſinned againſt the ſecond thing, required in an oath; for hee was not content to ſweare fooliſhly; but which was worſe, hee did wickedly performe, and grant what was wickedly deſired: namely, the head of the Baptiſt.

VERS. 8. And ſhee being before inſtructed of her Mother; ſaid, Give me here Iohn Baptiſts head in a Charger.

What was there in this Damoſel, worthy of our imitation?

Firſt, as ſhe beleeved the Kings oath, and promiſe, and upon the confidence ſhee had therein, framed her petition: So ſhould we beleeve the promiſes, and oathes of the Lord, and boldly aske, and confidently hope to receive what hee hath promiſed, to give.

Secondly, as ſhee did not petition the King of her her owne head, but first advised with her Mother what to aske: So before we pray, we should consult, and deliberate with the word of God, that wee may aske only those things, which are agreeable unto his will.

Verse 9. 10. Vers. 9, 10. And the King was sorry; nevertheless, for the oathes sake, and them which sate with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her: And he sent, and beheaded Iohn in the prison.

Quest. Whether was Herod originally accessary to the death of Iohn Baptist, or not?

Answ. 1. First, Hierome, and some others, thinke that Herod, and Herodias agreed together, that hee should make a Feast, and her Daughter should dance thereat; with which hee seeming to bee extraordinarily pleased, should make this promise, to give her whatsoever she should aske, and then shee should aske Iohns head; at which request (although in heart he rejoyced; yet) outwardly hee should seeme to be sorry; that so those who were with him might excuse him, as being unwilling to have done this bloody fact: Now the reasons which are given for the confirming of this opinion, are these; to wit,

I. Because, except hee had wished Iohns death, hee would not have beheaded him for his oathes sake; for in such oathes and promises, it is alwayes understood, that the thing be honest, and lawfull which is desired: And therefore her request not being such, hee need not have granted it, if hee would.

II. Because it is not probable, that hee could be so strangely overtaken, and delighted with a Dance, that in recompense thereof, hee should make such a large promise; as to give her whatsoever shee should aske, verse 7.

III. Because, if hee had not beene consenting hereunto, he could easily have corrected the request of the Maid; and have directed her to aske some other thing, which was more profitable for her, then was Iohns head.

IV. Because there was no need, to feare the offending of those, who sate at meat with him, if hee had not beheaded Iohn: for wee doe not reade of any hatred they bare him, or desire, or delight they had in his death.

V. Because the text saith plainely, When hee would have put him to death, hee feared the multitude; because they counted him as a Prophet, verse 5.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Augustine thinkes that Herod did truely feare Iohn, and willingly heard Iohn, and heartily grieved at the Maids request.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Carthusian. &c. thinkes that those words in the 5. verse of this Chapter, are to bee understood of an unwilling will; when Herod would have put him to death; that is, with a will mixed with an unwillingnesse, and some reluctancie. And indeed the latter of the History, both here, and in Marke 6. doth seeme to side with Augustine, that the plot was not laid by Herod, but by Herodias, thus to bring Iohn to death.

Vers. 12. And his Disciples came, and tooke up the body, and buried it; and then went, and told Iesus. 152 Ver

It is evident by many passages in the Gospel, that the Disciples of Iohn did envie Christ, and emulate his glory; but now Iohn being dead, they goe unto Christ, and shew him what had hapned; which argues, that their former emulation was abated at least, if not altogether vanished. Whence it may be demanded,

What was the cause, that now they doe not envie Christ, as before?

Answ. First, because they saw, and perceived that Christ and Iohn, was led by one, and the same Spirit; and neither of them did envie, or labour to suppresse the glory one of another, but did rather labour, and study to exalt the honour, and fame of each other.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because Iohn being in prison, had sent his Disciples to Christ, that by his gracious words, and miraculous workes, they might learne, that hee was the true promised, and expected Messias, whose Fore-runner he was.

Vers. 13. When Iesus heard of it, hee departed thence by ship, into a desart place apart; and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot, out of the Cities. Vers. 13.

Quest. 1. Whether did Iesus depart?

Answ. Saint Luke saith, into a desart, named Bethsaida, (Luke 9. 10.) that is, the house of hunting; because it was full of wild beasts; and was therefore so called, for the much hunting, which was there used.

Quest. 2. What was the cause of our Saviours departure unto that desart?

Answ. The cause was two-fold; namely,

First, that hee might escape danger: Herod had now beheaded Iohn; and therefore when Iesus heard of it, hee departed, that hee might not fall into the Tyrants hand; the time of his suffering being not yet come. And this cause is here expressed by Saint Matthew.

Secondly, that his Disciples might rest themselves; and this cause is plainely laid downe by Saint Marke. Chap. 6. verse 30, 31, 32.

Vers. 14. Iesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and was moved with compassion towards them, and hee healed their sicke. Vers. 14.

From verse 13. to 22. is shewed our Saviours care for the multitude: whence it may be asked,

Quest. 1. What is the office of a good and faithfull Minister of Christ?

Answ. 1. First, to reduce from errour, those that goe astray.

Answ. 2. Secondly, to cure the soules of those, who are spiritually sicke.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, to feed those who are hungry, or hunger starved. And all these wee see here in Christ.

Quest. 2. What are the signes of false shepherds?

Answ. 3. First, to seduce, and mislead their flocks into errours. And, Secondly,

154 Secondly, to sleight and neglect those, who are sicke. And,

Answ. 2. Answ. 3. Thirdly, to devoure, and prey upon those, who are well and sound. For all these are diametrally opposite unto Christ.

Quest. 3. Who is the true, and faithfull Shepherd of the soule?

Christ. For,

Answ. First, it is hee who teacheth all, and reduceth those who wander into the right way, Iohn 6.

Secondly, it is hee who cureth, and healeth all, Psalme 36. and 103.3. and 107.20.

Thirdly, it is hee that feedeth all, Psalme 104. and 145. And therefore, those who teach, and instruct in the truth, and reduce stray sheep into the way of truth, and feed the hungry, and cure the sicke soules, doe it by vertue of that power, which is derived unto them by Christ.

Vers. 19.

VERS. 19. And hee tooke the five loaves, and the two fishes; and looking up to heaven, hee blessed them.

Quest. Why did Christ lift up his eyes unto heaven?

Answ. 1. First, to signifie that his power, and efficacie in working Miracles, was from his Father (according to that (Iohn 6.) which hee saith, I can doe nothing of my selfe, &c.

Answ. 2. Secondly, to teach us, that we must expect and desire, that the use of the creatures may be blessed unto us, by God: we cannot hope that our meat will turn to the nourishment of our bodies, except the Lord blesse it, and give it this power; neither can we expect a blessing from God, except wee desire, and pray for it. And hence according to the present practise of our blessed Saviour, wee use to give thankes before meat.

Vers 24.

VERS. 24. But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves, for the wind was contrarye

Quest. 1. What is here Allegorically meant by the ship, and the sea?

Answ. By the Sea is meant the World; and by the Ship is meant the Church

Quest. 2. Why is the Church meant by the Ship?

Answ. 1. First, because, as the Marriners and Passengers are saved in the ship from drowning; so are the faithfull saved in the Church: For as none were saved, but those who were in the Arke; so none can be saved, but such as are within the Church; for Extra Ecclesiam nulla salus.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because as the ship never abides long in any one certaine place: so the Church is not tied to any one Citie, or nation perpetually: but as the Ship is carried by the wind, so the Church is gathered by the Holy Spirit, whether hee please; for the wind blowes where it lists, Iohn 3.

Quest. 3. What resemblance, or Analogie is there, betweene the Church, and a Ship?

Answ. For answer hereunto observe; that in a Ship there are many things: namely,

First, there is Nauclerus, the Master and Pilot of the Ship; and this is Christ, who is,

1. Potens, an able Pilot; and can defend the Church against all Pirats whatsoever.

II. Bonus, a good Pilot; and doth graciously gather up, or let loose the saile, as hee sees most fit: sometimes his Church sailes with ful sailes, and is in a prosperous, and peaceable estate; sometimes it is (as it were) becalmed, and stands at a stay: yea, sometimes tossed to and fro with the waves: But the good Pilots care is such; that although it seeme for a while, to make but a smal progresse; yet he doth preserve it even then from danger.

III Sapiens, Christ is so a wise Pilot; and doth so direct this Ship, his Church, through quicke sands, and rocks; that at length it arrives to the haven of happinesse, and eternal rest.

Secondly, there are in a Ship, Remiges, the Mariners; and these are the Ministers of the Church, who helpe to manage this Ship, and to carry, or transport it, from haven to haven; and from one Kingdome to another.

Thirdly, in a Ship there are Vela, sayles; and Clavus, a Rudder; and this is the word of God, whereby the Church is governed.

Fourthly, there is Ventus, wind: now this is two-fold, namely:

I. A faire wind, which carries the Ship to his wished Port: and this is the Holy Spirit, who agitates, and animates the sayles of the word.

II. A crosse, contrary, and tempestuous wind, which endangers the Ship: Now the hurtfull, and troublesome winds, are either,

I. Heretikes, who deceive the simple, and cause them to make shipwracke of faith; as did Ebion, Arius, Cerinthus, and divers others of old, and many in our ages. Or,

II. Tyrants, who persecute the Church, as did Maximinus, Decius, Diocletianus, Iulianus; and many moe besides. Or,

Secondly, Intranei, within us; and this is the Devill; who raiseth sometimes the wind of pride, promising honour (as he did unto Christ) sometimes the wind of pleasure (as he did unto David) sometimes the wind of covetousnesse, as hee did unto Nabal: yea, sometimes hee blowes one blast, sometimes another, according to the nature and disposition of him hee tempts.

Fifthly, there are Conscensus, the steps, or ladder by which a man climbes up to the Ship. This is Baptisme, which is the ordinary admission, and entrance into the Church. For as Noah numbred the creatures, which entred into the Arke, by steps made for that purpose. So by Baptisme, the faithfull are publikely admitted into a covenant with God.

Sixthly, there is Naulum, the fraught, or fare which is paid for passage over the sea in a Ship; this is, the Covenant which wee make with our Christ in Baptisme: hee promiseth to carry us safe over the troublesome, and dangerous sea of this world; and bring us to our wished haven; and wee promise him, that wee will faithfully, without fraud, or coven pay our fraught. He promiseth to bring us to our eternall country, and immortall kingdome; and wee promise him, to render due, and faithfull obedience, throughout our whole passage, and space of life.

Seventhly, there is Commeatus, provision of victuals, and diet; which the Master of the Ship must provide for the Passengers: So Christ gives bread to all the faithfull in the Church, and invites those who are thirsty, to drinke: that is, hee gives himselfe, who is the bread, which came downe from heaven, Iohn 6. and his blood, which is drinke indeed. And these hee gives freely, Esay 55.1.

Eighthly, there is Terminus ad quem, the haven unto which the Ship is bound; and this is the Ierusalem, which is above, which all the faithfull Patriarkes, Prophets, Apostles, and blessed Saints have desired, and longed for, when they were on the sea of this world.

Verse 25 26. VERS. 25, 26. And in the fourth watch of the night, Iesus went unto them walking on the sea. And when his Disciples saw him walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying, it is a spirit; and they cryed out for feare.

Sect. 1. §. 1. In the fourth watch of the night.

Wee may here observe; that the Iewes divided their night into foure quarters, or greater houres, termed foure Watches, each Watch containing three lesser houres.

The first, they called Caput vigiliarum, the beginning of the Watches; Lament. 2.19.

The second was the middle Watch, Iudg. 7.19. not so termed, because there were only three Watches (as Drusius would have it, f. Iudg. 7.19.) but because it dured till midnight.

h Luke 12.38. The third Watch began at midnight, and held till three of the clocke in the morning, h.

The fourth, and last Watch, was called the morning Watch, Exod. 14.24. And began at three of the clocke, and ended at six in the morning. And this is the Watch here spoken of. Now these Watches were called also by other names, according to that part of the night, which closed each Watch.

The first was termed ὀψὲ: The Even.

The second was called, μεσονύκτιον: Midnight.

The third was named, ἀλεκτοροφωνία: Cock-crowing. And, i Marke 13.35. The fourth, πρωΐ: The Dawning. Yee know not when the Master of the house will come, at Even, or at Midnight, or at Cock-crowing, or at the Dawning, i.

Sect. 2. Object. §. 2. Walking on the sea.

It is questioned betweene us, and the Church of Rome concerning the corporall presence of Christ; whether a true body can be in a place, and yet not occupy a place? And Bellarm. lib. 3. de Eucha. Cap. 5. proves it thus from this verse. It doth no more agree to a corporall substance, or true reall body, to fill, and occupy a place, then it doth to a heavie body to descend, and sink downward; or to a lucide, and bright body to shine, or to a coloured body to be seene; or to a hot body, to warme, &c. But God can make, that a heavie body shall not sinke, &c. as is plaine from this verse, where Christ walkes on the water, and sinkes not (and so also Luke 4.30. and 24.31. and Iohn 8.59.) Therefore a body may bee in a place, and yet not occupy, or take up the place. 155

Answ. 1. First, the proposition is false because all the other things may bee done supernaturally, but they are not contrary to nature. But for a Body not to be in a place is directly contrary to nature: And therefore these are wrong conjoyned.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is evident from Scripture, that God hath made a heavie body not to sinke (as hee did Iron to swim) and the rest; but wee have no Scriptures to confirme this, that a body may bee in a place, and yet not fill it, and therefore these are unequally ranked.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is false which the Iesuite avoucheth namely, that in Scripture wee reade of heavy things which weighed not, &c, for the bodies of Christ and Peter were no lesse ponderous, when they walked upon the water then they were before: but onely when they so walked, they were sustained by a divine power; and therefore when Peters faith failed, he began to sinke: whence it is cleare that he was as ponderous then as ever, but that hee was upheld by an Almighty arme.

Answ. 4. Fourthly although the bodies of Christ & Peter when they walked upon the water, were made light, yet even then their bodies remained in a place circumscribed, and filled the place wherein they were. And therefore there are not the like reasons of these instances.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, that which Bellarmine saith of the invisibilitie of Christs body is false; because it alwaies remained in it selfe visible: but it is said to be invisible in regard of the multitude, from whom suddenly hee withdrew himselfe; or whose sight miraculously he hindred from seeing him: and therfore Luke 24.31. αὐτῶν, from them, is added, Scharp. curs. Theol. pag. 1474.

Sect. 2. §. 3. And they cryed out for feare.

The Disciples seeing one in the form of a man walking towards them upon the surface of the water, thought certainly that it had been some Spectre; and therfore were frighted with the sight, whence it may be demanded:

Quest. Why men naturally so much abhorre and fear such sights and apparitions of Spirits?

Answ. 1. First, the reason herof is because of that diversity of nature which is in corporall and spiritual bodies: or, because of that strangenesse which is betwixt them. For spirituall creatures, whether good or bad are alienated from all commerce and society with men; and hence from the unwontednesse, or strangenesse of the sight, Spectres trouble men, which would trouble them lesse if they were more acquainted with them, or accustomed to such sights.

Answ. 2. Secondly, spirituall creatures are more agile, quicke, strong, and powerfull, then are corporall; and therefore men are troubled with the sight of them, and affrighted with them; as naturally the weaker things are afraid of the stronger.

VERS. 31. And immediately Iesus stretched forth his Verse 31

156 his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt.

Concerning a small true faith divers things have been spoken heretofore: I will therefore here onely propound a Question or two of faith in generall.

Quest. 1. Wherein doth the faith of beleevers now differ from that faith which was in Adam in his innocency.

Answ. For answer hereunto observe, that the Object of that faith which is in beleevers is twofold, viz.

First, the whole will of God revealed unto us in his word, containing all Histories, Commands, Doctrines, Threatnings, Promises, of what kind soever. And this is called Legall faith.

Secondly, the particular promise of remission of Sins and everlasting life by the death of Christ: and this is called Evangelicall faith. Now in this distinction between Legall and Evangelicall faith, we must not conceive of two distinct habits of faith; for it is but one gracious quality of the soule disposing it to the belief of all divine truth, which for the substance of it was the same in innocent Adam, with that which is in regenerate men. The difference standing onely in these three things, to wit,

First, in the degrees; Adams faith was perfect, because his understanding was fully enlightned, and his affections absolutely conformable to all holinesse. We know but little, and by reason of our internal weakenesse, wee beleeve but weakly what we do know.

Secondly, in the Originall; in Adam, faith was naturall by Creation; in us it is supernaturall by the Holy Ghosts infusion.

Thirdly, in the particular Object; Adam beleeved God without reference to Christ the Mediatour; we beleeve chiefly the promise of grace in Christ, and all other things with some Relation to him. And thus we see wherein our faith differs from Adams.

Quest. 2. Whether is fiducia trust, and assurance, of the essence of justifying faith, ? because our Saviour here blames Peters doubting.

Answ. It is: and I make it good by these three grounds, namely,

First, from the Phrase of Scripture used in this businesse. Those phrases πιστεύειν εἰς, (Iohn 1.12. and Rom. 10,14) ἐπί, (Romans 4.5. Acts. 16,31) and ἐν, (Ephes. 1. 12) To beleeve in, or upon, or into God, Christ, the Holy Ghost, are not used as the learned know by prophane writers, but onely by Ecclesiastical: implying that in divine matters πιστεύω, signifies besides the naked acknowledgement of the Head, the confidence and affiance of the heart.

Secondly, it is cleare, from that opposition, which is made between faith and distrust or doubting; as in this verse; and Iames 1. 6. and Rom. 4. 20.

Thirdly, from that excellent place. 2 Timoth. 1. 12. where it is apparent that to beleeve, is as much as to commit our selves to Christs trust and keeping. I know, (saith the Apostle) in whom I have beleeved, or whom I have trusted; and I am perswaded, that he is able to keep that thing wherewith I have entrusted him, or delivered up to his keeping. What was that? his soule unto everlasting salvation. Wherefore to beleeve the Promise, is with confidence and Trust to rely upon it, resting our selves upon the performance of it.

Verse 33. Then they that were in the Ship, came and worshipped him saying, of a truth thou art the Sonne of God. Verse 33.

Quest. How many waies are men, or any other creatures, called the Sonnes of God? and how is Christ his Sonne?

Answ. Thomas (1 p. q. 33. ar. 3) saith that The Sonne of God is five wayes used in Scripture, viz.

First, some are called the Sonnes of God, Propter similitudinem vestigij tantum: and thus the unreasonable creatures are called the Sonnes of God, and God is called their Father. Iob. 38. 28.

Secondly, some are called the Sons of God, Propter similitudinem Imaginis: and thus the reasonable creatures are called the Sonnes of God as Deuter. 32. Is not he thy Father who hath created and made thee.

Thirdly, some are called the Sonnes of God, Secundum similitudinem gratiæ: and these are called Adopted Sonnes.

Fourthly, some are called the Sonnes of God, Secundum similitudinem gloriæ, according to that of the Apostle. Rom. 5. We rejoyce in the hope of the glory of the Sonnes of God.

Fifthly, some are called the Sonnes of God, Secundum perfectam rationem naturalis: and thus onely Christ is the Sonne of God.

CHAP.

CHAPTER XV.

Verse 1.2 VERS. 1. 2. Then came to Iesus the Scribes, and Pharisees, which were of Hierusalem, saying, Why doe thy Disciples transgresse the Tradition of the Elders? for they wash not their hands when they Eate Bread.

Quest. WHat is meant by this word Tradition?

Answ. This voice Traditum is equivocall, and hath divers significations, namely,

First, sometimes it is taken for all Doctrine, whether written or not written, 2 Thessal. 2. 15. Hold fast the Traditions which ye have been taught whether by word or our Epistle.

Secondly, sometimes it is taken for that Doctrine which is delivered only Vivâ Voce by word of mouth; as in this verse, Why doe thy Disciples transgresse the Tradition of the Elders; which Traditions were never written, but delivered with a living voice from one to another.

Thirdly, sometimes it is taken for the written word of God. As Acts 6. 14. and 1 Corinth. 15. 3.

Fourthly, by the Papists this word Tradition is taken for that Doctrine which is written, but not in the holy Scriptures.

Fiftly, the Fathers by this voyce, did understand sometimes those Doctrines which were contained in the Apostolicall writings; and unwritten Traditions, they called that which was not Totidem verbis, expressly commanded, or laid down in the Scripture; but yet the thing it self was extant in the Scripture, and might be proved from thence. And sometimes by Tradition they did understand, not Doctrines, but Ecclesiasticall order, and Rites. Scharp. de sacris Script. pag. 125.

Verse 3. Vers. 3. But he answered, and said unto them, Why do you also transgresse the Commandments of God, by your Tradition?

Argument. Against the Popish Traditions we produce this Argument from this place. All Traditions among the Jews, besides the Law, were condemned in this verse. Therfore all unwritten Traditions must now be abolished. To this, Bellarmine answers two things; namely, Answ. 1. First, Christ condemneth not the ancient Traditions of Moses, but those which were newly and lately invented.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ taxeth, and findeth fault onely with wicked and impious Traditions.

To his first answer, we answer two things, viz.

Replie 1. First, the Scripture maketh no mention of any such Traditions of Moses; Christ biddeth them search the Scriptures, and not run unto Traditions.

Secondly, these which our Saviour here speaks of, seemed to be ancient Traditions, bearing the name of Elders Traditions, and they were in great authority among the Iewes: most like, because of some long continuance. Replie 2.

To his second Answer we answer likewise two things, to wit,

First, their Traditions were not openly and plainly evill and pernicious, but had some shew of holinesse, as the washing of pots, and Tables, and beds; yea the Traditions of the Papists come nearer to open impietie, and blasphemie, then the Jewish Traditions did. Replie 3.

Secondly, Christ in opposing the Scripture against Traditions, therein condemneth all Traditions not written, which were urged as necessary besides the Scripture. Replie 4.

Quest. 1. What may wee safely hold concerning the Traditions of the Church?

Answ. 1. First, that besides the written word of God, there are, profitable and necessary constitutions and Ecclesiasticall Traditions, to wit, of those things which respect the outward decencie and comelinesse of the Church, and service of God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the efficient cause of all true Traditions, is the Holy Spirit, which directs the Bishops and Ministers assembled together in Councell or Convocation, for the determining of such orders and Constitutions, according to the word of God: and doth also direct the Churches, in the approving and receiving of such Traditions.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, no Tradition of the Church, can constitute or ratifie, a Doctrine contrary to the written word of God, neither any rite or ceremony: for both Constitutions and Doctrines ought to be agreeable (at least not contrary) to the written word. And as all Civill Lawes ought to have their beginning from the Law of nature, so all Ecclesiasticall Traditions from the word of God. Rom. 14. 23. and 1. Corinth. 14. 26, 40.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, although Ecclesiasticall Traditions may be derived from the word, yet they are not of equall authority with the word.

Quest. 2. How may the true Traditions of the Church be known or discerned, from humane, and superstitious Ordinances?

Answ. By these foure notes and marks, to wit,

First, true Traditions are founded upon the word, and consentaneous unto the word, and deduced, derived and taken from the word.

Secondly, true Traditions are profitable for the conserving and promoting both of piety and externall and internall worship.

Thirdly, true Traditions make for the order decorum, and edification of the Church. And Fourthly, are not grevous and intollerable, as the Traditions of the Pharisees were, and the Papists are. Matth. 23. 4.

158 VERS. 4, 5, 6. For God commanded, ſaying, Honour thy Father and Mother: and he that curſeth Father or Mother let him die the death. But ye ſay, whoſoever ſhall ſay to his Father or his Mother, It is a gift by whatſoever thou mighteſt be profited by me. And honour not his Father or his Mother, he ſhall be free. Thus have yee made the Commandement of God of none effect by your Tradition.

Verſe. 4. 5. 6.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Honour thy Father and thy Mother.

Queſt. 1. Whether, is the Father or Mother more to be honoured and loved?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, Children can never honour and love parents, (that is, either Father, or Mother) enough, becauſe we are imperfect in our Obedience to every precept.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, I conceive that a vertous Father is more to be honoured and loved, then a vitious Mother, and contrarily, a vertuous Mother more then a vitious Father: becauſe there is Tantundem & aliquid amplius, a naturall Relation to both, but a ſpirituall Relation onely to the vertuous and godly. We are commanded principally to love our heavenly Father beſt, and cæteris paribus, to love thoſe beſt next him, that are neereſt unto him in love, and moſt like unto him in purity.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, if we ſpeake properly, poſitively, and without any Relation to any thing, underſtanding the Queſtion thus. Whether the Father In quantum eſt pater, as hee is the Father, or the Mother, as ſhe is the Mother, be more to be honoured and loved? then with the Schoolemen I anſwer, that the Father is more to be loved and honoured then the Mother: And the reaſon hereof is this, becauſe when we love our Father and Mother, Qua tales, as they are our Father and Mother, then wee love them as certaine principles of our naturall beginning and being. Now the Father hath the more excellent cauſe of beginning then the Mother: becauſe the Father is Principium per modum Agentis, Mater autem magis per modum Patientis & materiæ. And thus if wee looke upon Father and Mother, Secundum rationem generationis, then we muſt confeſſe that the Father is the more Noble cauſe of the Child then the Mother is. If the learned Reader would ſee this proſecuted, let him read Thomas 2. 2. q. 26. Art. 10. And Ariſt. ethic. lib. 8. And Anton. part 4. tit. 6. Cap. 4. §. 8. And Aureum opus fol. 60 b.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, if we ſpeake of that love and honour which is due unto parents, according to their love towards Children; then we anſwer that the Mother is more to be beloved then the Father, and that for theſe reaſons, viz.

I. The Philoſopher ſaith, becauſe the Mother is more certaine that the Child is hers, then the Father is that is his: he beleeves it is his Child, but ſhe is ſure that it is hers.

II. Becauſe hence the Mother loves the Child better then the Father doth (Ariſt. lib 9. ethic.)

III. Becauſe the Mother hath the greater part in the body of the Child, it having the body and matter from her, and but only the quickning vertue from the Father h.

h Ariſt. de gen. animal. lib. 1.

IV. Becauſe the Mother is more afflicted for the death of the childe, than the Father is, and doth more lament the adverſity thereof, than his Father doth. Solomon ſaith, Prov. 10. A wiſe Son rejoyceth his Father, but a fooliſh Son is a heavineſſe to his Mother. From whence ſome ſay, that Fathers in regard of their naturall conſtitution of body, which naturally is hot and dry, do more rejoyce when their children are promoted unto honour, than the Mothers do; but Mothers, in regard of their naturall conſtitution, which naturally is cold and moiſt, do more mourn and lament for the loſſes and croſſes of their children, than the Father doth. But I will neither trouble my ſelf to prove this, nor perſwade my Reader to beleeve it, but leave it to the Philoſophers and Schoolmen to be decided and diſcuſſed.

V. Becauſe the mothers part is more laborious, toilſome, and painfull, than the Fathers is: and that in theſe three regards; to wit, Firſt, Portando, it is painfull to the Mother to breed her childe, and to bear it ſo many moneths in her womb.

Secondly, Pariendo, the pain is moſt extreme when ſhe brings it forth into the world.

Thirdly, Educando, her care, pains, and trouble is great, in the nouriſhing nurſing, and bringing of it up: And thus the Mothers part is painfull, and heavie, even from the very conception of the childe. And therefore in theſe regards ſhe is more to be loved and honoured than the Father is.

Queſt. 2. Whether are parents or children more to be beloved? that is, whether ought a man to love his Father better than his childe, or his childe better than his Father?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, Ex parte objecti, the Father is to be beloved more than the childe: for that which hath the greater ſhew of good, is more to be beloved, becauſe it moſt reſembles God, the chiefeſt good: now children love their parents ſub ratione principii, becauſe they took their beginning and being from them, which hath the ſhew of a more eminent good, and like unto God. And therefore in this regard, Parents are more to be loved i.

i Thom. 2. 2. qu. 26. art. 9.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, there is another degree of Love, that is, Ex parte ipſius diligentis, in regard of the party loving, and thus that is moſt to be loved, which is moſt neer; and in this reſpect children are more to be beloved than parents, as appears by a fourfold reaſon given by Thom. 2. 2. qu. 26. Art. 9. and Egidius Romanus. lib. 2. de regimine principum. part. 2. cap. 4. And both of them have theſe reaſons from Ariſtotle, lib. 8. Ethic.

I. Becauſe parents love their children, as being parts of themſelves, but parents are no parts of their children: that is, a childe is a part of the father (becauſe he iſſued out of his loyns) but the father hath no part from the childe; and therfore a man hath a neer relation to his childe, than to his father. And therfore that love wherewith a father loves his childe, reſembles that love wherewith a man loves himſelf.

II. Becauſe parents are more certain of their children, than of their parents: a childe cannot know its parents, but by hear-ſay, and ſome certain ſigns of affection, education, and the like; but parents by and by have knowledge of their children: And therefore by how much the more cer-certain parents are of their children, by so much the more strongly do they love them.

III. Because a mans childe is neerer unto him than his father is: now love imports a certain union, it being nothing else but a certain uniting and conjoyning power of the person loving, with the party beloved. And therfore a mans children being more neer, and closer knit and united unto him, than his parents are, are more beloved of and by him.

IV. Because men love their children longer than their parents; for a father begins to love his childe by and by, as soon as he is born; but children love their parents after a certain time: now by how much the longer love is, by so much the stronger it is. Anton. part. 4. tit. 6. cap. 4. §. 7, & Aureum opus. pag. 61. a. b.

Quest. 3. How are parents to be honoured?

Answ. 1. First, by obeying out of hand what they enjoyn.

Answ. 2. Secondly, by speaking reverently unto them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, by rising, or standing up, when they come by, or into the room.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, by accompanying them when they travell.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, by bowing, and inclining our selves unto them, when we come before them, or uncovering our heads.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, by a willing performance of any service unto them, though it seem base and homely.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, by honouring, promoting, and preferring them, if it lye in our power.

Answ. 8. Eightly, by giving them the upper hand, whether we walk, or sit. Umbertus in expositione regulæ, ex Anton. part. 4. tit. 5. cap. 10. §. 11.

Answ. 9. Ninthly, by supplying their wants, and relieving their necessities, if it be in our power.

Quest. 4. Why must we be thus carefull to love, honour, reverence, relieve, and obey our parents?

Answ. 1. First, because the very light of nature doth teach it, and the brute creatures have a care of their Sires, and progenitors in their age. When the yong Cranes perceive that the old ones moult, and are featherlesse, they take care to feed them, and to keep them warm, untill either they recover their feathers, or lose their lives. Now it is a shame for men in naturall affection to come behinde birds or beasts.

Answ. 2. Secondly, children must love, honour, releeve, and obey their parents, because they have both the precept and president of Christ for it. For here in this verse he commands children to honour their parents, and in his life he did so himself; for he was obedient to his parents, he took care of his Mother after the death of Ioseph her husband, and recommended her to Iohns care, when he himself was corporally to depart from her. And therefore who dare disobey such a Precept? who will not follow such a President?

Answ. 3. Thirdly, children must honour their parents, because it is profitable for them For

I. Such shall have a long life, Exod. 20. Honour thy parents, that thy life may be prolonged.

II. Such shall have loving, obedient, and tender children. Yea

III. They shall be blessed both with temporall, spirituall, and eternall blessings, if together with their earthly parents, they love, honour, and obey their father which is in heaven.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Whosoever shall say to his father or his mother, Corban, It is a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me, &c.

Quest. 1. What is the sense and meaning of these words?

Answ. For the understanding of this verse, it is to be observed, that although Gods Law enjoyned honour and relief towards parents, yet if they had bound themselves by this oath Corban, that they would not help nor relieve their parents, the Pharisees then taught, that the children were discharged from that duty of providing, relieving, and taking care for them. Hence their Talmud saith, [k] Every one ought to honour his father, and mother, except he have vowed the contrary. And it is evident, that the Jews did often, by solemn vows and oathes binde themselves, that they would never do good to such, or such a man, (Philo Iud. de special. leg. p. 595) Now this helpeth the exposition of this difficult place. By the gift that is offered by me, thou maist have profit: which words being considered according to the form of the oath Corban, will be thus rendred, By Corban, if thou receive any profit by me; to which words must be annexed the execration implied (which was usuall in the Jewish oathes, as Genesis 14. 22.) Then let God do thus, and much more to me. And so the sense will be thus; By Corban thou shalt receive no profit by me. This exposition is as agreeable to the scope of the place, as it is to their form of swearing, and plainly sheweth how the Pharisees, by their Traditions, transgressed the Commandment of God. For God commanded, saying, Honour thy father and thy mother. But the Scribes and Pharisees said, Whosoever shall say to father or mother, seeking relief, By Corban, thou shalt receive no profit from me, he was discharged. Vide Drusium de tribus sect. lib. 2. cap. 17.

[k] Talmud. Hierosol. tract. de votis. c. 10.

Quest. 2. Cui bono? To what end did the Scribes and Pharisees teach this unjust and wicked Doctrine?

Answ. For the understanding hereof, we must know, that the Priests, Scribes, and Pharisees, being given to covetousnesse, that their oblations might be the greater, and better, they covered over their impiety with a curtain, and vail of Religion, saying, That it was better to offer unto God those things which were to be given to parents, than to confer them upon their parents: and they gave this double reason for it, viz.

First, because God is the chief and principall Father, according to that of Esaias, O Lord, thou art our Father. But we must here remember, that this is to be understood, when parents do enjoyn that which is contrary to God; that is, if our earthly Father bid us do any thing which our heavenly Father forbids us to do, then we must obey the Lord, because he is our chief and principall Father: but in those things which God commands, we must say (or think we hear the Lord say) That Obedience is better than Sacrifice. And therefore when the Lord commands us to releeve our parents, we must do so, because therein we obey our God; and not say, O but it is a better deed to spend that (which I should expend upon my Father) in sacrifice and oblations unto 160 God, for in so doing we disobey him: yea we honour and please the Lord better in honouring and releeving our indigent and aged parents, than in offering up any outward sacrifices.

Secondly, the Priests confirmed this their Tenet by this reason, because it would more profit and benefit their parents, to offer that unto God, which they should give unto them, than if they should really receive it. The Pharisees held, that if children should say to their poor parents, The gift which I have promised, and will offer up unto God, will benefit you more, than if I should give it unto you; that then they were not bound to feed them, or supply their necessities[1]. But we must not neglect an ordinary duty, in hope of a miraculous or extraordinary successe; we must not offer that up that in sacrifice, which should feed our parents, in expectation that they shall be fed from heaven, or miraculously be sustained without meat: for they stand in need of relief, but not the Lord of oblations. And therefore those things which ought to be administred to the necessity of poor parents, should not be offered up unto God, who in this case would say, I require not your Sacrifices; that is, I never commanded, that a man should take necessary food, and provision from his parents, to give it unto me.

[1] Carthus. f. p. 130. b. medio.

Concerning the adorning and beautifying of Churches (a question betwixt us and the Papists) we affirm, That the Churches of Christians, and places of Prayer, ought decently to be kept; yea and with convenient cost and seemly beauty to be built and repaired, and Church vessels, with other necessary furniture, to be of the best, not of the worst: but yet it followeth not, that such immoderate and excessive cost should be bestowed upon Idols, to garnish and beautifie Idolatry, and poor people in the mean time to want: And this we prove by this Argument from this place.

Argum. Our Saviour Christ here reproveth the Scribes and Pharisees, because they drew the people to be good unto the Altar, and to bestow largely upon them, and so leave their parents helplesse. And he often doth inculcate that golden saying, I will have mercie, and not sacrifice, it being better to succour the living Temples of God, which are the bodies of his poor children, than to bestow superfluous cost upon dead Temples of stone. Willet, Synops. f. 485.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Thus have ye made the Commandment of God of none effect by your Traditions.

Quest. 1. What did our Saviour here tax in the Scribes and Pharisees?

Answ. Two things; namely,

I. That they honoured and observed their Traditions, more than the Commandements of God. And

II. That many of their Traditions were directly contrary to the Commandements of God.

Quest. 2. Who are in both these particulars, like unto the Pharisees?

Answ. The Church of Rome. For

First, the Commandements of that Church are much more honoured and observed, than the Commandments of God: for it is there taught that the Romane Church authorizeth the Holy Scriptures; that is to say, that the ordinances of men authorise the Commandements of God.

Secondly, in the Romane Church they teach things absolutely contrary to the word of God: For,

I. God saith, Exod 20. Thou shalt not make the likenesse of things which are in the heavens, or in the earth, thou shalt not bow downe before them, &c. But in the Church of Rome, they paint the Trinity, and kneele before the Images of Saints.

II. God saith by his Apostle, 1 Tim. 3. 2, 4. That a Bishop should be a husband of one wife only, and that his children should be subject to him in all reverence. But the Romane Church willeth, that a Bishop have neither wife nor children.

III. God saith by his Apostle, 1 Cor. 14. That it is better to speake five words in the Church, in a tongue understood of the people, then ten thousand in an unknowne tongue: But the Papists are commanded to serve God in an unknowne tongue, and to pray in latine.

VERS. 9. But in vaine doe they worship mee, Vers. 9. teaching for doctrines the commandements of men.

Wee produce this place against the Monasticall life now used in Popery; and hence prove it to be but a humane invention.

There is neither Precept, nor President; either in Old, or New Testament, of the Monasticall life of the recent Monkes.

But it is only proper unto the Lord, to institute, and ordaine all religions, and religious kind of lives by his word: Therefore that religion, or religious kind of life, which hath neither Precept, nor President in the word, is but hypocriticall, and humane. In vaine (saith our Saviour) doe they worship me, teaching for doctrines, the commandements of men. Whence I frame this plaine, and direct Argument.

Those who worship God, by a kind of life, religion, and worship, which was never commanded by God, worship him in vaine; that is, worship him not at all, or worship him hypocritically. But the Monkes worship God by a kind of life, and religious worship, which was never commanded by God.

Therefore therein they worship him in vaine, and not at all truely, but altogether hypocritically.

Quest. Wherein did the Monkes of old differ from the recent, and present Popish Monkes?

Answ. 1. First, the ancient Monkes lived solitarily, out of meere necessitie, that thereby they might be the safer, and more secure from the rage of Persecutors: But Popish Monkes live cloistered up, not in woods and caves, but in faire, and rich Abbies, not for feare of persecution, but of paines, not out of necessitie, but out of sloath, and idlenesse.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the ancient Monkes were not compelled to give all they had to the poore; but the Popish Monkes must vow poverty, although their their Abbies be rich, and well furnished, both with riches, revenues, and provision.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the ancient Monkes were not tied to any certaine rule, nor to a Monasticall life, by any solemne, and perpetuall vow, but might have changed that sort of life, if they could conveniently, and commodiously have lived otherwise. But the Popish Monkes are tied to certaine orders, and rules, taking an oath for the observing of them, and making divers solemne, and perpetuall Monasticall vowes.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the encient Monkes were Laicks, but the present Popish Monkes, are of the Clergie; if without abuse of the word, I may terme them so.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, the ancient Monkes did ascribe no merits to their manner of living; but to the Popish Monasticall life, they attribute the merit of condignity.

Answ. 6. Sixthly the Monasteries of the ancient Monks, for the most part were publike Schooles that is, common places for learning, and teaching: But the Popish Monasteries for the most part, are places of Gluttony, Drunkennesse Idlenesse, and all manner of filthinesse, If the studious Reader would see the lives, and manners of the present Monkes; and how they differ from those of old time, let him reade Alsted. fol. 344. 345.

Verse 10, 11. VERS. 10, 11. And hee called the multitude, and said unto them; Heare, and understand: Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth the man: but that which commeth out of the mouth, that defileth the man.

Quest. 1. What was the occasion of Christs speaking these words unto the multitude?

Argum. The occasion was this; The Pharisees blame the Apostles, because they eate with unwashen hands, contrary to the Tradition of the Elders, verse 2. Christ hereunto gives a double answer, viz.

First, he answers to the Scribes and Pharisees, that by their Traditions, they have violated the Commandements of God, verse 3.

Secondly, he answers to the multitude in this verse; that it is not that which goeth into the mouth, which defiles the man, but that which commeth out, &c.

Quest. 2. How many things are considerable, and observable in these words?

Answ. Two things: to wit,

First, Invitatio Turbæ, Christs inviting of the multitude; wherein are two particulars, viz.

I. Quos vocat, whom hee calleth: the multitude.

II. Ad quid vocat; why hee doth call them; namely,

First, Ut audiant; that they may heare.

Secondly, Ut intelligant, that they may understand.

Secondly, Concio, his Sermon; wherein are these two parts: namely,

I. Pars negativa, the negative part, in these words; those things which goe into the mouth defile not the man. 161

II. Pars affirmativa, the affirmative part; in these words: those things which come out of the mouth, defile the man.

First, Quos vocat? whom doth Christ here call? The multitude.

What may be observed from these words, Tum vocavit turbam; then hee called the multitude? Quest. 3.

First, From Tum, then, wee might observe two things; namely, Answ. 1.

I. That Christ doth not teach them, untill first hee had confuted the adversaries of the truth. And,

II. They being once confuted, then by and by hee teacheth, and instructeth them.

Secondly, from vocavit, hee called; we might learne two things: to wit, Answ. 2.

I. That hee doth not answer, being asked by them; but hee calleth them, who desired no such thing, that they might learne the truth; that is, the multitude did not first come unto Christ, desiring to be informed by him, and then hee taught them; but without their suing unto him, hee invites them to come, that they might learne.

II. That hee calleth the multitude; that is, all, that so the truth may be made manifest unto all, and his Apostles freed, and quit by all, from that aspersion which was cast upon them, by the Scribes and Pharisees.

Thirdly, from Turbam, the multitude, wee may note, that Christ sleighting, or passing by the proud conceited Pharisees, taught the common people. Or, that Christ rather chose to teach them, who were contemned, and despised in the world. Reade Matt. 11.25. and 1 Cor. 1.26. Answ. 3.

Secondly, Ad quid vocat? why doth Christ call the multitude? that they may heare; where wee see that something is required on their part; namely, to heare, to teach us:

That if wee desire to know, and understand our Masters will, wee must use the meanes of hearing, Deut. 4.1. and 5.1. and 6.3. For, Observ. 1

First, preaching is the meanes to reconcile people unto God, and to bring them by grace unto glory; as appeares from 2 Cor. 5.19, 20. and 1 Cor. 1.18.21. Rom. 11.6. And therefore this worke is strictly required at the Ministers hands.

Secondly, on peoples behalfe; hearing is the meanes to bring them unto knowledge, grace, faith, and Christ, Rom. 10.14.17. And therefore as Pastors are commanded to preach, so are people to heare; and as the one doth not performe his Masters will, except hee be diligent, and carefull in preaching; so neither the other, except hee be attentive, and industrious in hearing.

Who are here blame-worthy, and faulty? Quest. 4.

First those who neglect hearing for every trifle, and triviall occasion. Answ. 1.

Secondly, those who are wearie with hearing, wishing still that the Sermon were done. Certainly, both these are faulty, and no wonder, if such profit not by that which they doe heare. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, those are here guilty, who forbid people to heare.

162 Our blessed Saviour saith, My sheepe heare my voice, Iohn 10. But the Popish Priests, will neither preach the truth themselves unto their people, nor permit those to come; who would heare us, (Matth. 23, 13.) but directly prohibite them to come to our Church, and preaching. Here it is worth observing: That the Popish Priests doe not forbid their people to keepe our holy daies, or to observe our Faires, or to come to our Playes, Pastimes, and Recreations; yea, they doe not forbid them to marry with us: What then? only they are forbidden to bee present with us in holy duties, and the exercises of Religion; namely,

I. They must not come to our Prayers.

II. They must not come to our Sermons.

III. They must not come to our Sacraments. And why not? Is it because wee herein are erronious: No, that is not the reason; for they themselves say, that our Common-prayers are drawne from their Missale; and they will confesse, that wee often preach the truth; and yet they must neither associate us in these prayers, nor this preaching. What is the cause then, that they may bee familiar, and associate themselves with us, and yet must not joyne with us in holy duties? Certainely, the reason is, because the devill knowes, that this Sunne of the Gospel burnes, and that the preaching of the word workes strongly, both upon the affections, and judgement; and therefore hee prohibits all his servants to approach thereunto, and perswades them to avoid our prayers, and flie our preaching.

Thirdly, Christ calleth the multitude, Vt intelligant, that they may understand, they must not heare for a forme; but they must so heare, as that they may know, and understand what they hear.

Observ 2. Whence wee learne:

That wee must prepare our understanding in the hearing of the word of God. Or, when wee heare, wee must labour to understand what wee heare, Colos. 1. 9. and 2. 2. Deut. 4 6. Ignorance is the cause, both of errours, and disobedience; whence it is said, They rebelled, because they knew not my Lawes, Psalme 95. and yee erre, not knowing the Scriptures.

Quest. 5. Who are here worthy of reproofe, and blame?

Answ. The Papists, and that for a three-fold cause; namely.

First, beeause they praise Ignorance; saying, To know nothing, is to know all things. Hosius, & Rhemist. f. 1 Corinth. 14. And therefore no wonder if they erre.

Secondly, because they teach an implicite faith; that is, to beleeve whatsoever the Church beleeves: yea, if they did not teach this, then none would beleeve, nor obey their religion: who would beleeve them, if it were not for this implicite faith? who would adore a peece of bread; or a stocke, or their foolish, and ridiculous relikes? who would pray to Thomas Becket? who would feare Purgatory? who would buy their Indulgences at so deare a rate? if it were not for this doctrine. They say, Ignorance is the mother of devotion, or rather of rebellion, and superstition: And hence it is that the Turkes Alcoran forbids all disputations, concerning Religion; that so the errours thereof, may not be knowne, and discerned. But,

Thirdly, the Papists in some kind, are worse then the Turkes: for the Alcoran doth forbid disputations, concerning Religion; but it doth not forbid any to reade it, or the lawes contained therein: But the Papists forbid men to reade the Scriptures, and Law of God, although they confesse, that they are the true rules of right living, and the divine word of God. Doctor Standish bad, take away the damnable Bibles. Molanus saith, Salubriter arcentur a lectione Scripturarum: It is for their good (meaning the Laitie) to be debarred, and hindred from reading the Scripture in a knowne tongue: An Italian Bishop said to Espencæus, Nostri deterrentur à studio Scripturarum, ne fiant hæretici. Wee forbid, and fright our people from reading the Scripture, lest thereby they should become Hereticks. Vide Reynold. pag. 41. Thus they. But the Apostles contrarily exhort us, To let the word dwell plenteously in us, Col. 3. 16. because it is the best weapon against Sathan (Ephes. 6. 12.) yea, the fountaine of life, and the food of the soule: yea, the holy Fathers were of this mind also. Cognitio non sufficienter, sed abundanter, Hier. f. Colos. 3. 16. ἐκ ἁπλῶς ἀλλὰ μετὰ πολλῆς σπουδῆς, Chrys. f. Col. 3. 16. Yea, the same Father exhorts men to prepare Bibles; at least the New Testament, and to invite their neighbours also to reade the Scriptures, Chrys. hom. 9. f. Colos. And therefore, as Exungue kinem; so by this one particular wee may see, how these children resemble these Fathers; and how unlike they are to them; notwithstanding all their bold brags, and audacious boasts.

Quest. 6. What is here required of us?

Answ. 1. First, in generall wee must so reade, and hear, that wee may understand what wee reade and heare.

Answ. 2. Secondly, more particularly these things are required of us: to wit,

I. Wee must listen unto all that from God is spoken unto us; wee must ruminate, and ponder all wee heare, in our hearts: yea, wee must apply it unto our hearts, and measure our consciences by it.

II. Wee must lay up carefully what we heare, and never suffer it to slip out of our memories.

III. Wee must labour daily for a more ample measure of knowledge; that our understanding may be such, that wee may have the body of divinity within us, and be able to render a reason of our faith, to every one that shall demand it.

Fourthly, the negatiae part of our Saviours Sermon to the multitude, is this; that those things which goe into the mouth, defile not the man.

Answ. 3. What things goe into the mouth?

Answ. 1. First, poisoned, and infected aire.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Pestiferous, and obnoxious meat. And,

Answ. 3. Thirdly, many impure things, which doe both pollute, and destroy the body. And therefore wee must observe, that our Saviour speakes not not here de Corpore, but de homine, not of the body but of the Man, that is, the mind and Spirit; Wherefore wee must distinguish of pollution, which is either,

I. Corporall, and this is the pollution of the Body, Or

II. Spirituall; which is of the heart and conscience: and this is the pollution of the Man.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the meaning therefore of these words, [That which goeth into the mouth, defileth not the man] is this, That meat is nothing at all unto holinesse. Hence then we may learne.

Observ. 3. That in the moderate use of Meate their is neineither religion nor irreligion: neither purity nor impurity. Reade these remarkable places 14.17. and 1 Corinth. 8.8. and 10.27. and Colos. 2. 16. 20. and 1 Timoth. 4 2. Where the Apostle calleth it a Doctrine of Devills to forbid some meats as unholy: because as no meat can make us the holier, so none can make us more unholy; to the pure all things being pure. Titus 1. 15. And therefore wee are exhorted to labour that our hearts may be established with grace, and not with meats, which profit nothing. Hebr. 13.9.

Quest. 8. Who are here faultie?

Answ. The Papists who make a difference of meats, eating some upon their fasting dayes, as Pure, and abstaining from some as polluted: that is when they fast, they Eate some sorts of meat, and think themselves not polluted by them, and abstaine from some other sorts as unholy, or of that nature that they should be polluted if they let them enter into their mouthes. This Tenet being so diametrally opposite to this Truth of Christs. I will treat something amply of their Fasts.

Quest. 9. How many things are to bee considered in a Fast?

Answ. I answer, that in a Fast many things are to bee considered, and observed; namely.

First the law or Precept; which is either.

I. Generall, to wit, as it was commanded and enjoyned by God; both

First, in the Old Testament; as in divers places of Leviticus, and Numbers, and Ioell 1. and 2.

Secondly, in the New Testament, as Matth. 11. 18. and 17.19. and 1 Cor. 7. 5. and 9. 27. and 2 Cor. 11.27. Acts 13.2.3 and 14.23. O

II. The Law of fasting is more particular: wherin these foure circumstances are included viz. Quantity, quality, Dayes, and houres, which Circumstances are not determined either.

First, by the law of God which ordaines nothing herein. Præcepto Domini, non invenio definitum (August. epist. 86. ad Casulan.) Communis est sententia Scholasticorum, non esse (Quadragesimam) juris divini Azorius instit. mor 1. 7. 12. Yea in all the Scripture we never find flesh forbidden upon Fasting dayes.

Secondly, as the word of God is silent in these circumstances of Fasting, so is also the Church of Christ: who hath not by any diuine and immutable Law, given Rules for the direction of these Circumstances: for the better understanding, and confirming hereof observe, that the Papists, shew us two sorts of Traditions; namely,

I. Those, which they have received from Christs owne mouth, and which the Church cannot change, as the Sacraments. And

II. Those, which they (without any command from Christ) have injoyned, and commanded of themselves and their owne Heads: which kind of Traditions may be disanulled, and abrogated either by a dispensacion from the Pope, or by, some contrary custome of some place, or people. Melch. Canus. loc. theol 3.5. 163.

Now hee confesseth himselfe, that the Injunctions and Lawes of the Church, concerning fasting is not of the first sort of Traditions, but of the second (and so doth also Bellarm. De bon. Oper. 2.2 §. Deinde.) And therefore by their owne confession they are not divine and immutable, but Subject to variation and change.

Thirdly, certain it is, that these Circumstances of Quantity, quality, Dayes, and Houres of fasting, were at first Free, and not enjoyned by any Precept: Augustine in the place above mentioned (Epist. 86. and Casulan) saith, That hee cannot finde it determined by the Law of God, upon what daies he should fast, nor how many houres he must abstaine from meat. Now to this Bellarmine answers. That Augustine speaks De scriptis, non de non scriptis, of written Traditions, not of unwritten: And this is true, for Augustine acknowledged no such unwritten Traditions. Non est lex posita, sed quomodo unusquisque potest vel vult. Primos. S. Rom. 14. & Socrat. hist. 5.21.

Who are here worthy of blame? Quest. 10

Answ. 1. First, those who thinke (Opus operatum) fasting in it selfe a good worke: that is, if they doe abstaine from meat, although they performe no religious duty at all, they doe well: This Bellarmin himselfe will not avouch: and yet there are many who thus thinke, yea, make more conscience of eating flesh upon a fasting day, then of swearing, lying, or Adultery.

Answ. 2. Secondly those are much to blame, who beeing no Papists, make conscience of some meates (as unholy) upon some dayes. Certainly wee have received no command from the Lord for this; yea most certain it is, that all difference of meats came first from the Church of Rome, and therefore we should not halt betweene two opinions, but if the Lord be God, then follow him, and if Baal be God, follow him: And if we would not be esteemed or judged Papists, let us avoid all Popish Errours.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they are faultie also, who counsell and advice others to make a difference of meats, as though Religion consisted therein.

Quest. 11 How? or how farre are we obliged to the law of Fasting?

Answ. 1. First, in generall we are obliged: that is, the Law requires sometimes we should fast: And indeed here is a grrat fault, Fasting (for the most part, or with the most) beeing altogether neglected: from which neglect proceeds evills within & scandals without. For fasting doth conduce unto many things; namely

I. Unto prayer, 1 Cor. 7. but of this before, Matth. 4.

II. Unto examination: and that both of our sinnes (that so we might be induced the better unto Repentance,) and also of our estates and conditions: which Examinations are profitable at all 164 all times, but principally before wee come to the Sacrament of the Lords Supper: And therefore I wish that it were more practised then it is, to Fast the day before we come unto the Lords Table, that thereby wee might send up the more strong cries unto God, and be the more strict and exact in the Examination of our selves.

Answ. 2. Secondly, more particularly, wee are not obliged to fast upon such and such dayes, and to abstain from such and such meats, except only by a command of man, or humane injunction: which command is twofold: to wit, either

I. Politicke and civill: which is lawfull and warrantable: and is used for a fourfold end, viz.

First that the young creatures which are brought forth about such or such times may bee preserved.

Secondly, that flesh meate thereby may be the cheaper.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, that Fish might be sought for and made use of. And Fourthly, that the poore might be fed: that is releeved by that which wee spare from our selves.

II. Religious, viz. lest fasting should bee wholy neglected: and therefore they ordaine and appoint some set and certaine times. But

First, this Injunction doth not command a difference of meats, but an abstinence from meats; yea

Secondly, it doth not onely forbid the eating of meats, but injoyn the performance of holy duties also.

Thirdly, I conclude therefore this Question with Cyril, in these particulars; viz.

I. We ought to humble our souls continually.

II. A true Fast is internall.

III. An externall Fast doth not consist in a difference, or distinction of meats, but in an abstinence from meat.

IV. The end of Fasting is not to make us more holy thereby, but more prompt, and ready, or better disposed unto holy duties.

V. There is no particular necessity of Fasting.

VI. The ordinary times appointed for Fasting, are not to be used out of any superstitious obligation, but out of Christian liberty, lest others should be offended [m]. Hence then observe three things; namely,

[m] Chem. part. 4. pa. 154. a. & 155.

First, that the externall or outward Fast is free.

Secondly, the end of the outward Fast, is not holinesse: and therefore if holinesse, piety, and the worship of God be placed in the outward Fast, Cyril reproves it from 1 Co. 10. 27.

Thirdly, that the externall Fast doth not consist in a difference, and distinction of meats; and this is the Question betwixt Us and Rome, of which by and by.

Secondly, the next thing observable in a Fast, is the practise thereof. Now here we must note that a Fast is either

I. Absolute; wherein two rules are to be laid down: namely,

First, upon an absolute Fast day, there must be taken but onely one refreshing. And Secondly, that one refreshing must be at Supper time, and not at Dinner. Now here the Papists do manifestly erre: for

I. The truth of these two rules is proved from all Antiquity; but I spare the pains, Bellarmine having fully proved it to my hands: and that

First, from the Scriptures, gathering from thence, that it was the custome of those in the Old Testament to observe these two rules.

Secondly, from Tertullian, Athanasius, Basill, Epiphanius, Ambrose, Hierome, Prudentius, Paulinus, Chrysostome, and Augustine. Yea

Thirdly, from Cassianus, Benedictus, Gregorius, Bernardus, Aquinas, Bell. de bonis operib. 2 2. §. mam.

II. Yet he confesseth that these two rules are not now observed by them, they having upon their Fasting daies, both a Dinner, and a little Supper: and this their Church tollerates and permits, and not without cause: because of old they did not eat usually untill the sixt hour, that is, Noon; but they eat now ordinarily at the third hour, that is, at nine of the clock; and therefore (which is enough) they fast three hours. Bellarm. de bon. oper. 2. 2, §. sed opus, & §. addimus.

II. There is a Respective Fast; and that is, when the purpose of Fasting is of so long continuance, that it is requisite that some refreshing be taken. And here we allow of a difference of meats, but it differs from the Popish distinction in three things; namely,

First, in the end: for

I. The generall end of fasting, with them, is Merit; and because they place holinesse in meats, therefore in abstaining from some, as impure upon some times, they think they do well, and for their well doing deserve something at Gods hands.

II. The end of Fasting and of forbearing some meats, when wee fast, with us, is to tame our concupiscence, and to subdue our carnall affections, (August. contra Faust. 30. 5.) So Chrysostome speaking of the Ninevites, (in Mat 7) saith, Iram non solvebat Jejunium, sed vitæ mutatio, &c. It was not their fasting that turned away the wrath of God from them, but it was their turning away from their sins, and the amendment of their lives: Non dicimus ut contemnamus, &c. yet we speak not this, that Fasting may be slighted, or neglected, but rather that it may be honoured. Honor enim jejunii est vitæ emendatio, for the honour of Fasting, is the amendment of life.

Secondly, we and the Papists in abstaining from some meats in the time of a Fast, rather than other differ in the Adjuncts: for the confirming hereof, we lay down the positions given by the ancients in this particular; namely,

I. Those who Fast, must eat but once upon that day, and that must be either at the ninth hour, or at the twelfth, not at the sixt.

II. Those who Fast, must not eat much, nor unto satiety, at that one refreshing which they take upon the day they Fast. Neither

III. Must they upon that day eat delicate, and sumptuous, or costly meat. Nor

IV. Must they celebrate their Fast with joy and and delight, as at other times; because it is a day of humiliation: That is, in our Fasts we must abstain from joy, mirth, and naturall delights. Nor,

V. Must wee follow the labours of our vocations, that day which wee fast; but set it apart for meditation, supplication, examination of our conscience, and other holy duties.

VI. That day whereon wee fast, must be a day of refreshing unto the poore, and a day of bounty and liberality. Illud jejunium Deus approbat, cum quod tibi subtrahis, alteri largiaris: ut unde tua caro affligitur, inde proximi egentis reparetur. Greg. past. God approves of this Fast, when that which a man with-drawes, and with-holds from himselfe, he bestowes upon another; and from whence his body is afflicted, thence the body of his poore brother is refreshed.

VII. We must in our fasting, to the abstinence from meate, conjoyne internall, and spirituall workes, as examination, and prayer; and the like. Now the Papists adhere most to the difference of meats, which is the very meanest part of a true Fast.

Thirdly, wee and the Papists differ in the very difference, and distinction of meats; and that

I. In regard of the Quantity. For,

First, the Ancients did much, and very strictly observe this, eating that day whereon they fasted, but very little. Vide Isidor. de sum. bon. 2. 43.

Secondly, this the Papists reject, and sleight in their Fasts, abstaining, a quali non quanto; but of this wee spake before, Matth. 4. Reade also Chem. p. 4. pag. 117. 6. & Bellarm. de bon. op. 2. 4. 5. Quare.

II. In regard of the Quality; here observe, that the Fathers have distinguished of Fasts, but not of flesh: That is,

First, that alwayes flesh was not forbidden; for Elias, and the Baptist ate flesh: yea, of old, some upon fasting dayes ate birds; and some after the ninth houre, ate of all sorts of meats, 1. Now here the Papists object many things; namely,

Socrati, hist. 5. 21. & Aug. de mor. eccles. 2. 13. & Sozomen. 1. 11.

Objects. I. The Rechabites abstained from wine, and are commended by God for it; therefore upon fasting dayes wee must abstaine from flesh.

Answ. 1. First, in the History of the Rechabites, there is no one word of any abstinence from flesh; and therefore this place will not beare their distinction.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the fact of the Rechabites was altogether civill, and politicke, and not for Religions sake at all; and therefore no ground for their difference of meats for Religions sake.

Answ. 3. Third. we doe not condemn an abstinence from flesh, when wee fast, but the distinction of meats, as though some as pure might bee eaten; and some as polluted, might not be touched.

Objects. II. But the Apostle saith, That it is good not to eat flesh, Rom. 14. 21. and therefore commands us not to eate flesh, 1 Cor. 10. 28. And for his owne part saith, hee will eate non, 1 Cor. 8. 13.

Answ. 1. First, Saint Paul saith in the last place, that hee will eate no flesh, as long as hee lives, but the Papists will not say thus.

Secondly, by flesh may bee understood fish: There is one manner of flesh of fishes, 1 Cor. 15. Now they will not abstaine from fish. 165 Answ. 2.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, by the Apostles owne rule, the weak are onely to abstaine from flesh, and the strong may eate, Rom. 14. 2. and 1 Cor. 8. 8. Now they will not (for shame) say that all Papists are weak.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the Apostle only forbids the eating of flesh, not for conscience sake, but for our brothers sake, if hee be offended. And therefore, this hath no relation to their abstinence.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, these things were of old objected by the Manichees, and the Montanists; (and therefore the Papists may remember, from whence this opinion of theirs first came) and sufficiently thus answered by Augustine, viz.

I. That nothing is unlawfull of it selfe, but that a man may eate flesh, or abstaine from it lawfully.

II. That the places objected, respect no more then the scandall, and offence of our brethren; and therefore where no such offence is taken, no such difference of meat should be made.

III. That we abstaine from flesh when we fast, for three reasons, viz.

First, to refraine, and bridle, and subdue our gluttonous appetite. Aug. de mor. Manich. 2. 14.

Secondly, because wee would not offend our brethren.

Thirdly, lest those who are weake, should communicate with Idols.

Object. III. They object against the example of Daniel, and John Baptist, who made a distinction of meats in their practise.

Answ. They did not onely abstaine from flesh, when they fasted; but Daniel abstained also from all delightfull, and pleasant bread.

Object. IV. Flesh, and those things which come of flesh, doe more delight our appetite, & doe more inflame the lust of concupiscence: and therefore are to be avoided, and forborne when wee fast.

Answ. 1. First, if the Papists did only prohibite (when they fast) those things which please our appetites, and kindle the fire of lust, then wee would never blame them, nor contend with them.

Answ 2. Secondly, why doe they not forbid wine, which doth more inflame lust, and which of old they did principally shun, when they fasted? Hence the Nazarites were forbidden wine, but not flesh. But this they will not abstaine from, but rather stand to justifie it: Vinum necesse cum piscibus, wine is necessarily to be drunke, when we eate fish, said Hallensis, Chem. part. 4. p. 11. b.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they eate those things when they fast, which doe more kindle lust, and are more delectable to the carnall, and naturall appetite, as curious, and daintie fish; and conserves, and preserves, and junkets, and all manner of banquetting stuffes, and Anchoves, and Caveare, and Iringus: And thus we see, that by the Fathers and Ancients, flesh was not forbidden alwayes, when they fasted.

Secondly, only flesh was not forbidden, when they fasted; but the Fathers equally abstained from all things, which might hinder their humiliation: And wee may see a double plane diffe-

166 difference betweene them, and the Papists.

I. Wine was of old forborne; yea, forbidden when they fasted. Abstines a vino, non ab injuria. Basil. Abstines a vino, sed mulsa bibis, vinum specie imitantia, suavitate vincentia. August. de mor. eccles. 2.13. I need not enlarge this, because the Papists acknowledge it; to wit, both Bellarmine, and Acosta the Iesuite, part. 1.7.10. But yet now they use it. (Vide Chem. p 4. pag. 117. 6. & Bellar. de bon. op. 2.5.5. ad illum.) And therefore it cannot be denied, but that herein the Papists differ from the Fathers.

II. The Fathers, and Ancients in their Fasts, abstained from all dainties; but of this wee spake before, Matth. 6. Now the Papists have both daintie, sumptuous, and gluttonous Fasts; for they have (except flesh) whatsoever delicates can be got (and therefore no wonder, if the Child said, Mother when shall wee fast againe:) As though flesh would defile them, but nothing else; whereas our Saviour saith here expresly, not that which enters into the mouth defiles the man; from whence for a conclusion I draw this Argument.

If a man sinne by eating, hee is polluted also by eating; and if a man be not polluted by eating, then neither doth hee sinne by eating.

But a man is not polluted by eating; for that which goeth into the mouth, defileth not the man: Therefore a man doth not sinne by eating; and consequently, they sinne, that put holinesse in meats, and prohibite flesh as unholy.

Vers. 13. VERS. 13. But hee answered, and said: Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted out.

Argument. John Fortune Martyr alleaged this place of Scripture against Popish Ceremonies: All things, (saith our Saviour) which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be plucked up by the roots; But Popish Ceremonies are things not planted by God. Therefore they shall be rooted up.

Object. If it be objected, that they are good and godly, and necessary to be used.

Answ. I answer, Saint Paul thought not so, when he called them weake, and beggerly; and said, that they were bewitched, who sought to be in bondage unto them. Fox, fol. 1918. col. 2.

Quest. 1. Why doth our Saviour here call God, heavenly Father?

Answ. That all the children of God might be carefull on earth, to prepare themselves for heaven, where their Father dwels.

Quest. 2. How must wee prepare our selves?

Answ. 1. First, in generall wee must prepare our selves, by a holy, and heavenly life.

Answ. 2. Secondly, more particularly, wee must prepare our selves for heaven, by walking, and framing our lives on earth, according to these ensuing rules, viz.

Rules of a holy, and heavenly life.

Rule 1. First, let us frequently meditate, and ruminate upon this; what if the Lord should call us hence by death, before wee be regenerate? what will become of us, if wee be taken away, before wee bee engrafted into Christ; wee know that wee cannot be saved by any, but by Christ, Act. 4. 12. And therefore we should be carefull to examine our selves, whether wee be in Christ, or not (2 Cor. 13.5.) because no other thing will availe us unto salvation.

Rule 2. Secondly, let the glory of God be our maine end, and chiefe scope, in all our actions, 1 Cor. 10.31. And let us be carefull of this, so long as we live.

Rule 3. Thirdly, let us be carefull of the salvation of our soules, and next unto Gods Glory regard that, preferring it before all other things. Philip. 2. 12. and 2 Peter 1. 10.

Rule 4. Fourthly, let us labour to mortifie, kill, and subdue all our corruptions and lusts. Rom. 6. 2. & 1 Peter 2. 11. That is, both

I. All our vitious lusts, and affections; as anger, concupiscence, pride, drunkennesse, prophannesse and the like. And also,

II. All our vain lusts, and affections, as riches, honour, pleasure, and all vaine joy and delight.

Rule 5. Fifthly, let us spend our lives in spirituall things; that is,

I. In the workes of the Lords day; that is

First, in a Reverend, and carefull hearing of the word, upon the Lords day.

Secondly, in a repetition of those things with our families which we heare.

Thirdly in a private examination of our selves, and our own consciences, by that which we have heard.

Fourthly, in a faithfull and fervent praying unto God both privately with our families, and secretly with our selves, and publiquely with the congregation.

Fiftly, in singing of Psalmes of praise, and thanksgiving unto God. Now these duties are required of us upon the Lords day.

II. We must study how wee may so direct and lead our lives, that God may bee pleased with us. Psalm 119.9. And

III. We must sometimes fast, for the better confirming, and establishing of us in these, and all other good duties.

Rule 6. Sixthly, let us watch in these; lest either negligence, or occasions should hinder us from the practise and performance thereof.

Rule 7. Seventhly, let us remember continually, what a shame it will be for us, not to grow up, and encrease daily unto perfection: yea if we be Dwarfs how miserable we are, because if fruits doe not grow & ripen the tree withers: The remembrance hereof will make us to strive unto perfection, and to be Holy, as our heavenly Father is holy.

Verse 14 VERS. 14. Let them alone: they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind leads the blind, both shall fall into the Ditch.

In this verse our Saviour shewes the misery of blind Teachers, and of those also who are led by blind Teachers.

First, our Saviour here speakes of the Scribes and and Pharisees who were offended with him, verse 12. And saith of them in this verse. That they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind both shall fall into the ditch. In foveam peccati & inferni: Into the ditch of sinne and Hell; saith Hugo Cardinalis on the place. Cum Pastor per abrupta graditur, necesse est ut grex in præcipitium ducatur. When the Shepherd goes by craggie clifts, the flocke must needs fall Headlong, and break their necks; saith Gregory. Duces, præceptores foved, infernus. The guids are the Teachers, and the ditch is hell, saith Faber Stapulensis on this place.

Observ. Secondly, our Saviour in this place doth plainly point out this proposition unto us; namely, That it is a miserable thing for men to have blind guids unto Christ. Reade for the proof hereof these places, Romans 1. 28. Corinth. 12. 2. Ephes. 4. 14. and 2 Thessal 2. 11. and 2 Timoth. 3. 13.

Quest. 1. Why are they miserable who have blind guides?

Answ. 1 First, because we cannot walk without a guid How can I (said the Eunuch) understand without a Teacher? Acts 8.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because if we be led by a blind guid we are then misled, and seduced, and consequently miserable and wretched. 2 Peter 2. 2. And hence the Lord threatens to make drunke their guids, if they will not obey, Ierem. 51. 57. and to send them seeing Seers if they will but repent, and obey, Ierem. 3. 13. 14.

Quest. 2. Who are miserable by reason of their guids?

Answ. 1. First, he is miserable who is led by his owne naturall affections, and perturbations, and not by reason, or Religion, that is, is transported by hatred, selfe-love, pride, vaine glory, and opinion of wisedome, and knowledge, drunkennesse, gluttony, and the like.

Answ. 2. Secondly, he is miserable who is ignorant of the grounds of Religion, and is not enlightned from above, but led by nature, reason, judgment, opinion, and the like blind guids.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, that common wealth is miserable, who either.

I. Is without a head or guid, or King. Or

II. Which hath blind, and ignorant Magistrates and Governours.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, that Church is miserable; which either,

I. Hath blind guids, and ignorant Teachers. Or which hath wicked Teachers; that is, without the light of a pure life, though not without the light of sound Doctrine and knowledge. Here observe three things. viz.

First, that ordinarily, a Teacher, who is found in judgment, and profound in knowlege, doth more harme by a wicked example, then good by all his preaching: because we live now more by examples then precepts. And therefore in regard of this scandall, and stumbling stone which wicked Teachers put before the face and feet of their flockes. I say they are miserable who have such wicked guids, although they be sound, and seeing Pastours (in regard of their knowledge)

Secondly, I conceive those people are equally and alike miserable, who have no guid at all, and those who have blind & ignorant Teachers; that are not able to lead the flocke of Christ in the waies of God, their own lips not preserving knowledge, Malach. 2. 7.

Thirdly, it is better for a people to have a Pastour who is endued with the light of knowledge (though not with the light of a pure and immaculate life) then one who is ignorant and unable to teach, although his life be not so scandalous, as the life of the other.

VERS. 17. Do not yee yet understand, that whatsoever entreth into the mouth, goeth into the belly, and is cast into the Draught. Verse 17.

Argu. 1. The Scriptures every where refell the errour and false opinion of those, who thinke men to be made more holy by an abstinence from some sorts of meats, and more unholy by an indifferent use of some certain meats: yea our Saviour himself taxeth the Pharisees, verse 11. for this errour, and verse 12. admonisheth his Apostles, lest they also should fall into the same. Not that (saith he) which goeth into the mouth, defileth the man, but that which commeth out of the mouth defileth the man. Now the Pharisees being offended with this speech, our Saviour confirmes it by the very condition and corruptible nature of all meat, in this verse Doe not ye (saith he) yet understand, that whatsoever entreth into the mouth, goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draught. As if he would say, it is a foolish thing to seek holinesse, or righteousnesse, in such Terrene, corruptible and frail things, as are meat and drink: or to think a man to be contaminated and defiled by the moderate use of any sort of meat or drink: For all these things are neither good nor evill in themselues, but are made evill by the mind or abuse, of him that misuseth or useth them not aright.

Argu. 2. We produce this place as against the Popish distinction of meats (in the former words) so also against their Transubstantiation, and corporall presence, and we argue thus.

If the body of Christ were carnally eaten, then it should goe into the belly, and from thence into the Draught: but this is absurd; therefore also the other. If the Reader desire to see how this Argument is canvased to and fro; and how it is answered by Bellarmine, and his answers answered, let him Reade Chamier tom. 4. de euchar lib. 11. Cap. 16. fol. 686. 687. I onely adde a word or two.

Answ. 1. First, Bellarmine hereto answers, that Christ speaketh only of such meat, as is received to nourish the body.

Replie 1. First, to this we answer, that the truth of this speech of our Saviours doth not depend upon the intention of him that receives meat, but upon the very nature of the thing: that is, whether men eat for pleasure, or wantonnesse, or a greedy satisfying of their appetites, or for the nourishing of their bodies it matters not; for what end soever a man hath in eating, yet this is true, that what is eaten, or which entreth into the mouth, that goeth into the belly and is cast out into the Draught.

Replie 2. Secondly, we answer, that Bellarmine himselfe in 168 in his answer doth grant, that all those things wch nourish the body, goe into the belly, and are cast out into the draught. Now we assume, but that which is received with the corporall mouth in the Eucharist, doth nourish the body: And therfore by his own confession, that which wee eate with the mouth of the body goeth into the belly and is cast out into the draught. Our Assumption is proved by that Analogy which this Sacrament hath with our Spirituall nourishment; yea from the Schoolmen themselves, who maintaine, that those things (which they call Species Sacramentales) which remaine in the Sacrament after Consecration, Reficere, nutrire &, virtutem vini, tanta quantitate posse sumi, ut hominem naturaliter inebriaret. Alex. Al. 3. 4. q. 10. m 7. a. 2. Bonavent. & alij in 4. d. 12.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Bellarmine answers, that after the Resurrection Christ did verily eat, and yet that was not cast into the Draught which he did eat.

Replie. 1. First, hereunto we answer, that Christ did not so eat or drinke that he might be nourished therby, or out of any necessity of meat or drink, but only for the cause of familiar conversation, or for the proofe of his Resurrection.

Replie 2. Secondly, this example is unfitly alleaged, because Christ speaketh here of mortall men, that eate; but he then was immortall, and therefore the reason, or instance, is not alike.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Bellarmine answers that Christ speaketh here of mortall and corruptible meat, not of immortall and incorruptible, such as his body is. Bellarm. de euchar lib. 1. Cap. 14. resp. ad Arg. 2.

Replie 1. First, the words of our Saviour are generall: Whatsoever entreth in at the mouth; and therefore nothing that goeth that way can be excepted.

Replie 2. Secondly, the way for immortall and incorruptible food is not to goe in by the mouth, into the belly; for that which is corruptible, is not capable of that which is incorruptible and immortall, as S. Peter sheweth: you are borne a new not of mortall Seed but immortall; even the word of God. 1 Peter 1.23. Then it followeth verse 24. All flesh is grasse &c. but the word of the Lord endureth for ever. Flesh which is grasse and corruptible is not capable of the immortall Seed of the word, no more is it of the immortall food of Christs body, for they may as well say, that mortall food may goe into the soule, as immortall into the belly.

Replie 3. Thirdly, the same thing that is cast into the Draught, first commeth in by the mouth: Now we demand of them, what it is that goeth out into the Draught? Not the accidents of bread (that were absurd) nor yet Christs body, (for it were impious once to think it,) Therefore the substance of Bread goeth forth and came in by the mouth before.

Vers. 19. Vers. 19. For out of the heart proceeds evill thoughts, murthers, adulteries, &c.

Quest. How many sorts of thoughts are there?

Answ. Two namely,

First, evill; as Genes. 6. 5. and 8. 21. and Esa. 59 7. Psalm 94 11. Rom. 1. 21. and 1 Corinth. 3. 20. Now in these evill thoughts we may observe these things, viz.

I. That both they and good thoughts are known unto God. Deuter 31. 21. and 1 Sam. 16. 7. and 1 Chron. 28. 9. Iob. 42. 2. Psalm. 7. 9. and 94. 11. and 139. 2. and Ierem. 11. 20. and 17. 10. and 20. 12. Ezech. 11. 5. Esa. 29. 15. Matth 9. 4. and 12. 25. Luke 5. 22. and 6. 8. and 9. 47. and 11, 17. and 1 Corinth. 3. 20. and Hebr. 4. 12. And

II. That evill thoughts are odious unto God, and condemned by him, Proverb. 6. 18. and 12. 5. and 15. 26. and 24. 9. Esa. 32. 7. and 65. 2. And

III. That evill thoughts pollute and defile. Ierem. 4. 14. Matth. 15. 19. Iam. 2. 4. Psalm 56. 5. And

IV. That evill thoughts, and the wicked devices of the heart shall bee frustrated, and disappointed. Iob, 5. 12. Psalm 5. 10. and 33. 10. and 76. 10. Prov. 12. 2. and 19. 21. and 15. 22. Ezech. 20. 32. and 38, 10. And

V. That evill thoughts by wicked men are sometimes magnified, and obeyed. Ierem. 18. 12. And.

VI. That evill thoughts are sinnes, Proverb. 24 9. Acts 8 22. And

VII. That evill thoughts shall be punished, Proverb 12. 2. Eccles. 10 20. Esa. 66. 18. Ierem. 4. 4. 18. and 6. 19. Mich. 7. 13. Acts 8. 22. And

VIII. That evill thoughts are therefore to be washed of, Ierem. 4. 14. and left, Esa. 55. 7 and Iere. 23. 22 and 25. 5. Esa. 1. 16.

Secondly, there are good thoughts; wherein we may observe these three things; namely,

I. That good thoughts are praised, and commended by God, Prov. 12. 5. and 21. 5. And

II. That good thoughts are directed by God. Prov. 16. 3. And.

III. That good Thoughts come from God. 2 Corinth. 3. 5.

VERS. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. And behold a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts, and cryed unto him, saying, Have mercy on me O Lord, thou Sonne of David, my Daughter is greevously vexed with a Devill. But he answered her not a word. And his Disciples came, and besought him saying, Send her away, for shee cryeth after us. But he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost Sheep of the house of Israel. Then came she and worshipped him saying, Lord, help me. But he answered, and said, It is not meet to take the Childrens bread, and to cast it to Dogs. And she said truth Lord, yet the Dogs eat of the crummes, which fall from their Masters Table. Then Iesus answered, and said unto her, O Woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee, even as thou wilt. And her Daughter was made whole from that very houre. Verse 22 23. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28.

§. 1. And cryed unto him; Have mercy on me O Lord: my Daughter is greevously vexed of a Devill. Sect. 1.

In this Canaanitish woman, who came unto Christ in the behalfe of her Daughter, wee may observe these things, namely,

First, she cryeth unto him: Now crying is a signe of sorrow, and griefe.

Secondly, she cryeth, Miserere mei. Have mercy on on mee: shee doth not say, Have mercy on my daughter, but on mee: as if shee would say, it is I which am tormented, and depressed with this evill.

Thirdly, she cryeth, Lord helpe mee, verse 25. She doth not say, Lord helpe my Daughter; but me, thereby shewing the true nature of true love, which is to make our brothers misery ours.

Fourthly, that shee may gaine good will the better of Christ, shee calleth him Lord.

Fifthly, she insinuates her tribulation, & misery, when she saith, My Daughter is sore vexed of a Devill.

Quest. Wee never reade that Sathan did more rage amongst men, or was more cruel unto them, then in Christs time upon earth. Now what was the reason thereof?

Answ. 1. First, because the Devill did then principally endeavour to establish his kingdome against Christ; hee knew that Christ came to destroy the workes of the Devill; and therefore hee laboured the more earnestly to withstand him, and to keepe his subjects obedient unto him

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Lord permitted Sathan now to rage more, then formerly, that so the glory of Christ might be made the more illustrious, and apparent, by conquering, and casting him out.

Sect. 2. §. 2. I was not sent, but to the lost sheepe, of the house of Israel.

Quest. 1. To whom was Christ sent?

Answ. To sheepe; from whence wee learne.

Observ. 1. That the godly are like sheepe, Iohn 10. Or those who desire to approve themselves, to belong unto God, must labour to be like sheepe?

Quest. 2. Why must the children of God strive to be like sheepe?

Answ. 1. First, because the Lord will admit no dogs, or swine, or vultures, or the like, into his fold: but only sheepe: And therefore if wee desire to belong unto God, wee must bee sheepe.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because when wee are like sheepe, then wee are like unto our Lord Christ, and never till then. Hee was called a Lambe without spot, Iohn 1. Yea, Hee was as a Sheepe before the Shearer, Esay 53.

Quest. 3. What analogie, or resemblance is there, betweene the faithfull, and sheepe?

Answ. 1. First, a sheepe is a simple creature: so wee naturally are foolish, and easily deceived.

Answ. 2. Secondly, a sheepe naturally strayes, and wanders; and is very earnest, and desirous to breake through, and passe over the hedge, which should keepe her at home: So wee naturally are prone, and ready to wander, and stray from the Lord, and his wayes.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, as sheepe are prone to stray abroad, so they are easily reduced, and brought backe by the shepherd: Thus as wee are ready to goe astray from the Lord, so we ought to be willingly, and easily reduced, and brought home againe unto him.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, sheepe conceive according to the rods they see; and if they be spotted, then they bring forth spotted Lambes: So we naturally are prone to be like the places, and persons among whom wee live: like Ioseph, who learned among the Egyptians to sweare by the life of Pharaoh. And therefore, because we are prone to be stained by those amongst whom we converse, wee must be so much the more carefull of our selves, and watchfull over our wayes.

Fifthly, sheepe easily follow the Wether, their Leader: so wee should follow our Leaders, and Guids, as they follow Christ. Answ. 5.

Sixthly, sheepe heare the voice of the Shepherd, Iohn 10. So wee should be ready to heare Christ, speaking unto us in his word, and follow him, in obeying those things which in his word he teacheth unto us. Answ. 6.

Seventhly, sheepe are simple, and not crafty: so wee should be without guile, Iohn 1. 41. Answ. 7.

Eighthly, sheepe are innocent; that is, they harme none, and if they be harmed, and injured, they beare it patiently, not repaying evill with evill, or revenging themselves. So we should be without gall and bitternesse; injuring none, nor avenging our selves upon those, which injure us, but patiently bearing, and brooking all injuries, and wrongs. Answ. 8.

Ninthly, the Lambes which were offered up in sacrifice, must be immaculate, and without spot: otherwise the sacrifice was not accepted: So if wee desire to be acceptable unto the Lord, wee must labour to be pure, and holy, from all pollutions, both of the flesh, and spirit, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Answ. 9.

Quest. 4. To what sheepe was Christ sent?

Answ. To lost sheepe. Ovibus perditis. Here observe, that there is a double perdition, or losse.

First, Eternall. And thus Iudas is called, The sonne of perdition; because hee perished everlastingly.

Secondly, Temporall; and thus Christ gathers those which were lost.

Wee see here then, that Christ was sent to lost sheepe; that is, to such as confesse themselves to be miserable, sicke, and wanderers, from the wayes of God: Whence wee learne,

Observ. 2. That wee ought to acknowledge our selves to be lost sheepe, untill wee are received, and reduced by Christ. For,

First, the Physician was sent to none, but to the sicke: Christ was sent only To lost sheepe

Secondly, there is no need of a Physician, except a man want health.

Thirdly, there is no seeking unto the Physician, nor hope in him, except men be sensible of their sicknesses, and sores. And therefore,

I. Mad men. And
II. Dead members

} Are incurable: Wherefore wee must first labour to be sensible of our sins, sicknesses, and miseries; and then hasten unto Christ.

Quest. 3. To what lost sheepe was Christ sent?

Answ. To the lost sheepe of the house of Israel. Whence we learne,

Observ. 3. That the Church of God is a House; God separates the faithfull in Christ, unto Christ; and as a loafe of bread consists of many graines, and a house of stones, wood, glasse, and the like; so wee being many, are but one bread, and one body; and subject to one Head, and Lord, and Master, Iesus Christ.

What is here required of us?

Quest. 6. First, wee must hunger, and thirst, desire and Answ. 1. endeavour, to be admitted into this house: wee must not hold it sufficient, that wee are in the externall, and visible Church, but wee must labour principally, that wee may be of the internall, and invisible, Psalme 27. 4. and 84. 4.

Answ. 2. Secondly, being admitted into the house, wee must labour then to beare our selves, as becomes the domesticks, and household servants of the Lord: that is, I. We must be subject, and obedient unto the Lord in all things, serving him, both in soules, bodies, and spirits, 1 Cor. 6. 19. 20. II. In a great house, there are divers offices, and officers, but yet but one Law: so in the Church of Christ, there are divers degrees, and men of all callings; but yet but one truth, (which all must hold) and one Law, which all must be regulated by. III. Fellow-Servants are separated from others, but united amongst themselves: So the children of God are separated from the world, but united together amongst themselves, in and with their Head Christ, Ephes. 4. 4. and 5. 25, 29. &c. Titus 2. 14. IV. Fellow servants must mutually helpe one another: so we must beare one anothers burdens, and performe all offices of love unto each other.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we must labour to approve our selves to be vessels of honour, not of dishonour: for in a great house are both, 2 Tim. 2. 19. That is, wee must labour to be pure, and undefiled, and bring forth much pure, and holy fruit.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, we must then expect provision: for as a Master takes care to provide for all his servants, so doth the Lord for all his.

Sect. 3. §. 3. It is not good to take the childrens bread, and give it to dogs.

In these words our Saviour teacheth this point of doctrine unto us:

Observ. That holy things are not rashly to be communicated unto any, Matth. 7. 6. and 2 Timoth. 2. 2. and Matth. 10. 11.

Quest. 1. Why may not holy things indifferently, and indefinitely be administred unto any?

Answ. 1. First, from Matth. 7. 6. [Give not holy things to
Mat. 7, 6. dogs, nor cast your pearles before swine, lest trampling them under their feet, they turne againe, and rent you.] wee may gather these five reasons; namely,

I. Because they are holy things.

II. Because they are Pearles.

III. Because they are your pearles; that is, the Iewels which are proper unto the faithfull.

IV. Because he that doth it, will but lose his labour; for dogs and swine will trample pearles under their feet. And,

V. Because it is perillous, and full of danger to him that doth it; for they will turne upon you, and rent you.

Answ. 2. Ab indignis. Secondly, holy things must not bee given to those, who are unworthy of them, or wicked; because, I. They being impure, and polluted, contaminate, and defile all things: for a pure thing became impure (under the Law) by the very touch of a man polluted. II. Because it cannot be expected, or hoped, but that the holiest things being given to those, who are wicked, will be abused by them, and unworthily handled.

Thirdly, holy things must not indifferently, Answ. 3. and indefinitely be given to all; because I. Some Ab alijs. hunger after them, but others despise them: and therefore some choise should be made in the distributing of them. Yea, II. It would make others to sleight, and despise holy things, if they saw them given to dogs, and hogs, and all sorts of wicked men.

Fourthly, Ministers are dispensers, distributers, and stewards of the mysteries of God, Answ. 4 A nobis. (1 Cor. 4. 1.) ordained by the Lord to give meat in due season to his servants, (Matth. 24. 45.) And therefore they must not take the childrens bread, and give it to dogs, or the servants money, and give it to loyterers, or rebels.

What holy things are not indefinitely, and Quest. 2. without difference to be communicated?

First, the word; for wee see that the Lord Answ. 1. warnes the Apostles to goe to Macedonia, but not unto Bithynia, Act. 16. Against this it will be objected, Christ commands his Apostles to preach upon Object. the house tops (Matth. 10. 27.) what hee spake unto them: Therefore the word is indifferently to be preached unto all.

First, wee distinguish here, betwixt the preach- Answ. 1. ing I. Of anger, and judgement; which may be proclaimed, and published to the wicked. And II. Of Mercy; which is preached, either

I. Exhortatoriè, by way of exhortation; and thus mercy is to be preached, Conditionaliter, upon condition, that men will doe as they are exhorted. And thus Mercy, I. Is, and may bee preached in the beginning to all indifferently. But II. After grace is once offered in the word, and despised, it is not then to be preached to the contemners, as followes more plainely in the last distinction, °. ° Act. 13. 51. & 18. 6. and 19 9. Ier. 51. 9.

II. Mercy is preached Consolatoriè, by way of consolation; and thus it is preached Absolutè, positively, to the obedient, and beleevers.

Secondly, wee distinguish betwixt All, and Answ. 2. Some: that is, betwixt the whole multitude, and some of them; for often the generality of men seeme bad, and yet there are many good amongst them, although (like those seven thousand) they cannot be discerned. Now the word must rather be preached to many wicked, then kept backe from a few righteous, who love it, prize it, and desire to be obedient unto it.

Thirdly, wee distinguish betweene those, who Answ. 3. are, I. Openly wicked, and malicious contemners of the word: as Act 18. 6. and 19. 9. and 13. 51. and 2 Tim. 4. 14. And II. Those who are doubtfull: for they which for the present are enemies, may be in Gods election of grace, Rom. 11. 6. Esay 11. 6. Ephes 2. 12, 13. and 2 Tim. 2. 25. Now although the word be to bee taken away from the former, yet not from these.

Secondly, the profession of the word is not Answ. 2. to be communicated unto all; that is, wee are not to make a publike profession of our faith, and religion, in all places, or before all sorts of persons.

persons. It is not necessary, that men should accuse themselves; and consequently, not required to lay our selves open to those, who persecute the truth, either by fire, sword, or derision. Here I lay downe these particulars, viz. I. That if we be called thereunto, wee must confesse Christ, and his truth, and that even unto death: for wee must rather dye, then deny either our God, or religion.

II. Wee must not so hide, or conceale our selves in the times, and places of danger, that we seeme unto others, either to deny, or to be ashamed to confesse Christ, or his truth; as Nicodemus at first did, John 3. For our lives must bee as pure, and our love unto religion as sincere, and our hatred to all manner of superstition, and iniquitie as great, in the times and places of persecution, as of peace.

III. This only is lawfull for us, to remove our selves from the company, and society of those who are wicked in themselves, or maliciously, and despightfully bent against us.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, reproofe is not indefinitely to be given unto all, Titus 3.10. Here observe,

I. That charity beleeves all things, and hopes all things, (1 Cor. 13.) and therefore often (through hope) admonisheth those, who are no better then dogs, and swine.

II. That charity (at the least) makes a Christian doe for the wicked; as Samuel did for Saul; that is, although he came not at him (1 Sam. 15. 35.) yet hee ceased not to pray, and mourne for him, 1 Sam. 16.1. So the children of God, sometimes forbeare to reprove those who are wicked, and remove themselves from their society, and acquaintance, but never cease to pray, and mourn in secret for them.

III. Observe how miserable, men make themselves by the contempt, and disobedience of the word of God: for the Lord will not suffer such to be reproved; and without reproofe, they must needs run on head-long unto destruction.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, all without difference are not to bee admitted to the Lords Supper: I passe this by here, because it is proved, and handled sufficiently afterwards, Matth. 26.26.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, Musculus observes a great abuse in conferring of holy orders; sometimes upon ignorant men, and sometimes upon wicked. But I enlarge not this.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Then Iesus answered, and said unto her.

Wee see here this poore woman to stand in need of mercy, to desire mercy, to cry for mercy: yea, to follow Christ, the fountaine of mercy, and yet seemes a great while to be sleighted by Christ, and neglected, but at length hee heares her: To teach us.

Observ. That Christ often defers a long time to hear his servants, and to helpe them, and to grant their requests: Ioseph was afflicted, hated of his brethren, and sold, falsely accused, and laid in prison, as though God had forgotten him. David all his life time (in a manner) was under one affliction, or other; and Israel was forty yeares in the desart. Thus the Lord seemes often not to regard his children, nor to take notice of their wants.

When doth the Lord seeme not to regard his servants? 171

Quest. 1. First, when they pray; for the children of Answ. 1. God often call upon him, when hee answereth them not, Psalme 22.2.3. And that either,

I. In temporall affliction; for sometimes the godly are oppressed, and the ungodly insult over them; yea, although in their misery they call upon the Lord, yet hee holds his peace, Psalme 69.17. Or,

II. When they pray for spirituall grace, or strength, 2 Cor. 12.8.

Why doth the Lord so often refuse to answer the prayers of his children?

First, because they aske a stone instead of bread; and pray for those things, which may be hurtfull unto them.

Secondly, because some sinne, or corruption hinders the Lord, from performing that which hee hath promised.

Thirdly, because our wants, and afflictions may make more for Gods glory, and the confusion of Sathan; and thus Iob was afflicted a while.

Fourthly, because God hath appointed times for the conferring of all his graces, and favours. And therefore if wee begge any thing at Gods hands, and receive it not, then let us thinke, that either, I. God seeth it not to be commodious, and profitable for us. Or, II. That our sinnes hinder good things from us. Or, III. That our present estate makes more for Gods glory, then another condition of life would doe. Or, IV. That the Lords appointed time, is not yet come. And therefore in this case wee must bee subject, and patient, and awaite the Lords leisure, with perseverance in prayer.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Lord often seemes not to regard his servants, when they seeke for Christ. Reade Psalme 104. 229. Cantic. 3. 1. and 2 Corinth. 3.18.

Quest. 2. Why doth God seeme herein, not to regard his servants?

Answ. 1. First, because they are not as yet purged from the pollution of sinne, but are captivated, and contaminated by the reliques of rebellious lusts, Or,

Answ. 2. Secondly, because they are not as yet truely humbled, but selfe-conceited, as the two sonnes of Zebedee were. Or,

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because they are not as yet weaned from the world, nor the world crucified unto them. The Apostles wee see forsooke all for Christs sake, and yet they strive, who shall be the greatest: so hard a matter is it for us to be weaned from the world. Or,

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because they seeke not Christ fervently, but coldly, in their best, as the Church did, Cantic 3.1. Or,

Answ. 5. Fifthly, perhaps because they have omitted, or lost, or let slip some occasion, or meanes which hath beene offered unto them; as the Church did, Cantic 5.2. &c. Or at least:

Answ. 6. Sixthly, because the Lord would have them, (being at first but probationers) to be exercised, that so grace may take the deeper impression in their hearts: for that which is with much la-

172 bour and difficulty acquired is the most charily kept, and more highly prized. And therefore if any have begun to set their faces towards Sion, and to seek the Lord and after some long search have not found him, Let them then confesse that the reason is either,

I. Because some sinne yet gets the upper hand over them. Or

II. Because they are yet proud, and selfe-conceited. Or

III. Because they are not yet weaned from the world. Or

IV. Because they seek not Christ fervently and industriously. Or

V. Because they have not been so carefull as they ought to nourish, and obey the motions of of the Spirit, and to lay hold upon the offers of mercy, and to use those means which God hath prescribed in his word. Or else

VI. Because God would inure them to labour at the first, that so by exercise they may grow the stronger. Wherefore if we desire to find Christ, and to bring him home to our souls, let us labour to remove these impediments, and learn,

First, to subdue, and bring under all our corruptions, and take heed, that we be not subdued, or brought under by any. And

Secondly, to be humble, and poore in Spirit, and low in our own eyes. And

Thirdly, to use the world as though we used it not, and not to love it, or set our hearts upon it. And Fourthly, to seek Christ with all our hearts, and with all our soules. And Fifthly, To be carefull to attend to the motions of the Spirit, and the calls of the word. And.

Sixthly, to be constant, and couragious in the use of all Holy meanes, untill the Lord have fully revealed himselfe unto us: for although hee come not within a little time, yet he will certainly come at the last. And therefore

I. Be not discouraged, neither faint.

II. Pray unto him to reveale himselfe, and to be found by us, Psal. 31, 16. and 80. 3, 7, 19. and 119. 135.

III. Doe not delay; or slack this search of Christ. And IIII. Labour to remove all impediments out of our way: and then hee that shall come, will come and not tarry.

Sect. 5. §. 5. O Woman, great is thy Faith.

Many profitable Quæres will here bee made, namely,

Quest. 1. Whence had this Woman this great Faith?

Answ. St. Marke saith, that she heard of Christ, and so (according to St. Paul, Rom. 10. 14) her faith came by her Hearing.

Quest. 2. How did the Woman approve her Faith to bee great?

Answ. By her works; as true faith ought to be confirmed. Iames 2.

Quest. 3. What workes were remarkable or observable in this Woman?

Answ. 1. First, her comming unto Christ, she flyes not to Witches, or Inchanters, or Idols, or the intercession of the Saints, or the mediation of the Apostles, but onely unto Christ the Saviour of the world.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this woman by her comming unto Christ doth shew her love unto her Neighbour: For the Law enjoynes the love of our Neighbour, and the Gospell commends it as a good worke, and this woman doth shew by her petition (Lord be mercifull unto me, and help me,) that she was as sensible of her daughters miseries, as if they had been her own, and besought Christ as earnestly in her behalfe, as she could have done for her self, observing herein the Apostles lesson, Weep with those that weep, Rom. 12. 15.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this Woman prayes unto Christ, which is an acceptable worke unto God, when it is performed by his Children: yea she invocates and implores his mercy in whom she only beleeves: She doth not call upon; or cry after the Apostles, but onely prayes unto Christ: And yet the Papists do alleadge this place to prove the intercession of the Saints: But

I. We doe not reade that she cryed after the Apostles, but only unto Christ. And

II. The Apostles as yet were living: and we deny not, but the living may pray for the living: though neither for the dead, nor unto them.

III. The Apostles (though not sought unto) sue unto Christ (as it seemes) to help her, because Christ answers, I am not sent but to the lost sheep of Israel, verse 24. but yet they prevail not; and herein the Popish invocation of Saints is like unto this.

But Pareus ſ. pag. 755 thinkes that the Apostles did not entreat Christ in her behalfe, but disdained her, & desired that Christ would stint her lowd clamour, and cause her to depart, because with her cryes she troubled them. Dimitte eam vel abige, Drive her away Lord, because she troubles us. And therefore let us not with Papists forsake Christ, and flee unto the Saints; but with this faithfull Female, let us

First, pray our selves unto our God & his Christ. And Secondly, let us continue praying (as she did) untill we be heard. And

Thirdly, let not our baseneſſe or unworthineſſe hinder either us from praying, or our faith in praying, but let it be rather an Argument unto us, that we shall be heard: because the Lord never sends such empty away, as are truly sensible of their unworthinesse.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, another good worke observable in this woman, is Patience; for shee patiently suffered her selfe to be called Dog, and to bee sleighted (as it were) by Christ.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, in this woman we see a singular humility, as well as perfect patience: For our Saviour saith, It is not good to take the Childrens bread, and to cast it to Dogs: And what saith this woman unto it?

I. She doth not deny that the Jewes are the Children of God, although she might justly have objected, and taxed their great incredulity, and ungratitude. Neither

II. Doth she deny that she is a Dog, but confesseth fesseth it, yea confirmeth it, for these words Etiam Domine, yea Lord, do import a confirmation of what he had said. Although she might justly have compared her fidelity and confidence, with the infidelity, and diffidence of the Jews: and from thence have concluded; That shee was more like a Child then they, and they more like Dogs then shee. But she silenceth this, acknowledging that she is every way as vile and unworthy, as Christ saith she is. From whence we may note by the way, that true humility hath in it these two properties: to wit,

First, not to contemne or condemne others, as worse: therfore this woman will not meddle at all (by way of reproof, or fault-finding) with the Jews.

Secondly, to acknowledge our own vileness and unworthiness, although both our faith, love and hope be great, and consequently our worthiness great in the Estimation of God: Therfore although Christ knowes this womans faith to be great, yet she her selfe confesseth her selfe to bee but a Dog. And thus a singular humility did shew it selfe in her.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, the most rare work in this woman, was the confession of her faith: for shee giveth Christ a double Title; namely,

I. She calleth him Lord, and thereby acknowledgeth him to be God.

II. She calleth him the Sonne of David; and thereby acknowledgeth him to be man: she saith; O Lord the Sonne of David be mercifull unto me; in which words, she attributes unto Christ, that hee is the promited Messiah, that is, the Saviour of the world, and the Anoynted of the Lord. And thus we see how this Woman approved her faith unto Christ, and how by her example we ought to approve our faith unto God, namely

First, we must come unto Christ in love, loving him above all things.

Secondly, we must love our Neighbours as our selves.

Thirdly, we must pray only unto Christ for the supply of all our wants, and relief of all our necessities and distresses.

Fourthly, we must be patient in all injuries, and wrongs whatsoever.

Fifthly, we must be humble; that is, neither contemn others, nor be highly conceited of our selves; but acknowledge our own vileness, and esteem of others better then our selves. And Sixthly, we must shew our faith, by a full and free confession and Profession of Christ. For all these were in this woman, of whom our Saviour saith, O woman great is thy faith.

Quest. 4. Why doth not our Saviour commend this womans humility, patience, and the other rare vertues which were in her, but omitting all, names, onely her faith?

Answ. Because faith is the root of all other vertues: therfore Christ only commends that.

Quest. 5. How many things are required in justifying faith?

Answ. Four { First, Knowledge, now herein the faith of this woman is great: for although she lived amongst the blind Gentiles, who were ignorant of the true God; yet she had an exquisite knowledge concerning Christ, that hee is the Lord, and the true God: that he is the Son of David, and true man; and that he is mercifull, bountifull, and omnipotent, able to drive away the Devill, and to subdue his power. And all these she knew, as exquisitely as if she had been brought up amongst the people of God, all her dayes: And therfore her knowledge was great.

Secondly, Assent; now herein also, this womans faith was great; for she lived among Idolaters, some worshipping Hercules, some Beelzebub, and some others, some other God or Goddesse: yea, shee lived amongst those, who being in the like misery and misfortune, that shee now was, would repaire to Inchanters, and Exorcismes, or the worship of Idols. Now all these being rejected, and sleighted, she assents unto none, but only unto those Propheties, and Prophets that teach, that Iesus of Nazareth is the great Prophet of the Lord, who is able to expell, and repell Sathan, and all evils. And therefore her assent was great.

Thirdly, trust and confidence; now herein likewise her faith was great; for unto this Throne of grace (Christ) shee comes with that boldnesse; that neither by Christs silence, nor a hard answer given to his Disciples, nor that reproachfull name of dog, given to her selfe, she can be kept from him, or caused to surcease her suite, untill shee have obtained mercy, according to her desire, Heb. 4. 16. And therefore her confidence was great.

Fourthly, application: now in this also her faith was as great, as in the other three: for she doth not desire Christ to goe home with her to her house, and to lay his hands upon her Daughter; but firmely beleeves, that if hee doe but speake the word, or assent to her request, that then her Daughter shall certainely be freed from the molestation of Sathan: yea, she believes that one crum of his grace, is of that vertue, and efficacie, that thereby both shee and her child should bee relieved, and comforted. And therefore her faith was great in Application, [p]. } Four in all which the womans faith appeares to be great: namely,

[p] Chemnitius harm. pag. 1151. cap. 80.

When is faith great?

To this Dormisecurius, serm. 18. answers; Tunc autem est fides magna, quando est operibus conjuncta, charitati admixta, perseverans & firma: Faith is then great, when it is conjoyned with workes, mingled with love, and firme, and constant. For, Quest. 6. Answ.

First, faith which is without workes, is an idle and dead faith, Iames 2.

Secondly, faith, which is not accompanied with love and charity, is a fruitlesse, and unprofitable faith, 1 Cor. 13.

Thirdly, faith which is not constant, and perseverant, but temporary onely, is not a great faith, neither is it available unto salvation. And 174 therefore unto a truely great faith, it is required, that it have with it, both workes and charity; and be constant, and perseverant even unto death.

How, or how many wayes is faith in any one called great?

Foure severall wayes: namely,

First, when a man understands, and believes profound things, concerning God; or when he apprehends much more of the nature, and essence of God, then humane nature can teach him: And thus the Centurions faith was great, Matth. 8. 9.

Secondly, when a man can esteeme all temporall things to be transitory, and contemn them, in regard of those things which hee hopes for, by faith in Christ: And thus the faith of Moses was great, Heb. 11. 26.

Thirdly, when in adversity, affliction, and misery, a man can fully trust in God, without either fainting, or doubting: And thus Iobs faith was great, when hee said, Though the Lord kill me, yet will I put my trust in him, Iob 13. 15.

Fourthly, when a man doth not desist from doing his dutie, although the Lord answer him not at first. And thus this womans faith was great, who notwithstanding the great, and divers repulses she had (as followes in the next question) continued to follow Christ, and to pray unto him, untill her request was granted, q.

q Anton. part 4. tit. 8. Cap. 3. § 7.

Quest. 7. How was the womans faith tempted, tryed, and proved? Or how many severall blasts had shee whereby her faith was shaken?

Answ. 1. First, for answer hereunto, observe and marke the whole History. A woman of Canaan, calleth upon our Saviour: Have mercy on me, oh Lord, thou Sonne of David, my Daughter is miserably vexed with a Devill; but hee answered her not one word. It appeareth that shee called still, because his Disciples said, send her away, for shee crieth after us: then hee answers, That hee was not sent, but to the lost sheepe of the house of Israel: yet notwithstanding this, shee came, and worshipped him, saying, Lord helpe mee: Hee answereth, It is not meet to take the childrens bread, and cast it to whelpes: She repliedupon him, Truth Lord, but the whelpes eat of the crums that fall from their Masters table. Then Iesus said unto her, O woman great is thy faith. She fastned upon Christ with her prayers, as did the woman of Shunem upon Elisha with her hands: Shee caught him by the feet, and said unto him: As the Lord liveth, and as thy soule liveth, I will not leave thee.

Answ. 2. Secondly, let us now more particularly (for a more full answer to the question) consider, what particular discouragements her poore soule digested.

I. Some thinke that Christ hid himselfe some time from her, and that shee could not heare, nor learne where hee was; and when shee did heare, and come, hee was removed from thence before shee came. And yet shee gave not over the Quest, untill at last she had found him out, Scultet. Idea, cons. p. 186.

II. Having found out Christ, shee cryes unto him, but is not answered by him: He heares her cryes, hee sees her sorrow; but hee will not vouchsafe to speake unto her; yet shee ceaseth not crying; Christ seemes to sleight her, as though shee were some excommunicate person, and not worthy his answering, but she leaves him not; yea, rather cries so much the more earnestly after him. Now this tryall was, Tentatio silentij, Christ proves, whether her faith could speake for her, when her Saviour would not speake unto her. Now the reasons which moved our Saviour not to answer, were weighty and profitable: namely,

First, that by his silence and delay, hee might both prove, and exercise her faith, and by the exercise thereof, make it the more illustrious.

Secondly, that hereby the confidence, and constancie of the woman might be made the more apparent, to those who were with Christ.

Thirdly, that hereby the ingratitude of the Iewes might the better be seene; who having that grace offered in plenty (which shee desires with teares, but one crum of) did sleight and despise it.

Fourthly, Christ would not answer her at first, nor grant her request, at the second asking, that thereby hee might teach us, that hee is not so inexorable; but that patience, perseverance, and constancie in prayer will overcome, and prevaile with him. This triall of hers was great, for having found out the Physician which shee sought for, shee hoped then that all was well with her, and her Daughter the better halte cured: Dimidium facti, qui bene cœpit, habet; but her expectation is crossed, for hee will not answer her one word. The word of the Father would not speak to her: the wisedome of the Father would not answer her; the heavenly Physician would not help her: And yet all this doth not amaze her, or cause her to stint her clamour; but she followes, and fastens still upon him by prayer, and at last overcomes.

Fifthly, Christ is silent, that she may not be silent; hee will not answer, that shee may pray the more powerfully; he holds his peace, that shee may cry the louder after him.

Sixthly, some thinke Christ answered her not, that by his silence others might pray with her, and for her: and thus the Apostles seeme to doe, for Christ not answering her; the Disciples come unto him, and intreat him to send her away: that is, (as I conceive) that hee would grant her request, that so shee might be gone; for otherwise, I cannot see what our Saviour answer unto them, points at; I am not sent, but to the lost sheepe of Israel. Pareus, and some others deny, that the Apostles besought Christ in her behalfe, and say, that they speake (as it were) with indignation against her: Master use thy authority, and cause her to packe hence, and suffer her not thus to molest, and disturbe us by her clamours: But then Christs answer unto them is, Nihil ad Rhombum, having no dependance at all upon their speech: But if wee understand them, to intercede, and mediate unto Christ for her; then his answer is most pertinent, and pregnant: For shee cryes for mercy, and helpe: but Christ

Scult. Idea con. p. 187.

Christ answers not; the Apostles then helpe her, beseeching Christ to cure her Daughter, that so she may depart in peace: Now to this request of theirs Christ answers, I am not sent, but to the lost sheepe of the house of Israel: as if hee would say, This woman is no Iew, no Israelite, but a Gentile, and Canaanite; and therefore what have I to doe, or why should I cure her, seeing I am sent to the Iewes only: Thus I say, it seemes to me, that the Disciples prayed unto Christ in her behalfe, although I doe not thinke (as the Papists say) that shee entreated them to doe so; for wee have no one word in all the History to confirme that, but divers to confute it, as was shewed before.

III. Her next discouragement is, that shee is none of Christs sheepe; shee was greatly, and grievously tried, when Christ would not speake; but she is much sorer tried by his speech: And this triall is, Tentatio negationis; for when hee speakes, it is small for her comfort, being (to her seeming) a direct denying, and disclaiming of her; as though hee were not sent to helpe, and shew mercy to such as shee was: yet notwithstanding this great discouragement, shee fainted not, but thus imboldens her selfe: Thou sayest, oh Lord, that I am none of thy sheepe; and if I be none of thy fold, then am I one of the devils flocke: Truth Lord, I have beene one of Sathans Goats, but now I desire to be made, and to become one of thy sheepe; and in token hereof I adore thee, as the Shepherd of my soule; and therefore good Lord helpe me; for a Shepherd will be ready and willing, to helpe a weake, infirme, and stray sheepe.

IV. Another great discouragement was this; she prostrating her selfe before Christ, and praying unto him, hee objects unto her her vilenesse, and unworthinesse, calling her (as it were in reproach) Dog; and this triall was, Tentatio repulsæ: as though shee deserved like a Dog to bee beaten out of his presence, and driven away from his face, and not like a sheepe to be cured, helped, and regarded. But yet she holds out, answering thus unto Christ: O Lord thou sayest I am a Dog; truth Lord, so I am, but I desire to be thy Dog; and Masters doe not drive their Dogs out of dore; but although they will not suffer them to feed at their tables upon full dishes, yet they suffer them to feed under the table upon those bones, and scraps, and crums that fall; and this Lord is all that I desire, that I may but gather up a crum under thy table.

V. Christ would discourage her by her unworthinesse to be fed with the childrens bread: and she confesseth, that shee doth not deserve it: yea, not desire it, one crum of his divine grace being enough for her. Now Christ hearing of this, answers, Oh woman great is thy faith.

Sect. 2. §. 6. Be it unto thee, even as thou wilt.

In these words is laid downe the efficacie of faith, by which she obtaines what she would have; for after these bitter brunts, and harsh repulses, shee obtained both a cure for her daughters infirmity, and a commendation of her owne faith. She wrought a miracle by the force of her prayers, making both the deafe to heare, and the dumbe to speake; shee cried to the eares, and tongue of her Redeemer, Ephata, Bee yee opened, heare, and answer my petition, and fulfill my request: whereupon our Saviour answers, Oh woman great is thy faith, be it unto thee even as thou wilt. 175

Vers. 29. And Iesus departed from thence, and came nigh unto the sea of Galilee, and went up into a Mountaine, and sate downe there. Verse 29.

Concerning this word Mountaine, a question or two may be made.

How manifold is the signification of this word Mountaine? Quest. 1.

Two-fold, for it either betokens, and signifies.

First, things, which are either,
I. Literall, and thus Mountaine is often taken for Mount Sion, Psalme 2. 6. and 48. 2. and 74. 2. and 78. 68. and 125. 1. and 133. 3. Or
II. Mysticall: and thus this word Mountaine doth
First, sometimes signifie the Church of God, or Kingdome of grace; as Esay 25. 6, 7. And Secondly, sometimes signifies salvation, and the Kingdome of glory. And,
Thirdly, sometimes signifies safety, and protection, as Gen. 19. 17. 30. Ezek. 7. 16. Esay 22. 5. and Ierem. 16. 16. Or,
Secondly, persons; which are either,
I. Divine: and thus Mountaine doth sometimes signifie God, Psalme 121. 1. Or,
II. Humane: and thus Mountaine doth signifie
First, sometimes oppressors, as Psalme 76. 5. And,
Secondly, sometimes Persecuters, as Ier. 13. 16. and 51. 25. And Thirdly, sometimes those who are barren, and destitute of good fruits, as Esay 7. 25. and 30. 17. and 42. 15. and Ierem. 4. 24, 26. And,
Fourthly, sometimes proud men, as Iob 9. 5. and 28. 9. Psal. 144. 5. Esay 2. 12. 14. and 40. 4. And,
Fifthly, sometimes great, and mighty men, as Iudg. 5. 5. and 2 Sam. 22. 8. Psam. 18. 7. and 46. 2, 3. and 72. 3. and 80. 10. & 87. 1. and 148 9. Esay 41. 15. and 64. 1. &c. Habac. 3. 6. And,
Sixthly, sometimes those who are obstinate, and obdurate, Ezech. 6. 2. &c.

How many sorts of Mountaines are there? Quest. 2.

First, there is the Mountaine of the Lord: as Answ. 1. Exod. 3. 1. and 4 27. and 18. 5. and 19. 3. and 24. 13. Numb. 10. 33. and 1 King. 19 9. Psalme 15. 1. and 24. 3. and 36. 7. and 43. 3. and 48. 1. and Ier. 17. 3. and 31. 21. And this Mountaine is called
I. Sometimes the holy Mount; as Psalme 2. 6. and 3. 5. and 15. 1. Ezech. 20. 40. And,
II. Sometimes the Mountaine of the Lords house, Esay 2. 2. Ierem. 26. 18.

Secondly, there is the Mount of blessing, or Answ. 2. the blessed Mount, as Deut. 11. 29. and 27. 12,

Third-

176 Thirdly, there is the Mount of ſecurity, or the ſecure Mount, Pſalme 30.7.

Anſw. 3 Fourthly, there is the Mountaine of Maledi-
Anſw 4 ction, or the curſed Mount, Deut. 11. 29. and 27. 13.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, there is the Mountaine of errour, as Ier. 50 6.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, there is the Mountaine of water, as Ioſh. 3. 16.

Anſw 7. Seventhly, there is a fading, & falling Mountaine, Iob 14.18.

Anſw. 8. Eighthly, there are melting Mountaines, Iob 28.9 Pſalme 97 5. Eſay 34.3. and 64.1.3.

Anſw. 9. Ninthly, there are flaming, and burning Mountaines, Pſalme 83 14. and Ierem. 51. 25.

Anſw. 10 Tenthly, there are ſmoaking Mountaines, Pſalme 104.32. and 144.5.

Anſw. 11 Eleventhly, there are are skipping, and leaping Mountaines, Pſalme 114.4.6.

Anſw. 12 Twelfthly, there are rejoycing, and exulting Mountaines, Pſalme 98.8.

Anſw. 13 Thirteenthly, there are Mountaines which praiſe the Lord, Pſalme 148. 9. Eſay 44. 23. and 49. 13. Ierem. 31.12.

Anſw. 14 Fourteenthly, there are trembling, and quaking Mountaines, Eſay 5.25. Ierem. 4.24.

Queſt. 3. To what uſe ſerve the Mountaines?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, they did ſacrifice of old, upon the Mountaines, as Geneſis 22. 2. Exodus 3.12. But this practiſe was afterwards prohibited, and reproved, 1 King. 14. 23. and 2 Chronicles 33. 15. Eſay 57.7. and 65. 7. Ierem. 3, 6. and 17. 2. Ezech. 6. 13. and 18 6, 11, 15.

Secondly, ſometimes they did preach upon the Mountaines, as Mat. 5. 1. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, ſometimes they did pray upon the Mountaines, as Matthew 14. 23. and many places beſides. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, they hewed ſtones out of the Mountaines for the houſe of God. 2. Chron. 2, 2, 18. Anſw. 4.

Fifthly, they worſhipped upon the Mountains. Pſalm 99.9. Anſw. 5

Sixthly, they reſted themſelves upon the Mountains; or withdrew themſelves thither, that they might be at a little peace, and quiet, from the tumult and concourſe of the people: & thus Chriſt in this place goeth up to the Mountain. Anſw. 6

What promiſe did the Lord make to the Mountaines? Queſt. 4

Firſt, the Lord promiſeth that the Mountains ſhall be watered, Eſa. 30.25 Ierem. 31.12. And Anſw. 1

Secondly, that they ſhall become fruitfull Eſa. 7.25. Ierem. 31.5. Ezech. 17.23. And Anſw. 2

Thirdly, that all rough Mountains ſhall bee made ſmooth and plain, Eſa. 49.11. And Anſw. 3

Fourthly, that on the Mountaine the Lord ſhall bee ſeen, Geneſ. 22. 14. Exod. 19. 3. Pſalm 122.1. Anſw. 4

CHAPTER XVI.

Verſe 4. VERS. 4. A wicked and Adulterous generation ſeeketh after a ſigne, and there ſhall no ſign be given unto it, but the ſign of the Prophet Ionas.

Sect. 1. §. 1. A wicked generation ſeeketh after a ſign.

WE ſee here how our Saviour calleth the Scribes, and Phariſees, and Jews, an adulterous, and wicked generation, becauſe not content with the word of God, they ſeek a ſign: whence we may learn,

Obſerv. That we muſt not deſire Miracles from God, that we may beleeve, but content our ſelves with the word of God. Reade Matth. 12. 38. &c. and Luke 1.18. where Zachary is blamed for this and Iohn 6. 30. and Luke 16

Queſt. 1 Why muſt we not aſk Miracles at Gods hands?

Anſw. 1 Firſt, becauſe the Goſpell is now clear and open, and truth therin is evidently laid down: In old time, the Goſpell was hid under Types, and Figures, and declared by Parables, viſions, and dreames: and therefore under the Law it was lawfull to ſeek, or aſk a ſigne: as Iudg. 6.17. 36. and 13. 8 and 2 King 19. 28. and 20. 9. But now the light of the Goſpel is ſuch, that he that runs may reade it, as the Prophet Abakkuk ſaith.

Obiect. If it be Obiected, that ſigns, and Miracles confirme the Doctrine which is taught, as Acts 2. and 4.

Anſw. I anſwer, they rather confirm Chriſt, where he is not known: and hence Miracles have been wrought amongſt Heathens, and do belong (according to S. Paul,) to infidels, and unbeleevers, but not to the Church of Chriſt. Hodiè ceſſat in eccleſia, Chryſoſt. ſ. Col. 3. Miracles ceaſe now in the Church, and Gregory gives the reaſon of it, becauſe, Plantæ rigantur, non niſi initio. Plants are only watered when they are firſt ſet.

Anſw. 2 Secondly, Miracles cannot make us beleeve; and therfore we ſhould not ſeek or deſire them, That is Miracles work not faith, either

I. By their own nature. Or

II. By any neceſſity: for they do not work upon our underſtandings, but upon our affections, begeting there an admiration. Matth. 9. 8. But

III. Onely by the will and diſpoſition of God Who Firſt, granted Miracles for confirmation of his word: Or, for the Tryall of men. But Secondly, now denies them. God ſometimes ſuffereth wicked men to work Miracles: as appears by Matth. 7.22. and 24.24. Revel. 13.13, 14. and and 16. 14. and Exod. 7. 12, 22. and 8. 7. and 1 Samuel 28. 12. yea he permits wicked men to work Miracles, that they may deceive others therby: as Deuter. 13. Ierem. 23. 32. Revel. 19. 20. and 2 Thes. 2. 9. &c. And therefore wee must not ask Miracles, or seek signes at Gods hands; lest in his anger he permit them, and permit us to be seduced by them.

Quest. 2. Who are here to be taxed, and reproved?

Answ. 1. First, those who will not beleeve except they see signes and miracles. Matth. 27. 42. Luke 16. 31.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who faine false Miracles: rare and singular are the Popish Priests, and Iesuites in this jugling Art, or Legerdemaine: as appears by their Legends, most of which are confessed to be false by Canus.

Answ. 3. Third, those who go about to confirm their doctrine, & Religion by miracles; as the Papists do: wherein they erre two manner of wayes; namely,

I. That they go about to confirme, and prove their Religion, by miracles: contrary to Deuter. 13. 1. And

That they contend, that Miracles are to remain in all the ages of the Church, whereas they are proper only to her nonage.

Quest. 3. Whether can Miracles be wrought in a false Church, by false Teachers, or not?

Answ. 1. First, the Papists answer here by a distinction, between Miracles, and Prodigies, and signes, and strange things; saying that in a false Church, by false Teachers, Prodigies and strange things may be wrought (as appeares by Matth. 24. 24. where Our Saviour saith, that false Prophets shall shew great signs, and wonders,) but Miracles are only wrought in a true Church by faithfull Teachers.

This distinction is ridiculous, because both signes, and wonders (as wel as Miracles) are ascribed to Christ. Acts 2. 22. and Hebr. 2. 4.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they answer again hereunto by a distinction of true & false Miracles, avouching that false Miracles may be wrought in a false Church, by false Teachers, but true Miracles are onely wrought in the true Church, by true Teachers. 2 Thess. 2. 9. &c.

I. By this distinction (if wee may beleeve their own Canus) their Church is a false Church, and themselves false Teachers; for he feares that most of their Miracles are forged: yea,

II. Wicked men, and false Prophets sometimes have wrought true Miracles, as was shewed before, and is plaine from Deut. 13. 1. And

III. The falshood of Miracles cannot alwayes be convinced, or discovered by us.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, therefore wee answer; that

I. The Devill did usually deceive, and delude men of old, by prodigies, and Oracles, but Christ being once incarnate, all the Oracles ceased And

II. That in Popish blindnesse, many delusions returned; specters, spirits, ghosts, and strange sights being usuall amongst them: but the light of reformation arising, they vanished, no such things (in a manner) being now heard of amongst us.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, and lastly, in Miracles these three rules are to be observed: to wit,

I. Let them be impossible in nature: for there are many wonderfull things which are naturall, and because naturall, are therefore no Miracles; Exodus 8. 18. John 15. 24. and John 3. 2. Here observe, that it is one thing to be impossible to man, whose power is onely naturall; and another to be impossible to Sathan, whose nature is spirituall: And here wee must be principally carefull, that those things which are impossible unto man, be not wrought by Sathan; for many are here deceived. 177

II. Let Miracles be true, and not false, as the Popish Miracles are. And

III. Let them be wrought amongst Heathens, not Christians; for Miracles belong not unto beleevers, but unto infidels, 1 Cor. 14. 22.

§. 2. There shall no signe be given them, but the signe of the Prophet Ionas. Sect. 2.

Our blessed Saviour, by bringing in Ionas here simply, would thereby teach us, to consider of the whole History of that Prophet; and so to accommodate, and apply it both to the Iewes, and to our selves; that wee may understand, wherein Ionas was unto the Iewes a signe.

First, as Ionas was cast into the sea by the Mariners, to whom hee betrusted himselfe; and was delivered by them (as they thought) to death: So Christ comming unto the Jewes, unto whom hee was promised, and who were his peculiar people; was by them cast out of the holy City, and condemned, and put to death.

Secondly, as Ionas willingly offered himselfe unto death, for the preservation of the ship, and those therein: So Christ willingly laid downe his life for the salvation of his Church, and the faithfull thereing

Thirdly, as Ionas by being cast into the sea allayed, and calmed the tempest: So Christ by his death asswaged, and appeased the anger of his Father; and gave peace of conscience unto his brethren.

Fourthly, as Ionas being (after three dayes buriall) cast by the Whale upon the shore, preached to the Ninivites the doctrine of repentance, and brought salvation to those, who repented truely at his preaching: So Christ, after three dayes rising from the grave, preached repentance, both to the Jewes and Gentiles, saving all of both sorts, that truely repented.

Fifthly, as Niniveh was not destroyed within forty dayes, after Ionas preaching, but some forty yeares after; as may be gathered from the Prophet Nahum: So Ierusalem within, or about some forty yeares after Christs preaching was destroyed, and taken by Titus; and thus Ionas was unto the Jewes a signe.

VERS. 6. Then Iesus said unto them: Take heed, and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the Sadducees. Verse 6.

Observ. Our Saviour in these words doth plainely lay downe this lesson unto us; That that religion is vaine, and false, which doth imitate, and resemble the blots, and corruptions of the Pharisees. Reade Matth. 23. 13. &c. Luk. 11. 42. &c 178 and Marke 8. 15. And therefore let us examine their Religion a little exactly, that so wee may judge the better of the true Religion, and acknowledge, and avoid the false. I will summe up all here in this one Question.

Quest. 1. Wherein was the Religion of the Pharisees faulty, that our Saviour here gives his Disciples such strict charge to take heed, and beware of it?

Answ. 1. First, the Pharisees by their Religion, sinned against the Law, and that either,

I. Against the whole Law, by obscuring of it; which they did.

First, by their many divers expositions: for Epiphanius telleth us, that they had a foure-fold interpretation of Scripture; to wit, of Moisis, of Rabbi Aciba, (or according to some of Baraciba, the sonne of Aciba) of Adda, or Iudah, or Ammanus, and of the sonne of Assamonæus, Senens. lib. 8. 625. §. 7. This may be applied

I. To the Origenists, who allegorize all truths.

II. To the Anabaptists, who expound all Scripture, according to their particular, and severall revelations.

Secondly, the Pharisees obscured the Law, by taking away from the people the key of knowledge, Luke 11. 52. Thus the Papists praise ignorance, and take away the Scripture, the key of knowledge, from the people, and stand in the justification of it, as wee might shew from Doctor Standish, ~~Hosius~~, Bellarmine, and divers others of them, wherein they are contrary to Chrysostome, Origen: yea, holy Paul himselfe, Colos 3. 16.

II. The Pharisees by their Religion sinned against the Parts of the Law; that is, both

First, against the Ceremoniall Law, which they preferred too much, by the observation of their Traditions; as the washing of hands, pots, vessels, and the like, wherein they were more strict, then in the observation of the Morall Law, Marke 7. 3. &c. Now they had two sorts of Traditions: to wit,

I. Divine, which they understood literally, and preferred before those things, which were more weighty: Now these were their Lotions, Phylacteries, borders of their garments, and the like, which Christ speakes of, Mat. 23. And for which hee reproves them; because they were more strict in the observation of them, then in the great workes of the Law. Wee must here observe, that they did not sinne in the bare use of these, because they were enjoyned by God. For

First, the Lord commands them to make, (Zizith) Fimbrias, fringes in the borders of their garments, Numb. 15. 38. Deut. 22. 12. And it is wonderfull to consider, what vertue they put in these, and how much they ascribed unto them; for they thought that these being put on, were able to defend them from (Iezer hara) their Malus genius, or corrupt concupiscence, Paulus Phagius. s. Numb. 15. 38. Item. Simler & Gelasius. This may be applyed to the Papists, who ascribe full as much, if not more, to the signe of the Crosse, as these Pharisees did to their Fringes. For at first it was used for the testifying of our faith in Christ crucified, but afterwards for the driving away of devils, and for the saving, and blessing of them from all evill, or danger, and the like.

Secondly, they had their (Tephyllim) Phylacteria; and these were not inventions of their owne, but commanded by God, Exodus 13. 9. 16. Now they had a double Phylacterie; one to weare upon their fore-head, and another for their left arme; both which were made of parchment, and were worne every day. In these Phylacteries were writ foure sentences, or lessons, which they called (Parschioth) namely,

I. Deut. 6, 4. Heare oh Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord: And thou shalt love him, with all thy heart, with all thy soule, and with all thy might.

II. Exodus 13. 1, 2. The Lord said unto Moses, sanctifie unto mee all the first borne.

III. Exodus 13. 11, 12. When the Lord shall bring thee into the land of Canaan, thou shalt then set apart unto him, all that openeth the matrix.

IV. Deut. 11. 13. If thou wilt hearken unto my Law, and love me with all thy heart; then I will give thee the former, and latter raine.

II. The Pharisees had humane Traditions, Δευτερώσεις Hier. Epist. 151. Multas constitutiones à majoribus per manus traditas, quæ non inter leges Mosis, P. Besides the Lawes of Moses, they had divers traditions delivered unto them, from the Elders. And these were the traditions which our Saviour speakes of Matth. 15. 9. I could name many of these traditions, but that some of them would offend chastity: yet if any would see them, let him reade Hierome, Epist. 151. I wil only name one or two, concerning their Tephillim: God commanded them to weare them, but their Elders commanded, that the lessons, or sentences, which were writ in them, should be writ in foure equall lines, one no longer then another; and therefore some of the verses were clipped, and not set downe as they were in the Text. Againe, when they had on their Tephillim, then they must not come neere any grave, or sepulcher; that is, not within foure cubits of it, and this was not commanded by God, but injoyned by their Elders. Now they offended doubly in these traditions. For p Ioseph. Antiq. 113. 18.

First, they placed a great deale of hope, confidence, and religion in the observation of these traditions: Si quis Tephillim quotidie utatur, et non negligat, perinde sit, ac si quis servet omnia præcepta Dei. If any weare his Phylacteries daily, and observe the Traditions, and Injunctions of the Elders, in the wearing thereof, he hath done in effect as much, as if hee had observed, and kept all the commandements of God, q.

q Vide Sylloge vocum ex? otic ubi Plura, pag. 153. &c. ad 160. s. Mat. 23. 5.

Secondly, they sinned in these traditions, because they preferred them before the precepts of God, Matth. 15. 9. Now the Papists are like the Pharisees, and like unto them offend in both these; as was sufficiently shewed in the former Chapter, and might bee shewed by that beastly Tenet of theirs: that whoredome is rather to be tolerated, then mariage, in those that have entred into holy (or rather ungodly) orders: but I forbeare it. Thus wee have seene, how in some things the Pharisees sinned against the Ceremoniall Law. Secondly, the Pharisees sinned against the Morall Law, and that many wayes: to wit,

I. Cortici

I. Cortici inhærendo, by looking onely to the letter of the Law, Mat. 5. 20, 21. and purging only the outward man, Matth. 23. 25. So there are many, who abſtaine from great, groſſe, criminall, and enormious offences, who never regard ſanctification at all.

Minima præferendo; by preferring the leſſer things, as appeares thus,

First, becauſe they were curious, and ſtrict in the leſſer things, as Matth. 23. 23.

Secondly, becauſe they were injurious in the greater things, as Matth. 23. 4. This may be applyed to groſſe Hypocrites, who are ſharpe Cenſurers of others, and yet no better themſelves: many there are who have a ſhew of profeſſion, but in the meane time, are covetous, proud, angry, cruell, injurious to others, and given to revenge themſelves.

III. Externis incumbendo, by inſiſting, and reſting only in the outward worke, doing that which was commanded onely to be ſeene of men, and to be praiſed by them, Mat. 6. 3. and 23. 5. Now this may be applyed to two ſorts of men, viz.

First, unto Hypocrites, who deſire to be ſeene, and applauded for that which they doe. Here it may be demanded;

Queſt. 2. Is it not good to make a faire profeſſion outwardly, and to doe thoſe things which may bee ſeene by men?

Anſw. 1. First it is, if it be done for theſe ends: namely,

I. That God may be glorified thereby. And

II. That our brethren may be edified, and converted thereby. And

III. That our owne faith may bee confirmed thereby.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, it is not only lawfull, but it is alſo requiſite, and neceſſary, that wee ſhould ſhine before men by good workes; and that

I. Becauſe ſinne and Sathan have many ſervants. And

II. Becauſe they are bold, impudent, and brazen-faced, in ſhewing themſelves to be the ſervants of ſinne and Sathan: and therefore it is a horrible ſhame, for us to bee aſhamed by our workes, to ſhew our ſelves the ſervants of the Lord. Yea,

III. Becauſe it is a great fault not to ſhine before men, and to hold forth the Lampe of a pure life, yea, to ſhew forth a life repleniſhed with all manner of good workes: For

First, if a man dare not profeſſe Chriſt, or ſhew forth Religion in his life; it is a ſigne that he wants faith. And

Secondly, if a man bee careleſſe in ſhewing forth the light of Religion, in his life and converſation; it is a ſigne that hee wants both zeale and love. And therefore it is neceſſary that wee ſhould ſhine in good workes before men: But Anſw. 3. Thirdly, it is a ſhame for a man to make the praiſe and applauſe of the world his aime, and end, in the performance of his good workes.

First, in ſo doing a man deprives himſelfe of good workes.

Queſt. 3. How may wee know, whether we be Phariſees, and Hypocrites, in the performance of good workes, or no?

First, they are proud boaſters of themſelves, Anſw. 1. and deſpiſers of others.

Secondly, they regard the outward man, but Anſw. 2. the hidden man of the heart they neglect.

Thirdly, they ſeeke themſelves, and their own Anſw. 3. gaine in all things, Mat. 23. 14.

And therfore let us examine our ſelves in theſe.

Secondly, this practiſe of the Phariſees in relying wholly upon the outward worke, may bee applied to thoſe, who place their confidence in the worke wrought, as the Papiſts doe, thinking that they have diſcharged their dutie towards God, and merited a reward from God, if they have but performed thoſe workes materially, which God requires. Indeed good workes are to be done, and that both for Gods ſervice, and our exercite; but yet formally, as well as materially, and with a right mind, as well as with the body.

IV. Finem legis neſciendo, the Phariſees ſinned againſt the Morall Law, by their ignorance of the end thereof: which is three-fold; to wit,

First, to condemne, and convince us of ſinne; accuſing both our evill actions, and internal corruption.

Secondly, to leade us unto Chriſt; or rather, to ſhew that it is not able to ſave us; and therefore if wee would be ſaved, wee muſt goe unto Chriſt.

Thirdly, to bee unto us a rule of obedience, for the framing of our lives: And therefore the libertines of our daies, who would overthrow the Law, are juſtly reproved. And thus we have ſeen, how the Phariſees ſinned againſt the Law, both Ceremoniall, and Morall.

Secondly, the Phariſees ſinned againſt the Goſpell, and that in a double regard, viz.

I. Becauſe they taught Liberum Arbitrium, that there was in man a freedome of will unto good, as well as unto evil: as both Auguſt. de hæreſ. and Epiphanius write of them.

II. Becauſe they denied righteouſneſſe by faith, Rom. 10. 3. which Paul only cleaves unto, Philip. 3. 9. From whence wee may learne, what true righteouſneſſe is: to wit,

First, to labour, and endeavour with all our might, and ſtrength, and power, to doe whatſoever the Lord, in the law requires of us. And then

Secondly, to put no confidence in any thing we doe, or can doe; but place our truſt as wholly in Chriſt, as though we had done nothing at all.

VERS. 14. And they ſaid, ſome ſay that thou art Iohn the Baptiſt, ſome Eliah, and others Ieremias, or one of the Prophets. Verſe 14.

The Phariſees held divers, and ſundry erroneous opinions; amongſt which ſome errours they had concerning the reſurrection of the dead; which although they acknowledged, and maintained againſt the Sadduces; yet concerning it they thus taught, [r]: That the ſoules of evill men deceaſed, preſently departed into everlaſting puniſhment; but the ſoules of good men, they [r] Ioſeph. de bell. lib. 2. cap. 12.

180 they said) passed by a kind of Pythagorean μετεμψύχωσις, into other good mens bodies. And hence it is thought [f]; that the different opinions concerning our Saviour did arise: Some here saying that hee was Iohn Baptist, others Elias, others Ieremias; as if Christ his body had beene animated by the soule of Iohn, Elias, or Ieremias.

Verse 16 VERS. 16. And Simon Peter answered, and said, thou art Christ, the sonne of the living God.

It is questioned, and controverted between us, and the Church of Rome, what the object of justifying faith is, and they say, that it is not a particular assurance, or application of the promises of God unto our selves, in and through Christ (as wee hold) but onely in generall to beleeve, that whatsoever is contained in the word of God, is true (Bellarm. lib. 1. de Iustific. Cap. 4.)

Now because wee deny this, they undertake to prove it from this verse; arguing thus:

Object. That faith which Peter confessed; when hee said to our Saviour; Thou art Christ, the Sonne of the living God, was the same faith that justifieth.

But this faith was a confession only of the divinity of Christ, and no speciall application of his merits.

Therefore faith is no such thing, Bellarm. lib. 1. de Iustific. Cap. 8.

Answ. 1. First, by our adversaries owne confession; This was not the whole justifying faith, which Peter here confesseth: For they affirme, that faith is an universall beliefe of the Articles of Christs death, and Resurrection, &c. But at this time, though Peter confessed thus of the Son of God, yet he neither

I. Beleeved that Christ should die; for therefore was he called Sathan, ver. 23. of this Chapter, because he went about to perswade Christ not to die. Nor

II. Did Peter beleeve at this time Christs Resurrection for the Apostles in generall (for ought wee reade to the contrary) doubted of it, even when Christ was risen againe: And therefore how could this be the justifying faith, in respect of Peter, that confessed it?

Answ. 2. Secondly, this faith which Peter confessed, though it were not the whole justifying faith, yet it was a principall part thereof: for in faith there are two things; namely

I. The matter and substance thereof, which is the beliefe of the Articles of faith. And

II. The forme, which is the particular use, and application thereof, to every man severally: To confesse therefore that Christ is the Sonne of God: [which doth comprehend both the natures of his God-head, & humanity; and the offices of Christ, whereunto hee was anointed, his Kingdome, Prophesie, and Priesthood] belongeth to justifying faith, as the matter, and substance thereof.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Amesius (Bell. enerv. tom. 4. pag. 98.) answers: That Peter, with the rest of the Apostles, had before this confession a certaine assurance, and confidence of speciall mercy by Christ, the true promised Messias: and that the determination of this assurance was explicated, and expressed by this confession of the Divinity of Christ.

Fourthly, Dr. Willet (Synops. f. 974.) answers, That though simply to confesse Iesus to bee the Sonne of God, be not that faith, that justifieth, (because the devils have made such a confession) yet this confession may so proceed from a man, and was so uttered by Peter in this place, that it may declare a right justifying faith; that is, so to confesse Christ to be the Sonne of God, and to be the anointed Messiah, to take away the sins of the world; that hee which so confesseth, beleeveth it with comfort; and that Christ is so, even to him. Therefore Saint Paul saith; That no man can say, that Iesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost, 1 Corinth. 12. 3. And our Saviour saith to Peter, after hee had made this confession: That flesh and blood had not revealed it unto him, but his Father in heaven. Wherefore it is certaine, that hee uttered more, then a generall beliefe of this Article, which may be in devils; except Bellarmine will say, that the devils also made the same confession by the Holy Ghost, and by revelation from God. Answ. 4.

VERS. 17. And Iesus answered, and said unto him, Blessed art thou Simon Bar. Iona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. Verse 17.

§. 1. Blessed art thou. Sect. 1.

What is meant by Blessednesse? Quest.

First, the word is unknowne to none, every one saying occasionally, oh hee is a happy, and blessed man; and how blessed were I, if I were but thus, and thus, or had such, or such things. Thus Aristotle placed Blessednesse in a perfect life; and the Stoicks in vertue, and Plato in Idæis. Aristotle cals Blessednesse, εὐδαιμονίαν, from δαίμων God, or Fortune. Answ. 1.

Secondly, Blessednesse is that state (which soever it is) which is the best in rerum natura, and it is rightly called Summum bonum, the chiefest good. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, true Blessednesse is two-fold: to wit, Answ. 3.

I. Present, and this is a holy life; for onely such are truely blessed here, Mat. 5, 6, 7, 1. Luke 11, 28.

II. Future, or to come: and this Blessednesse is life eternall; that being the reward of the faithfull, and the time of retribution, Matth. 13. 43. Revelat. 7. 17.

§. Flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee. Sect. 2.

The meaning of these words is: That there is no naturall illumination of the truth, the very thoughts of the naturall mans heart being evill, Genesis 6. 5. and 1 Corinth. 2. 14. and 15. 50. But I passe this, by having treated of it before, Chapt. 11. 5.

§. 3. But my Father which in heaven. Sect. 3.

Two things are here observable: namely,

1 The

I The Person. II. The Action.

Quest. 1. Who doth reveale divine truths unto us?

Answ. God the Father: my Father which is in heaven.

Quest. 2. Doth not Christ reveale these divine truths unto us; and also the Holy Ghost? is it not said, that hee was sent (by the Sonne) to teach us, and that hee doth teach us, Iohn 14.16.

Answ. God the Father is here named, both in regard of the dignity of person, and also in regard of the operation, and working; because he workes by the Sonne, and by the Holy Spirit; and not contrarily, the Sonne, and the holy Spirit working by him. And hence our Saviour saith, I will pray the Father, and hee will send the Spirit, &c. Iohn 14.16.

Quest. 3. Why doth Christ call God, my Father which is in heaven?

Answ. For the comfort of all Christians; that they may know, that being united unto Christ, they have God for their Father, who will make them Co-heires with Christ, Rom. 8. 15, 16.

Quest. 4. Why doth Christ say, my Father which is in heaven?

Answ. That wee might learne to distinguish God our Father, from our earthly Parents: for the faithfull have two Fathers; to wit,

First, an earthly Father, from whom they have their nature; & by whom they are begotten. And Secondly, an heavenly Father, from whom they have grace, and by whom they are begotten anew, of water, and the Holy Ghost, Iohn 3.5. And therefore we must labour, to have our conversation in heaven, Philip. 3. 20. because wee are the children of an heavenly Father.

Quest. 5. What doth our heavenly Father for us, or unto us?

Answ. He reveales the Gospel, and divine truths unto us; not flesh and blood, but my Father hath revealed these things unto thee. Wherein our Saviour teacheth two things unto us; namely,

First, that the Gospel is a mysterie, which is hid from all naturall men, and revealed onely to the faithfull, Luke 10.21.

Object. Here it may bee objected, that the Gospel is called an open Booke, and the Law a clasped Booke; the Gospel is called Vetus revelatum, the old Testament revealed, and discovered; and therefore how is the Gospel a secret mysteric?

Answ. The Gospel indeed is a great, and bright shining light; but wee are blind, and therefore cannot see it: The light (saith Saint Iohn) shined in darkenesse, but the darkenesse comprehended it not, Iob. 1. 5. And therefore the fault is not in the Gospel, but in us.

Secondly, our Saviour shewes here, that it is the Lord alone, that discovers, and reveales the mysteries of the Gospel unto us, Iohn 14. 26.

Verse 18. Verse 19. And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this Rocke will I build my Church: and the gates of hell shall not prevaile against it. And I will give unto thee the keyes of the Kingdome of Heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt binde on earth, shall bee bound in heaven: whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall bee loosed in heaven.

§. 1. Thou art Peter. 181

What doth our Saviour here meane by these words? Sect. 1.

Our Saviour (saith Augustine, serm. 13. in Matth) in this place alludes to Simons sirname: and because Christ the Head is Petra (a Rocke) therefore the body, the Church, is Petrus. For the principall name is Petra; and therefore Petrus is derived from Petra, and not Petra from Petrus; even as the name Christianus comes from Christus, and not Christus from Christianus. More plainely, thy name saith Christ is Simon, but henceforth it shall be Peter; that is, one that depends upon Petra, the Rocke. I promised Iohn 1, 42. that thou shouldest be called Cephas, a Stone; but now I alter it into Peter, because thy name shall be derived of me. For I am Petra, and thou Peter, I am Christ, and thou a Christian: I a Rock, and thou rockie, or builded upon the Rocke: Thou art Peter, because thou beleevest in Petra: that is, in me the Rocke, upon the which I will build my Congregation, whom I will have to be called Peters, deriving their name from mee the Rocke, as thine is derived: because whosoever shall beleeve in mee, as thou dost, shall be called by the same name thou art: and who so confesseth me as thou dost, shall be called Peter of me Petra: that is, a Christian of my name Christ. Thus Origen (in hunc locum) saith, If we affirme and confesse, that Christ is the Sonne of the immortall God, as Peter did, then are wee Peters, and shall obtaine the same felicity that he hath obtained, because our confession, and his is all one: If we confesse Christ to be the Sonne of God, the Father revealing it unto us, it shall then be said to each one of us, Thou art Peter: And thus our Saviour calleth him Peter, and promiseth to build his Church upon that Rocke, which hee had confessed, and which hee knew, when he said, Thou art Christ the Sonne of the living God: that is, I will build my Church upon my selfe, not upon thee, because I am the Rocke, and thou onely derived from it, or one depending upon it, [Sylloge. voc. exo. etc. p. 126.]

§. 2. Upon this Rocke. Sect. 2.

Who is the Head, and foundation of the Church? Quest.

Not Peter, or the Pope, but Christ: for as naturall members take spirit, and sense from the head, so the Church takes her spirituall life, and feeling from Christ, who is only able to quicken, and give life, Ephesians 1, 21, 23. Colossians 1, 16, 18. And is therefore by this title of the head of the Church lifted up by Saint Paul, above all Angels, Principalities, and powers. Whereforealthough the Pope were the successour of Peter and Paul, yet should hee not therefore bee the head of the Church, which agreeth to none in heaven, or under heaven, that is meerely a creature, but is proper, and peculiar to our Lord Christ. Answ.

Against this the Popish Writers generally object this place, arguing thus: Christ saith to Peter; Thou art Peter, and upon this Rocke will I build my Church: therefore hee was Ruler over the Apostles, and the Foundation, and the head of the whole Church, and the universall Bishop of the earth Object. 1

182 earth: And therefore the Pope of Rome his ſucceſſour, is the head of the Church, & the Biſhop, & chief Ruler over all the particular Churches in the world. Peter they ſay is the foundation of the Church, of him it dependeth, in him it reſteth, and he is the head thereof: and as God dwelleth in Chriſt: ſo doth Peter in the Pope: Bellarmine frames the Argument thus.

If Peter be the Rock upon which Chriſt built his Church, then Peter is the Monarch and head of the Church (and conſequently the Pope his ſucceſſour) becauſe that which in a building is the foundation, in a body is the head.

But the former is true from this verſe.

Therefore alſo the latter.

Anſw. 1. First, nothing more undermineth the whole foundation of Popery, then to take away the Romiſh ſenſe and interpretation of theſe words, Thou art Peter and upon this Rock will I build my Church, for by Rock (in this place) the Papiſts underſtand not Chriſt (as do the Proteſtants) but Saint. Peter, and with that confidence and inſultation, that they challenge all Proteſtants to anſwer it, or contradict it if they can. Let all the Lutheranes come (ſay they) and joyn iſſue with us; the authority of this place is invincibly for us, yeelding unto us the Triumph (Roſſenſis adver. Luth. Art. 25. & Bellarm de Rom. pont. li. 1. Cap. 10. Staplet. doctr. princip. Cap. 3 &c. 5. & alij: vide Dr. Mort. appeal. Li. 1. Ca. 2. §. 30 p. 36 fine).

Anſw. 2. Secondly, this Objection is ſo abundantly anſwered by our men, that I may well ſpare my pains: let the ſtudious Reader inſtead of many reade onely theſe few, Scharp. de Capeti eccleſ. milit. pag 100 and 116, and Peter not at Rome, pag. 28. &c. Chamier. tom. 2 fol. 376. Willets Synopſ. 152 &c. and Biſhop Davenant Determin. pag. 220 and Pareus ſ. In all which he ſhal ſee the preſent Objection ſo fully anſwered, that no Papiſt (as yet that I know of) hath undertaken to confute their Anſwers. I will adde an Anſwer or two, becauſe this Objection is daily and hourely whiſpered, as a truth undeniable.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, if by the Rocke be meant Peter, yet not onely Peter but the reſt of the Apoſtles alſo; For the Queſtion being asked of all; But whom ſay ye that I am? Peter to avoid confuſion gave anſwer, in the name of all the reſt of the Apoſtles, upon whom (in reſpect of their Miniſtery) the Church is as well builded, as upon Peter, Revelat. 21. 14. As appears thus.

I. All being asked the Queſtion, it muſt neceſſarily follow, that either Peter gave anſwer for all and as the mouth of the reſt; or elſe that Chriſt asked his Apoſtles a queſtion but received no anſwer from them; which cannot be affirmed, without charging Diſobedience upon the Apoſtles, (who would not Anſwer when their Maſter ſpake unto them) and Negligence upon Chriſt, who ſeeking to ſtrengthen all the Apoſtles in the faith towards himſelf, ſhould have given them no ſtrength at all, neither by experience of the work of God within themſelves, nor by the glorious promiſes which he annexed to his confeſſion, unleſſe he had in Peters Anſwer, received the anſwer of the reſt, and in ſpeaking to him, had ſpoken to the reſt.

II. It appeareth otherwhere by Peters own confeſſion, that the reſt knew, that Chriſt was the Son of the living God as wel as he himſelf (Iohn 6. 69) And therfore what ſhould hinder them from making confeſſion of it as well as did Peter? and in regard thereof to be as much reſpected of their Maſter as he?

Fourthly, although by the Rock, here be meant Peter, yet it will not follow that Peter is the Head of the Church: for thoſe Fathers who interpreted Peter to be this Rock did render other reaſons, why he was called a Rocke then this, becauſe hee was conſtituted & made the Head of the Church. Nazianzen ſaith, Petrus petra vocatur &c. Peter is therefore called a Rocke, becauſe the Church is built upon his faith, or hath his faith for her foundation. And Theophylact, Quia primus eam confeſſionem edidit, ſuper qua Eccleſia fundanda erat: Peter was therefore called a Rocke, becauſe he firſt made that publike confeſſion of Chriſt, upon which the Church was built; yea Eraſmus hath obſerved in the ſentence of S. Cyprian, that although Chriſt had called Peter the Rock, yet it was not to make Peter the Imperial top, but the repreſentative Type of the Church: that as he anſwered in the name of all, ſo every one profeſſing the ſame, might be a Petrus in his kind (Eraſm. annot. in Matth. 16.) Accordingly, Cardinall Cuſanus from S. Hierome anſwereth, that although the word Rock ſhould betoken Saint Peter to be the foundation-ſtone, yet ſo likewiſe were the other Apoſtles called the ſtones of the Church. Card. Guſan. de Concord. eccleſ. lib. 2 Cap. 13. Anſw. 4.

Fifthly, although Peter were both the foundation, and head of the Church, yet the Pope is not: For although they ſay that Peter was Biſhop of Rome, yet it cannot be proved by Scripture, but rather the contrary: For if he had been at Rome when Paul was there, amongſt many others hee would not have forgotten to mention him, having divers occaſions thereof: eſpecially he would not have wrapped him in the common charge, that all had forſaken him, 2 Timoth. 4. 16. yea again, Peters proper charge being amongſt the Jewes, who were never frequent, or many at Rome, (Galath. 2. 7.) & after the few that were there were baniſhed from thence, (Acts 18. 2.) what likelyhood was there, that he would moſt reſide there where they had leaſt to doe, except they will ſay that Peter loved his eaſe and pleaſure as the Popes of Rome doe. And therefore they might have had more colour to have made S. Paul Biſhop of Rome, (who was there, and writ an Epiſtle thither, and was the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, then St. Peter, ſeeing he never writ any Epiſtles to Rome, never ſet foot in Rome, that they can prove, nor ever was properly the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, but of the Iews, which the Romans were not. Again, if it ſhould be granted that Peter was at Rome, yet there is no colourable probation, that he was Biſhop there, the Biſhoprick being a place far inferiour to the Apoſtleſhip, whereunto he is called. 1 Corinth. 12, 28. Epheſ. 4. 11. yea though Peter were the Biſhop of Rome, yet it will not follow that the Biſhop of Rome is his ſucceſſour: For Anſw. 5.

I. It

I. It should have been but a personall right belonging unto him onely; For the driving of this wedge more home, and close unto them, let us observe how Bellarmine (lib. 3. de pont. rom. Cap. 2. §. Secundus locus) goeth about to prove, That Antichrist is but one singular man, from the Greeke article ὁ, as where Antichrist 2. Thes. 2. is called The man of sin, and the childe of perdition; signifying (saith he) one certain and individuall person; and then (as though this observation derived from the Greek article, were a point of learning, and of singular moment) hee in a manner insulteth against Protestants for their ignorance herein (Et sane mirum est nullum Adversariorum qui tamen jactant linguarum peritiam, hoc animadvertisse) never considering that by what Argument; they would free their Popes in their personall succession from the Title of Antichrist, by the same they mainly overthrow that which they think to be the very bulwark of all Popery, even this succession from St. Peter, as thus. In this verse our Saviour saith. Thou art Peter, & ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ πέτρᾳ, that is, Vpon this (the) rocke, will I build my Church. And thus by their own Argument, if Peter were Bishop of Rome, and was meant by the Rock, yet it is not to be extended further then his own person. If the Reader would see into how great a strait the Papists are brought by this Argument, let him reade our venerable and Reverend Prelate Bishop Mortons Appeal, lib. 2. Cap 5. §. 4. pag. 146, 147.

II. If Peter were the Bishop, and it belonged to his successours to be so, then Antioch, where he is said to have sate, before he is supposed to have sitten at Rome, might challenge it as well, and as warrantably as they. Neither can his death (which they suppose to have been at Rome) give that priviledge to Rome above Antioch, or any other place, more then the death of Christ priviledged Ierusalem, which by the just judgment of God, for the same cause was made an heap of stones.

III. If Peter were the Bishop of Rome, and the Head of the Church, and that this did belong to his successours at Rome; yet it belongeth to his successours in Doctrine, and not to his successors in place only; considering that if the Church were builded upon Peter, it was in respect of the Doctrine he taught, and not of his person. Now there have been some Popes Hereticks, some Magicians, and some in their words no better then Atheists, (as is proved by our Bishop Iewell, and Bishop Morton in many places of his Appeal) and therefore these were no successors to St. Peter, in his doctrine, and consequently not his successours at all.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, and Lastly we answer, that Christ doth not in this place by Rock understand Peter, but himself which Peter confessed. Now because this is the very life, marrow, and sinewes of this objection, we will proue it plainly, and that

I. By some of our Holy Martyres: as for example.

First, Iohn Hus saith, That Christ in saying upon this Rock &c. did not purpose to build the Church upon Peter, but upon himself who is the true rock: for as much as Iesus Christ is the only head and foundation of every Church, and not Peter Fox, pag. 610. resp. ad artic. 9.

Secondly, Sir Iohn Bortwike Knight, condemned for the truth in Scotland, anno 1540. thus declareth his mind. As Abraham tooke his name of the multitude, which should come of his seed, so Peter was named of the Rocke; but Abraham was not the multitude it selfe, no more was Peter the Rocke; for the Church should bee staied upon a weake foundation, if Peter were the ground thereof, who being amazed, and overcome with the words of a little wench, did so constantly deny Christ, Fox 1260. 183

II. By some of the Fathers, who have expounded this place, not of Peters person, but of his faith, built upon the true Rocke, Iesus Christ: Fides est Ecclesiæ fundamentum, Ambros de incarnat. Cap. 5. Petra est quisquis, &c. Every Disciple of Christ that drinketh of the spirituall Rocke, is a Peter, and a Rocke: Origen, Tract. 1. in Matth. So Augustine by the Rocke here understands Christ. s. Super hanc Petram, &c. Upon this Rocke Peter which thou confessest, and upon this Rocke which thou acknowledgest, when thou said, Thou art Christ, the Sonne of the immortall God: upon this Rocke will I build my congregation; that is, upon my selfe the Sonne of the ever living God; upon me will I build it, and not upon thee. Againe, Aug. s. Iohn 21. saith; the Church cannot fall, because it is founded upon the Rocke, of the which Rocke, or Petra, Peter hath his name.

III. This may bee confirmed by this reason, because Nomen & Denominatum, the name, and the thing denominated, cannot both bee spoken of one, and the same thing: For a stone, and stony, is not both one: faith, and a faithfull man, are divers things, as are also Grammar, and a Grammarian. Petra is the name, from whence Petrus is derived, or denominated: and therefore the Papists grosly expound this place, even as though a man should thus say, Aristotle is a Logician, and Logicke is the instrument of sciences: therefore Aristotle is the instrument of sciences: for Petrus differs from Petra, as Dialecticus from Dialectica; namely, because both are παρώνυμα. This reason is drawne from Augustine (Tract. 124. in Iohn) and Basil serm. de poenit. and Ambrose, serm. 84.

IV. This may further bee confirmed from Scripture: as

First, from this very Text, where wee see the Evangelist doth thus expresse the mind, & meaning of Christ, Thou art Peter, and upon this Rocke will I build my Church; in which words wee see Peter clearely distinguished from the Rocke, both in gender and person; which were absurd, if both the members were to be understood of one Peter: for if so, then the words should have bin thus; Thou art Peter, and upon thee Peter will I build my Church: Now wee not being able to teach the Holy Ghost to speake, must take the Scripture as spoken, and meant by him.

Secondly, that Christ founded not his Church upon Peter, but upon the Rocke of his confession, doth further appeare by the Text, what was his confession? That Iesus Christ was the Sonne of God. Then this faith of Peters is the foundation of the Church, which foundation Paul affirmeth to bee Christ, 1 Cor. 3. 11. Third-

184 Thirdly, this may further be confirmed from these words, μὲ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, my Church, thou art Peter, and upon this Rocke will I build my Church: which words signifie the whole edifice, which consists of divers parts, and is called the Church; whereof there are principally these two parts, namely, the Militant Church, and the Triumphant. Now there is nothing in all Christs words, which may be restrained unto one part onely; namely, to the Militant, excluding the Triumphant. Now it is granted on all hands, as most certaine, that these two parts have but one foundation. And therefore if Peter be understood by that Rocke, upon which Christ promiseth to build his Church, then it will follow, that Peter is the foundation, and head of the Triumphant Church, as well as Militant; and consequently the Pope; which is so false, that I perswade my selfe, every ingenuous Papist would blush to affirme it, [t].

[t] Cham. de Pontif. lib. 11. cap. 2. fol. 377

Fourthly, this may yet further bee confirmed from this verse, because Christ said not to Simon, Thou shalt be Peter; but, thou art Peter; and therefore if both these enunciations be one in signification, Thou art Peter, and, Thou art a Rocke: then it is necessary, that now when Christ spake this, Peter should have beene a Rocke immoveable: but this is false, because presently after he fell foully, and denied his Master shamefully; whereby he shewed, that hee was not as yet so confirmed, and rooted in Christ, that hee could adhere unto him, without any staggering: which yet notwithstanding he did afterwards, when he had received the Holy Spirit. And therefore the Rocke did not betoken Peter, because now hee was no Rocke.

Fifthly, the Apostle Paul saith positively, 1 Cor. 3. Another foundation can no man lay, besides that which is laid, which is Iesus Christ: wee may adde hereunto the testimony of Gregory, [u] Cum in sacro eloquio non fundamenta, sed singulari numero fundamentum dicitur, nullus alius nisi ipse Dominus designatur: Whensoever in the holy Scriptures wee reade of a foundation in the singular number, we must understand it of Christ. For if (as the Apostle affirmes) besides Christ, there can be no other foundation of the Church; then without doubt, it cannot be proved by any argument, that Peter is the Rocke, upon which the Church is built. For that upon which the Church is built, is the Churches foundation, which is Christ, and not Peter: For Peter himselfe was built upon Christ, and so also were the rest of the Apostles: yea, the whole Church of God. Indeed Peter may be called a foundation; because by preaching the Gospel, he founded the Church: & in this sense, the other Apostles are called foundations. But grant that Peter is that Rocke, which doth so sustaine the whole Church, that the gates of hell cannot prevaile against it (which none dare affirme that are in their right wits) yet what is this to that Monarchy of Popish, and Romish Bishops, which all their adherents labour so much for? It is one thing to sustaine a house, and another to governe it by a Monarchicall command, and rule. Neither can the Popes by this their externall Monarchicall governement either defend any one member of the Church, against the gates of hell, or themselves, who are swallowed up of death. And therefore wee may pitty the Church of Rome, whose Rocke (even according to their own confession) may sinke downe into hell, and be overcome by it. For themselves acknowledge, that the Pope (who is the head, and foundation of the Church) may be damned eternally.

[u] Greg. lib. 28. mor. cap. 6.

Eccles. 2. 20.

Revelat. 21. 14.

Sixthly, and lastly, it appears evidently, that the Rocke in this place doth signifie Christ, and not Peter, by the testimonie of the Popish Writers themselves.

First, venerable Bede saith, Metaphoricè Petro dictum est (super hanc Petram) id est, salvatorem, quem confessus est, ædificatur Ecclesia, &c. Bede in Matth. 16. Christ saith Metaphorically to Peter, upon this Rocke; that is, upon the Saviour of the world, whom thou hast confessed, wil I build my Church.

Secondly, to sunime them up together (as our Reverend Prelate doth) [v]: Their learned Expositor Lyra; their honest Preacher Ferus, and Cardinall Hugo, by Rocke expound Christ; yea, their common Glosse upon the Papall Decrees, fixeth a Credo, that is, a belicfe upon it: and their Cardinall Cusanus is confident in the matter, and ventureth against their Notwithstanding, to affirme that by the Rocke, is meant Christ.

[v] Bishop Mort. pag. 276.

Thirdly, some of the Iesuits themselves, have neither feared, nor blushed to affirme it; Pererius (Comment. in Dan. 2. in ea verba; lapis abscissus) saith, that Christ is that Rocke (noting the place of Matth. 16.) upon the which the Church is built; And Salmeron (Comment. in Ephes. disp. 16.) sheweth; that Christ is the foundation. And thus much may suffice, I hope (unto any indifferent Reader) in answer to their first objection.

Object. 2. The Papists produce these words, Thou art Peter, and upon this Rocke, &c. to prove, that the Pope cannot erre; they reason thus: In this place Peter is called the Rocke, and foundation of the Church; and withall every one of his successors is the Rocke, and foundation thereof: Now the name of a Rocke doth denote constancie, and solidity, and an immoveable stability: And therefore if the Pope erre in faith, as hee is Pope, hee cannot bee called the Rocke of the Church. Further, seeing the building; that is, the Church it selfe cannot fall, then neither can the Pope, the foundation thereof; for a house and building hath its stability, and firmenesse from the foundation, upon which it is built.

Answ. 1. First, this whole Argument is taken from a false exposition of the place; for the Rock upon which the Church is founded, is neither Peter, nor his successors, but Christ, as was abundantly shewed but even now.

Answ. 2. Secondly, yea, if wee should admit that Peter was called a Rocke, then wee must understand it of his Confession, not of his Person; as Hilary de Trinit. 6. seemes to understand it.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, yea, if the Church were built upon Peters Person (which wee must not grant) yet it would not follow, that it is now built upon the Pope because neither had Peter any successour in his Apostolical office, neither if he had could his personall priviledges be derived to his successours: For in the same sense that Peter is called the foundation of the Church, are the other Apostles called foundations also, but their personall priviledges, were not devolved to the Bishops their successours: and therefore neither Peters.

Answ. 4 Fourthly, and Lastly, the Rock and foundation of the Church ought to be perpetually firm, stable, and immovable: but this the Popes are not; For

First if we consider their persons, then without doubt, we may safely say, that the gates of Hell have prevailed against them, many of them having been Magicians, Atheists, yea Devils incarnate, and monsters in nature.

Secondly, if we look upon, and consider the publike profession of the Orthodoxe faith, then it is certain that many of them have erred, and fallen from the true faith, many of them being Hereticks: as might be instanced in Liberius, Vigilius, Honorius, and divers others.

Object. 3 But Bellarmine here yet further presseth these words thus (de verbo Dei. lib. 3. Cap. 5) Peter here is literally called the Rock, the foundation of the Church, and the chief Rector of his Church, and so consequently, are al his successours: from hence a double Argument is framed by him.

Argument. 1. First, if Peter be a Rock then he shall not bee broken, he shall not be carried about with every wind of Doctrine; that is, he shall not erre in faith, at lest Quatenus petra, that is, as he is the chief Bishop.

Answ. 1 First, these words upon this Rock will I build my Church, are not literally spoken of Peter, as is abundantly proved before.

Answ. 2. Secondly, although these words were understood of Peter, yet we deny that they belong also unto the Pope, his successour (as they terme him) as is also shewed before.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Argument alleaged is no Argument, that is doth not agree with any Mood in any Figure, but is only a confused reasoning. If Peter be a Rock then he shall not be broken, that is, not erre in faith; that is as he is the chief Bishop. Thus he goes about not only to distinguish his person, but also to separate him from his office, which is ridiculous; because an office is no other thing, but a quality happening or acceding unto a person, and the office cannot but be affected either by the vertues or vices of the person; as if a man be learned, and a Bishop, then he is a learned Bishop; if unlearned, then he is an ignorant Bishop; So although Marriage respect properly the person, yet if he who is married be a Bishop, we say he is a married Bishop, and therefore it is a foolish thing to distinguish the person from his office, seeing the office is a quality, and an accident, which cannot subsist without the person, which is the substance: Thus also if a man be an Heretike and a Bishop, we truly averre him to be an Hereticall Bishop: and that man cannot be a Catholike Bishop, which is not a Catholike man. A Sword is nothing of it selfe, but only Iron so framed and fashioned, and yet all the faults that be in that iron so formed, are called the faults of the Sword it self. So when a Bishop is nothing at all by himself, but only a man chosen unto that place, and calling; without doubt the faults of the man, will be also the faults of the Bishop. We conclude therefore, if in this place there be not promised an infallibily of person, then neither an infallibility of office: That is, if Peter and Alexander, the 6. and Gregory 7. be not exempted from erring as they are men (then neither as they are Bishops, and Popes; now Bellarmine himself dare not affirm the first (viz. that Peter, or the Popes cannot erre, as they are men,) therfore the latter cannot bee denied, namely, that they may erre as they are Bishops, chief Bishops, and Popes.

Argu. 2. Secondly, his next Argument drawn from his former exposition is thsi, if the Edifice be such that it cannot fall, then certainly his foundation cannot fail: but the former is true, therefore also the latter.

Answ. We distinguish here of a Foundation: There is a foundation properly so called, & a Ministeriall foundation, now concerning the first foundation we admit the consequence, and confesse with Bellarmine, that the Foundation cannot fail, but the house must fal; but the house may fall & yet the foundation continue. But neither Peter nor any successor of Peters is the Church properly so called, as St. Paul witnesseth. 1 Cor 3. 11. Now concerning the Ministeriall Foundation, we deny the Consequence, because as that Romane Pantheon, or Temple, doth not therefore fall, because he is dead by whom it is built; so it hindreth not, but the Church may continue in the right faith, although hee should apostatize, that planted that faith in the Church, as we see plainly in Peter: when he staggered in withdrawing himself from the Gentiles by reason of the Jewes (Galath. 2.) the Church did not therfore stagger, he being not the proper foundation thereof. Cham. tom. 1. pag. 57.

§. 3. Ego I will build. Sect. 3.

Object. The Papists affirm, that the Primacie of the Roman Church over all Churches, hath its beginning and originall from no other but Christ, and they would prove it from these places of Scripture, which therefore I conjoyn, because the Answers unto them were conjoyned in one Epistle.

First, Christ said, Thou art Peter, and upon this Rock Ego, I will build my Church, in this verse.

Secondly, Christ said, Ego I have prayed for thee Peter, that thy faith should not fail. Luk. 22. 32.

Thirdly, Christ said to Peter, Feed my sheep. Iohn 21. 16. Therefore Peter and Peters successors the Popes, have their primacie from Christ. Bellarm. de Pontif. rom. lib. 2. Cap 17.

To these places, Tunstall and Stockesly two Popish Bishops (yet in this point holding the truth) did pithily make answer in their Epistle sent to Cardinall Poole.

Answ. 1. First, to the first, they affirm out of the ancient expositors, that by Rock was meant the faith which was then first confessed by the mouth of Peter, and not Peters person, and consequently not the Popes. And they confirmed this further from, 186 St. Paul, who saith that only Christ is the foundation of the Church and neither Peter nor any creature besides. 1 Cor. 3.

Answ. 2. Secondly, to the second they answer, That Christ speaketh onely of the fall of Peter, which he knew in his godly prescience, giving an inckling unto him, that after his fall he should bee converted, and strengthen his brethren: Now if this were meant of Peters successors also, then they must first fail in faith, and after confirm their brethren.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, to the third they affirm, That the whole flock of Christ was not committed to Peter to feed: for he himself testifieth the contrary, exhorting all Pastors to feed the flock of Christ, which was given them in charge by Christ. And he encourageth them herunto by this, Because (if you do so, then) when the chief Shepheard shall appear ye shall receive an incorruptible Crown of glory, (1 Peter 5.) where he calleth not himself the chief Shepherd, but only Christ. It is evident therefore (say they) that your three Scriptures meant nothing lesse then such a Primacie over all. Fox. f. 1067.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Ædificabo, I will build.

Object. 1 The Papists object this place to prove that Peter was Head of the Church, and Prince of the Apostles; and consequently that the Romish Bishops are so also. And Bellarm. lib. 1. de Pontif. Cap. 11. argues thus. The Text saith ædificabo, I will build my Church: but if Christ be here taken for the Rock, his Church was built already, for many beleeved in him. But Peter was not made the Head of the Church till afterwards, after his Resurrection, & therefore he saith in the Future Tense ædificabo I will build.

Answ. 1. First, it is grosly false to say that the Church of Christ was not builded till after the Resurrection: for seeing that many beleeved before in Christ, and made a Church, either they must grant that the Church was without a foundation, or else that the Foundation was changed from CHRIST to Peter; both which are absurde.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is taken therefore for the enlarging and increasing of the Church of God: for it followeth not, because Christ saith, I will build, and his Church was begun to be built already that therefore another kind of building must be excogitated, no more then, because Christ gave his Spirit to his Apostles, (Mat. 10. 1. John 20. 22) and yet biddeth them to stay at Ierusalem, till they should receive the Holy Ghost (Acts 1. 7.) that therefore they should look for another Holy Ghost, as though they had not received the Holy Ghost before. But as the sending of the Holy Ghost is meant, for the increase and more plentifull measure thereof, so is the building of the Church here taken for the increase of the building [v].

[v] Willet Synopf. f. 152.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, we yet answer with Augustine, Super hanc Petram quam confessus es, ædificabo Ecclesiam. (Tract. ult. in Iohan.) Vpon this Rock which thou hast confessed will I build my Church. So that in this place is meant not Peter to be the Rock: but either Christ whom he confessed, or his faith whereby he confessed him which is all one in effect. For it matters not much whether we say, the Church is builded upon Christ, or faith is the foundation of the Church, faith being an apprehension of Christ. But of the person of Peter it can no more be understood, then of the rest of the Apostles, who in regard of their Holy Apostolike Doctrine upon which the Church is built, are called the foundation of the Church. Ephes. 2. 20.

Object. 2 But the Papists Object again; and against this which hath been said, That the Church is built upon Peter, and upon Peters faith: but faith (they say) hath here a double consideration: for it may be either absolutely considered, or with relation to Peters person: But faith generally and absolutely respected is not the foundation of the Church, but as it was in Peter, Bellar. de Pontif. lib. 1 Cap. 11.

Answ. 1. First, Peters faith which was in Peter, and confessed by him, is a portion of the generall saving faith of the Church, which is the foundation of the same Church: and this we grant: But Peters personall faith cannot be this foundation; for then when Peter died, his faith being a particular accident to his person, going away with him, the Church should have wanted a foundation.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in Peter these two things are respected, his person, and faith: whatsoever was in Peter besides faith, was flesh and blood, but that could not be the foundation: therefore Peters faith only was the foundation, and his person had therein no part at all.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, their own Decrees say, Quod Petrus quando claves accepit, Ecclesiam sanctam significavit. (Decr. part. 2. caus. 24. qu. 1 Cap. 6) Peter when hee had received the Keyes signified the whole Church; now if in Peter the whole Church be considered, then Peters particular person is not included; and so consequently, by their own rule, their own distinction is overthrown.

Sect. 5. §. 5. My Church.

Many Questions will hence arise, which I doe but only name, having amply to treat of them in another place.

Quest. 1. Whether shall the true Church of Christ be alwaies glorious, and pompous upon the earth?

Answ. No, for it hath often been subject to the rage and tyranny of Persecutors.

Quest. 2. Whether shall the Church be alwaies visible in one and the same place?

Answ. No: and that

First, because many rare, famous, and sometimes flourishing Churches, have failed; as all the Orientall Churches have done, which are named, Revel. 2. and 3. And Secondly, because the Covenant which is made between God, and al particular Nationall Churches, is conditionall: and therefore God will be their God, no longer then they walk as becomes his people.

Quest. 3. Whether shall the Visible Church of Christ be alwaies free from all errours in the Prelates, Or whether shall the Prelates and Rulers of the Visible Church be alwaies free from erour?

No

Answ. No; for Humanum est errare, as might be proved by some Prelates of all ages, in all places: that is, in all Churches there have been some of the Prelates, and Rulers, who have been subject unto, and tainted with some errours.

Quest. 4 Whether shal the Church of Christ be alwayes Visible (Ad intra) And that not only,

I. In regard of some which shall professe the truth somewhere? but also,

II. In regard of some Ministers, which shall preach and administer the Sacraments?

Answ. 1 First the Papists do not deny this, and therefore our probation may be the lesse.

Answ. 2 Secondly, our famous Doctor Field, confesseth, that somewhere or other, in all times there shall be some Pastors, who shall openly, and publikely, faithfully preach the word of God, and rightly administer the Holy Sacraments.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is undeniable but that somewhere in all ages there shall be some who shall professe, and maintain the truth of God.

Quest. 5. Whether are they alwaies the Church, which seem to be so, that is, which have the Rule, and government of the Church? Or whether are the Prelates the Church of Christ?

Answ. Not alwayes for Zachary, Anna, Simeon: and Mary were the true Church, and not the Scribes, and Pharisees; as Bellarmine himself confesseth. Tom. 1. 1272. B.

Quest. 6. Can there be a Visible Church of Christ ad intra, without a visible ad extra?

Answ. The Visibility of the Church of Christ may be in two or three: for although the whole Synagogue of the Jewes should have failed, yet the Church should not have fallen; because besides that people, there were Melchisedech, Iob, Cornelius, the Centurion, and the Eunuch: as is confessed by Bellarmine himself, de Eccles. milit. li. 3. Cap. 16. Sect. Ad Tertium. Yea at the time of Christs death when the Apostles failed, and shrunk away for fear, the profession of the faith and truth remained in the Blessed Virgin only. August Epist. 48.

Quest. 7. What is meant here by the Church of Christ, or what doth our Saviour mean by this word Church?

Answ. 1. First, it signifies sometimes the place which is set apart, and consecrated for the service of God, and the celebration of Prayer, Preaching, and the Sacraments: but not so here.

Answ. 2. Secondly, sometimes it is taken for some particular and nationall Church: but neither so here, Answ. 3. Thirdly, sometimes for that part of the Church which is Triumphant in Heaven.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, sometimes for all those who professe the name of Christ, and who are called Christians. But it is not taken in this sense here by our Saviour.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, sometimes for a particular assembly of Christians: The Church which is in thy house salute.

Answ 6. Sixthly, sometimes Church is taken for that part thereof which is Militant; or for all the faithfull flock of Christ. And thus it is principally taken in this place.

187

By what markes or signes may this Church of Christ be known? Quest. 8

The markes of the true Church are these, viz.

Answ. First, the word of God, as it is revealed, and commended unto us by Christ; and this is the chiefe, and principall marke: because it is given for the rule of the Church; and is that whereby the Church is begotten, and unto which she must cleave constantly, and immovably: Reade for the confirming of this note, Matth. 7. 24. and 10. 7. and 13. 23. and 17. 5. and 28. 20. Marke 13. 10. and 16. 15. Luke 24. 47. Now by these and the like places it is evident, that the pure word of God (not adulterated with the traditions, and inventions of men) is a notable marke of the Church of Christ.

Secondly, a true and lawfull use of the Sacraments, and Keyes, according to the institution of Christ, Matth. 28. 19. Baptize them in the name of the Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghost, Luke 22. Doe this in remembrance of me, Iohn 20. Whose sinnes yee remit, they are remitted, &c.

Thirdly, confession of the truth, constancie, and perseverance in the profession thereof, and purity of life and conversation, Matth. 5. 16. & 10. 32. So Peter in the name of the other Apostles, having confessed Christ, to be the Son of the living God; he (in this verse) presently addes, Upon this Rocke will I build my Church.

Fourthly, obedience to the Ministerie, in those things which Christ hath taught, and ordained, as Luke 10. Hee that heares not you, heares not me, &c. Iohn 8. Hee that is of God, heares Gods word. And Matth. 10. 14, 15.

§. 6. And the gates of hell shall not prevaile against it. Sect. 6.

What is here meant by the gates of hell? Quest.

First, for answer hereunto we must observe; that amongst the Jewes there was a greater Consistory, and a lesser, which differed in divers things, and amongst the rest, in place: For; Answ. 1.

I. The greater Consistory sate only at Ierusalem, within the Court of the Temple, in a certaine house called (Lischath hagazith) The paved Chamber, because of the curious cut stones, wherwith it was paved: by the Greekes it was called λιθόστρωτον, The pavement: as Iohn 19. 13. Pilate sate downe in the judgement seat, in a place called the pavement.

II. The lesser Consistory sate in the gates of the Cities. Now because the gates of the Citie, are the strength thereof, and in their gates their Iudges sate; therefore it is said here, The gates of hell shall not prevaile against it; that is, neither the strength, nor policie of Satan. Iewish Antiq. Godwyn, pag. 234.

Secondly, our Saviour saith, That the gates of hell shall not prevaile against this faith, this Rock; and those who confesse Christ with as good a faith as Peter did; and the Metaphor is taken from the gates, wherein the Jewes and Gentiles Answ. 2.

188 exercised their judgements, as appeareth by Moses, Gen. 22. 17. and Iob 32. 21. And because wicked Judges did there give false sentences, as absolving the offenders, and condemning the innocents: therefore false judgement, and tyrannicall Iudges, and injurious Magistrates, are called hell gates; that is, the gates of death, or the judgement seats of death. Wherefore πύλαι ἅδου, the gates of hell may be translated, the gates of death, or the gates of the grave. The gates of Hades (saith Christ) shall not prevaile against, or overcome the Church, nor utterly destroy the faithfull; neither at length have the victory; for they may kill the bodies, but they cannot hurt, or touch the soules. Now these gates are false Iudges, malicious Magistrates, and cruell Tyrants, which sitting in judgement condemne the innocents, and justifie the Malefactors; and consequently may injure, and wrong the bodies of the righteous, but not their soules at all. Peter not at Rome, pag. 33.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, by the gates of hell some understand vices, sinnes, and the corruptions of mans nature, which shall neither raigne in their mortall bodies, nor finally, or totally prevaile against them, Origen, & Ambros. s.

It is questioned betweene us, and Rome; whether the Church of Rome may erre, or not: and wee affirme, that it may, (that is, any particular Church, or visible Congregation) and confirme it thus.

Argumen. 1. If any Christian Church hath this infallibility of judging so, that it cannot erre, then it must have it from some divine promise.

But there is no such thing promised to any Church.

Therefore no Church is exempt from errour.

Object. If this place bee objected (as it is by the Papists) That Christ hath promised, that the gates of hell shall not prevaile against his Church. We answer, Answ. First, Christ speakes not here of any particular, or nationall Church; and consequently, not of the Church of Rome.

Sect. 7. §. 7. And I will give to thee the keyes of the kingdome of heaven.

Mason de Min. Ang. Lib. cap 3. The Papists, to prove the absolute, and boundlesse power of the Pope, alleage this place; To thee will I give the keyes of heaven. Marke (say they) Christ did not promise unto Saint Peter, Clavem one key, but Claves, two keyes; to wit,

First, Scientiæ, the keyes of knowledge: and with this key, hee doth open the doore of the Scripture, absolving all mysteries, and resolving all controversies.

Secondly, Potestatis, the Key of power, and with this Key he doth open the Church doore; and that either,

I. By ordination, admitting Pastors into it. Or,

II. By jurisdiction; commanding, injoyning, or correcting the inferiours in it, or expelling the disobedient from it; having power over them all, in all cases in their Courts, by Excommunication, Absolution, Dispensation, and Injunction; as also in their Consciences, to remit, and retaine sinnes.

Answ. Wee may answer to this, as once the Philosopher did to Genesis, Multa asserit, sed pauca probat; they affirme many things, but confirme nothing; perswading themselves, that wee must, or ought to take their assertions, for undeniable truths, without proofe; wherein they much deceive themselves: For untill they prove what they have said, wee will deny both the Antecedent, that Christ gave such unlimited, and unbounded power unto Peter; and also the Consequent, that therefore he hath given such power unto the Pope.

Object. 2. Carerius, and Bezius say: That the Pope hath all absolute, and direct power, and dominion temporall ever all Kings, and Kingdomes of the world: And the modest Answerer undertakes to prove what they say, from this place. Saint Peter (saith hee) when he received of Christ, the keyes of the Kingdome of heaven, he also received the temporall, and civill sword, and a right of erecting, and destroying Kingdomes; as farre forth as hee might thinke it behovefull for the good of soules: and to this end ought the Pope to use the civill sword, both against Kings, and others, Answ. This objection is answered by our Reverend Bishop Morton (whom they goe not about to answer) thus: By the Keyes of the Kingdome of heaven (according to the determination of their owne Victoria) is signified a spirituall authority, different from the civill jurisdiction, as is proved by the use, which is remitting, and retaining of sinnes; which no way can belong to civill authority: (Victoria, Relect. 1. Sect. 2. Tertiò probatur.) Neither can any one Doctor of but reasonable antiquity bee produced; who by these understand a civill power. Bishop Morton against the modest answ. part. 3. Cap. 6. Object. 1. pag. 15.

Object. 3. The Papists are so confident of the Popes infallibility of judgement, that they make his authority incontrollable, not permitting him to be subject unto the authority of a Councell: and divers Jesuits object for the proofe hereof, the words of Origen upon this place. Christ saith, Vnto thee will I give the Keyes of the Kingdome of heaven: and upon these words Origen (hom. 6. in Mat.) saith; Vnto the other Apostles were given the Keyes but of one heaven, but unto Peter of many.

To this Maldonate answers, that the distinction of heaven, and heavens, is but a nice subtilty, Maldon. Iesuit. Comment. in Matth. 16. 19. Colossians 379.

Object. 4. From this place further, the Popish Writers would prove, Saint Peter to be the Prince of the Apostles, and the Monarch of the Church; and consequently, that the same honour, power, and priviledges belong unto the Pope: They argue thus: Christ saith unto Peter; Vnto thee will I give the Keyes of the Kingdome of Heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven, &c. Therefore Peter had especiall jurisdiction given him, more then any of the rest, Bellarm. lib. 1. de Rom. pontif. Cap. 12. The question here betwixt us, and them is,

Whether Peter bee the universall Monarch of the whole Church, in the place, and stead of Christ, ordained and appointed by Christ himselfe, selfe, and the Pope his successour? This they affirme, and wee deny; and Bellarmine telleth us, Horum verborum planus, & obvius est sensus, &c. That the sense and meaning of these words [Thou art Peter, &c. And unto thee will I give the Keyes of the Kingdome of Heaven, &c.] is plaine and easie: for under two Metaphors wee may understand the Primacie, and government of the whole Church, to bee promised by Christ unto Peter. Now to prove this, the Papists generally from hence frame this Argument.

Whosoever received from Christ the Keyes of the Kingdome of heaven, is the universall Bishop, and sole Monarch of the Church.

But Saint Peter onely received these Keyes; as is manifest from this verse.

Therefore hee is the universall Bishop, and sole Monarch of the Church: And consequently, the Popes of Rome his successors.

Answ. 1. First, if the sense of these words, be so obvious, and plainely expressed under a double Metaphor, then that same sense should be explicated in some other places without Metaphors. But this Bellarmine will not affirme, nor is able to produce any literall place, which will warrant his interpretation, and exposition of this: And therefore the sense of this cannot be so plaine, and obvious, as hee would perswade us, it is.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if the sense and meaning of these words be so plaine, and easie, that he which runs may reade it; then certainely the Apostles of Christ would have understood then. But they did not understand any such Precedencie of order, or Primacie, or Monarchicall power given by Christ to Peter, as is evident; because after this, once and againe they strove which should be the first, greatest, and chiefe amongst them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Popish Writers themselves will not deny, but that many of the Fathers understood these words otherwise, then Bellarmine doth: and therefore the sense, and meaning of these words, is not so plaine.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, if the sense and meaning of these words be so facile, as the Iesuit faines; then without doubt, the Schoole-men would not have erred in the exposition of them: But all the ancient Schoole-men, with their Master, did understand otherwise these words, then Bellarmine doth: for they generally teach, that this power which our Saviour here speakes of, is Sacerdotall; given first by Christ to his Apostles, and then by them given unto other Ministers, Lombard. lib. 4. dist. 18. & Alex. Ales. part. 4. q. 20.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, by the Keyes here cannot be understood that large jurisdiction Monarchicall, which the Papists dreame of; as not onely the authority, and chaire of doctrine, Iudgement, Knowledge, Discretion, betweene true and false doctrine; all which wee grant together with Peter, to have beene given to all the Apostles besides: But they say, hereby is signified the height of government, the power of making Lawes, of calling Councels, and confirming them, of ordaining Bishops, and Pastors; and finally to dispense the goods of the Church spirituall, and temporall. Now all this is added without ground, neither had either Peter, or any of the Apostles this ample authority, no, nor the Bishop of Rome, for divers hundred yeares after Christ: yea, we absolutely deny, that in these words, a Monarchicall power is contained; and wee prove it from the definition of the Keyes, which are nothing else, but the power of binding, and loosing, as is here expressed by Christ: and this power doth consist in remitting, and retaining of sinnes. Vide August. Tract. 50. in Iohn. Theophylact. & Anselm. s. Matth. 16.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, wee deny, that this promise of the Keyes belongs onely to Peter: for there is no more promised unto him, than unto all the rest of the Apostles, Mat. 18. 18. they likewise having authority given to bind, and loose (Iohn 20. 23.) and all Ministers in them: For Saint Peter did now sustaine, and represent the person of the Church; and therefore the Keyes were promised to the other Apostles, as well as unto him.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, as Peter confesseth in the name of all the rest, so this power is given both to him, and the rest, and not to him only for the rest (as the Rhemists falsely charge us, that wee make Peter a Proctor for others) but together with the rest.

Obiect. It is controverted betweene us, and the Papists: To whom the chiefe authority, to expound Scripture is committed; And Bellarmine saith, that it belongs unto the Pope, and the College of Cardinals. (Bellarm. lib. 3. de Script. Cap. 3.) and hee urgeth this verse for the proving of it: Christ saith to Peter; To thee will I give the Keyes of the Kingdome of heaven: therefore the Pope hath authority to expound Scripture, and is the chiefest Iudge of Scriptures. They argue Syllogistically thus.

Hee to whom the Keyes, and power of binding, and loosing are given, is the chiefest Iudge, and Interpreter of Scripture in the Church: Because by the Keyes, not onely power of loosing men from their sinnes is understood, but also from all other bonds, and impediments; which except they be taken away, none can enter into the Kingdome of heaven, seeing the promise is generall, not saying: Whomsoever yee shall loose, but whatsoever yee shall loose: that wee might understand him to be able, to dissolve all knots, to dispense with Lawes, to remit, or mitigate the punishment of sinne, to determine controversies, and to explicate, and expound difficult places, and deepe mysteries.

But to Peter, and his Successors were the Keyes given.

Therefore the Popes are the chiefest Iudges, and Interpreters of Scripture in the Church.

Answ. 1. First, here is nothing spoken of the College of Cardinals; and therefore this place is unfitly brought for the proofe of their assertion. Bellarmine (in this place quoted) dares not referre the matter to the Pope alone, to expound Scripture, but joyneth the College of Cardinals with him: now either are the Cardinals, as well as the Pope, Peters successors, (and then not the Pope onely) or else the Pope and Cardinals make up but one body (& then neither is the Pope alone Peters successor) or else as Peter represented the 190 Pope, ſo the other Apoſtles did repreſent the Cardinals (& this I know they wil not affirm for fear of ſome concluſions which would trouble them) or elſe, that the Cardinals are none of Peters ſucceſſours, nor once ſpoken of, or meant in this place, and then it is abſurdly brought for the proof of their poſition. For if the Pope without the Cardinals, cannot expound Scriptures, and this place ſpeaks onely of the Pope, and not at all of the Cardinals; then it muſt neceſſarily follow, that it is improperly, and ridiculouſly brought for the proof of the Popes power in the judgement of Scripture.

Pope

Anſw. 2. Secondly, here is nothing at all ſpoken in this place of any one ſingular ſucceſſour of Peter, or of the chief ordinary Paſtour.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, by the Keys, is meant, either

I. The preaching of the Word, or commiſſion to preach the Goſpel, and not onely to expound doubts, as Doctor Willet thinks, Syn. fol. 44. and Whitak. de ſcript. p. 317. Claves hîc non ſignificant, ut vult Ieſuita, &c. The Keys do not here ſignifie (as Bellarmine would have it) the authority of interpreting of Scriptures, and of opening thoſe things which are difficult, and obſcure in the Scriptures: but they ſignifie the authority of preaching the Goſpel: for when the Goſpel is preached, then to thoſe who beleeve, is opened the kingdom of heaven; and to thoſe who will not beleeve, it is ſhut. Or

II. By the Keys, is meant the pardon and remiſſion of ſins, as Ameſius thinks, Bellarm. enervat. tom 1. pag. 52. And he grounds this upon Matth. 28. 18, 19. and John 20. 21, 22. Or

III. By the Keys is meant the whole Miniſtery, which conſiſts in the preaching of the Goſpel, and the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and Diſcipline, by which the kingdom of heaven is opened to thoſe who beleeve, and ſhut againſt unbeleevers.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, the Keys were given to all the Apoſtles, not to Peter onely, Matthew 18. 18, 19. Cæteri Apoſtoli cum Petro par conſortium honoris & poteſtatis acceperunt. The reſt of the Apoſtles were received together with Peter, into the ſame fellowſhip of dignity, authority, or power. Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap. 9. ex Iſidor. It was not ſaid of Peter excluſively, Dabo tibi ſoli, I will give to thee onely the keys of the kingdom of heaven: but incluſively of the other Apoſtles alſo, to whom with Peter, this power was common. For in this place, Chriſt did not give the keys, but onely promiſed that he would give them hereafter; and afterwards when he did give them, he ſpake to all the Apoſtles equally and alike, and not to Peter onely, as is cleer from Mat. 28. 18, 19. John 20. 21, 22, 23. And therefore, if the Pope have authority to interpret the Scriptures, becauſe the keys were given to Peter; then ſo alſo have other Biſhops and Miniſters, who were the ſucceſſours of the other Apoſtles, becauſe to the other Apoſtles, as well as unto Peter were the keys given.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, Auguſtine (Tract. 124. in Iohan.) ſaith, Petrum ſignificaſſe univerſalem Eccleſiam; That Peter ſignified the Catholike Church, when the keys of the kingdom of heaven were given unto him: And therefore this power of the keys was not given to the Pope onely, but to the whole Church.

Sixthly, the Pope is no more Peters ſucceſſour, than any other godly Biſhop is, no, nor ſo much, unleſſe he follow Peters ſteps: yea, they are not able to prove (although they are eaſily able to affirm it without proof) that the Popes are Peters ſucceſſors, both in ſeat, and faith, both in place and Biſhoprick: for it were impious and moſt impudent to ſay, that they are Peters ſucceſſours in doctrine and faith; as though Peter taught or beleeved that which is taught and beleeved at this day in Rome. And it were a work which would well beſeem Peters ſucceſſour, to prove his Religion from Peters Epiſtles, which they never yet went about to do. Anſw. 6.

Seventhly, the gift of interpreting the Scripture, according to the Analogy of Faith, and the minde, and meaning of the holy Ghoſt, is not tyed, or peculiar to Rome, or the Roman Biſhops, or to the Pope, and College of Cardinals; but God gives it to whom he will, yea to thoſe who are neither Popes, nor Cardinals. When one brought Moſes word, that Eldad and Medad did propheſie; and Ioſhua out of love unto Moſes, would have had them forbidden; meek and holy Moſes anſwers, Would God that all the Lords people were Prophets, and that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them, Num. 11. 29. Where we ſee, that Moſes prays; and from his heart wiſhes, that the Spirit of Propheſie and Interpretation were given to all the Lords people. So, Amos 7. I am no Prophet, nor the ſon of a Prophet; and yet he propheſieth. And 2 Pet. 1. 19. The Apoſtle ſaith, That Propheſie is not of any privat Interpretation; but it is the work of that Spirit, wherby alſo the Prophets ſpake: and this he gives to whom he will, 1 Cor. 12. And therefore this Spirit, and power, and privilege, of interpreting of Scripture, according to the proportion of faith, is not given onely to the Pope, and his Cardinals. Anſw. 7.

Eighthly, if by theſe words [whatſoever thou looſeſt] be meant, the interpretation of Scripture, than by theſe [whatſoever thou bindeſt] muſt neceſſarily be underſtood, the obſcuring of Scripture, and ſo this muſt belong to Peter and his ſucceſſours, as well as that: and indeed, thoſe who would be called Peters ſucceſſours, chuſe this part to themſelves [a]. Anſw. 8.

[a] Ames. Bel. enerv. p. 52. t. 1.

Ninthly, Bellarmine in the proof of his Major propoſition offends many waies, namely, Anſw. 9.

I. Becauſe he ſaith, that under the names of the Keys, the ſupreme power of judging is given to Peter and his ſucceſſors: whereas indeed, there is given onely the Miniſtery of looſing and remitting of ſins, and of explicating the doctrines, opinions, and controverſies of Religion. Scharp. de ſacra Script. 106.

II. He offends, becauſe he ſaith, that to Peter and his ſucceſſours, was given power not onely to pardon ſins, but to looſe all bonds: for Chriſt ſpeaks here of pronouncing remiſſion and pardon to the penitent, but not to all, hand over head, to whom the Pope pleaſeth; but of diſſolving ing and untying other bonds, our Saviour speaks not.

III. He sins in saying, That those to whom the Keys were given, have power to dispense with those Laws which were enacted, and ratified by God himself, and with those punishments which were inflicted by God himself: That which God commands a man to do, he may omit by a dispensation from the Pope, and that without sin: that which God chargeth men not to do, may faultlesly be done, if the Pope give leave: those punishments which God inflicts upon offenders, may be taken off by the Pope. And thus we see, that the Pope is not onely by them exalted above all that are called Gods (that is, all Magistrates and Rulers) but even above the Lord of heaven and earth: for he can take men out of Gods hands, he can free them from his hands, yea he can deliver them from his commanding, and condemning power.

IV. The Cardinall offends by his frivolous distinction of Whomsoever, and Whatsoever: because our Saviour in this place speaks onely of loosing of sins, and of binding men for their sins, as is evident from Mat. 18. 18, 19. and Iohn 20. 23.

Answ. 10 Tenthly, we grant that Peter had a Ministeriall power of binding & loosing, but not of binding or loosing, What he would, or Whom he would, or As he would (as the Pope arrogantly claims in his unbounded power) because he must onely teach those things which are commanded him, and dispense those things which were committed unto him aright, that is, according to the direction, and prescript rule of God [b].

b Mat. 18. 20. Act. 2. 4. Gal. 1. 8

Answ. 11 Eleventhly, by the successors of Peter, we must understand, either

I. The Pope onely; and thus we deny that the Keys were given to Peter and his successours; because the Pope doth neither exercise the doctrine nor the works of Peter. Or else

II. All Bishops together: and if thus, then we must either understand it

First, of all and every Bishop that hath been in the Church since Peters time: and in this sense we deny also, that the keys were given to Peter and his successours: for it is true which Ambrose saith (lib. 1. de pœnit. cap. 6.) Non habet Petri hereditatem, qui fidem Petri non habet. He is not the heir of Peters place, who is not heir of Peters faith. Or Secondly, we understand it onely of those Bishops and Ministers who follow Peters Doctrine: And in this sense we grant, that the Keys were given to Peter and his successours.

Answ. 12 Twelfthly, and lastly, Peter in his extraordinary office, had no successour at all, much lesse the Pope; and if he had, then so had also the other Apostles, who had the same power: and consequently, there is not one onely supreme and chief Judge of all Controversies in the earth, but many, namely, all the successours of all the Apostles, as well as the successour of Peter.

Quest. Why is the power of the Keys necessary?

Answ. The power of the Keys is necessary in many regards; viz.

First, in respect of the Commandement, Mat. 18. 17.

Secondly, in respect of the purity of the Sacraments: because they are holy mysteries, therfore God will have the power of the Keys to be executed, that all impure persons may be kept back from his holy Table, reade 1 Cor. 5. 5. and 11. 28. Numb. 11. 31. Deuteron. 17. 12. Matthew 5. 24.

Thirdly, in respect of Gods glory: for God is reproached and despighted, if without difference the wicked and blasphemers go, in the number of his children.

Fourthly, in respect of the safety of the Church, which shall be punished if she wittingly, and willingly prophane Christs Sacraments.

Fifthly, in regard of the safety of sinners, that they being often admonished, may return unto repentance.

Sixthly, in respect of others, lest they should be corrupted, 1 Cor. 5. 6.

Seventhly, in regard of those who are without; lest they which are not yet members of the Church, be deterred, or kept backe from submitting themselves unto the Church, by the evill example of some within it; and therefore the power of the Keys is to be executed upon offenders, that the mouths of those without may be stopped, seeing that the Church doth not winke or favour but punish such offenders.

Eighthly in respect of sinners; that from them punishment may be averted: because the wicked approaching unto the Lords Table eat their own condemnation. Wherfore that this may not come to passe, the Church is bound to provide, that such approach not thither.

§. 9. Whatsoever thou bindest on earth shall bee bound in Heaven; and whatsoever thou loosest on earth, shall be loosed in Heaven. Sect. 9.

Quest. 1. How doth it appear that by this committing and giving of leave and power to bind and loose, there is no primacie, or externall power of ruleing promised, as the Papists affirm there is?

Answ. 1. First, these Keyes are called the Keyes of the Kingdome of Heaven; and therefore it is cleare, that they speak not of any worldly Domination or power, Heaven and the Kingdome of Heaven (that is, life eternall) being out of the limits and bounds of this world: yea they are called the Keyes of the kingdome of Heaven, because they send us to another Kingdome, and to another kind of life, the end of them being, to make us Heavenly hearers, and to blesse us with eternall good things; and not to conferre upon Peter and his successors wordly power and pomp.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our Saviour in this his commission given to the Apostles, and Ministers of the Church speaks not of externall good things, but of internall; namely of the righteousnesse of the heart, of the expiation of the mind; and of the remission and pardon of sins: which things are not subject to externall power, as other corporal things are: And therefore it is evident that no political authority or jurisdiction is here promised to Peter or the Pope.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the power of the Keyes doth consist in 192 in the remitting and retaining of sins; as Iohn 20. 22. 23. Whose sins ye remit they are remitted; &c. And therefore no Primacy or externall power is here meant.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the Keyes ought not to be separated from the word: and therefore seeing the Preaching of the word is common to all Ministers, the Keyes cannot signifie an externall power or Primacie which belongs only unto one particular person.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, the Holy Spirit is the Rector and governour of the Keyes: for Christ Iohn 20. being about to give them the charge of Preaching, and the power of binding & loosing, doth first breath upon them, saying therewith, Receive ye the Holy Ghost; and therefore no externall and personall Primacie can be here meant.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, the use of the Keyes ought not to crosse or contradict the Holy Scriptures; but ought to be agreeable, and in all things according to the Holy Scriptures: but these ascribe full and absolute power of all things only unto Christ (Matth. 28.) All power is given to me &c.) Therefore by the Keyes Christ did not promise any such power to Peter or his Successours.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, the power of the Keyes, is not absolute or boundlesse, but limited, and determined, and therefore the use of them depends upon the will of him who delivered them, and consequently, except they be administred according to the will of Christ, they are not effectuall, but a heady presumption. That is, Christ neither gave to the Pope nor Peter, nor unto any Apostle or Minister, absolute power to excommunicate, and bind over to Sathan, or to remit and pardon whomsoever they will: but they must onely bind impenitent and obstinate persons, and loose only penitent and obedient, or otherwise they shall be punished for abusing their office and power, and transgressing their charge. If the studious Reader would see this enlarged by many more Arguments, let him reade Aret. probl. de Clavibus fol. 25. b. & 26. a.

Quest. 2. How or when do those to whom Christ hath committed the keys, abuse their judiciary power, which with the Keyes is given unto them?

Answ. 1. First, the Prelates and Clergie abuse this judiciary power, when they usurpe this judiciary power over persons which are not subject to their jurisdiction: as if the Church should endeavour to subject resisting and withstanding Heathens to their power and discipline; contrary to the practise of S. Paul. 1 Corinth. 5. 12: Or, if one particular Church (to wit, the Church of Rome or France,) should excommunicate, or assume power to cast another Church (as of England) out of the Communion of the Catholike Church for some errour (as they conceive) which it holds. Indeed one Church may counsel and advise another, but not exercise this judiciary power over any Church (though in some things faulty) which is not under her jurisdiction.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this judiciary power is abused by the Prelates, when they judge those unjustly which belong unto their jurisdiction: that is, when they do not judge them according to equity, and the Law of God, but out of malice or ignorance pronounce those who are Orthodox, to be Heterodox, and punish them for Heretikes. For it often happens that they which have lawfull power to judge, use that power of judging unlawfully. Thus the Scribes and Pharisees excommunicate all those who confesse Christ. Iohn 9, 22. So the Papists punish those who are amongst themselves for Heretikes, and bring them into their bloody Inquisition, if they be found to read and study the Scriptures, and begin to acknowledge the truth of the Gospel.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this judicary power is abused by the Clergy, when they judge men truly, and that for some errours in Religion: but over and above impose those punishments upon those who are so condemned for Heretikes, which doe not belong unto an Ecclesiastical Court to inflict; as if a man being convicted of heresie, and condemned for it, they should presently endeavour to spoil him both of his life and goods: Now this belongs to the Civil Magistrate to inflict these punishments, and not unto the Sacerdotall power; and therefore it is an abuse of their authoritie to goe any farther then judgement, for the execution of the Lawes is to be left to the Civill Magistrate. Bishop Davenant de Iudice controv. pag. 90.

Object. 1 Some Papists Object this place to prove that the Pope may by his dispensation dissolve the Oath of Alleagiance: Christ saith, whatsoever thou looseſt in Earth shall be loosed in Heaven.

Therfore the Pope hath power to dispense with all kind of vowes and Oathes.

Answ. 1. First, this text is not understood of every kind of loosing and binding, as of Oathes, and vowes, but of the binding of sins to the impenitent, and of loosing and releasing of sins; as their own interlineary Glosse expoundeth, and the Scripture warranteth, Iohn 20. 23.

Answ. 2. Secondly, absolute power is not given of binding or loosing, but according to Gods will; as Lyra expounds it, Supposito debito usu clavis, &c. The right use of the Key being supposed, God approveth it in Heaven; Now it is not Gods will that lawfull Oaths should be violated, but faithfully kept; Psalm 15. 4. He that sweareth and changeth not shall dwell in Gods house.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this power of binding and loosing is given to all Apostles, and their successors; Mat. 18. 18. And so Hierome confesseth as hee is cited by the ordinary glosse. And therefore if this exposition were true, then every Priest might dissolve, reverse, and dispense with Oathes.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, whatsoever is said to St. Peter is not said to the Pope, unlesse he would shew himselfe to be the true successor of St. Peter, both in doctrine and place, in the probation of both which he failes.

Object. 2. The Papists further produce this place to warrant the Popes practise of dispensing of pardons, and selling of Indulgences: affirming that the power of granting Indulgences doth rest only in the Pope as the successor of Peter, to whom Christ said, whatsoever you loose in earth shall be loosed in Heaven. They argue thus,

That which was given to Peter, was given also to the Pope; But

But from this place it appeares, that unto Peter was given a full power of loosing sinners both from the fault and punishment.

Therefore this power is also given to the Pope Cajetan opusc. tract. 8.

Answ. 1. First, for a full answer of this Objection, I referre my Reader to Chamier. de Indulgentijs. lib. 24. Cap. 15. Arg. 1. fol. 1098.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Keyes of the Church to binde or loose, open, or shut, were no more committed to Peter then unto the rest of the Apostles: as St. Hierome well noteth. Cunctis claves regni cælorum accipiunt, & ex æquo super eos Ecclesiæ fortitudo solidatur: All the Apostles receive the keyes of the Kingdome, and the strength of the Church equally is founded upon them all. Hier. lib. 1. adversus Iovinian.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this power of loosing, if we speak of the internall Court of the soul, is exercised by the Ministers in the Preaching of the Gospel, not in the dispersing and distributing of pardons.

Verse 20. VERS. 20. Then charged he his Disciples, that they should tell no man that he was Iesus the Christ.

ΤΟΤΕ διεστείλατο doth not simply signifie Iussit he commanded, or prohibuit, he forbad them, but gravius interdixit, he strictly charged, or seriously prohibited them to tell that hee was Iesus the Christ.

Quest. 1 Why did our Saviour forbid them to make him known? why did he charge them not to tell who he was? would the Messias not bee known now when he is come? yea did he not often discover himself to be the Christ, unto the Jews? Iohn. 5. and 9. and 10. yea had he not commanded his Disciples to declare & preach him unto all people, and that publikely? Mat. 10 27. Why then doth he now forbid them to preach the Gospel: for to teach that he is Iesus the Christ, which is here forbidden, is no other then to preach the Gospel, which is elsewhere commanded?

Answ. 1. First, our Saviour now forbids them to preach the Gospel, because his death and suffering approaching, and their mindes being troubled about it, they were not fit to preach so Heavenly a Mystery. Now whom God sends about some notable employment, or Embassage, he fits also and armes with notable strength, power, and courage of the Spirit, and he sends none whom he doth not thus fit. Wherefore the Spirit not being as yet given unto them, they were not fit and able enough for so great a work. Cameron. pag 43 calce.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ being to leave his Disciples shortly, would not expose them to so much hatred, and malice, as the preaching of the Gospel brought along with it: but he would have them stay, untill they were corroborated by the Spirit, who was given unto them after his Ascension, Luk 22. 35. Cameron.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ being shortly to be crucified, would not send his Disciples from him: because it was requisite that they should be eye-witnesses, of his apprehending, arraigning, condemning, crucifying, and resurrection: that they might preach the truth of the Gospell, the more confidently. 193

Answ. 4. Fourthly: this prohibition and charge which is here given, is not to be understood absolutely but with limitation, that is, not as yet, for after his Resurrection they are commanded to preach him to all nations. And this is plain from a Parallel place in the next Chapter. Chap. 17. 9. where he forbids them to divulge his Transfiguration, but withall addes this limitation, Vntill the Sonne of man be risen from the dead.

Quest. 2. Why would not Christ have his Disciples to publish and declare him to be the Messiah, till after his resurrection?

Answ. 1. First, (as was said before) in regard of them, because he knew that they were not as yet sufficiently instructed in the faith, nor sufficiently enriched with spirituall gifts and graces, for the discharging of so great a work.

Answ. 2 Secondly, in regard of the Jewes, because he knew that if his Apostles should tell that their Master was the Messiah, yet they would not beleeve it, but deride them for it. For they would not beleeve it, when he was risen again.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Paræus (in hunc locum. fol. 764) thinks Christ gave this charge to his Apostles, in regard of himself; lest his death should by some means have been hindered: and this Answer is warranted from that place, If they had known the Lord of glory, they would not have crucified him. 1 Cor. 2. 8.

Verse 22. VERS. 22. Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him saying; Be it farre from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

Much was alleaged for Peters Primacie and Supremacie, from verse 18, 19. now from this verse we may gather a Reason for the contrary.

Argum. What reason was there why Christ should give the supremacie to Peter above, or over the rest? Christ was no respecter of persons; and if he had been then he should have been preferred, whom he loved most. If deserts be weighed; Peter seems to deserve the least of al the Twelve, for the Scripture reckons up his faults to be more in number, and heavier in weighe, then any of the rest. To passe by divers common infirmities, there are foure great faults, which Peter fell into much amplified by the Fathers.

First, he dehorted our Saviour from his passion in this verse, Master, favour thy self, and was therefore called Satban an adversary to the death of Christ, and so to the Redemption of man.

Secondly, in promising rashly not to deny Christ, yea unto death, whereas Christ had foretold him of his fall before.

Thirdly, he denied his Master, and that thrice, yea, with an Oath, at the Instance of a Maiden, and in a very short while, before the Cocke crew twise.

Fourthly, the last assault noted in Peter was that, for the which he is reproved of Paul. Galath. 2. 14. If the Reader would see this Argument prosecuted, and enlarged, let him reade Doctor Willets Synops. fol. 157. 158.

194 VERS. 24. Then said Iesus unto his Disciples: If any man will come after me, let him deny himselfe, and take up his Crosse, and follow me.

Vers. 24.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Whosoever would be my Disciple.

Observ. Quicunque, whosoever, is as much, as Si quis: If any will be my Disciple, to teach us:

That there is but one way for all men to come unto Christ; or whosoever would come unto Christ, must come by one, & the same way; for one man must not come by one way, and another by another, Marke 8.34. Acts 10.35. and 13.26.

Quest. Why must all come unto Christ, by one, and the same way?

Answ. 1. First, because hee is no respecter of persons, Act. 10.34. Colos 3.11. Galath 3.28. Ephes. 6.8.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because we are all members of one, and the same body, 1 Cor. 12.13.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because God hath given but one Law, and rule for all to walke by; & there is but one way unto heaven.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Let him deny himselfe.

Observ. 1 Our Saviour would hence teach us: That those who would be his, must deny themselves.

Quest. 1. Why must wee deny our selves, and our own wils?

Answ. 1. First, because our wils naturally are corrupted, and hinder us from obedience, Galath. 5.17. Phil. 2.13.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because our wils draw us aside unto sinne, James 1.14. and 1 Pet. 2.11. Iosh. 7.21.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because wee can neither approve our selves to have faith, nor to be regenerated, untill wee deny our owne wils, John 1.12,13.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because wee are but servants, and children, and wives; and therefore must not follow our owne wils, and wayes, but be obedient, and subject to the will of our Father, and Master, and Lord.

Quest. 2. How must wee deny our selves; or wherein; or in what things doth selfe-deniall consist?

Answ. 1. First, Gregory (Hom. 30. in Evang.) answers: Wee are one thing, being fallen through sinne, and another thing by nature, or by our first creation: and then doe wee deny our selves, when as wee shun, and desire to bee freed from that estate, and condition wherein now wee are, and to bee made partakers of that estate of grace, wherein first wee were. That is, wee deny our selves, when we desire and endeavour to put off the old man, which is pleasing to corrupt nature, and labour to put on the new, which is contrary thereunto.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Gregory (Hom. 10. in Ezech.) saith, hee denieth himselfe, who is changed to better, beginning to be that, which hee was not; and ceasing to be that, which he was.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Gregory (lib. Mor. 23.) saith, hee denieth himselfe, who treading pride under foot, sheweth himselfe to be estranged from himselfe.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, there is a double deniall of our selves, viz.

I. Negatio meriti, a deniall of our merits; or an humble confession, and acknowledgement, that no good thing belongs unto us by desert, or merit. This deniall belongs unto faith; and is necessary, but is not here spoken of; and therefore I will omit it.

II. Negatio placiti, a denying of our selves in those things, which are pleasing to our natures; not seeking those things, which are delightfull unto us: And this deniall belongs unto service, and is that which is here spoken of: Whence we learne.

That wee cannot serve both Christ and our selves; or wee cannot submit our selves as wee ought to the will of Christ, untill wee deny our owne wils: And therefore wee must not seeke or serve our selves, but our Lord and Master Christ Jesus, Matth. 6.24. Hence then we learne, that true selfe-deniall includes foure things; namely, Observ. 2

First, Obedience, and this includes three things; to wit:

I. A deniall of our selves, and our own wils; because our will and nature, will leade us aside from the obedience of Christ.

II. A deniall of the world, and of men, though great and potent; for God must bee our Lord and King. Now this is not to be understood Anabaptistically, as though we denied obedience to Magistrates, and those who are over us; but only if there bee an opposition betweene their will, and Gods. Wee must confesse our selves onely to be the Lords servants, and not obey any in those things, which are contrary to his will.

III. An absolute, universall, and constant obedience of God: wee must so deny our selves, and submit our selves unto Gods service, that we must labour to obey him in all things, whatsoever he commands, & continue in that obedience, all the dayes of our lives. For this Deniall includes this Obedience.

Secondly, true selfe-deniall includes Honour, we must not arrogate any thing unto our selves; but wee must ascribe all glory, and honour unto the Lord onely: yea, as servants honour, and reverence our Lord, Malach. 1.6.

Thirdly, true selfe-deniall includes Obligation, for wee must serve the Lord, Liberè non liberè: for the understanding hereof observe, that there are three sorts of men: to wit,

I. Some who serve the Lord, but it is by compulsion, and constraint: for if they were left unto themselves, they would not doe any thing, which hee commands at all.

II. Some there are, who serve the Lord, and that without coaction, but yet they thinke not themselves bound so to doe. They doe many things which God requires, but in the manner of a free-will offering.

III. Some there are, who labour to obey God in all things that hee commands, and that willingly, and cheerfully; but yet they confesse, that they doe no more, then is their dutie to do: yea, (in their best performances) come far short of what they ought to doe. Now this is the nature of true selfe-denial, and acceptable service.

Fourthly, this service, and selfe-deniall includes cludes Dependance upon God: for those who deny themselves, and give themselves wholly up to the service of the Lord, must, and will depend upon him, for whatsoever they stand in need of, Luke 12.30. Matth.6.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Let him take up his Crosse.

Quest. 1. How many wayes doth a man take up his Crosse?

Answ. These: namely,

First, when hee afflicteth his body by abstinence.

Secondly, when he afflicteth his mind by compassion towards his neighbour. Now because abstinence is subject to the infection of vaine glory, and compassion to the infection of false piety. Christ subjoyneth: Let him take up his Crosse, and follow me, Greg. hom. 32. in Evang.

Thirdly, when hee doth patiently beare, whatsoever affliction, adversity, and evill is laid upon him for Christs sake. But of this in the next Question.

Quest. 2. Whether is there any difference between these phrases, Ferat crucem, & tollat crucem: Let him beare his Crosse, and take up his Crosse?

They differ, and that thus; to wit,

Answ. First, Ferre crucem, to beare the Crosse, is simply to beare it, or to suffer any adversity, although against the mind and will: Many have burdens imposed upon them, which they must beare, and which they cannot shake off; and therefore beare them; but they wish that their shoulders were eased of them. Now this is, To beare the Crosse.

Secondly, Tollere crucem, To take up the Crosse, is to beare willingly, and cheerfully, and contentedly, whatsoever the Lord layeth upon us, or is imposed, or inflicted upon us for the Lords sake. Reade for the proofe hereof these places: Rejoyce when yee suffer for my names sake, Matth. 5. And the Apostles went away rejoycing, that they were thought worthy to suffer for the Lords sake, Act. 5. Yee were imitaters of the Lord, and of us, receiving the word with much tribulation, and joy in the Holy Ghost, 1 Thess. 1. They endured the losse of their goods with joy, Heb. 10. and divers the like places.

Sect. 4. §. 4. And follow me.

That Christ is to be followed, and how hee is to be followed, we have shewed before, (Chap. 4. 19. and 8.22. and 9.9. One question therefore only I here adde, namely;

Quest. What must we follow in the Crosse of Christ? or what must wee learne to imitate in Christs bearing of his Crosse?

Answ. 1. First, as hee was obedient unto the will of his Father, and that unto death: yea, even unto the death of the Crosse (Philip. 2.) so must we be ready, and willing, even to die for Christ, if the Lord shall call us thereunto, or require it at our hands.

Answ. 2. Secondly, as Christ died not for any fault of his owne, but was innocent, yea, a Lambe without spot (1 Pet. 2.) so wee must take heed, that we suffer not as Malefactors, but for well doing, after the example of Christ. 195

Answ. 3. Thirdly, as Christ did not curse, nor reproach those, who persecuted him, although they prosecuted him with hatred without cause, (1 Peter 2) so although wee be punished, as evil doers, for righteousnesse sake; yet we must not revile, nor curse our Persecutors, nor avenge our selves of them.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, as Christ prayed for his persecutors, (Father lay not this sinne unto their charge.) So must wee doe, Mat. 5.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, as Christ laid downe his life for us, so should wee doe one for another, 1 Iohn 3.

VERS. 26. What is a man profited, if hee shall gaine the whole world, and loose his owne soule; Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soule? Vers. 26.

Our Saviour doth not here put a Lambe betwixt two Wolves, nor a Medium betwixt two extreames, nor a man betwixt two evils, but the soule betwixt two Orbes, earth, and heaven, this world, and the world to come: And in his judgement fearfull is the judgement, and miserable the condition of that poore soule, who so labours for the earth, that it looseth heaven: For what will it profit a man to gaine the whole world, and loose his soule? As if hee would say, heaven is the object, and center of the soule; heaven is that which the soule should seeke before all earthly things: for nothing can make the soule happy, if it be deprived of heaven; nothing can be given unto the soule, in exchange of heaven; no place of pleasure can the soule find to rest her selfe upon, if shee bee shut out of heaven: And therefore nothing should be more desired, or endeavoured for (in regard of our selves) then a portion, and inheritance in the Kingdome of heaven. Or wee may learne hence:

Observ. That the chiefest endeavour of a Christian should be, to make sure for his soule a mansion, and receptacle in heaven: Wee should give no sleepe unto our eyes, nor slumber unto our eyelids, untill wee were certainely assured, that whensoever our soules should be separated from our bodies, they should bee clothed with our house, which is in heaven: For nothing can profit a man, nor afford him pleasure, if his soule be not made partaker of this habitation. Reade Matth 6.33. Luke 10.20. and 2 Corinth 5.2. Heb. 11.10.16. & Heb. 13, 14.

Quest. 1. Why must our chiefest desire, and endeavour be rather to procure heaven for our soules, then earth for our bodies?

Answ. 1. First, because as the soule is better then the body, so heaven is better then earth: And therefore great reason there is, that wee should bee more carefull for that, and of that which is best.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because not earth, but heaven is the last scope of a Christian: God hath created us unto heaven, and heaven for us. And therefore our chiefest endeavour should be for heaven.

196 Thirdly, becauſe onely heaven is ſolidely good, and very good for us; yea, and a conſtan-
Anſw. 3. good thing: whereas other things, are eithe evill, or deceitfull, or inconſtant. And therefore it is reaſon, that wee ſhould labour moſt for heaven.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, becauſe if the ſoule after her ſeparation from the body, be not made partaker of heaven, ſhe ſhall be caſt into hell; where there is nothing but weeping, and wayling, and gnaſhing of teeth; where the worme never dies, nor the fire goes out, but torments the ſoule, night and day, world without end. And therefore ſeeing the ſoule (yea, both ſoule and body) is made eternally miſerable, except it enjoy heaven; great cauſe there is, that our principall care ſhould be for that.

Queſt. 2. What good things are there in heaven, that wee muſt thus deſire, and labour for it?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, there is an abſence of all evils whatſoever, Eſay 25.8. Revelat. 21.4.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, there is joy; yea, an ample joy, and a joy which no man can take away, Matth. 15.21. Iohn 16.22, 24.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, there we ſhall be Kings: for heaven is called a Kingdome, and that in a threefold regard; namely,

I. For the glory thereof; which is threefold; to wit,

Firſt, of the body, Dan. 12.3. Matth. 13.43. and 17.2. & 1 Cor. 15.42. And

Secondly, of the mind; becauſe there our knowledge ſhall be perfect, 1 Corinth 13. And,

Thirdly, of the ſtate; for glory, and honour, and peace ſhall all they have, who gaine admiſſion into the Kingdome of heaven, Rom. 2.10.

II. Heaven is called a Kingdome, Propter co-regnum in regard of that co-heireſhip, and joynt Kingdome, which wee ſhall have with Chriſt, our Head, Revel. 21.2.

III. Heaven is called a Kingdome, Propter dominium mentis, in regard of the freedome, the ſoule and mind ſhall there have, who ſhall be perfectly delivered from all baſe, and vile luſts; yea, all her enemies.

Anſw. 4 Fourthly, there wee ſhall have good ſociety, and gracious company: namely,

I. With all the godly, 1 Theſſ. 4.17. And,

II. With Abraham, Iſaac, Iacob, and all the Patriarkes, Matth. 8.11. Luke 13.28. And,

III. With all bleſſed Martyrs. And

IV. With the Angels, and Arch-angels, Luke 20.36. And

V. With Chriſt our eldeſt brother, Iohn 17. 24. and 1 Theſſ 4.17. Yea,

VI. With God our Father, 1 Iohn 1 3.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, there wee ſhall be pure, without ſpot or wrinkle, clothed in white raiment. Reade Epheſ. 5.27. Revelat. 3,4.18. and 6.11. and 7. 9. and 19 8.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, there wee ſhall be like unto the Angels, the ſonnes of God; yea, like unto Chriſt, the onely begotten Sonne of the Father, Matth. 22.30. Luke 20. 36. Matth. 17. 2. and 2 Corinth. 3.18. and Philip. 3.21. and 1 Iohn 3.2.

Anſw. 7. Seventhly, there death ſhall be ſwallowed up in victory; now this victory over death began, when Chriſt mauger the power of death, roſe again; but is not perfected, and compleatly finiſhed untill the generall Reſurrection; after which, death ſhall have no more power over any of the faithfull, but they ſhall live for ever with Chriſt in the Kingdome of Heaven, where death dare not come. Reade 1 Cor. 15. 26. 54. Hebr. 2. 14. Revel. 21. 4.

Eighthly, there and then Sathan alſo ſhall bee Anſw. 8. troden under foot, Revel. 12.9. and 20. 10.

Ninthly, there we ſhall ſee God, which is the Anſw. 9. height of our happineſſeſſe, Matth. 5. 8. that is, not onely

I. The glory of Chriſt, Iohn 17. 24. But alſo,

II. The Majeſtie of the Father. Moſes could not ſee Gods face, Exod. 34. But in heaven wee ſhall ſee him with open face, 2 Cor. 3. 18. and know him as we are known, 1 Cor. 13. 12. And therefore theſe things conſidered, we may ſafely conclude, that Heaven is worth our firſt, and beſt, and utmoſt endeavours.

What muſt we particularly, and principally Queſt. 3. endeavour after, and labour in, for the enjoying of this heaven, and haven of happineſſe.

Firſt, we muſt long fo it, and hunger after it Anſw. 1. before all other things; Philip. 1.23. and 2 Corinth. 5.2,4. &c. Gratiſſimi ſervi eſt, non hærere præſentibus, ſed ad patrem ſemper urgeri, in futura ſemper geſtire. Chryſoſt. ſ.

Secondly, we muſt labour to feel, and to be ſen- Anſw. 2. ſible of theſe heavenly joys in our ſouls: labour that our hearts may be raviſhed with the remembrance of them, and our ſouls raiſed up with a confident applying of them unto our ſelves. For he that feels theſe joys within, will contemn this world, and all things therein, and think no labour too much for the procuring of heaven.

Fourthly, we muſt meditate daily of the joy, Anſw. 4. honour, and glory which the Lord hath prepared for the faithfull in the kingdom of heaven: for this will make us labour to be of the number of the faithfull.

Fifthly, we muſt hunger after the poſſeſſion of Anſw. 5. heaven, deſiring with S Paul, to be diſſolved, Philip. 1. 23. And crying, Come Lord Ieſus, come quickly, Revel. 22. 20.

From whence comes this deſire of death? Queſt. 4.

Firſt, from a good Conſcience: for otherwiſe a Anſw. 1. man would deſire rather to flee from God, with Adam, becauſe he knows that he is angry with him: but when the Conſcience is purged, and waſhed with pure water, (Heb. 10. 22.) then it deſires to approach into Gods preſence, though it be by the gate of death.

Secondly, this deſire of death comes from a Anſw. 2 minde eſtranged from the world (1 Iohn 2.15.) For if the heart be glued unto the world, or the affections ſet upon the world, then we ſhall rather cry, Oh Death, how bitter is the remembrance of thee! than deſire the approaching thereof. But if the world bee crucified unto us, and wee unto the world, then it will rather rejoyce us, than grieve us to be delivered from it.

Thirdly, this deſire of death comes from a hope of the participation, and enjoyment of heaven

ven, and God, and Christ: for where this hope is not, this desire cannot be.

Verse 27. VERS. 27. For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his Angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

Sect. 1. §. 1. For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father.

Object: The Iews object, that Christ is not the Messias, and they argue thus: The Messias ought to be a Prophet, but your Christ was no Prophet, neither is called by you a Prophet (say they unto us) And therefore your Christ was not the Messias.

Answ. Christ was a Prophet, and is so accounted and called by us; as Luke 24. He was a Prophet, and mighty in work and speech; John 4. Sir, I see that thou art a Prophet.

Quest. They demand here, What did he prophesie of?

Answ. 1. First, he prophesied of himself; Luke 18. 31, 32, 33. and in this verse also he prophesieth of himself, saying, The Son of man shall come in the glory of the Father, &c.

Secondly, he prophesied of his Disciples, Mat. 10. 16, 17, 18. 197

Answ. 2. Thirdly, he prophesied of the Iews, Luke 19. 41, 42, 43, 44. Answ. 3. And therefore he was a Prophet, yea the true Prophet, and promised Messias, Per. Galatin. lib. 8. pag. 323.

§. 2 And then he shall reward every man. Sect. 2.

Object. The Papists object these words, for the proof of the merit of our good works.

Answ. The Apostle, Rom. 11. 35. doth plainly deny that God gives any thing unto any of desert: Who hath given first unto God, and it shall be requited unto him again.

Quest. How can these places then be reconciled?

Answ. 1. First, God properly is debtor unto none, having the absolute dominion and Lordship over all creatures.

Answ. 2. Secondly, God therefore is said to reward men not properly, but κατ' ἀναλογίαν, when he performes his promises which are conditionall. If the studious Reader would see this Question enlarged, let him reade Cameron s. Myroibet. Evang. pag. 44, 45.

CHAPTER XVII.

Vers. 1. VERS. 1. And after six dayes, Iesus taketh Peter, Iames, and Iohn his Brother, and bringeth them up into a high Mountain apart.

After six dayes.

Quest. HOw may the Evangelists be reconciled concerning this History, S. Matthew here, and S. Mark Chap. 9. 2. saying this was after six dayes, but S. Luke 9. 28. saith it was after Eight dayes?

Answ. 1. First, by the number of dayes is meant a short time: he had promised in the two former verses; that some of his Apostles should see his glory, or him in glory, and should have a tast of the glory of the elect, ere long; and this promise hee performes within six or eight dayes, at the most. Aretius. s.

Answ. 2. Secondly, St. Luke reckons the day upon which Christ made this promise, and the day also wherein the promise was performed: but St. Matthew, and St. Mark reckon only the intermediate dayes between the making of the promise, and the performance thereof: for there were three sorts of reckoning among the Iewes; namely.

I. Exclusa uno termino, & inclusa altero, when one of the Termes was included, and another excluded. The Iewes were commanded to circumcise their Children the Eight day, now if the Child had lived seven dayes, and a part of the eighth, he was to be circumcised, as if he had lived compleat eight dayes. Now none of the Evangelists do thus account or reckon this History.

II. Exclusa utroque termino; when both the terms are excluded: and thus St. Matthew, and Saint Mark saith, This was after six dayes; excluding both the day of the promise, and also of the performance.

III. Inclusa utroque termino, when both the termes are included; and thus S. Luke saith, that it was Eight daies after. And thus the Evangelists are easily reconciled.

Vers. 2. And was transfigured before them, and his face did shine as the Sunne, and his raiment was white as the light. Verse 2.

Quest. Why is Christs Transfiguration upon the Mount adjoyned next to the foregoing History.

Answ. 1. First, Christ had promised that some of them should see in this life a glimse of that glory which the Elect have in Heaven: and therefore the Holy Ghost annexeth this History to shew how faithfull and true Christ is in his promises.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our Saviour had foretold them of that affliction which attended the faithful in this life, 198 life, verses 24, 25. of the former Chapter: Now because a taste of that glory, which they shall be made partakers of, which suffer willingly for Christ, is an excellent meanes to confirme, and strengthen them against death, and crosses: therefore six dayes after this sermon, of the crosses of the faithfull in this world, hee went up into an high Mountaine, with three of his Apostles, where hee was transfigured, and they made eye-witnesses of his glory.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this Historie followes the former for the strengthning of the faith of the Apostles in Christ: for hee having fore-told them of his death, verse 21. of the former Chapter, which was now shortly to ensue, lest they should thinke him to be but a meere man, sixe dayes after hee tooke three of them up into a Mountaine, that they might know even from the testimonie, and mouth of God the Father, that Christ was God, as well as man: yea, no other then the Son of the living God, verse 5.

Object. The Rhemists object this place for the proofe of Transubstantiation: Christ (say they) transfigured his body marvellously in the Mount, as wee reade Matth. 17. 2. Therefore he is able to exhibite his body, under the formes of bread and wine.

Answ. 1. First, the Argument followeth not; Christ could give a glorious forme to his passible body: therefore hee can take away the essentiall properties of his naturall body, and yet keepe a true body still. Or thus, Christ could glorifie his body not yet glorified; Therefore he can, or will, dishonour his glorious impassible body, by inclosing it under the formes of bread and wine, which may bee devoured of dogs, and mice; which is honoured, and worshipped of the Angels, and Saints in heaven.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the question is not so much of Christs power, as of his will; and therefore the Argument followes not; Christ is able to doe it; therefore he will.

Verse 3. VERS. 3. And behold, there appeared unto them Moses, and Elias, talking with him.

Object. Many Papists; yea, some Popish Writers hold; That soules after they are departed, may returne on earth againe, and appeare unto men. And for the proofe of this, produce this place: Moses and Elias appeare unto Christ, and his Apostles, and talke with them: Therefore soules after they are departed, may returne on earth againe, and appeare unto men.

Argu. 1. First, wee grant that God is able to send soules againe into the earth, but that it is his will so to doe, or that it is necessary so to doe, especially, in the dayes, and places of Christianity, is neither proved by Papists, nor approved by us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Moses and Elias appeared not to all the Apostles, but onely to three, neither (that wee reade of) did they speake to those three, or perswade them to doe any thing for their honour (as to build Churches in their name) or teach any new Doctrine unto them, which is the common practise of the Popish spirits that appeare.

Answ. Thirdly, Moses, and Elias were not sent to the Apostles (as popish spirits are sent to men) but unto Christ himselfe onely.

Object. Against this it is objected; If it be thus, then it was needlesse for the three Apostles to have beene there: Christ might have gone up to Mount Tabor alone: but Christ doth nothing in vaine; there was some use therefore certainly of their presence.
